

KMAG and ROKA Training

One of the Army's most prolific writers, Cpl. Tom Mapp, has bylined recent articles for Stars & Stripes, Army Information Digest and Redbook Magazine. His pre-service background includes London newspapers and Canadian AP. Currently assigned to the United States Military Advisory Group to the Republic of Korea (KMAG) public information office as a special feature writer, Tom will contribute a weekly feature article to the "Star-Presidian." As a more or less roving reporter on the Korean scene his interesting "soldier's eye view" may well prove to be this paper's top feature.—(Editor's Note.)

SPECIAL TO THE "STAR-PRESIDIAN"

Taegu, Korea, 1 June—Today is Sunday. Church bells have peeled out all morning as Korean Christians made their way to worship. Everyone is dressed in their Sunday best; Papa-san sporting a flowing white smock, bird cage hat—his mark as a retired farmer—and long cane; Mama-san her two-colored ensemble, bright slippers with junior strapped papoose fashion on her back.

These people made their way slowly over dirt roads. An army jeep would pass, showering up a cloud of dust from its wheels, but the peasants would keep going, silently wrapped in their thoughts.

Throughout Korea, Christians were praying for their lives, their homes and their country. And all over South Korea Americans too were praying; that the conflict may end and we can all go home.

Yet despite the lulls at the front and at Panmunjon we are not idly resting, for whatever the outcome we are prepared and ready. Mingled with the bells this morning was the sound of marching feet. Republic of Korea draftees passed by on their way to one of the huge training centers for 16 weeks' basic training, patterned on U. S. methods.

The war has brought many changes to Korea, but as the fighting gives way to talking the most significant change is one of re-awakening to the responsibilities of the Republic. The Koreans are anxious to learn and with U. S. guidance they are learning fast. Their first major problem is their army. It is obvious to all Koreans that without a strong unified army, fashioned and moulded after western concepts and versed in modern weapons, any security without strong military support to back it up is doomed from the start. With this in mind the Korean people are forging ahead to new horizons.

Aboard the ship that brought me to Japan were some 250 Republic of Korea army officers, returning home after six months in the United States. These officers had completed courses at Fort Benning and Fort Sill and were all earmarked for important jobs as instructors in ROKA training schools and military colleges on their return to Korea. I had the opportunity of talking with a number of these officers and they were unanimous in their praise of the American way of life. They sincerely believed that our ways and our standards could be introduced slowly, but surely into the Korean scene. It was heartening to hear of their determination for a new tomorrow and of their trust in the American people.

Already much has been done to give these people a basis on which to build a new nation. So far the responsibility has rested on the shoulders of the United States Military Advisory Group to the Republic of Korea (KMAG).

Shortly after last year's spring offensive by the Communists, Gen. James A. Van Fleet, U. S. 8th Army Commander, instructed Brig. Gen. C. E. Ryan, Chief of KMAG, to organize and administer a vast replacement and training school system for the ROK Army, in the tradition of U. S. military institutions. This ambitious plan called for the utmost ingenuity in establishing a completely new type program of military training for the Korean soldier.

Almost overnight replacement training commands were set up, 12

New MOS Field Will Be Studied By Army Chiefs

Local studies on proposed changes in the MOS structure will be started today at the Presidio by representatives from throughout the Sixth Army area. The work is expected to be completed by 30 July.

Sixth Army representatives will be assigned to committees, each to thoroughly examine one phase of the proposals. Upon completion of the work the committee reports will be consolidated into one report.

This consolidated report will be submitted to the Army Field Forces, as will similar reports from all major commands. These reports will be studied further by a group of specialists consisting of one representative from each army.

After final consolidation of reports by the Army Field Forces, the proposed changes will be sent to the Department of the Army for approval.

Primary objective of the study is to provide a branch grouping system of MOS digits that will be functional and still make possible the utilization of machine accounting system (MRU).

Under the proposed system MOS numbers would be changed from four to five digits. The first two digits would designate the branch of service, being identical with T.O.E.; the third would indicate the function within the branch, such as combat, operations or intelligence; the fourth, skill in the particular function, such as light weapons infantryman; the fifth, the degree of skill or leadership, skills designated by odd numbers and leadership by even numbers.

As the studies progress, the Star Presidian will report on the development of the various phases of the proposed changes.

President OKs Two Bills For Aid Of Disabled Vets

Washington—The President has signed two bills that will boost veterans benefits an estimated $202,000,000 annually.

One of the bills will increase compensation and pension payments for about three million veterans and dependents of deceased veterans. Under this bill, disabled veterans with Service-incurred disabilities will have their pensions increased five percent if they are from 10 to 49 percent disabled and increased 15 percent if they are from 50 to 100 percent disabled.

The other bill will increase the amount of income a veteran may earn and still be eligible for non-Service disability and death benefits.

The increase is intended to offset the rise in the cost of living.

VERSATILE EGGBEATER describes the H-19 Bell to a tee. This big cargo-personnel transport has been used with outstanding success in Korea. Shown here are trainees embarking on a simulated attack on high ground.

Army Aviation Still Comparatively Unknown After First Decade of Service

One of the most important and least known components of the G-3 Section at Headquarters Sixth Army is the Army Aviation Section. Most civilians, and surprisingly enough many Army men, think that anything with wings belongs to another branch of the service. They haven't been properly introduced to Army aviation.

There is an old saying coined around Army aviation — "The Army Mule isn't dead, they've only put wings on it." That saying only partially sums up the role that Army aviation plays in the intricate pattern of the day to day mobility that is the lifeblood of modern armies.

Army aviation's principal mission is to provide improved high speed vehicles that will enable the Army to carry out its missions in a highly effective manner in cases where other means of transportation are not adequate to meet time and distance factors. Army aviation supplies the "how" that permits traverse of natural or man-made barriers.

At Army level the job of supervision, inspection and administration of area wide components becomes more complicated. The parent unit must inspect individual units for compliance with applicable regulations concerning operation and maintenance of aircraft and insure the proper maintenance of prescribed forms and records. The sky is a busy highway these days and rules must be enforced to prevent disastrous traffic jams.

Besides the above duties, Army aviation prepares, coordinates and supervises plans for training, employment, replacing and relieving Army aviation personnel.

Major Walter J. Borden, a former flight detachment commander in Korea, heads the section. He is assisted by Maj. Elmer M. Fox, another pilot veteran back from Korea. M-Sgt. A. E. Browne is the section's administrative assistant.

There are four multiplace aircraft assigned to Sixth Army for the purpose of transporting the Army Commander and his staff on their regular inspection tours of the vast Army area. A Cessna L-19 is assigned for use in special observation and training missions, the fixed-wing Cessna is also excellent for aerial photo missions and is quickly converted for this job by use of a special mount.

Special missions are routine with the section's two busy pilots, Capt. Gordon R. Giggth and Capt. Jack Gerber. Besides flying special and regular training missions, they get an extra-special flight on many occasions that results in some real excitement. Recently they spent some time at the atomic tests being conducted at Camp Desert Rock.

Last but far from least are the two officers charged with coordinating the Army's aircraft maintenance program. Capt. Alma Chamberlain and Capt. Jesse R. Johns are assigned with the Ordnance Section, on these two pilots rests the responsibility for the aircrafts availability. They keep them in the air.

Four special types of aircraft are now getting extensive use by Army aviation, they are the L-19, for observation work; the LC-126, L-20 and L-17, used for transporting personnel and cargo. A twin-engine aircraft, the L-23 will be added to the growing family some time this year.

It isn't any glamour field, this Army aviation, but if you are interested in a rugged, unusual occupation that will keep your feet off the ground, then Army aviation is the place for you. Ask any Army aviator.

Army Lists Major Exercises Planned Next Fiscal Year

Washington—Eight major exercises for fiscal year 1953 are planned by the Army. They will range from a jungle exercise to winter training.

Two mountain exercises are slated. "Pine Ridge" will be held in W. Va. during August and September 1952. In the Hunter-Liggett Maneuver area of California, "Hill Top" will be in May and June, 1953.

"Lone Star" will be a Corps exercise at Ft. Hood, Tex., in April 1953. The winter training exercise at Camp Drum, N.Y., will be during January and February 1953. The jungle exercise, "Brush Bay," will be staged in Panama in January and February next year.

An atomic exercise, "Desert Rock," Nev. has not had the dates determined. Location and dates for an amphibious exercise, "Sea Scape," and a Joint Chiefs of Staff-directed exercise have not been announced.

All are subject to change, depending upon the plans and needs of the Army.

Local Officers Get BA Degrees from SF

Bachelor of Arts Degree from San Francisco State College will be received today by Lt. Col. Lawrence E. Fouchs, Sixth Army Signal Section, and Capt. Louis F. Strawn, Post Quartermaster Property Officer.

Both officers completed majors in social science by attending on-post classes conducted by the college. Capt. Strawn has attended these on-post classes for the past two years, while Lt. Col. Fouchs completed his credits for a B.A.

First Things First!

Recent tests at Desert Rock in which AEC scientists brought off small controlled atomic explosions have no doubt formed a basis for a whole new concept in the use of this power as a tactical weapon. It's to be hoped that our many push-button theorists don't go off tangent in their rush to replace the Infantryman with untried drawingboard automats. The same ones that in the past have proven so ineffective in the cold hard light of battlefield tactics.

It seems like only yesterday, and it was, that our impractical theorists were telling us that the foot soldier was passe. That in the future only machines would die. Then the flesh and blood truth of Korea dawned. The pat phrases that regulated the Infantryman to a secondary role were put away to gather deserved dust. There was a rush to equip the world's best soldier with the world's best weapons. Only when this was finally accomplished was the numerically inferior foot soldier able to withstand the onslaught of the Communist hordes in Korea. It was a hard and costly lesson, one that everyone said we wouldn't soon forget. But already the theorist are dusting off those same old cliches and rushing past the Infantryman to the push-button weapons of the future.

It seems to me that for a change we should put first things first. For any future return to realism might prove even costlier than the lessons of Korea. Why rush off to kill distant giants when a swarm of midgets are close at hand. They say now that we can build big guns that using an atomic missile can destroy a whole division. That atomic powered submarines and long range atom bombers preclude worrying about a weapon that will destroy, say a battalion.

Be that as it may, and it may, I'm surely no match for the experts. But still, as old-fashioned as it may sound, I would like to see an atomic fieldpiece that, without ill effect to the user, would knock out a whole battalion. In fact I would like to see ten or twenty, even thirty or forty, of these weapons that could be employed for tactical troop support.

Of course for all practical purposes, and to obtain the best results, these weapons would need the closest possible troop support. Would have to deliver their missile with precision, accuracy and exact timing, regardless of terrain or weather conditions. Would have to be fired from comparable artillery platforms. And it goes without saying, that for the best effective use of this artillery, the Army would need have control of such firepower on the battlefield. But since the Army is noted for the best firing and ranging in the world, and since firepower of any sort is its specialty, these seem like relatively minor problems.

The push-button wars of the future may be just around the corner, and me quite a ways behind the times. But as long as it takes that age-old combination of manpower and firepower to preserve freedom, I'm for keeping the edge in firepower, just in case. For it seems the enemy has the edge in the latter.

Like I said, for a change, it sure would be nice to see first things in their proper order!

Cenotaph Rites Are Attended By Hardy Few

Highlight of Memorial Day observances in the Bay Area was the annual pilgrimage to Cenotaph, the National Cemetery at the Presidio. Though inclement weather cut the usually large crowd to a bare handful of hardy regulars, the ceremonies were no less impressive.

The Hon. John J. Sullivan and Mrs. Mary T. Anderson, a gold star mother, placed a wreath on the grave of the Unknown Soldier at 1000 hours. A half-hour concert by the Sixth Army band under the direction of WO Nathan Cammack followed. Distinguished participants were introduced to the audience by master-of-ceremonies Edward A. Barry.

Following a rendition of the National Anthem by the Sixth Army band. Chaplain Fisher gave the invocation. The Hon. John F. Henning then made the Memorial Day address. Mrs. Rose A. Wentworth led the pledge of allegiance. A prayer was offered by Chaplain William L. Bird followed by Mr. Frank Curley's reading of General John A. Logan's General Order No. 11.

Mr. Sam Herman offered an eloquent delivery of Lincoln's Gettysburg Address, and M. de Montalembert, the French Vice Consul, made a short address. Mr. Harry Anderson sang "Comrades, Good Night," and Chaplain William Dalin gave a short benediction.

The Sixth Army band rendered a stirring arrangement of the Battle Hymn of the Republic that brought smiles and distant looks to the eyes of the several "old soldiers" at the observance. This was followed by rifle volleys, taps and echo and two minutes of silence.

A twenty-one gun salute closed the program and participants moved out for private observances at the flag and flower-draped graves of loved ones, friends and just plain "unknown heroes."

The Sixth Army Commander, Lt. Gen. Joseph M. Swing and Maj. Gen. Milton B. Halsey, Deputy Commander General Sixth Army, were present at the ceremonies.

Presidio Provides VIP Treatment For Service Stars

Trackmen participating in the All-Army and All-Service meets have been guests of the Presidio for the past three weeks. They arrived prior to the All-Army meet at Edwards Field in Berkeley last weekend and left this week for the All-Services meet this Saturday at Long Beach.

Representing nine major commands, and the Military District of Washington, the 120 athletes were given quarters in the 549th Engineer Base Survey Company barracks at Fort Winfield Scott. These barracks were available due to the recent departure of the 549th Engineers for survey operations in Alaska.

Special training menus were planned for the group with the Sixth Army Food Service School in charge of preparation and serving. The food was prepared under the supervision of CWO Owen Asher, mess officer, and Sgt. Lonnie Parr, steward. Assisting as "chefs" were SFC William Priest, SFC James Dunham, SFC K. L. Beeler and student personnel of the school.

The longest home run on record was hit by Babe Ruth in 1919 in a game between the Boston Red Sox and New York Giants in Tampa, Florida. The ball travelled 587 feet.

Army Is Testing Wrap-Around Flameless Cooker

You can't see it, smell it, or snuff it out—that describes the heating element in the new flameless "wrap-around" fuel unit for heating canned rations which is being developed by the Quartermaster master Corps.

The new device, which is effective even if the contents of the can are frozen solidly, operates on a principle similar to a hot-patch in tire vulcanizing. The fuel unit is wrapped around a can, ignited with a match, and in a few minutes heats the contents to the proper temperature.

Previously, tablets used in heating combat rations had disadvantages for military use. They burned with a flame which had to be sheltered from the wind and did not always develop sufficient heat. Further, they might reveal a man's position because of visible flames, smoke and combustion odors.

The experimental unit, which will be given extensive field testing, needs no protection from the wind, burns without visible flame, and emits little smoke and odor.

52 NSLI Dividend Credited to Veterans Not Asking Cash

Washington—The Veterans Administration has announced that veterans who do not request their 1952 National Service Life Insurance dividend in cash will be notified that the dividend amount has been placed on deposit to their credit.

Dividend notices will be mailed to such veterans after the 1952 anniversary dates of their policies—the dates when the 1952 dividend is payable. The first notices are scheduled to be mailed soon.

Holders of NSLI in military service, who are paying premiums by allotment from military pay and who request their 1952 dividend in cash, will receive their checks from the VA Central Office in Washington, D. C.

Policyholders who desire dividends paid in cash should write the VA office to which they are paying premiums, giving their full names, insurance policy numbers and the addresses to which they want the dividend payments sent.

The record paid attendance for a baseball game was established October 10, 1948, in the fifth game of the World Series, when 86,288 paid their way into Municipal Stadium in Cleveland, Ohio.

Army Trainees Get New Course in Mountain Warfare

Washington—A six-week mountain training course for basically-trained Army Infantry replacements has been established at the Mountain and Cold Weather Training Command, Camp Carson, Colo., the Department of the Army has announced.

The present program calls for training six classes of 150 men each, with the course culminating in an impressive graduation ceremony atop Pike's Peak.

Trainees, upon completion of the course, will be qualified for duty with units that may be assigned to operate in rugged terrain. They may also be assigned as cadre in the mountain and winter warfare training program in the various combat-ready units of the Army.

Personnel attending the course must have completed 16 weeks of individual Army training. A high degree of physical stamina is also a prerequisite.

Pictorial Division Has Two New Timely Films

Initial distribution of two motion picture films, "NATO, Action for Defense" and "Preventive Maintenance of Signal Equipment for Commanders," has been announced by the Pictorial Division, Signal Section.

"NATO, Action for Defense" shows what has been done to meet the threat of war created by Soviet armed might and how Western Europe and the United States have banded together in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Directed at commanders, "Preventive Maintenance of Signal Equipment for Commanders" is devoted to a discussion of the value, methods and procedures of standard Army practice of preventive maintenance.

Predict Rotation Lag For Combat Troops

Washington — Combat soldiers may soon have to serve in Korea longer than the time prescribed in the existing rotation policy.

This forecast was made by Lt. Gen. A. C. McAuliffe, Assistant Chief of Staff for Personnel, during a recent interview.

He based the forecast on the fact that starting this summer the Army will begin to lose large numbers of men who have completed their term of service as prescribed by law.

By the fall of this year, Gen. McAuliffe estimated, draft calls might reach 65,000 monthly. But these new inductees would not be eligible for Korean service until they have at least four months' training. This could leave a gap in the flow of replacements to Korea.

EXERCISING SUPPLY ECONOMY to wipe out waste and carelessness is the concept of cost-consciousness emphasized in the above poster by Cpl. David Eng, 21st Engineer Base Photomapping Company. This poster placed Cpl. Eng in the "winner's circle" of the 10 best in the 30th Engineer Base Topographic Battalion's supply economy poster contest.

Post Finance Sets Record In Pay Raise Revision

Kudos for receiving that extra pay raise money in your May pay should go to the Post Finance Office. Both military and civilian personnel labored better than 400 hours overtime to make it possible.

When President Truman signed the bill authorizing the increase on May 22, the payroll section swung into immediate action. From charts sent out by the Chief of Finance, an average of seven changes were made on every pay card.

Working Saturdays, nights and Memorial Day, all these changes were accomplished in time to meet the regular pay day. Not only were the regular personnel paid, but even those arriving on the last day were included, Lt. Col. B. J. Johnston, Finance Officer, stated with justifiable pride.

Complicating the revision of the military rolls, was the fact the Finance Office also had civilians to pay on the following Tuesday. With the cooperation of the payroll section of civilian personnel, this too was accomplished on time, the checks being turned over to the civilian section on Monday.

New Camera Club Has Expert Help

All phases of camera work are being studied by members of the Camera club organized last month at the Fort Baker Service club. Lt. Col. Harvey Bower, an experienced camera expert, is instructing and advising the group.

In addition to the discussions and instruction at club meetings, the members will make trips into the field for practical application of their study. They also plan to construct their own dark room for developing their pictures at the Fort Baker club.

Judging contests will be held by the group for evaluation of their work. Assistance will be given in entering outstanding work in various national contests.

Any personnel stationed at the Presidio or its sub-posts may attend the Fort Baker club meeting and participate in their activities. If sufficient interest is shown by Presidio personnel, arrangements will be made to provide transportation to Fort Baker for the meetings.

Family Service Record Has 57 Devoted Years

Ft. Benning, Ga.—Assignment of Capt. William E. Burr to the Infantry School here has brought out the fact that nine members of the Burr family have devoted their lives to the military service during the past 57 years.

Six of the family have been West Point graduates, the most recent being Captain Burr who received his degree there in 1945. Graduating from the Military Academy before him were his father, Col. William E. Burr; his grandfathers, Gen. Edward Burr and Col. George W. Goode; his brother-in-law, 1st Lt. Charles R. Finley, and a first cousin, Capt. Edward Burr II.

Capt. Burr's sister Julie was a WAC in WWII, and his brother Robert a private first class in the last war. Another cousin, Lt. John Priest, USNR, is now a Navy flyer at Memphis, Tenn., NAS.

Both his brother and his brother-in-law were killed in Normandy.

30th Topographic Gathers Map Data On America's Last Frontier

Surveyors of the 30th Engineer Base Topographic Battalion will be combatting the weather and the jagged terrain of isolated Alaskan areas this summer as they gather data to be used by the Army Map Service. The forward echelon of the 30th Engineers left Fort Winfield Scott last month.

Helicopters will play an important role in the operations. The use of helicopters to carry surveyors and equipment over treacherous muskeg and rugged mountains has made possible surveying which was previously not feasible. Land travel in much of the area is slow and hazardous even during the short summer. Today, surveyors can reach the most isolated areas in minutes, where previously days of difficult and dangerous traveling were required. A total of 36 military and commercial helicopters will be used for the operation.

Fifteen helicopters have been used for the last two summers in the Alaskan project. In 1950, its first season with aircraft, the 30th Engineers surveyed 18,000 square miles of territory for large-scale mapping in an elapsed time of 71 days. This represented a production estimated at six seasons of work by conventional transportation. The helicopters, taking advantage of the long Arctic days, flew an average of 95 hours each per month.

During the 1951 season, 24,000 square miles were surveyed in 81 days, setting new records for this type of work. The helicopters flew an average of 72 hours monthly. Aircraft logs showed that the two-place helicopters made 7,750 landings during this time, primarily in primitive forests and mountains, and lifted 1,593 passengers plus unrecorded loads of equipment and supplies.

The helicopters not only facilitate transportation in otherwise inaccessible areas, but are proving valuable in the actual surveying. They have contributed largely to the development of new and rapid methods of obtaining elevations by altimeter leveling. Classification of ground information such as forest types, stream widths, road capacities, and other items which will appear on the finished map is largely done by helicopters.

Air transportation of the Army Engineers is supplemented by amphibious "Weasels" which carry heavier loads and set up fuel and supply points. Fifty-foot landing craft, capable of long-range cruising along the Alaskan coast, are also used.

In addition to the Alaskan Operation, the 30th Engineers conduct winter surveying operations in Southern California.

Letterhead Prize Is Won by AAA Private

Winner of the contest to design a letterhead for the Fort Cronkhite Service Club was Pfc. Charles Gregorie of A Btry. 459th AAA, the contest judges announced this week.

Although only one winner was to have been selected, the judges felt a special award should be given to Pfc. Ralph Green, also of A Btry. 459th AAA.

Gregorie's simplified design of the club's unique setting with the sea in the foreground and the mountains rising behind it won him a $10 award. For his design of the Golden Gate Bridge, Green was given a $5 prize.

WEEKLY TIC Topic

Just how is a Presidio levy determined? The topic of this week's TIC&E conference, "The Army's Rotation Policy and You," will give the why-and-wherefore's of overseas assignment as it affects enlisted personnel.

Systems used to establish levies will be traced from the Department of the Army to the Sixth Army and down to the Presidio and the units on the post.

Explanations will be given the methods used to establish POR qualified personnel, the determination of categories and priorities.

Other phases of the subject to be discussed will include volunteering for foreign service, temporary deferments and leave, America's world-wide overseas commitments and the Army's policy of equitable rotation of assignments.

Roar, Bright Glare Occurs When Meteor Meets Earth

(By Armed Forces Press Service)

It was noon in the French town of L'Aigle, on April 26, 1903. People in the streets suddenly stopped and frantic shopkeepers ran out of their stores. A loud, roaring sound, accompanied by frequent explosions, enveloped the town in a blanket of sound.

Moments later between 2,000 and 3,000 meteoric stones rocketed out of the sky and scattered over an area nine miles long by three miles wide. After the panic, scientists examined the stones and proclaimed that solid bodies from outer space had reached the earth.

A few weeks ago an object exploded over Seattle, Wash., with a brilliant flash. The blue-white glare was seen 400 miles away at Missoula, Mont. Residents, fearing a catastrophe, called police and radio stations. The mass of matter, said witnesses, had split into several pieces. Air Force officials and astronomers agreed that the object was a meteor.

Almost 150 years have passed between these two incidents. Scientists have had further opportunities to investigate this phenomenon. Chubb Crater, in northeastern Canada, was formed by probably the largest meteorite which ever struck the earth. It measures 11,500 feet in diameter. A 1,200-pound stone has been found in fragments at Long Island, Kans. There is a huge crater near Winslow, Ariz., formed by a meteorite 4,000 feet in width.

Meteors, or "shooting stars," are fragments of solid matter which enter the earth's atmosphere from outer space at a speed up to 150 miles a second. The friction created by the air's resistance causes them to burn and light up. These are called "fireballs." It is the fragments of fireballs, or meteorites, in the form of iron or stone which reach the earth.

Fireball or shooting star—these missiles remain a constant barrier in man's attempt to conquer outer space.

Tank-Infantry Course Resumes at Ft. Hood

Ft. Hood, Tex. (AFPS)—Tank-Infantry combat maneuvers, resumes here soon on the nation's most modern course for coordinated team assaults.

Designed by Maj. Gen. Bruce C. Clarke, 1st Armored CO, the course puts infantry and tank platoons under realistic combat conditions. A mortar group, supporting the other platoons, has been added to heighten battle realism.

Army Admits NG To Ranger Course

Washington (AFPS)—The tough Ranger training course at the Infantry School, Ft. Benning, Ga., has been opened to members of the National Guard, the Army has announced.

The grueling six-week course will be open to company grade officers and non-commissioned officers of the grade of sergeant and above in NG divisions.

Parts of the rough and realistic course will be conducted in mountainous, jungle, swamp and lake areas. Leaders developed in the course will act as instructors and pass on their know-how to men in their NG units.

"This is another step in the program to place and keep the National Guard in the highest possible state of readiness for any contingency," stated Maj. Gen. Raymond H. Fleming, chief of the National Guard Bureau.

Army Tests Series Of Military Bridges

Washington (AFPS) — A new series of military bridges designed to carry the heaviest equipment used by field armies or divisions is in the final stages of completion, the Army has announced.

Developed by the Army Corps of Engineers, they include floating and fixed bridges made of aluminum and steel. Both types will carry divisional combat and supply vehicles over a wide range of spans. The aluminum bridge will largely replace the Bailey Bridge of WWII.

Erection times are substantially less than the periods required for the Bailey bridge of comparable capacity because of incorporation of fewer and more easily connected parts.

A new line of communications bridge is now being tested with the other new bridges at the Engineer Research and Development Laboratories, Ft. Belvoir, Va.

The Medal of Honor was created December 21, 1861, when President Lincoln signed the Act. It is awarded in the name of Congress. First awarded to John William, captain of USS Pawnee. Five men have received two Medals of Honor.

"Interrogation" by an unidentified Marine cameraman was awarded first place in the human interest category. Second place: "Korean War Orphans" by an unidentified Air Force photographer. Third place: "On the Lighter Side" by Marine Cpl. Lewis Gibson.

Aubrey Springer filled his 1950 big game quota in a half hour near Craig, Colorado, October 15, when he consecutively shot a 600-pound bear, a 700-pound elk, which came in sight while he was skinning the bear, and finally a seven-point buck deer. All the game was bagged within 200 yards of his truck.

Army Will Mark 177-Years National Service Next Week

"Our Army 177 Years Old," is to be topic for next week's Troop Information Hour, it has been announced by the Sixth Army TI&E Section.

The 177th anniversary of the establishment of the U. S. Army falls on June 14, and—quoting from a letter sent out The Adjutant General of the Army—

—"the occasion . . . affords an opportunity for commanders of all echelons to remind their troops of the proud heritage they bear as soldiers of today's Army."

"The Army, being the oldest of the Armed Services of the United States, has the distinction of being 'The Senior Service.' It is the only one of the Armed Services which can trace its history, with unbroken continuity, to the Continental Army."

In the observance of "Army's Birthday" throughout the Sixth Army it has been suggested it be in the vein of "a family affair," confined to posts and installations.

The day will be of special significance to at least three units in Sixth Army: the 1st Infantry Regiment, established in 1791, now at Fort Ord, California; the 20th AAA Gun Battalion, descendant of the 4th Regiment of Artillery, established in 1821; stationed at Fort Lewis, Washington; and the 106th Tank Battalion, "heir" to an Illinois cavalry outfit organized in 1897, now with the 44th Division at Camp Cook, California.

The TIH will offer many other interesting highlights of the Army's history during its "birthday week."

Two States Announce Changes in Vote Rules

Washington (AFPS)—Two states have announced voting procedure changes since the publication of the voting information booklet and its first amendment prepared by the Armed Forces Information and Education Division of the Department of Defense.

The South Carolina attorney general has ruled that members of the Armed Forces from South Carolina may vote by absentee ballot at elections held in that state. Registration requirements are the same as outlined in the booklet.

Persons who have had their applications for ballots returned to them prior to May 15 may apply again.

Michigan has announced that the earliest date its officials will accept absentee ballot applications is now 75 days before election day. It was formerly 30 days.

The ballots will be mailed to servicemen as much as 45 days prior to election day. Formerly the period was 25 days.

The action will definitely benefit personnel in the Far and Middle East where the time lag in correspondence is longer than in other areas.

On Roster as Cook:

Army Gave 'Dizzy' Start

(By Armed Forces Press Service)

Jerome H. (Dizzy) Dean claims all the credit for the invention and (mis) use of his special brand of English, but the discovery of his pitching talents, he admits, came in the Army more than 20 years ago.

Dizzy took his first train ride from Houston to Ft. Sam Houston, San Antonio, Tex., in 1926, when his brother convinced him he'd do well in the Service. His company had no organized baseball team, but in pickup games Dizzy fired the ol' fast ball so accurately and fast he attracted the attention of M/Sgt. James K. Brought.

Sgt. Brought managed a battalion team and added Dean to his squad. Officially, Dizzy was listed as a cook on the duty roster. His culinary abilities never equalled his baseball play, and he became a permanent KP. Once while the company was at Camp Stanley, he turned out a batch of biscuits. When he appeared in the dining hall, the eaters greeted him with a shower of rock-like objects—the biscuits. Dizzy decided to pursue the game of baseball and forget cooking.

In 1929, after leaving the Service, he signed a $300 contract to play for the St. Louis Cardinals. Success and fame followed in the majors. When his career as a player ended, he turned to radio announcing.

Dizzy was in the Army two years. By his own admission, he "worked up to PFC."

Tardy Hero

Wide World M/Sgt. Anthony Herbert, 22-year-old war hero of Herminie, Pa., makes amends by telephone for forgetting about a press conference in New York City. Herbert is the most decorated soldier of the Korean conflict, holding 27 decorations for his actions in that conflict. After going to Newark, N. J., to visit a schoolteacher friend who had invited him to talk to her fourth-grade pupils, he returned and made apologies for being late.

Special NSLI Available For Disabled Veterans

Washington (AFPS)—A special form of government insurance has been made available to personnel who are released from active service after April 25, 1951, and are found by the Veterans Administration to be suffering a Service-connected disability.

A form of National Service Life Insurance, the insurance is available in a five-year level premium term plan and various types of permanent plan policies. The disability must be one for which compensation would be payable by the VA.

Application for the insurance must be made within one year from the date the VA determines the disability to be Service-connected.

Interested personnel should contact their nearest VA office for further information regarding eligibility for this type of insurance.

Southern Starr—

A buxom Indian lass who can't read a note of music is the queen of the nation's juteboxes. Kay Starr, a girl with a big voice who is sometimes called the "female Johnny Ray" spun the "Wheel of Fortune" into the country's No. 1 seller among popular records. The 29-year-old Southern miss, whose throaty, coon-shouting style once was tabbed uncommercial, was born on an Indian reservation near Dougherty, Okla. Her forebears are of Iroquois, Cherokee, Choctaw and Irish descent. She turned out 50 Capitol recordings before the "Wheel" sent her zooming to the top. Before she starts singing, she hangs her head between her knees. She says it clears her throat.

Guess Again!—

"What's My Line?", a TV program that capitalizes on American occupations, has become one of video's most-watched panel programs. The contestants appear before four panelists who try to guess what the individual does for a living. Recently, the guessing took the following pattern: Q. Do you take things off? A. Yes. Q. Do people like it when you take things off? A. Yes. I guess so. Q. Well, the more things you take off, do people like it better? A. Yes, you might say so. Q. Do you also put things on? A. That's right. The panelist made the obvious guess, which was wrong. The girl was a disc jockey.

Summer Dances For USO-YWCA On Friday Nights

Under the sponsorship of the USO-YWCA, a special series of summer dances will be given on Friday nights at the Presidio Service club.

A Hawaiian dance, to be held at the club tonight, will begin the series. The floor show will feature Hawaiian songs and dances and the decorations will also be Hawaiian.

Each week a different theme will be used for these dances. Following this week's Hawaiian dance, the state of Texas will be honored by furnishing the motive for the social event.

Themes to be used will be decided by balloting among the men attending the club. A ballot box will be placed in the club for the votes of the men who wish to give their preference for the states to be used as the basis for the various themes.

The men will also be able to participate in the planning of the various dances. Committee members of the USO-YWCA will meet at 2000 each Wednesday in the writing room of the Service club to formulate plans and will welcome suggestions which any of the men may have to offer in the way of decorations, floor shows or other features for the different themes.

Members of the sponsoring group are from the USO-YWCA club at 233 Pine street. Mrs. Eloise Sterling Hirt, USO-YWCA director, has worked with post service club directors in planning the series.

Raiders Locate Touchstone Win Three In Succession

Things were going too well for the Red Raiders Tuesday afternoon in their game against Treasure Island on the Navy base. For six innings they enjoyed the luxury of a 4 to 0 lead. Then came the seventh inning when two hits and four walks resulted in two runs and started a T. I. scoring spree. They went on to get two more runs in both the eighth and ninth to take the game 6 to 4.

All the Raiders, except the pinch hitter, got at least one run and one hit when the Presidians staged a field day against the San Francisco Port of Embarkation nine, winning 14 to 3 on their home field last week. Pitcher Danny Stupur gave up only four hits, all of them in the sixth inning when S.F.P.E. scored their three runs of the game.

The S.F.P.E. game was the third straight win by the Red Raiders. Previously they had defeated the San Francisco civilian team, Cooper Varni, 8-7, and had taken Mare Island to the tune of 14-5 in a game played at the shipyards. Last Sunday the Presidians continued their winning streak by handing the Jefferson Club of San Francisco a 5 to 2 defeat.

Raiders Wax VFW; Lose to Hibernians

Presidio's softball team has won one and lost one of their last two games in the Class B league of the San Francisco Recreation Department tournament. In the win column was a 5 to 3 decision over the VFW nine. The Raiders dropped a loose game 7 to 1 to the Hibernians, league leaders. In a practice game last week, the Fort Mason soldiers set the Presidians down 13 to 3. Next league game for the post team will be Monday, 9 June, when they meet the Pomar nine on Diamond No. 2 of Rolf field at 1930.

WACs Trip Navy In Close Contest

The Presidio WACs got off to a flying start in their first game of the season in the Bay Area Armed Forces Women's Softball League by defeating the Treasure Island Waves 9 to 8 on the Presidio field last week. This was the first defeat in three years for the T. I. Waves who have topped the league three consecutive times. After having lost a 2 to 1 lead at the end of the first inning when the Waves added two in the second, the WACs got back on the winning side in the fourth as Gleason homered with one aboard.

In the seventh the Waves tied the score at 5 all and the game went into an extra inning with the Waves adding three in their half. The WACs evened things up again when Groomes, who had brought in two with a double, stole home. The winning run for the WACs came home when Steter hit a double, scoring Gleason from second base.

Raiders Meet Strong Foe in SLO Nine

Camp San Luis Obispo will send their ball club to the Presidio this weekend for a two-game series with the Red Raiders. The games will be played Saturday and Sunday at 1300 on the Main Athletic field. Winning four out of their last five games, the Presidio team has shown much improvement since their season began. The weekend games will give their fans an opportunity to show their support by attending both contests. Next week the Raiders will go to Moffett Field Tuesday seeking revenge for their 2 to 1 defeat here on Armed Forces Day. Their home game on Thursday will be with the Coast Guard, the top league team.

Ames, Iowa—Lt. John Fletcher, USN, won one of eight team berths on the U. S. Olympic wrestling squad in competition here. Two other servicemen were named alternates to the 16-man squad. An alternate himself in 1948, Lt. Fletcher won his 1952 place as champion of the 147½-pound class. Jack Blubaugh, USAF, was named alternate in the 125½-pound class and Shuford Swift, USN, earned the same classification in the 191-pound group.

Letterman Chief "Beats Ben Hogan" In Golfing Annual

What every golfer dreams of doing was accomplished by Maj. General Leonard D. Heaton, Commander of Letterman Army Hospital, when he "beat Ben Hogan" last Sunday. Playing in the "Beat Ben Hogan" National Golf Day on the Presidio golf course Saturday, General Heaton scored an 80, which was reduced to 69 by his handicap of 11. This bettered the par 71 shot by Hogan over the Northwood Country Club course in Dallas, Tex. Of the 82 who entered the tournament on the Presidio course, six turned in scores under that of Hogan. Dr. G. B. Robson was the winner with a gross 82 less a 15 handicap for a net of 67. The others, all with a net of 69, were R. L. Saratoo, Dr. J. E. Cann, B. Enersen, R. N. Hammond and General Heaton.

Entry fee for the tournament was $1 in the special event co-sponsored by the Professional Golfers Association and Life magazine, with all proceeds going to the national golf fund and U.S.O. fund. Close to 70,000 persons took part at clubs all over the country.

A Red Smith Is Okay Too

Is there a Grantland Rice on the Post? The Star Presidian is anxious to get a full time sports reporter as a permanent member of the staff. What an assignment! Nothing to do but go to Post baseball games, basketball games, Post softball games, WAC basketball games, intramural softball games, WAC softball games, boxing tournaments, bowling tournaments, golf tournaments, and so on and on. Those interested should drop in at the Star Presidian office in Building 1220 at Fort Scott between 0745 and 1630 for an interview. A second Grantland Rice isn't absolutely necessary.

Scott's Backward Nine Holds A Firm Grip On Last Place

Headquarters Company strengthened their claim to the last place position in the Fort Scott softball league by losing their last two games. Their first defeat was at the hands of the 96th and 64th Engineers team, 11 to 4, and was due mainly to the performance of SFC Lester C. Hartman. Pitching for the 64th and 96th, Hartman struck out 12, gave up only four hits and two walks, and then added a home run to his performance. SFC Garthe M. Hurlbutt also got a homer for the 64th-96th team. Booting away what appeared to be an easy victory, Headquarters had no one to blame but themselves for their defeat at the hands of the 21st Engineers. The undefeated 21st team, behind for six innings, went ahead to a 16-14 lead in the top of the seventh. Headquarters tied it up again in their half, but the 21st scored 11 runs in the overtime inning to win 27-16.

Headquarters Company fielded their best team to date, which included M/Sgt. Chester Valandingham on the mound and Sgt. Frank Tuttle behind the plate. Home runs were hit by Valandingham and his team mate, Cpl. Dolan Benolken. Cpl. Thomas Duff and Pfc. James Graham pitched for the 21st.

Top Softball Teams Will Test Undefeated Records

Two teams, the 102d MRU and Headquarters Company Sixth Army remain undefeated in the post intra-mural softball league. The MRU tops the league with three wins while the Headquarters Company has played only twice. Both teams will be battling to retain their positions this afternoon. The 102d MRU shouldn't have too tough a time with the Co. D-3 701st MPs, who have yet to get in the win column. As these teams meet on diamond No. 2, Hq Co 6th Army will play the 99 Engineers on diamond No. 1. Both games will be at 1515.

Monday the two 701st MP teams will clash for the first time when the D-3 outfit will fight it out with the D-2 team on diamond No. 1. League standings as of today are as follows:

	Won	Lost
102d MRU	3	0
Hq Co 6th Army	2	0
Hq Co 47 AAA	2	1
99 Engineers	2	1
Co D-2 701st MP	1	2
Officers	0	4

This week Co D-2 701st MPs lifted themselves out of the cellar by defeating the Officers, 7-6. Scores of recent league games are as follows: May 19—Hq Co 47 AAA (5), Co D-3 701st MP (3); 99 Engineers (33), Co D-2 701st MP (9); May 23—Hq Co 47 AAA (6), Officers (2); 102d MRU (24), Co D-2 (5); May 26—99 Engineers (14), Co D-3 701st MP (13).

Softballers Wax T. I. In 18-11 Free for All

Backing up the three-hit pitching of Strons, Presidio's softball nine defeated Treasure Island, 18-11, Wednesday night in a practice game played at T. I. Scoring two runs in the first inning, the Raiders maintained at least a two-point lead throughout the game. At the end of the first of the fifth their edge was 10 to 4.

Boxing Hopefuls To Get Second Shot At Olympic Tryouts

Sixth Army Special Services have opened another door for Olympic boxing aspirants in this area. Boxers who have already competed in the All-Army tournament, even though they failed to gain a berth are eligible to compete in the West Coast AAU Boxing Tournament that will be held in San Francisco on 11-12 June. Also eligible are any service mittmen who failed to enter previous tournaments due to time elements or previous commitments.

Sixteen entries have already been received, 14 from Camp Roberts and two from the Oakland Army Base. Nine of these new entries were winners or runners-up in the recent Sixth Army tourney.

Winners in the regional tourneys will be eligible for the Olympic tryouts in Kansas City on 16-18 June. Every effort should be made to insure that those who are eligible are allowed to compete.

The following is a list of names of representatives in the Sixth Army area local districts:

- I. F. Tommey—UofC Agriculture School, Davis, California.
- Clyde Quisenberry—Rt. No. 7, Box 321, Vancouver, Oregon.
- Al Sandell—400 Civic Auditorium, San Francisco, California.
- Ralph Smith—care of San Diego Park and Recreation Department, San Diego, California.

Leon Leopard of the Presidio breaks the tape five yards ahead of Harry Bright of Third Army to win the 800 meter title of the All-Army Meet at Berkeley Field. His time was 1:54.6, as compared with the 1:55.1 of the winner of the same event for the Pacific Association at the dual meet. Leopard will be a member of the All-Army team competing this weekend at Long Beach in the All-Services meet and will be out to beat his record time of 1:51.8.

Pacific Association meet records, that won't go in the books because the meet was a combined Pacific Association and All-Army affair, will compete in the All-Service finals at Long Beach this weekend.

Although the weather, cold and gusty, held the combined attendance to some six or seven thousand spectators for the two-day meet, it didn't bother the contestants. They seemed to have Helsinki in July rather than Berkeley in May on their minds, and performed accordingly.

The Sixth Army was host for this year's All-Army production, and the well organized extravaganza produced three double winners; Warren Druetzler, Second Army; Alex Litman, Fourth Army; and Jim Cooke of the Third Army.

Ft. Lee's Lt. Warren Druetzler, an ex-Michigan State star already rated the nation's top miler, has beaten both Wilt and Ghermann this year, breezed to an 80-yard win in the all-service steeplechase in the record time of 9 minutes and 29 seconds. This shattered the old PA mark by 1 minute and 9.6 seconds. The 1500-meter was another easy win for the crack Second Army star, his time of 3 minutes 53.6 seconds bettered a PA mark set in 1924 by 48.2 seconds.

A new Service sprint star was uncovered when the Fourth Army's Alex Litman, a 32-year-old Negro flash from San Angelo, Texas, outgamed the ex-Illinois speedster Billy Mathis in both the 100 and 200-meter dashes. Mathis, running for FECOM, seemed a sure winner in the early stages of both sprints, but fell victim to Litman's last jump stretch drives. Litman blazed the 100 in 10.9 and the 200 in 22.2, fast time in any man's league. Off this performance the Texas Flasher could easily prove the class of the All-Service meet.

Jim Cooke, a 6-foot 5-inch, 225-pound negro giant from the Third Army, scored a double win in the shot and discus. He heaved the shot 51 feet 3/8 inches, and spun the discus 162 feet 5 1/2 inches.

The Second Army hurdler, Billy Anderson, a former Compton star, and son of the radio comedian Rochester, outclassed ex-Cornell star Warren Ashbaugh in the 110-meter hurdles. He blazed over the uprights in 14.3 seconds clipping 4 tenths second off the old PA record set by Gus Meier in 1933.

Donald Shanks, the Sixth Army distance star, eclipsed a 24-year-old PA record in the 5,000-meter run. He shaved a minute 26.8 seconds off the old mark as he defeated FECOM's Walter Jewsbury, an easy winner of the 10,000-meter the day before.

EUCOM's Roland Blackmon unofficially smashed another PA record that had stood for 24 years when he glided over the 400-meter hurdles in the good time of 53.9 seconds. This was 6 tenths second better than the Olympic Club's Don Brooks, whose name goes in the record books, and 1 minute 1 tenth second better than the old record set by Hugo Leister of Stanford in 1928.

All-Army Boxing Finals Find Sixth Army Unplaced

Only one member of Sixth Army's All-Army boxing team advanced to the finals at Fort Monmouth, New Jersey, last week. Fort Lewis welterweight, Felix Benson, tangled with Fifth Army's Frank Smith and dropped a narrow decision to the Woods slugger.

Fifth Army walked off with team honors in the three-day slug fest by annexing four of the ten weight titles. Their kingpins included Dick Jones who upset EUCOM's Austin Jones, three-time European Command champ, to win the lightweight title.

Heavyweight Zora Folley, who scored the final night's only KO when he axed EUCOM's Warren Graham in the second round, won the outstanding boxing award. The big FECOM heavy was awarded the Frank Pace Jr. Trophy by Lt. Gen. Willis Crittenger, First Army Commander.

Other winners include: Flyweight (112 lb.) J. Drakeford, Fort Dix, decisioned C. Fasco, EUCOM. Bantamweight (113-119 lb.) J. Nobleza, FECOM, decisioned George Davis, Fort Meade. Featherweight (120-125 lb.) J. Barkas, Fifth Army, decisioned J. Quawrells, Fort Hood. Lightweight (126-132 lb.) S. Rodgers, Fort Riley, decisioned B. Bickle, FECOM. Lightwelter (133-139 lb.) J. Alvarez, CARIB, decisioned Willie Hunter, Fort Bragg. Light-middle (148-156 lb.) J. Remson, EUCOM, decisioned F. Butler, Fort Meade. Middleweight (157-165 lb.) F. Cox, Third Army, decisioned W. Finney, Fort Meade. Winners in the ten weight divisions are now eligible to compete in the National Olympic finals at Kansas City on 16-18 June. A victory there would assure them a place on the Olympic team and a trip to Helsinki, Finland, in July.

Military Ceremony Highlights Final Days Track Competition

Brief colorful ceremonies opened the final day of the two-day combined All-Army and Pacific Association AAU American Olympic elimination track and field trials at Edwards Field in Berkeley, last Saturday.

An impressive parade, a short welcoming address by Colonel Edwin L. Johnson, acting chief of staff of the Sixth Army, and a brief speech by Harold Berliner, president of the Pacific Association AAU, highlighted opening ceremonies.

A smart looking Color Guard of 701st MPs, followed by the Sixth Army band, nine contingents of All-Army track and field stars, and the games sixty officials paraded across the centerfield turf to face the west stadium stands.

Colonel Johnson, representing the Sixth Army Commander, Lt. Gen. Joseph M. Swing, official host for the games, made a brief welcoming address and expressed the Commander's regrets at not being able to personally attend the meet. He was followed by Harold Berliner, Pacific Association AAU president, who expressed his admiration and gratitude at the fine cooperation and planning by the games military hosts. The band followed with the National Anthem and the games got underway.

Midway of the competition, Mr. Pincus Sober, chairman of the U.S. Olympic Track and Field Committee, addressed the crowd. Thanking them for their fine support of the Olympic contestants he said, "We are one of the few nations who support international amateur athletic competition from our own hearts and pocketbooks. We (Olympic contestants) receive no government funds of any kind, and we like it that way." Funds derived from the sale of souvenir programs, and contributions collected by Cal students during the games, will be used to defray expenses of the trip to Helsinki in July.

The games officials included Brig. Gen. William T. Sexton, Sixth Army Chief of Staff, as Director of Games; Frank R. Geis, Director of Games; Pincus Sober, Referee; Col. John S. Mallory, Sixth Army Special Services Officer, Director of All-Army Track and Field Meet.

Head Olympic Games Coach Brutus Hamilton was an interested spectator at the games.

TOP MILER Warren Druetzler took out Olympic insurance by coasting to victory in 1500-meter All-Army finals and the 3000-meter All-Service Steeplechase. (Gillette Photo)

Special Service Officer Presents Track Awards

Colonel John S. Mallory, Sixth Army Special Service Officer, was on hand to congratulate and decorate winners of the All-Army track and field meet.

An eight-day leather encased clock went to those who placed first in the finals. Runners-up got a fancy desk calendar decorated with the bronze figurine of an athlete. A Parker 51 was awarded third place contestants.

TALKING IT OVER are USF's track great Ollie Matson (left), and FECOM sprint star Billy Mathis. Ollie's advice didn't pay off for Billy as he was nosed out in both the 100 and 200-meter dashes by meet sensation Alex Litman. Matson coasted to victory in PCAAU version of the same two events. Decade Of Progress For Army Air

Army aviation may seem a paradox of terms to many persons. But the fact is that the U. S. Army has been "up in the air" with its own aircraft for more than a decade.

Back about 1940, Army officers interested in light plane flying were convinced that aircraft of the Piper Cub type could be put to use by the Army in assisting ground operations. As a result of difficult pioneering, the Army did buy a number of Cubs and recruited members of the armed forces who had civilian pilot licenses to fly the aircraft.

The first official Table of Organization and equipment for Army Aviation was approved 6 June 1942. On that date organic air observation for the field artillery was officially born. The original intent of the founders of Army Aviation was to use the light planes principally as an air observation post from which the adjustment of the artillery firing could be effectively handled.

Dubbed "Grasshoppers" by their ground-borne brothers-in-arms, the Army fliers underwent their baptism of fire in North Africa in the fall of 1942. Unarmed and unarmored, the light, fabric-covered, 65-hp aircraft did yeoman's service in assisting ground forces to make their advances which resulted in forcing the Nazis into the Mediterranean.

In those early days, as now, the Army's flight sections were called upon for missions ranging from courier runs to spotting and firing upon enemy targets.

The handful of pilots who were in on the history making events of North Africa were backed up by Stateside developments when two flying schools were set up at Pittsburg, Kansas, and at Denton, Texas, in the spring of 1943. They trained artillery officers without previous flying experience. Advanced tactical training was given at the Artillery School, Fort Sill, Oklahoma.

Here the specialized type of flying required of "Grasshopper" pilots was taught. This radical flying technique, radical from civilian flying standards, included landing in small, unimproved fields and on roads. Instruction was also given in field maintenance of the aircraft with a minimum of tools and parts. Pilots were also trained in the aerial adjustment of artillery firing.

Although the training of field artillery pilots did not get under way in earnest until August 1942, the pilots sent overseas were engaged in their first combat missions. The first of these was flown from the deck of an aircraft carrier 40 miles off the coast of French Morocco in the North African invasion. Of the four ships launched, three reached their objectives. The fourth was shot down. The Cubs were used throughout the campaign and went forward with ground troops in the invasion of Anzio and Sicily.

Army aircraft proved invaluable in the Italian campaigns in the broken, mountainous country where directing artillery fire from the ground observation posts was especially difficult.

By this time the Cubs were in the thick of battle in every combat theater. In the Pacific they were used not only for adjustment of fire, but for emergency evacuation and resupply of small units. In Europe they flew the Channel for the Normandy invasion, directing naval gunfire in the initial phases of the invasion. Their first landing strips were on fields only a few feet from the Utah and Omaha invasion beaches.

So effective was the work of these light aircraft and their two-man crews that a well-earned respect was gained from the fox-holed infantry on up the ranks to the three-starred field commanders. Many times during hot artillery barrages, the appearance of the Cub silenced enemy guns. The Germans had long before discovered that a Cub in the sector meant that quick, accurate counterbattery firing would follow. Infantrymen under enemy artillery fire developed a terrific respect for the liaison pilots (as they were then called) who flew the put-putting aircrafts. These Army planes soon were dubbed "Maytag Messerschmitts," "Horseflies," and "Flying Jeeps."

Army Aviation became entrenched as a vital part of the ground forces team as a result of its operation during World War II. The cessation of hostilities did not stop its growth. Army Aviation has been extended from its original place in the field artillery to these other branches of the service: infantry, armor, engineers, signal corps, ordnance and transportation corps.

The flight characteristics of this "low and slow" aviation activity which has been developed by the Army in its design of special aircraft and in the training of its pilots include short field capabilities, slow flight, low landing speed, easy field maintenance, and easy handling on the ground.

These are some of the missions which Army Aviation is handling: Locating targets; adjustment of fire of all types of weapons from mortars to battleships, surveillance, reconnaissance, column control of troops on the march, emergency resupply of food, ammunition, medicines and material; wire laying, camouflage inspection, evacuation of wounded, photographing installations and terrain, and administrative missions.

Since the days of the old L-4 Piper Cub and the L-5 Stinson Sentinel, the development of aircraft for Army use has been progressive. The civilian type Navion has been used by the Army for its administrative missions. This ship, designated the L-17, is being replaced by the Cessna 195 in the States, and by the six-passenger DeHavilland Beaver (L-20). A limited number of multi-place, twin-engine Twin Bonanzas have also been purchased by the Army. These planes are being used for such administrative missions as transportation of personnel and cargo.

Helicopters were used in ground combat operations for the first time in military history during the Korean campaign in 1951. This was only one among many Army Aviation "firsts."

Because of the ruggedness of the Korean terrain, ground travel was limited and slow. This condition dictated that aerial transportation be provided for staff personnel who needed fast, safe and efficient means of travel. As a result, the 8th Army Flight Detachment was formed unofficially in the winter of 1950. It was the second such unit ever to be used by the Army, the first being formed for the Constabulary in Germany after the last war. But it was the first to be formed and to become operational during hostilities.

The "Dragon Flight" as it was called, has transported the great of the world who have come to Korea to see at first hand what operations are being conducted by the United Nations troops. Among these have been Vice President Barkley, Secretary of the Army Pace, Mrs. Anna Rosenberg, Generals of the Army, Omar Bradley and George C. Marshall, Generals Matthew B. Ridgeway and James A. Van Fleet, Admiral C. Turner Joy, Cardinal Spellman, President Syngman Rhee.

For the first time in the history of Army Aviation, too, the Distinguished Unit Citation was awarded to an Army Aviation section. The honor was conferred upon the 7th Inf. Div. Air Section in October 1951 for the evacuation of wounded during the Chosin Reservoir operations. During the week-long operation, using every airplane they could get into the air, the airmen of the Seventh evacuated more than 800 critically wounded soldiers from the enemy trap to Hamhung, six miles away. On their trips to the pick-up site, they brought vital medical supplies and ammunition to the troops struggling to hold the line.

The individual feats of Army Aviators could be timeless in the telling. As an example of some of the "clank" stories which have been retold throughout the places where Army Aviators meet will be heard the feat of Lt. Melvin K. Goulding of Austin, Texas, and his observer, Lt. Chester A. Huff of Huntington Park, California, who bailed out of their burning L-19 to safety after being hit by enemy ack-ack near Hill 1290. Or they hear the story of Capt. Charles H. Posz of Eau Claire, Wis., and his observer, Lt. Ralph T. Clark of Smithfield, Utah, who together kept their stricken L-19 in the air for an hour before landing it safely. The plane had had 18 square feet of its right wing sheared off by enemy fire. Then, too, it may be the story of Lt. Josef B. Gardena, who, after being hit by 20 mm flak in the rear cockpit, landed his plane near a tank to get medical aid for his critically wounded observer.

Attrition loss among Army Aviators has been surprisingly light, considering the number of missions flown. As of March 1952, 10 pilots were killed in action and an equal number wounded.

One of the mysteries of the war is found in the annals of Army flying. During a routine patrol mission in the north central sector, Major Larry Loos, a veteran pilot of World War II, was reported as missing in action when he failed to return from the flight. No word has ever been heard from or about him.

This, then, is Army Aviation. Now, on the completion of the tenth year of its existence, this unique service can look back upon a decade of achievement. As a partner in the Army team, Army Aviation has accomplished its mission of supporting the action of ground forces in every campaign which they have undertaken.

Korea Report

service schools for officers and enlisted men established and a Command and General Staff College opened at Taegu for staff officers. There is also a Korean Military Academy, patterned after West Point, for ROKA OCS applicants.

This revitalization program for the ROK Army, under KMAC, has set off a spark of enthusiasm and hope among high ranking Korean officers, that resulted in a chain reaction affecting the rank and file ROK soldier. The present day Korean soldier is a well-trained, well-equipped fighter who knows his business and acts on it with confidence. He is a credit, not only to his American advisors in KMAC, but also to his nation.

It is this confidence that KMAC training is giving to the Koreans that will go far in building a new nation out of the rubble that is now Korea.

On this Sunday morning it is the same outward Korea of a century ago, but underneath the scene is slowly changing and all has not been in vain.

Soldiers Deposit Proving Best Army Savings Plan

Washington—Thriftness of soldiers has been evidenced by the report of the Army Finance Corps that 29,822 soldiers released from active duty from July 1, 1951 to March 31, 1952 collected an average of $481 plus interest from Soldiers Deposits.

The Army personnel had taken advantage of the Soldiers Deposit Savings Plan which allows them to save portions of their pay at four percent interest a year. They receive the money upon release from active duty or at the termination of their enlistment.

Increase in participation in the plan is shown by figures announced by the corps. As of March 31, 1952, $42,106,660 had been deposited by 217,983 soldiers, compared with $37,728,123 from 156,659 soldiers on July 1, 1951.

Front Line Troops Test Atomic Bomb Defenses in Korea

Korea—Front line tests to determine how efficiently combat troops can operate when faced with an atomic attack are being carried out by the U. S. Army here.

More than 10,000 troops of the Ninth Corps are involved in "Operation Mushroom." Communication installations and the corps' vital facilities have gone deeply underground in preparation for a theoretical atomic blast.

It is the first time an army corps has trained for one type of warfare while actually engaged in another.

The operation is part of the Army's over-all continuing study of the changes necessary to meet the demands of atomic war. It follows Army studies at the atomic ranges in Nevada, where troops have actually witnessed an atomic explosion.

No atomic bombs are being used in the current tests.

Army Puts First Electric Rifle Range In Operation

The Army's first electronically operated rifle range was put in action recently at The Infantry Center, Ft. Benning, Ga.

The experimental range cost more than $100,000 and has 36 man-size targets that rise and fall automatically when hit.

Lt. Col. John J. Williams, project officer for the range, stated that the new targets will "save manpower, increase range efficiency and put more realism in firing exercises."

The new course is a transition-type firing range whose 36 targets pop up at various distances to give riflemen practice in hitting quick-action human movements. Four of the targets move laterally to simulate a man's running motion.

Shooters have from 30 to 60 seconds to hit the new target before it drops automatically.

When a hit is scored, the bullet punctures a wire-mesh screen, short circuits the target's electrical system and forces it to disappear. Lights on the control panel enable controllers to score the hits correctly.

OBSERVATION SPECIAL—This is the L-19 Cessna, newest of the Army Aviation family. A fixed-wing reconnaissance observation plane that was developed to meet current Army requirements. This busy bird has played and is playing an increasingly important role in Korea.

PRESIDIO OF SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA

Friday, 13 June, 1952

PHILIPPINE SECRETARY OF DEFENSE Ramon Magsaysay and Mrs. Luis Gonzales, daughter of Philippine President Quirino, are welcomed by Sixth Army Commander Lieutenant General Joseph M. Swing, on their arrival at International Airport, this week. Secretary Magsaysay will confer with top military and defense officials during a three-week stay in this country.

Philippine's Secretary Of Defense Stops Here Enroute To Washington

Sixth Army rolled out the red carpet this week for Ramon Magsaysay, Secretary of Defense for the Philippine Republic, and one of Democracy's staunchest supporters in the Pacific.

Arriving at International Airport on Sunday afternoon, Secretary Magsaysay (pronounced Mog-sy-sy) was greeted with full military honors. Sixth Army Commander Lieutenant General Joseph M. Swing was on hand to meet his old friend. General Swing had pinned paratrooper badges on the first graduates of the Philippine Paratrooper School while in the Islands. Magsaysay later used the paratroopers with marked success against the Huks (pro-Communist rebels).

Following an exchange of greetings and a review of the honor guard, Secretary Magsaysay held a press conference in the airport lounge. Citing his policy of "full force and full fellowship," a policy that has reduced the once 16,000 strong "Hukbo ng mapagpalaya sa bayna" (Peoples Liberation Army) to less than 5,000 gun-toting pro-Communists, he scored the need to show his people that "they could get land without bloodshed, and revolution through the processes of democracy."

The Secretary's party included Mr. and Mrs. Luis Gonzales. Mrs. Gonzales is the daughter of Philipines President Elpidio Quirino and the party's official hostess. She is also first lady of the Philipines, having lost her mother during the sack of Manila.

Crissy Field Will Be Wearing New Face

Crissy Field is currently undergoing a face-lifting that is expected to improve landing safety factors and beautify the 35-year-old field in the process. Besides resurfacing the entire field, 300 feet will be added to the current runway. Borders and the centerstripe will be painted a bright new white, and new tie-downs will be installed in the parking area. Plans for landing lights to aid night flying are under consideration and will be installed after current improvements are completed.

2 West Coast Schools Slate ROTC Programs

Steps are being taken to effect the organization of two new ROTC Units. One in Eastern Washington College of Education, Cheney, Washington, and the other in California Polytechnic College at San Luis Obispo.

These two new units were just recently approved by the Department of the Army and will open for enlistment this fall.

Barometric Ripcord Passes First Tests

London—A barometric device that automatically pulls the ripcord of a parachute at the proper time is being supplied to RAF crewmen. The mechanism has been tested successfully in Britain and Australia.

The device, a barometric bellows, is held in a small box attached to the 'chute and will automatically spring the ripcord at 13,000. The device will insure the opening of 'chutes of airmen who are bumped or otherwise knocked out when clearing planes.

In a jump of 13,000 feet or less, the bellows delays the opening of the 'chute for a few seconds so that the airman can clear the plane.

Complete Inspection of Sixth Army Aviation

Except for inspection of III Corps, the G-3 Aviation has completed their semi-annual inspection of all Reserve and Regular Army Aviation Sections in the Sixth Army area. Reserve units in California, Idaho, Washington, Montana and Oregon have been inspected. Regular Army units at Camp Cooke, Presidio, Camp San Luis Obispo, Fort Ord, Fort Lewis, Camp Irwin, Yuma and Toole have been inspected.

Tomorrow Is The Day!

Senior Service Will Observe 177 Tradition Steeped Years

Tomorrow—14 June 1952—the United States Army will mark its 177th birthday. The oldest of the Armed Forces, the Army is the only element that has existed continuously on an active status from the Revolutionary War to the present day.

Formed a whole year before the Continental Congress declared our independence of British rule on 4 July 1776, the Army is actually older than the United States itself.

When the fighting between British soldiers and American colonists began, the Continental Congress realized that the small, separate, militia forces would be no match in a war against the large, well-trained and unified British forces. Consequently, on 14 June 1775, after much debate, the Congress voted to establish 10 rifle companies "to join the Army near Boston, to be there employed as light infantry, under the command of the chief of that Army."

These 10 rifle companies, the first troops to fight in the name of all the colonies rather than for their home colony alone, became our first "regular" Army units. Since that time, this Country has never been without an Army.

Soon after the fighting stopped at the end of the Revolutionary War, the Continental Congress disbanded most of the Continental Army, authorizing only a force of 80 men—"twenty-five privates to guard the stores at Fort Pitt and fifty-five to guard the stores at West Point."

Without these 80 men the Army could not say that it has served without a break since 1775. Some of these men, moreover, belonged to a unit that still exists today. They were members of a company raised by Alexander Hamilton, which was retained after the Revolution as a Regular Army unit. Today that same unit is Battery D, 5th Field Artillery Battalion, now serving in Europe as part of the 1st Infantry Division. It is the Army's oldest Regular unit and has never been deactivated even for a short time.

Clothing Prices Dip About 15% For All Military Personnel

Reductions of approximately 15 percent in prices of clothing for servicemen and women will go into effect 1 July. The reason given by Defense Department officials for the decline is the fact that in recent months there has been a sharp reduction in the price of wool imports.

Formal Defense Department approval is expected shortly and the Services have already begun publishing new price lists.

Such items as the Army raincoat will drop from $7.35 to $5.60, OD trousers from $12.95 to $10.80 and khaki shirts from $4.00 to $3.40.

With the price decline will come a similar dip in initial clothing allowances as well as monthly basic maintenance and standard maintenance allowances. Basic maintenance allowances for all Services will drop from $5.10 to $4.20 per month.

Standard monthly allowances for both men and women will also decline. Women of all Services will receive $6.00 where they formerly received $7.20. Enlisted men of the Army will receive $5.40 where they formerly received $6.60.

The Army's monetary value of initial issue will drop from $229.70 to $172.91. The reason for this is that the wool shirt is no longer part of the initial issue. Henceforth it will be organizational clothing issued only when specifically needed.

Similar reductions will go into effect for the Air Force, Navy and Marine Corps.

New price lists will reach the field as soon as formal approval is reached.

Red Retaliation

Following the signing of the West German-Allied powers peace contract at Bonn, the Russians took "immediate forceful measures" in retaliation. These measures included the cutting of the lone highway (autobahn) linking Berlin and West Germany (arrow). East Berlin has also severed telephone communications for "line repair" and Russian armed guards were reinforced along the east-west German border to prevent "further infiltration of subversive elements, spies and terrorists" into East Germany.

COPY DEADLINE IS WEDNESDAY NOON

Do You Measure Up?

What sort of impression are you going to give people of the Army when you are once more a civilian? Will your vocal memories be of good friends, good times, jobs well done? Of fine educational opportunities? Of men under whom you were proud to serve? Or won't they? Will you, perhaps, be one of those who remember the bad side of the picture, and spread the word around?

What are you doing, yourself, to formulate and preserve the good side of Army life?

The Army, today, is made up of men and women of all ages. But 50% of these men and women—half of the people in all the Armed Services, in fact—are between the ages of 18 and 23. Youngsters. Impressionable. Kids, most of them, who intend to revert to civilian life before too long.

But they are the ones who will grow up and become the leaders of this country in the next 10—20—30 years. They are the people who will, shortly, be making the laws by which the Army lives. They will be writing about us, telling others of us, working for or against us.

What sort of impression are you helping to give them? It doesn't matter whether you are one of the 18-23 year-olds or not—the type of soldier you, yourself are, is helping right now to influence others of that impressionable age. It is helping influence the sort of civilians they will become. You are helping to create the American citizens of the future.

Are they good soldiers now? Can they become good citizens tomorrow? Look at yourself. How do you stack up? No matter what you are, someone is using you as a model—even if it's of what not to be.

Remember that, and be a model soldier, a model citizen! You probably won't, physically, ever father a President. But mentally and spiritually, chances are good that either directly or indirectly you'll influence one. An ex-Artilleryman is in the White House right now.

Disabled Veterans Can Reopen Many Civil Service Exams

Most Civil Service Examinations for Federal jobs, which have been closed to the general public, may be reopened by disabled veterans, providing their disability was suffered in line of duty.

Information and advice will be provided, by the civil service secretary at any first or second class postoffice, concerning these examinations which may be reopened and will also supply application blanks for the reopening of these tests.

Nationwide exams which disabled veterans may open include those for ammunition inspector, clerk, cameraman and platemaker, guard messenger, park ranger, printer's assistant, storekeeper, tobacco inspector and translator.

Might Come In Handy On Long Winter Evening

Twenty-eight enlisted men from three Fort Richardson, Alaska units recently completed a 32-hour flamethrower course including the servicing, Arctic applications, mixing of fuel, and utilization of home-made equipment for the flamethrower.

The 4 day course was directed by Capt. E. E. Monk with Capt. J. O. Duncanson and Capt. F. R. Pickens, instructors.

The Students were members of the 4th Inf. Reg., the 196th RCT and the chemical section of the Alaska General Depot. They were taught the theoretical and practical aspects of the weapon, using only equipment that would normally be available to any unit.

Since 1924 a St. Louis Cardinal has won the National League's most valuable player award 11 times, and Stan (the man) Musial tops the list as a three time individual winner. Runners-up were two time winners Rogers Hornsby and Carl Hubbell. Team runner-up was Brooklyn, winning the award four times.

Army Slates New CBR Course For Unit Officers, EMs

The Sixth Army announced today that courses in chemical, biological and radiological defense have been scheduled for unit CBR officers and NCOs. Three week courses will be given at both Fort Lewis and the Presidio. Successful completion of the course will qualify individuals for chemical, biological and radiological defense at unit levels.

The program is designed to furnish one trained officer and two enlisted men for each company. One officer and one enlisted man for each battalion, and regiment in the Sixth Army area.

Quotas have been allotted and dates for the first course have been announced. The first course at Fort Lewis will start on 5 July, and at Presidio on 6 July.

Officers who are eligible are those who are assigned or expect to be assigned as unit CBR officers; they must also be cleared for access to confidential material. Enlisted eligibles will be of grade E-4 or higher and have a standard score of 100 or higher in Aptitude Area I. They must also have the necessary security clearance.

Cost Consciousness Plus!

The Army Quartermaster Corps announced recently that future procurements of gelatin dessert powder for domestic consumption by the Armed Forces will be made in paper-board containers instead of the metal cans or paper-board canisters with metal ends formerly used. This will constitute a savings of $40,000 a year.

Since W. W. Hoyt vaulted 10 feet 9¾ inches in 1896, the U. S. has failed to win the Olympic pole vaulting championship only once, that was in 1906 when Albert Gonder of France won with a vault of 11 feet 6 inches. Earl Meadows holds the Olympic record with a mark of 14 feet 3¾ inches.

"They Stood Ready!"

Proves Again That Soldiers Are Our Best Ambassadors

How an outfit of G.I.s made possible the erection of a new building for a small leper colony in the foothills near Mt. Fuji in Japan has been revealed with the announcement of ceremonies to be held later this month marking the progress on the project.

The G.I.s are men of the 56th Amphibious Tank and Tractor Battalion who discovered the colony during maneuvers last year. What they found was not pleasant. The one-story frame buildings were without paint and deteriorating. Sufficient medical supplies were lacking and the 105 patients—men, women and children—were cramped for space.

After several visits the men became acquainted with some of the patients and the six Sisters of the Missionary Sisters of Christ the King, a Canadian religious order which runs the colony.

Friendships developed and the men were offered the use of colony grounds for football and other recreation. It was not long before the men were making plans to help.

Each month at pay day the tankers contributed to the "56th Leper Colony Fund." Almost $2,000 has been donated, with a usual monthly "take" of several hundred dollars.

Part of the fund was used by the men to give a gigantic Christmas party for the patients in December. The festive affair at the colony included gifts, a supper prepared by 56th chefs and a talent show.

Early this year the Sisters announced they were ready to embark on their expansion program, thanks largely to financial backing of the tankers. Ground was broken early in April for a building to house the women patients. The structure is scheduled for completion in September.

The ceremonies this month will take place when the roof of the building is placed into position. Although the men may not be present because of summer training, they are planning another party for the patients early next month.

The new building will be the first step in a wide expansion program planned by the order. Even now that the colony is on a more stable footing, the 56ers will continue to support their "adopted" institution. Their motto, "We Stand Ready," they say, is not restricted to readiness on the battlefield.

New Regulations for National Cemeteries

The Department of the Army recently amended its regulations to forbid burial in national cemeteries of certain criminals.

The regulations exclude veterans convicted of a crime resulting in loss of United States nationality, or who is convicted in a Federal, State, or United States military court of a crime for which the maximum penalty is death or equals or exceeds 15 years' imprisonment.

The regulation also states, if after such conviction the person serves honorably in the armed forces, he will be eligible for burial in national cemeteries.

The United States and Great Britain have dominated the 400-meter and 1600-meter Olympic relays since 1908. Great Britain won the 400-meter in 1912 but has lost to the U. S. in every one since. Great Britain won the 1600-meters in 1920 and again in 1936 but the U. S. was tops in all other years.

Sixth Army Chaplain Records Views On Desert Rock Tests

Desire for knowledge of the moral and spiritual implications of the atom bomb and its use for war and peace was shown by observers at a recent atomic test at Desert Rock, according to Chaplain (Capt.) Kenneth E. McDaniel, Assistant to the Army Chaplain, who was one of the official observers.

After the blast when asked by other observers what he thought, Chaplain McDaniel said: "We've made ourselves another Tower of Babel. With it we can reach the sky. To avoid confusion of speech we need to remember that God made the atom."

"My first impression of 'H' hour minus three days," states the Chaplain, "was a group of sober, thoughtfully intelligent officer personnel representing all branches of the Armed Forces. They came from recent ravages of war, from the podiums of the classroom and from administrative desks and almost without exception they expressed a profound respect and admiration for the work of the chaplain."

Describing the test itself, Chaplain McDaniel reported: "If there was uneasiness at the thought of being close to an atomic explosion, it was removed by pre-indoctrination training and understanding.

We fear those things we do not understand. Hours of orientation and lectures on the nature, properties and use of the 'A' bomb, revealed among other things, that we would be observed for our psychological reaction, for we were to be closer to an 'A' bomb explosion than any previous American Citizen had ever before been placed. "Early on the morning of 'H' hour minus one hour, bombers cut swaths of vapor trails across the sky above ground zero. The public address kept every man informed of the less formal details of the operation.

"In groups and singly, men stood or sat near their trenches and fox holes. Some played cards, others read, a few sunned themselves, many munched on the midmorning snack provided troops. There was confident, self-assuring laughter as all measured their courage to the bombs bursting point. All waited, speculating, reflecting on that one moment of vast experience.

"We were ordered into our trenches at 'H' hour minus ten minutes. The public address counted the remaining seconds while we crouched, shielded from the moment of burst.

"'Bombs away' carried with it the expectant hush of breathing men, hunched in the dust at the bottom of infinity. White light, brighter than ten desert suns, blotted out the walls of our shelter, but only for an instant. 'Raise up' was sounded.

"Heat from the edge of an inferno greeted us as we rose out of our trenches. Dust pall carpeted the desert floor. Majestic crescendos of turbulent, maelstroming atoms splitting, fireballed into the sky, cannonading themselves into a thousand horrible Paricutin's, burned out thousands of feet in the sky, and in burning, ice-capped its mushroom cloud into a canopy of shadow, that swept over and beyond us and left us alone in the world.

"A few seconds after the blast a very much subdued congregation of men conversed in low tone in little clusters or remained silent altogether. It was moments before the hum of voices became as before the blast."

Chaplain McDaniel observed that the chaplain's position and program, both tactical and otherwise, remains unchanged by the atom bomb except "that the moral imperative is more pronounced." "Today," he said, "confronted by the moral responsibilities of our vision of God, we test the atom. But God and the atom are inseparable; nor can we split the moral universe."

WEEKLY TIC Topic

In observance of the Army's being 177 years old on Saturday, the TIC topic for next week will be the history of the Army and the active part it has played in the nation's development during both war and peace.

In size, organization, equipment, training, and methods of fighting, the armies of 1775 and 1952 have little in common. But in one vital respect our Army has not changed. As in Washington's time it is still made up of a relatively small force of professional soldiers. This Regular Army, in time of need, is reinforced by the Civilian Components—the Reserve and National Guard, and other citizens-in-arms—the modern versions of the colonial militia.

In 1775 these citizens-in-arms answered the call to fight for independence and freedom. In 1952, our Regulars and Reserves are answering that same call. In 1775, the mission was to win freedom; today, the mission is to defend it.

Topo Tops Local Blood Donations With 595 Pints

Will you send life in a bottle to the fighting front? This is the pointed question posed by the American Red Cross.

The 30th Engineers have been steadily answering the call for blood by pouring hundreds of pints of the life-giving fluid into the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank at the Presidio.

This week, with nearly two-thirds of the battalion personnel in Alaska, the 30th Engineers still managed to send 41 pints of blood on its way to the Korean battlefield.

April and May were the biggest months for donations from the 30th Engineers with 145 men donating in April and 113 giving blood in May.

The topo men have been giving a substantial amount of the 150 pint weekly quota for the Presidio and sub-posts. No records were kept for last year; however, since the beginning of the year, they have donated 595 pints of blood.

In addition to contributions to the Armed Forces Blood Donor Program the 30th has 34 men standing by for an emergency donation to the Letterman Army Hospital within the next few days.

Signal Corps Set Will Forecast Windspeed

(By Armed Forces Press Service)

Washington—The Army Signal Corps has developed a new type mobile radio set which can tell more accurately "what's in the wind."

The advanced radio set continuously tracks weather balloons adrift in the atmosphere to determine weather conditions. The "rawin" (radio wind) system, as the GMD-1 has been nicknamed, permits continuous tracking for the first time.

Neither extremes of temperature nor height ceilings will limit the new equipment. Unlike the previous manually-operated radio direction finders, the new equipment is not limited by temperature extremes or height ceilings. Flight planning, computation of ballistics corrections and weather data can be rubby by the system.

"Patience Will Pay Off!"

Post Finance Officer Advises Class Q Allotment Holders

"Sit tight, don't write, and don't inquire at the Post Finance Office," is the advice of Lt. Col. B. J. Johnston, Finance Officer, to all dependents of enlisted men and women entitled to increased Class Q allotments under the amendment to the Career Compensation Act recently announced.

In the majority of cases these increases will be automatic, and letters of inquiry will serve only to delay administrative processes.

The Class Q allotment consists of (1) an amount contributed by the individual enlisted man, which remains the same, and (2) the basic allowance provided to the serviceman for quarters, which increases fourteen percent under this amendment.

The serviceman receives a four percent increase in his regular pay. For the two months following the month the bill is enacted he will receive, in addition, the increase in quarters allowance. Thereafter, this quarters allowance increase will be reflected in the allotment check mailed to his dependents.

For example: the pay check of Sgt. James for the month of May will include his regular pay increase of four percent, plus a fourteen percent increase in basic allowance for quarters. The same will apply for June and July. For August, his pay check will reflect only his four percent increase. Beginning in August, the increased quarters allowance will be included in the Class Q allotment check for Mrs. Jones. This first Class Q check in the increased amount will be mailed in the early part of September.

Until September, Mrs. Jones will receive her Class Q allotment check in the same amount as in the past. Whether she also gets the fourteen percent increase for May, June and July will be a personal matter between Sgt. Jones and his wife.

As soon as the President signed the bill into law, the Finance Center, U. S. Army, collectively rolled up its sleeve and started to work around the clock on the immense job of converting to higher rates the more than 500,000 Class Q allotments mailed from St. Louis. Among the score of administrative details is the re-examining of folders on each account, computing the new rates, and cutting stencils and cards for the Class Q allotment checks in the increased amounts.

Modern Matches First Got Lit Up 125 Years Ago

The common, dependable kitchen match—often felt to be as American as the hot dog—celebrates its 125th anniversary this year.

In '51, 508 billion matches were made in the U. S. About 13 billion books, or nearly 90 percent of the total production, were flipped over the counters of America for free—a million and a half books of matches an hour, 24 hours a day, each day of the year.

The first modern match was sold in 1827 by a pharmacist named John Walker in Stockton-on-Tess, England. Being a medical man, he gave his invention the simple name of Sulphurata Hyperoxygeneta Frict.

In 1892, Yankee ingenuity took over. A go-getter named Henry C. Traute put over the idea of printing advertising on the match covers and giving them away free. The idea blossomed when Wrigley ordered one billion books of matches to put over Doublemint chewing gum.

Ol' fire-on-a-wooden-stick, or the kitchen match, has taken a terrible beating from more modern substitutes. In fact, only in Brooklyn has the kitchen match withstood the powerful pressure of more scientific firelighters. Brooklyn stands supreme as the nation's greatest consumer of kitchen matches.

Service Club Plans Texas Show For Homesick Nationals

Don't be startled if you see a surrey with fringe on the top sitting on the lawn in front of the Presidio Service club today.

This surrey is not an advertisement for "Oklahoma"! In fact it will be advertising Texas. Tonight a Texas Hoedown will be held at the club as the second of the series of summer dances being held on Friday nights under the sponsorship of the YWCA-USO.

Texas will be the theme of the party and you can go as a real cowhand if'n ya want ta. That loud shirt in the bottom of your barracks bag can be brought out and you can appear in your Levi's.

Decorations and refreshments will be provided to make Texans real homesick. How do they decorate and what do they drink in Texas—better go to the party and check.

The first of the YWCA-USO series last Friday night was a Hawaiian party which was most successful. Highlight of the evening was a contest to see who could drink milk from a coconut the fastest. Don't laugh, the winner was given a handsome Hawaiian sports shirt and the girl who assisted him by holding the coconut received a baby orchard lei.

Modern Design!

Army's Newest Equipment Provides For Longer Life

A survey of recent developments in the designing of Army clothing and equipment shows that troops will soon be able to operate in the Arctic with as much ease as they can now fight in temperate areas.

This is made possible by the development of new vapor-barrier suit which promises to revolutionize cold weather clothing. This suit is a single layer, molded plastic winter garment, which not only keeps men warm at very low temperatures, but makes soldiers unsinkable, even when wearing a 26 pound pack.

The Army also has a new cold weather casualty bag made of a cotton nylon mixture. This bag resembles an oversize sleeping bag and has special zippers at many places around the outside to permit the treatment of wounds without exposing any other parts of the body.

Woolen cloth can now be treated so that it won't shrink and Army experimenters have found a way to use chicken feathers in a new sleeping bag which is supposed to be twice as warm as the wool bag.

Scores of soldiers in the front-lines have reported that the new armored jackets of laminated nylon have prevented what could have been fatal shrapnel wounds. New protective head gear is being developed. A new lighter, tougher helmet made of an aluminum shell and a shock-resistant liner is on the way. The new liner alone is supposed to be as tough as the current steel helmet, and the aluminum shell allows wearers to see more and is 15 per cent lighter than the current model.

New combat boats have been designed made of reinforced plastic, which can be stacked in piles on large warships. These boats can be driven onto rocky beaches at 30 miles per hour without damage to the one piece hull. Permanent white plastic sleds of moulded glass have proven their worth in cold weather regions by carrying small supply loads over snow and ice.

By combining the advantages of light assault wire, carried by rapidly advancing troops, and the range of standard field wire, the Army has come up with a new communications wire which is insulated with polyethylene and is covered with nylon.

A new iodine compound with a name a yard long, will be used as a substitute for halazone tablets. This new compound is able to destroy the cysts of amoebic dysentery. Other health advances include the increased use of blood plasma, development of antibiotics to hasten recovery from wounds and abdominal surgery and the perfection of pills which virtually eliminate gonorrhea. There is some evidence that this pill, which is made of penicillin, may be able to knock out other venereal diseases. Other tests with penicillin show that half of the rheumatic fever cases in the Army can be cured through the swallowing of penicillin tablets.

The chemical industry has designed plastic pipes for naval vessels, a plastic container to drop liquid supplies from airplanes without parachutes, and hotter and more destructive fire bombs.

The new greaseless pack for rifles and other small arms is what has made most men happy. No more of those three-hour cosmo-line cleaning jobs.

Vermont Beauty Is Queen At Ft. Cronkhite

First to be named Queen of Fort Cronkhite was Miss Mona Spagnulolo of Burlington, Vermont, whose picture was entered in the recent queen contest at the Cronkhite Service Club by Pfc. John O'Sullivan, 459th AAA, D Btry.

Although Miss Spagnulolo was unable to attend the dance for the queen and her attendants, an enlarged picture of her was prominently displayed and she was honored as though she were present.

She was selected by a group of San Francisco artists from among the photographs of sweethearts and wives submitted by the men of Fort Cronkhite. The enlargement of her picture was presented to Pfc. O'Sullivan.

Other entrants in the contest were named attendants and their pictures displayed along with that of the queen.

Big Search On!

Machine Posters Expected To Aid In Fugitives Capture

Wanted fugitives are being hunted on the Presidio and its sub-posts!

All military personnel and civilian employees are being asked to be on the alert and assist in locating the missing.

"Wanted" signs have been posted in all the main buildings on the Post to aid in the search. The missing are easily recognizable from these posters, but so, no possible error in identification can be made the signs say "Return All Bottles."

Thus the Presidio has joined the nation-wide campaign to combat the mounting losses through customers failing to return empty bottles which has caused concern to the Headquarters Army and Air Force Exchange Service.

Losses from failure to return bottles make it more difficult for exchanges to meet their dividend requirements. This could mean less funds for libraries, hobby shops, athletics, and the rest.

These losses also contribute to exchange operating costs, it is pointed out by Headquarters for the Exchange Service. This means that, in the end, it is the exchange customer who will be affected if high bottle losses continue.

While bottle losses on some installations have been small, the total losses across the country have been running high. At some installations, customers have been warned that continued high losses will mean that vending machines will be removed.

It was also noted that millions of bottles missing annually at all posts and bases through the United States contribute to a bottle shortage.

Customer carelessness has been named as the reason for the present situation. It is felt that few PX customers are unaware of the fact that they are the losers.

The signs being posted around the Presidio are part of the campaign being conducted by Headquarters at all installations. It emphasizes that the program can suc-

Camel Caravan Schedules Two Free Shows For Post

Talent, laughs and lovely girls will highlight the 1952 edition of the Camel Caravan to arrive at the Presidio Theatre on Tuesday, 17 June, for two admission-free performances at 1900 and 2100.

Mervin Shiner, country singer of radio, television and recording fame, is one of the principle stars of the caravan. He has a distinctive style of singing and also plays the guitar. Recent popular recordings of his include "If You Got The Money, I Got The Time," "If Teardrops Were Pennies," and "Peter Cottontail."

Athletes wanting a few lessons in really strenuous activity should watch petite Dolly Barr, acrobatic roller skater-dancer. As part of her act she does a back flip on roller skates—no mean trick even in skid-proof slippers on terra firma.

Pansy, a two-man horse, will be presented by Andy Mayo and company. Aided by a beautiful girl, Pansy delights audiences with her roguish eyes, mooring ears and eyebrows, and detachable tail.

Jay Kirk is the comedian-emcee of the show displaying his homespun humor and comic acrobatics. In Korea, where the unit entertained troops on the fringe of the combat zone, he had to synchronize his joke-telling with the sound of UN heavy artillery which was actually located behind the caravan.

Newest member of the troupe is the young singer, Dory Claire. Between nightclub engagements from Canada to Florida, she has managed to travel several thousand additional miles this year to entertain the Armed Forces. She sings love songs, rhythm numbers, hillbilly tunes—whatever the audience wants to hear.

Specialty dancers of the show will be the Spaulding Twins. The two red-headed sisters have been

Figure Critique—

There are only two stars in Hollywood who have perfect figures. This verdict comes from Al and Estelle Allardale, operators of a fashion shop in Hollywood. "The exceptions are Elizabeth Taylor and Marilyn Monroe. All other stars have some defect or defects," the husband-and-wife team announced. "And even Liz and Marilyn are not completely perfect. No one can be that good. Miss Taylor lacks maturity, which is an important part of beauty. Miss Monroe must dress very carefully, or she will look cheap. Beauty is merely a matter of fashion. Venus De Milo is supposed to be the epitome of graceful form. Perhaps she was, in her time. But if you saw the same figure in a bathing suit today, it would be considered too fat."

Is radio dying? The CBS Radio Network garnered these figures to prove that TV has not taken over the mass listening media: In the U. S. more than a half-million radio sets are bought each month. ... In addition to 36 million living room radios, people have bought 41 million "secondary" sets—for kitchen, bedroom, and dens... and 23 million sets for automobiles... clock radios are selling at 100,000 a month.

Raiders Smother Firemen Avenge Early Season Defeat

Backing up the four-hit pitching of left-hander Holahan, Red Raiders defeated the San Francisco Fire Department nine, 9-4, in a practice game on the Presidio field last week.

All nine runs had been brought in by the end of the fourth before the firemen had done any scoring. While the Presidians coasted in, the city smoke eaters scored two runs in both the fourth and seventh innings, but never threatened.

This victory was particularly satisfying to the Raiders since they had lost to the city firemen in their first game of the season, on 11 March, 7-2.

Tuttle Big Stick As Softball Nine Makes Comeback

Headquarters Company, the "hard-luck" team of the Fort Scott softball league, bounced back from three consecutive defeats with a decisive 12-6 victory over the 96th and 64th Engineers Tuesday.

Snappy, heads-up fielding in particular distinguished this contest from previous Headquarters performances, and double plays in the first and second innings squelched scoring attempts of the 96th-64th.

Headquarters scored in each of the first three frames and led 9-0 at the end of the third. The score was the same when Headquarters took the field in the bottom of the fifth. The 64th-96th, however, wrecked Valandingham's shutout by combining a hit, a walk and two errors for four runs in that inning.

Hitting honors for the day went to Tuttle, Headquarters catcher, who got a homer and two doubles in five times at bat.

Raider Softball Team Can Finish Second in City Class B League

If the Presidio softballers can win the next two games on their remaining schedule, the Raiders will place second in the Class B league of the San Francisco Recreation Department tournament. At present they are in a three-way playoff for the position.

By defeating the Pomar Club 7 to 2 Monday night, the Raiders boosted themselves to the contending position. Presidio took a two-point lead in the first inning, which the civilians tied in the fourth. Holding them scoreless for the remainder of the game, the Raiders added four more runs in the sixth and another in the seventh.

Raiders Split With Obispo Win Second Game Thriller

Camp San Luis Obispo and the Presidio split their two-game series last weekend on the Presidio field with the visitors taking the opener on Saturday, 10-3, and the Raiders winning the second, 3-2, in extra innings on Sunday.

Sunday's tie game was broken up in the eleventh when Sanchez slapped the second ball pitched against the left field bank for a double to bring in Marty Wright who was on ahead of him having drawn a base on balls.

Wright had scored the first run of the game for the Raiders in the fourth inning. He had been walked and went on around when Howard and Grill both hit singles.

Both teams scored one run each in the fourth and the visitors went into the lead in the sixth bringing in one run. The game went into a tie again in the eighth when Viviani hit a double along the right field line and scored when Sticks hit a single over the second baseman's head.

Although it was a tight game, Pitcher Danny Stupur was never in any great amount of trouble, giving up only six hits. He struck out 14 men during the game to bring his total number of strikeouts to 169 for the season.

Top Sluggers

Wide World

Joe Adcock (left), Cincinnati outfielder, and Al Rosen, Cleveland Indians third baseman, pose twin problems to major league pitchers. Each is the batting and slugging leader of his league. Adcock paces National League hitters with a .333 average and a slugging percentage of .667, including seven home runs and a total of 66 bases. Rosen, sparkplug of the first place Indians, leads the American Leaguers in batting (.338), home runs (10) and runs batted in (30). His slugging average of .654 and 85 total bases are tops, too, so far.

Hartman Shackles City League Team

The 21st Engineer Base Photomapping Company baseball team won a clutch game Friday night in a City League contest over the Cervois Florist nine of San Francisco.

It was a battle for the top spot in the league with the 21st Engineers coming out on the long end of a 5-2 score. All of the scoring in the contest was done in an explosive first inning.

The Army walked off with unofficial team honors in the Armed Services Track and Field meet at Veterans Memorial Stadium in Long Beach, last week. Team totals showed an 87-point spread for the Army; 76½-points for the Navy; and 51½-points for the Air Force.

Three Sixth Army thinclads qualified for the Olympic Games Tryouts that will be held in Los Angeles Coliseum on 27-28 June. They were Presidio's Leon Leopard, who finished second behind the great Olympic record holder Mal Whitfield, Norman Price, second in the 400-meter hurdles and Donald Shanks, the dark horse Sixth Army distance star who came a cropper in the 5000-meter.

Shanks, the 24-year-old Fort Huachuca elk, was leading the 5000-meters by a good thirty yards when a spike came through his shoe forcing him to pull up at the sixth lap when he looked like a sure winner. The former Seaton Hall star will get another crack in the tryouts and from here looks like a sure shot to visit Helsinki in July.

The Second Army's Billy Anderson, who had upset top collegiate stars in the Compton Relays last week, trounced World Record Holder Dick Attlesley, now running for the Navy, in the 110-meter high hurdles. Anderson, who led until the seventh barrier, ticked the eighth hurdle, broke stride and dropped behind Attlesley but made an amazing recovery to nip the Navy star at the tape.

Anderson, who is the son of the radio comedian Rochester, has been called one of the country's best natural athletes and except for an aversion to training, which the Army may have eliminated, could develop into one of the greatest track stars of all time.

The Army dominated the hop-step-and-jump when ex-Cornell star Lt. Walter Ashbaugh, of Fort Lee, triple jumped to the second best American mark ever made. His distance measured 50 feet, 3¾ inches. Second place went to Second Army's Ernest Smith for his mark of 47 feet 11¾ inches. Thomas was third.

Lt. Warren Druetzler lived up to his favorite role as he easily defeated a top field in the 1500 (metric mile) in the fair time of 3:53.2. EUCOM's Roland Rodinbaugh was third.

Army stars who were picked to compete in the final Olympic Tryouts were: Walter Ashbaugh and Ernest Smith in the hop, step and jump; Billy Anderson in the 110-meter high hurdles; Warren Druetzler in the 1500-meters; Jim Cooke in the discus; Jerome Biffle and Norman Thomas in the broad jump; Norman Price in the 400-meter hurdles.

Cervois Florist got off to a fast start as they slammed home two runs in the first frame. The 21st fought back with five runs of their own to decisively grab the top slot in the City League.

SFC Les Hartman did the chucking for the 21st team. Les limited the Florist nine to 3 hits and sent 7 to the dugout via the strikeout route.

HIGH STEPPING Billy Anderson staged a thrilling comeback in the 110-meter high hurdles to defeat Navy's Dick Attlesley for the All-Service title.

WAC's Tangle With Two Civilian Teams

Two civilian teams are next on the WAC agenda. Sunday they will oppose the Jim Ellis' Sports Shop nine from Alameda at 2000 in Washington Park. The Napa Valley team will come to the Presidio to challenge them at 1730 Monday.

Next week's league game will be at 1700 Thursday in Alameda against the Waves.

Three Army Boxers Qualify

FLYWEIGHT Eddie Nakata, a sharp punching 112-pounder from Camp Roberts, won the sub-regional crown at Sacramento and will be shooting for the regional crown and the Olympic finals in this week's Olympic trials in San Francisco.

Olympic Story!

Originator of Modern Games Was French Baron Coubertin

Modern Olympic Games were first held in Athens, Greece, in 1896 and was the brainchild of Baron Pierre de Coubertin, a French educator. Purpose of the games were to promote interest in education and culture, and to foster a better international understanding through the medium of sports competition.

Baron Coubertin got his inspiration for the games from the ancient Greek Olympic Games, most notable of the four Panhellenic celebrations. A combined patriotic, religious and athletic celebration held every four years, the first recorded games were held in 776 B.C.

Original competition was based on the highest ethical standards and only amateurs who were Greek citizens were allowed to compete. Champions were awarded laurel and olive wreaths, and accorded many special privileges in their communities.

Under the Roman Emperors the games deteriorated into professional carnivals and in 394 A.D. were banned by Emperor Theodosius, along with the temples and other non-Christian idolatry.

Nine nations sent their athletes to the first games in 1896, and since then many thousands of athletes representing over 50 nations have competed in the fourteen Olympic Games. In 1924 the Games were expanded to include the Winter Olympic games. World War II caused the cancellation of games scheduled for 1940 and 1944. The games were continued in 1948 and held in Wembley, England.

WAC Team Dumps S. F. Marines 11-7

Continuing the fine showing they made in their opening league game, Presidio's WACs handily took the San Francisco Marines, 11-7, in their second contest of their season's schedule.

Only once were the WACs in trouble and that was at the end of the third inning when the Marines took a 6 to 5 lead. The Presidians came back with three hits, scoring two runs to regain and retain the lead.

Three Sixth Army boxers will compete in the Olympic regional finals this week. Eddie Nakata, a 112-pound flyweight from Honolulu, could go all the way in his weight division. The sharp punching little gamester overcame some topflight competition in Sacramento to win the sub-regional crown. He packs a knockout punch and doesn't know the meaning of the word quit.

Junior welterweight Marion D'Avy shouldered some tough competition in the Sacramento sub-regional but slugged his way to the title. The rugged New Orleans boxer will run into some sharp competitors as his weight division is loaded with the cream of the amateur aspirants. He could make it to the finals.

Only other Sixth Army boxer that will be shooting for a regional title is welterweight Carleton Leek. Leek also won a sub-regional title in the Sacramento tournament last week, but runs into some of the best this time. Carleton has stamina but is short on punching power and doesn't figure to be there at the finish.

Winners in the regional will compete in the Olympic finals that will be held in Kansas City on 16-17-18 June and the results of this tourney will decide the team that will represent the U. S. at Helsinki in July.

Winners of the All-Army tournament at Fort Monmouth last week are automatically qualified to compete in the Kansas City finals.

JUNIOR WELTERWEIGHT Joe D'Avy will swap punches with the Western States' top 139-pounders at the Civic Auditorium in San Francisco, this week. The New Orleans slugger is shooting for an Olympic team berth and a win here would get him to the Kansas City finals.

K-Vet Proposal Gets House OK Now Faces Senate Approval

Washington—By a vote of 360 to one, the House has passed the Korean Veteran bill that would provide up to 36 months of free schooling, up to $300 in mustering-out pay and government-guaranteed loans on homes, farms and businesses.

The bill now goes before the Senate Labor and Public Welfare committee. Hearings will be held before it goes to the Senate for a vote.

Benefits would be available to all men and women in uniform between June 27, 1950 and a date to be set later by either Congress or the President.

Education benefits would include $110 a month for single veterans and up to $150 for those with dependents. Students would be entitled to one and one-half days of free schooling for each day of service. The maximum would be 36 months, the normal period for a four-year college education. Veterans must pay their own tuition and use whatever is left for living expenses.

Provisions for housing are the same as those in the WWII bill, except that home builders will be required to give veteran buyers a one-year warranty that the house is as represented.

As before, the government will guarantee up to 60 percent of a four percent loan on home, farm or business with a maximum guaranty of $7,500.

Men up through the Army rank of captain will get mustering-out pay of $100 for service of less than 60 days, $200 for more than 60 days and $300 for more than 60 days and overseas duty.

In figuring social security benefits, the government will credit each man in Service with $160 monthly salary.

On-the-job training will be generally the same, except that the government's contributions will be reduced automatically every four months.

The bill provides special safeguards against abuses which hampered the WWII program. Such avocational courses as bar-tending, dancing and personality development are barred. Any flight training would have to lead to a job.

Army Nurses Are Teaching Asiatics Nursing Fine Points

The thousands of Japanese women who have been given a start in the nursing profession by U. S. Army nurses in Japan will bring a new dignity to the Japanese nursing profession.

American nursing methods and standards of sanitation are taught by the Army Nurse Corps in more than 200 schools in Japan under a program inaugurated in 1945. The schools offer three-year courses to Japanese high school graduates who upon graduation become professional nurses. A two-year course is given for practical nurses.

More than 30 American textbooks and manuals have been translated into Japanese to overcome language barriers that created problems at the beginning of the program.

Since the program has been started the Japanese Nurses' Association has been accepted into the International Council of Nurses and a nursing section has been established in the Japanese Ministry of Welfare.

The Secretary later attended a reception and dinner in his honor at the Palace Hotel and spent the night at the Presidio.

On Monday afternoon the Secretary was honored with a military review. Units from the 30th Engineers, Headquarters Sixth Army, Station Complement, WAC Detachment and the Sixth Army Band were reviewed by Secretary Magsaysay and the Army Commander.

Top military commanders from throughout the Bay Area attended, and an informal reception at the Presidio Officers' lounge followed the review.

The Secretary departed for Washington Tuesday morning. He will confer with top military and defense officials and then go to Walter Reed Hospital for a physical check-up.

"Importance Not Realized!"

Administrative Duties Are No Small Part Of Chaplain's Day

"Administrative work of the chaplain is as vital as it is in any other branch of the service," Chaplain (Col.) Patrick J. Ryan, Sixth Army Chaplain, stated this week in expressing his vital concern not only for the chaplain program of Sixth Army, but for the program and problems of the entire chaplaincy.

Chaplain Ryan feels that the average serviceman or woman does not realize the importance of the administrative section of the Chaplains Corps. "Pastoral care of military personnel is not the sole activity of the Chaplains Corps," said he. "Equally as important is the tedious and unglamorous administrative duties which are in addition to his regular work of preaching and officiating at the Mass, counselling, and giving character guidance lectures."

Chaplain Ryan and Chaplain (Capt.) William L. Bird, Assistant Army Chaplain, recently attended the annual Chief of Chaplains' conference for Army and Command Chaplains at the Pentagon in Washington, D. C. Purpose of this conference was to review the policies and progress of the Army Chaplaincy for the past year and to present the program for the coming year.

Chaplain (Capt.) Deane F. Babbitt, California Military District, represented the Sixth Army Chaplain at the recent workshop conference on Reserve affairs in the Office of the Chief of Chaplains in Washington.

Aberdeen Show For Military Was This Year's Biggest

One of the biggest shows ever put on by Army Ordnance was a recent display at the Aberdeen Proving Ground in Maryland. Over forty items of automatic equipment was paraded before West Point's recent graduating class. Also on hand to witness the exhibition were 60 West Point instructors and 200 officers and students from the Armed Forces Staff College at Fort Monroe.

Besides the 40 vehicles displayed—some of them so new that even Proving Ground personnel had not seen them—50 items of arms and ammunition were shown. Mortars, rocket launchers, artillery of many types at targets for effect and display.

Six weeks of planning went into the show and it was the biggest display of the year. Over 250 members of the Proving Ground participated in the demonstration.

West Point Grads Choose the Army Over Air Force

Lieutenant H. L. Van Trees was this year's top man in the class of 523 West Point graduates. He chose Armor as his branch of service. The class's number two man chose the Corps of Engineers for his branch, and the number three man picked the Air Force. Lt. J. W. Shy, who was the fourth ranking man, chose the Infantry. Last year's top man picked the Infantry.

Forty-three of the top members of the graduating class preferred the Army to the Air Force. Twenty-five picked the Corps of Engineers, 12 the Infantry, seven picked the Artillery, five Armor and one the Signal Corps.

A breakdown of the assignments of the entire class shows that 173 went to the Infantry, 97 to Artillery, 55 to Corps of Engineers, 36 to Armor and 28 to the Signal Corps.

For the first time since it has been allotted cadets the Air Force failed to fill its 25 per cent quota. It was three short this year.

From this small size, the Army has expanded with the growth of the country and the arising of national emergencies. The Army of 1945 was the mightiest ever assembled by any nation.

At present some of the hardest and most heroic fighting in our Army's history has taken place in Korean mountains and rice paddies against the hordes of North Korean and Chinese communists. Many Americans who have fought in Korea were veterans of World War II who again answered their Country's call to serve the cause of freedom.

But small or large, in peace or war, the Army has gone on building its unbroken tradition of 177 years of service to American people.

Army's New Salt Pill Ends Stomach Distress

A new salt tablet has been developed that is acceptable to all troops.

During WWII approximately 30 percent of the soldiers suffered stomach distress upon trying the standard, fast-dissolving salt tablets then in use. The tablets are sometimes needed to replace the salt lost through perspiration in extremely warm climates.

Each crystal of the new salt tablets is coated with cellulose acetate which permits slow dissolving and avoids the release of a sufficient quantity of salt to cause stomach distress.

The new tablets can be stored for long periods without deteriorating, will not absorb moisture from the air, and will withstand high temperatures and rough handling.

Easy, Soldier, You're Worth $5,247 A Year

The American soldier is the best fed and equipped fighting man in the world. He's also the most expensive.

Figures recently released show how much money the government spends on each individual who enters the Army.

A soldier's pay, food, clothing, individual equipment and similar items total an average of $2,858 a year.

The indirect costs—transportation, medical facilities, miscellaneous supplies, weapons used by units, operation of supply depots and other overhead—bring the total to $5,247 a year.

This figure does not appear to include an estimate of $3,600 to train and process a raw recruit.

New Ordnance Officer Arrives At Sixth Army

COLONEL CARROLL D. HUDSON

Colonel Carroll D. Hudson arrived this week to assume his duties as Sixth Army Ordnance Officer. A Stanford graduate and a native Californian, Col. Hudson was commanding officer of the Redstone Arsenal prior to his assignment here.

Colonel Hudson is credited with the competent and aggressive leadership that aided in developing the Redstone Arsenal into one of the nation's foremost Army research and development centers for guided missiles and rockets. He served three tours of duty at Redstone, a total of eight years in all, and in his last assignment there watched Redstone progress from a standby arsenal to one of the nation's eight permanent arsenals.

Today Redstone boasts some of the finest laboratories and research equipment in the world and is a focal point in the Army's billion dollar rocket and guided missile program. Col. Hudson's successor at Redstone Arsenal was Brig. Gen. Thomas K. Vincent, former deputy commander of the Aberdeen Proving Ground and CG of the Ordnance Training Command.

DA Announces That Stateside Duty Cut From 12 to 9 Months

Washington—Reduction of three months in the length of service within the United States or territory of residence required between overseas tours of duty has been announced by the Department of the Army.

Personnel who have returned from FECOM now will become eligible for further overseas duty after nine instead of 12 months of duty in the United States.

Army personnel returning from other overseas areas are again eligible for foreign service after six instead of nine months.

The mandatory interval between foreign service tours may be waived voluntarily by individuals.

Thomas Nast, famous American cartoonist, was responsible for the two popular symbols of the major political parties—the Republican elephant and the Democratic donkey. He published the elephant first in Harper's Weekly in 1874, and the donkey had already appeared in a cartoon in 1870 representing the Democratic press.

101, Saturday night and Sunday morning, it appeared that the whole United States Army was on the move. The forty-niners were convoyed to their destination in approximately 800 vehicles, including chartered buses.

Maj. Gen. C. B. O'Sullivan, division commander, stated that the basic fundamentals of soldiering will be emphasized throughout the training program.

This is the first time since reactivation of the Guard that they are spending their entire two weeks in the field without barracks or any of the other normal military installation facilities, and they are being harassed by the "Aggressor Forces" to lend realism to the simulated combat conditions.

The 243,000 acres of rugged terrain is resounding to nearly 20,000 rounds of blank ammunition being fired at the Guardsmen by the "Aggressors," and over half a million rounds of small arms ammunition is being fired on the ranges and firing courses.

The artillery is staging a field firing course defending a battery position, and the division tank battalion is holding a night field firing exercise involving a mobile defense problem.

Next week they will go into their tactical night problems, similar to the "Korean Night Problem" familiar to all Camp Roberts soldiers.

Fewer Students Passing College Deferment Test

Washington—Fewer college students passed the last two qualification tests to be eligible for consideration for draft deferment by their local boards, the Selective Service System reported this week.

Of the 54,755 college students who took the last tests, 57 per cent made passing grades of 70 or better. These were the sixth and seventh tests given.

Among the 339,066 students who took the first four tests, 63 per cent passed and 61 per cent passed the fifth test, taken by 19,574 students.

The lower percentage passing the more recent tests was attributed by the Educational Testing Service, which gives the tests for Selective Service, to the fact that most students taking them were freshmen and sophomores. The earlier tests reached more juniors and seniors.

College students may be considered by their local boards for draft deferments if they stand in specified upper portions of their classes or make 70 or better on the qualification test. The decision is left to the boards.

Secretary's Aides, Advisory Chiefs Tour Area; Meet Here Tomorrow

Civilian aides to the Secretary of the Army from eight western states and chairmen or vice chairmen of the 30 Army Advisory Committees throughout the Sixth Army Area will culminate a four-day inspection tour of Central California training installations with a day of briefings and round-table discussions at the Presidio tomorrow.

The group began their tour on Wednesday when they were airlifted from key collection points by Sixth Army's Special Missions Squadron and flown to Paso Robles.

They spent Wednesday night at Camp Roberts and began a day-long tour of the giant training command the following day. Brig. Gen. Frank H. Partridge, Commanding General of the 7th Armored Division, conducted the aides and committeemen on a detailed inspection tour that included organizational methods, training methods and interior economy.

They also visited the equipment pool, classrooms and billeting areas. High on the agenda was the diversified field training that is one of the most important phases of the 16-week basic training cycle at Camp Roberts.

The afternoon was spent at the Hunter Liggett Military Reservation where the 49th Infantry Division of the California National Guard is undergoing its summer training.

Today's plans call for a flight to Camp Irwin where they will observe an exhibition of firing at moving targets, inspect M-47 tanks and then witness a demonstration of combined weapons in support of a ground attack.

This afternoon they will fly to Camp Cooke for a review of the 44th Division and emplane for the Presidio following the review, arriving at Hamilton Field around 1730.

The group will be guests of the Commanding General at a reception and dinner later in the evening and spend tonight at the Presidio. Conferences and discussions will begin tomorrow morning.

Chaplain Ryan Receives Orders To Washington

COLONEL PATRICK J. RYAN

After almost four years as Sixth Army Chaplain, Chaplain (Colonel) Patrick J. Ryan has received orders to report to the Chief of Chaplain's Office in the Pentagon, Washington, D. C., on 21 July. Colonel Ryan will leave Sixth Army on 7 July.

Colonel Ryan was assigned to Sixth Army from the Chief of Chaplain's Office on 1 September 1948. He had served three years in that office; one year as Director of Plans and Training and two years as Deputy Chief of Chaplains. During World War II he was Chaplain of the Fifth Army from its activation in Morocco until V-E Day. He has served twenty-four years of active service in the U. S. Army.

Colonel Ryan is one of the six most decorated chaplains of World War II. He wears the Legion of Merit, Bronze Star, Medal of War (Brazil), Order of Crown (Italy), Bronze Medal of Valor with Star (Italy), Army Commendation Ribbon, and the Order of the British Empire.

In June of 1947 the army chaplain was elevated to the rank of Domestic Prelate by Pope Pius XII, making him a Monsignor in the Catholic Church. He is a native of Litchfield, Minnesota, and has lived at the Presidio since coming to Sixth Army.

"I regret having to leave Sixth Army and the Presidio," the Chaplain said on being interviewed by this reporter. "I have had a great experience here and have had the fine cooperation of all of the personnel here. I especially regret leaving the Chaplains who have done a magnificent piece of work and have given me their cooperation, their loyalty, and their friendship. As I go to my new assignment I pray that God will give me Grace to continue to work for His cause in even greater and broader fields."

Perhaps, moreover, he whose genius appears deepest and truest excels his fellows in nothing save the knack of expression; he throws out occasionally a lucky hint at truths of which every human soul is profoundly though unutterably conscious. . . . Hawthorne.

Roberts CG Is Nominated For Major General

BRIG. GEN. F. H. PARTRIDGE

Brigadier General Frank H. Partridge, commanding general of the 7th Armored Division at Camp Roberts, was nominated by the President for the rank of major general this week.

General Partridge was serving as assistant chief of staff G-1 at Headquarters Sixth Army when ordered to Camp Roberts 15 November, 1950. He reactivated the 7th Armored Division on 24 November of the same year which under his steady and competent guidance has consistently been acclaimed one of the nation's top basic training divisions.

Camp Roberts was changed almost overnight from a weed ridden and abandoned WWII training site to a show case for some of the Infantry soldier's finest basic training. A salient factor in the training results that has led overseas commanders to class Roberts replacements alongside the nation's best, is the rugged terrain featured by the area.

General Partridge was first appointed to the rank of brigadier in 1943 and served with the 97th Infantry Division in the European Theater as assistant division commander during WWII. He served with the 97th on occupation duty in Japan following WWII, and was later assigned military government officer of the First Corps then in Japan.

In 1947 he reverted to his permanent rank of Colonel and was reassigned as Chief, Planning Office, Personnel and Administration Office, with the Department of the Army, where he served until his assignment to Headquarters Sixth Army in 1950.

Chief of Staff's Message

Office of the Chief of Staff, United States Army.

"Greetings to the Army on the occasion of its 177th Anniversary. On this 177th anniversary of the founding of our nation's oldest military organization, I want to extend my personal congratulations and best wishes to every man and woman in the Army. Today, our Army—together with our brothers-in-arms of the Navy, Marines and Air Force—is fighting in Korea for the same cause of freedom for which it first fought at Boston in 1775, and you may all take great pride in the splendid contributions you are making not only to the security and welfare of our great republic but of free peoples everywhere."

A Clear Cut Definition!

The court-martialing of Sgt. C. Dean Chase, the Fort Ord clerk-typist who wrote an inflammatory and disrespectful letter to General Mark Clark, has created a great deal of controversy at troop level. The pros and cons, quite often redundant with the misused and misunderstood catch-phrases of freedom of this and freedom of that, bespeaks in many cases the dire need for definition and understanding of military discipline. Sgt. Chase, a reenlistee who has served almost five years in the Army, expressed astonishment when advised that he would be court-martialed. The following editorial, as reprinted from the San Francisco Chronicle, is a timely answer to those misinformed cliché-passers who feel that Sgt. Chase failed to get a fair shake. We think that one of the salient factors in the letter writing incident went unappreciated by the civilian press—Sgt. Chase was on orders for FECOM! This editorial may be reprinted by other Sixth Army newspapers if appropriate credit is given the Chronicle. (Editor's Note.)

CHRONICLE EDITORIAL

In the Army, It's 'Button Your Lip'

We can think of only one reason why Sergeant C. Dean Chase should have been "astonished" at the Army's decision to court-martial him for his letter blistering General Mark Clark for the handling of the Koje prison affair. That would be a complete failure to comprehend the meaning of military discipline.

In the case of a 24-year-old man of better than average education with several years' experience in the Army, this failure may reasonably be presumed to imply an unwillingness to comprehend.

As we see it, the Army had no choice but to put the man on trial for disrespect. To have let him off with a reprimand would have backhandedly encouraged the same kind of conduct on the part of others who might be disposed to take military service cavalierly.

There is nothing cavalier about it. It is a tough, earnest, restrictive, and necessary business. And since it is a business which young American men generally are either involved in or have in prospect, there may be some merit in taking a few minutes to consider this whole matter of military discipline.

The dictionary has several definitions of discipline, the one most applicable here being: "Control gained by enforcing obedience or order, as in a school or army; hence, orderly conduct . . ." Another definition is: "Training which corrects, molds, strengthens or perfects."

In the military sense discipline is accepted to be the system by which men are brought and held together in an effective and dependable pattern of behavior for the performance of military duty. That military duty, in the service of a free country, is invariably aimed at the preservation of the country's freedom.

But the price of preserving that general freedom is the surrender, or rather the placing in escrow, of most of the individual freedoms of those who are called upon to serve.

The reasons for this are obvious.

War is a deadly business. The fighting men hold one another's lives in their hands, and the survival of their country depends upon the success of their joint efforts. The life-and-death relationship does not obtain every moment, of course. But because it obtains in those critical hours of actual combat, the entire posture of the armed service must be keyed to those critical periods—must be devoted, through training and indoctrination, to the goal of perfecting the organization into such a team as will operate competently under the violent stresses of combat. That is the whole reason for the existence of armed forces. Without such discipline, any army is no better than a mob.

In such an organization respect must be a basic factor. And we do not by any means suggest that this respect should operate in only one direction. The officers' responsibilities to their troops are as important as the troops' to their officers. The officer owes his troops leadership above all; but also a continuing concern for the men's welfare. The men owe their officers obedience—ready, willing, unfaltering co-operation. That co-operation cannot reasonably be limited to times of peril, or to matters pertaining strictly to the handling of arms. For as long as a man is a member of the armed services it has to be across-the-board.

Sergeant Chase may have figured he was exercising his "unalienable" freedom of speech when he wrote—and made public—a letter to General Clark calling his actions "disgraceful" and "repugnant" and "another example in the stupidity and demoralization of militaristic discipline." But he was wrong in important respects. As we have suggested, there is nothing inalienable about freedom of speech anywhere—it is at present under the gravest kind of threat throughout the world by those who find it offensive and restrictive to their programs of conquest. And in an armed force it is simply intolerable when exercised as Chase exercised it, for it advances the very cause of those who would abolish it entirely.

Probably this is just another way of saying that there can be no freedom of any kind without a commensurate exercise of responsibility—and it was that responsibility, which is really self discipline, that Chase showed himself to lack.

SJS Coeds Get Degrees And Lts. Bars In One Operation

A panorama of ivy and palms in the quadrangle of the San Jose State College provided a colorful setting as four members of this year's graduating class were sworn into the Women's Medical Service Corps reserve on Thursday, June 12.

One of the first ceremonies of its kind, the girls appeared in the traditional graduation caps and gowns as they were given the oath of office by Captain Gertrude J. Murray, Procurement Officer for the WMSC, Headquarters, Sixth Army, Presidio of San Francisco, California.

The four California girls are: Second Lieutenants Dawn V. Hammel, Oakland; Juanita L. Gibbs, San Jose; Neoma Williams, Escondido and Kiyoko K. Matsuda, Livingston.

With the colors from the college MP ROTC unit adding to the scene, the girls were presented their Second Lieutenant bars by Dr. Thomas MacQuarrie, college president and were addressed and congratulated by Colonel Richard H. Eckhardt, Medical Section, Hq. Sixth Army, who was acting Surgeon in the absence of Colonel Rollin L. Bauchspies.

The officers will be called to active service in September with the WMSC and will attend the Medical Field Service School, Brooke Army Medical Center, Fort Sam Houston, Texas, where they will begin their clinical affiliation in occupational therapy.

All four officers graduated from the San Jose State College with a Bachelor of Science degree where they have been majoring in occupational therapy. Also present at the ceremony was Miss Mary Booth, assistant professor of occupational therapy at the college.

Top Legislative Bodies Approve New Guard Bill

Washington—Both the Senate and House placed their approval on the new "dual unit" plan which calls for keeping National Guard and Reserve unit designations, records, colors, and honors in service for five years from the date of call to active duty, the bill will become law this month.

Under the new law if the state wishes to set up a Guard division for state Guardsmen and that state has a Guard division that is on active duty it would be authorized upon application to set up a similar Guard division with the same designation numbers but in order to specify duty status those not on active duty would carry the letters (NGUS) or National Guard United States.

The NGUS division would have an authorized strength of 50 per cent Reserve officers and 25 per cent enlisted strength. Then at the end of five years when the active division is returned to state control the two units would be integrated and from the two would emerge a single unit on Reserve status. These units would then become a part of the Later Ready Force units.

47th AAA Stages "Can Do Day" For Local Blood Bank

When the 47th AAA Brigade was informed that Letterman Army Hospital was in critical need of Type "O" and "A" blood, men of the antiaircraft units stationed around San Francisco staged a big "Can Do" Day.

Calls were made to the 250th Group and the 459th AAA Battalion with the word going out: "Get as many donors of Type "O" and "A" blood as you can to the Letterman blood bank."

More calls were made and even before all the units were notified, the first truck load of donors was on the way. As the first group began, more men arrived.

Within one hour after the original appeal was made, the hospital had more donors than they could handle. Capitalizing on this overwhelming response, the Letterman bank diverted those in excess of their needs to another donor center.

Men who had left their gun positions only a short time before, now waited patiently until their turn came to roll up their sleeves and donate a pint of life saving blood.

Two hours after the first call was made the men of the antiaircraft had donated 110 pints. The crisis was over and the blood supply was at a safe level with a reserve in another bank.

Free Political Guides Offered AF By TIME

To add meaning and significance to next month's political conventions, the editors of TIME, the weekly newsmagazine, have prepared a 24-page booklet Convention Guide which may be obtained free by personnel of the Presidio.

Copies of the Guide will be sent upon individual request. The Post TI&E office, Building 1220, Fort Scott, has a supply of return post cards which may be used to request the Guide from the magazine's conventions services bureau.

As many facts as are needed to make the conventions meaningful to the voter and citizen have been compressed into the booklet. Maps, box scores and procedure regulations are all used in the Guide to organize all the information.

Both conventions will be seen and heard on television and radio beginning next month. While the general public will be offered the booklet, military personnel are being given an early opportunity to request it.

It Could Be A Very Dry Summer

Abnormally heavy consumption of water on the post has resulted in the need for conservation measures which have been adopted to govern water utilization.

Lawns will be sprinkled only between the hours of 0700 to 1000 and from 1730 to 2030. Overnight sprinkling has been prohibited.

While washing of private cars is still permitted, the use of a bucket to save water is recommended.

All dripping faucets will be reported immediately to the Post Engineer, ext. 2104.

Fort Campbell, Ky., has been named a Designating Examination station for personnel desirous of attending the U. S. Military Academy.

Tic Topic Tops!

Communist Propaganda Tops This Month's Info Program

Undoubtedly the biggest in the history of the world, the propaganda campaign of the communist rulers will be the subject of this week's TIC Topic on the Presidio.

Since World War II this campaign has been stepped up to blanket the whole world. Their propaganda has become increasingly violent and directed more and more against the United States Government and the American people.

Long-range objective of the communist propaganda is domination of the world by Soviet Union. The immediate objective is the isolation of the United States.

"Their current objective is to isolate the United States, to force it out of Europe and Asia," a writer of the subject states. "Everything centers on that, whether it be a campaign to induce Americans to pull back, or to induce the Europeans and Asiatics to throw the Americans out, or to create confusion and division between the American and other allied governments."

The Soviet rulers have set up an elaborate organization to ensure that their propagandists are truly professionals. Their training is considered just as important as that of army officers, engineers, scientists, and technicians.

For turning out propagandists, 6,000 local schools have been established with a continuing enrollment of more than 185,000 students. On the regional level there are 177 more schools that train an additional 135,000 students. About a dozen advanced schools give specialized training and turn out several thousand highly skilled propagandists each year.

This training is being duplicated in the European satellite countries and in China and North Korea. Attending are Russians, Poles, Czechs, and so forth, for work in their own countries.

The Communists have various ways of getting their message to the United States without showing the communist label. Many communist "front" organizations attract sincere, honest non-communists to sponsor various causes that appear desirable on the surface, but are actually designed to cause conflict among the American people, rather than to promote real reforms.

Investigations of these organizations have shown that the strings are really being pulled by the communists, who keep well out of sight. They work constantly to arouse conflict between management and labor, between racial groups, and between Americans of different national origin.

Sea-Going Soldier Never Served Ashore

Sgt. Ira O. Odom is a soldier. Actually he's more of a sailor.

The Sonora, Tex., native enlisted in the Army in 1948 and has sailed in Navy ships as a non-commissioned liaison officer since then. He has never served with Army units in any capacity.

Sgt. Odom, who also served in the Marines, is presently assigned to the operations office on board the amphibious command ship USS Mount McKinley performing duties of Navy petty officers of equal rate. His "sea legs" received a good workout when he participated in the invasions of Inchon, Wonson and Iwon.

None of our soldiers would understand not being asked to do whatever is necessary to re-establish a situation which is humiliating to us and unacceptable to our country's honor. We are going to counter-attack. . . . Major General R. L. Bullard.

Presidio Personnel Put Spare Time To Future Use

Today will be graduation day for eight Presidians who have completed on-post courses for AA degrees from the City College of San Francisco.

Those to receive degrees will be: Sgt. Paul B. Broome, Sixth Army Medical Laboratory; CWO Nathan A. Cammack, Jr., Sixth Army Band; Lt. Col. James F. Clark, Letterman Army Hospital; Cpl. Klaus J. Herrman, 6002 ASU; Capt. Vincent I. Olsen, Food Service School; Lt. Col. James P. Wilkins, Letterman Army Hospital and Lt. Col. Stuart J. Palos, 102 MRU Co.

Most of today's graduates are transferring their credits to San Francisco State College to apply toward work for a BA degree.

Restrictions governing the down payment requirements on the purchase of homes by veterans has been decreased. The Federal Reserve Board and the Housing and Home Finance Agency have announced new regulations that range from no down payment on homes costing less than $7,000 to a 35 per cent down payment on houses costing $25,000 or more. Time limits for paying off mortgages remains the same.

Family allowances granted WWII servicemen under the Career Compensation Act (#515) will expire 30 June, even though the serviceman is serving after that date.

A field artillery specialist school patterned after the famous Fort Sill Field Artillery School has been set up at Fort Hood. The new school will operate a half-day to permit Fort Hood students to attend the school and still continue their regular training.

The Defense Department announced this week that applications for warrant officer appointments in MOS 0145 have exceeded current requirements and for the present no further applications are desired.

Hope for action this session on the combat bonus for servicemen fighting in Korea has been ruled out by the House Armed Services Committee, they have adjourned for the summer vacation. Final service legislation approved by the Committee before adjournment was the military construction bill, and approval of continuing the $100 monthly bonus for doctors and dentists who are serving voluntarily.

New CO For 250th AAA Group At Fort Barry

Colonel Walter H. Murrey has assumed command of the 250th AAA Group at Fort Barry. In a brief ceremony, the command was turned over to him by Colonel Aaron Lazar, prior to the latter's departure to his new assignment at NATO Headquarters in Paris, France.

Before his assignment as 250th AAA Group Commander, Colonel Murrey served as Chief of Staff, Western Army Antiaircraft Command, at Fort Baker. The 250th Group has the responsibility of antiaircraft defense of San Francisco Bay Area.

During World War II, Colonel Murrey served with the 94th CA (AA) Regiment and 743rd AAA Gun Battalion in the Pacific Theatre of Operations. From January, 1947, to September, 1948, he was stationed with Marbo Headquarters in Guam.

Colonel Murrey was born in Dwight, Kansas, and is a graduate of Kansas State College.

9th AAA's Top Five Win Day Long Pleasure Jaunt

Soldiers of Month Win Model Support For Playland Fling

Last week five from the 9th AAA Gun Battalion, Pfc. William Maurer, Cpl. John Dineen, Pfc. Comer Hemby, Cpl. John Haskins and Pfc. Curtis Thibodeaux, who won the title of "Best Soldier of the Week" during the past months' competition, were given a day at Playland Park, San Francisco, for their achievement in gaining the title. Two models from the Dorothy Farrier agency, Miss Jean Kirby and Miss Ann Nuhfer were included in the group to make the day exceptional.

The men arrived at Playland about an hour early (just to make sure that they wouldn't be late) and had to wait. But right on the hour the girls appeared. Nothing would do but that they must first be photographed—the trouble was that the only spot that had a camera was the "Funny Foto" studio—very silly business because these girls spend most of their working hours in front of a camera.

As soon as the "glamour shots" were ready the gang took off for the shooting gallery. It was here that it was discovered that these members of the fair sex would never make anti-aircraft gunners. They couldn't even pull the trigger. After a vote it was decided that they wouldn't be expelled from the party and all proceeded to the "Hey-dey"—a fine ride except that with only room for two couples in a chariot what to do with the odd three became a problem.

The three lonely ones promptly took off for the penny arcade, and when the rest of the gang got off the ride and caught up with them they were very busy enjoying a "pass-day training film." Our models did not take a very bright view of the situation and so from there we all went over to the Fun House where there was plenty of room for everyone.

First on the Fun House list was the "Wheel of Mis-Fortune" and there were no casualties.

The fat and thin mirrors did nothing wonderful for our trim companions and they insisted that we move out.

By this time our appetite was really sharp so we adjourned to the nearest mess—it turned out to be the corner hot dog stand. There was a ration break down at this time—how many people can eat one hot dog?

The last photo shows us sitting on the sea wall watching the gulls and seals on the rocks. It was a swell day with some great boys and girls.

Army Music Master! Captain Spends Spare Time Banging Out Top Hit Tunes

By PFC. Warren Adler
(AFPS Washington Correspondent)

There's a captain in the Pentagon who's an extraordinary authority on a hit tune called "Blue Tango," which is currently sweeping the country. His name is Leroy Anderson. He wrote the tune.

Called back into uniform last August, Capt. Anderson has skyrocketed to become one of America's top songwriters. His "Blue Tango," selling into the millions, has been number one on Hit Parade for months.

Defense Dept.
Leroy Anderson

His other hits, such as Syncopated Clock, Sleigh Ride, Fiddle Faddle, Pink Plank Plunk, Jazz Pizzicato and Serenata, have already found a durable spot in the American musical scene.

A specialist in instrumentals, Capt. Anderson cut his musical teeth as arranger for the Boston Pops Orchestra. There he acquired what he calls "insight" into the technique of orchestration and sound. From then on he slowly "felt his way along" until he was ready to begin serious composition.

A fondness for horses led Capt. Anderson into his first taste of Army life. He joined a New York National Guard outfit, the 101st Cavalry, rising from private to sergeant in the days before WWII. Then in 1942 he went on active duty, going to OCS and eventually being assigned to intelligence work, which he has been doing since he was recalled.

At 43, Capt. Anderson can look forward to a career that is just beginning to bear the fruits of years of labor. On his time off from Army duties he is at work on a concerto, and after release from active duty expects to do some work with the movies and musical comedy.

A Magna Cum Laude graduate from Harvard, where he also took an M.A. in music, Capt. Anderson is married and has two children. He sums up his phenomenal success in what might be good advice to all budding creative artists—"Just plain hard work."

What Happens To Cadets' Hats Thrown in Air?

(By Armed Forces Press Service)

You know those graduation pictures you see every year showing graduating midshipmen and cadets flinging their hats into the air? Ever wonder how they get them back?

Ancient legend has it that upon entrance to either the Naval or Military Academy the plebe begins practicing throwing his hat high into the air and retrieving it with accuracy. This he does for four years, throwing it higher and higher as he progresses toward graduation.

If he cannot master the deft art, special tutors are called in to prep him for the big moment. Thus, by the time he is ready to graduate he is an expert thrower and retriever. No height is too high. He can throw and retrieve with the best of them.

But ancient legends sometimes exaggerate. The truth is that the middle or cadet flings his hat into the air with reckless abandon. He throws it away. He doesn't need it any more. Instead he stands aside and lets the undergraduates or visitors scramble for them.

It is considered his last act of college frivolity before he shoulders the burdens of the world.

Bossy in Love?—

The recent announcement by English anthropologist Dr. E. J. Dingwell that American women are too dominant in their love lives has caused some startling comments in Hollywood.

20th Century-Fox

Beautiful Janis Carter agreed that European women are "much happier. They understand men better. American women wanted to be independent and now that they are they're the most unhappy women in the world. They should let the man be the boss." Danish actress Greta Thysen said she thought American girls should try "more clinging to the vines. They should hide their independence a little better and be more feminine. They are independent because they are very spoiled. American men adore them and do everything they want." Blond Marilyn Monroe shrugged that if an American woman has an unsatisfactory love life "it must be the man's fault somewhere along the line." Jeanne Crain did not give the matter much thought. "I'm too busy taking care of my four children," she said.

Give-Away Man—

John Reed King, one of radio and television's biggest give-away men, estimates that he has distributed more than $1,500,000 in cash and merchandise to contest winners over the past 10 years. Prizes have ranged from dollar bills to homes, and once he gave away an island off the coast of Maine. "Merchandise is generally more popular than cash," said Mr. King, "except at Army camps where cash is preferable. What does a soldier want with a refrigerator?"

This Major Hems As Troops Haw At His Sewing

Defense Dept.
Maj. Robert L. Waterhouse

White Sands Proving Ground, N. M.—Maj. Robert L. Waterhouse, veteran of 46 months overseas Infantry duty and three years occupation duty in Korea, has demonstrated his abilities as a home-maker to his men in the 4119th Army Service Unit here.

He saw and disapproved of the barrenness of this installations barracks—and did something about it. With non-appropriated funds he purchased enough drapery material for 200 windows. Then, despite the cautious kidding of his troops, Maj. Waterhouse ran off the hems on a portable sewing machine.

The colorful drapes, which delighted the men, were not the first non-military innovation the husky, beribboned CO has made here.

'You Came to Me Out of Nowhere'

Somewhere in Korea—A soldier of the British Commonwealth Division has found it pays to stop, listen and look in all directions before speeding.

He was moving along in his jeep at a speed considerably over the posted limit when a helicopter descended. Its pilot waved him to a halt.

21st Topo Tops 99th Engineers For Fourth Win

Overpowering the 99th Engineers 21-7 last week, the 21st Engineer Base Photomapping Company continues to roll on undefeated in softball play at Fort Scott. It was the fourth straight win for the 21st since late May when a large part of the 30th Engineers left for Alaska and intramural ball was re-organized into a 4-team league.

Pfc Larry Haug started on the mound against the 99th. At the end of three innings, with the score 5-5, he was relieved by Pfc Jim Graham who limited the opposition to two runs in the last four frames and was credited with the win.

Cpl. Tom Duff hit two home runs to spark the scoring spree that gave Graham his seventh consecutive pitching victory. Sgt. D'Entremont also picked up a round-trip hit for the 21st.

Headquarters Company, boosted from the cellar position by virtue of the 96th-64th's loss to the 99th Engineers Tuesday, was scheduled to meet the 21st yesterday.

Raiders Drop Two!

Annihilated By Coast Guard Blasted By Two Rock Cowboys

Friday the thirteenth caused Presidio ball players no trouble since they were idle that day. However, the hex of the unlucky day spread its influence to the day before and the following day.

Coast Guardsmen shattered the Raiders on Thursday, piling up a 24 to 0 score in seven innings. Saturday the Presidians went to Petaluma where they were handed a 9 to 3 defeat by the Two Rock Ranch squad.

Leaders of the Bay Area Armed Forces league, the Coast Guard wasted no time rolling up their terrific score, bringing in six runs in the opening inning. They scored two runs each in the second and third and three each in the sixth and seventh. Making up for a blank in the fourth they made eight runs in the fifth.

At Petaluma, the Raiders had a 3 to 1 lead at the end of the first half of the fourth inning. Four Two Rock Ranch men scored in the fourth to go over to the winning side. They went on in the fifth inning to bring in another four and held the Presidians scoreless the remainder of the game to cinch the victory.

First to score for the Presidio was Mierretto who was advanced to third on three consecutive walks and scored on an error by the Petaluma men. Sticks hit a single in the third which was followed by three walks.

Kindrick accounted for the Raiders' final run. He had been walked and advanced with another walk and a sacrifice by Viviani then scored on Howard's single.

Presidio WACs Leading Armed Forces Softball Play

Winning all three of their league games, the Presidio WACs went to the top of the ladder this week in the Bay Area Armed Forces Softball league. Their latest victims were the Wafes of Travis Air Force Base downed to the tune of 15 to 0.

Lynch pitched a one-hit game bringing to four the number of wins for her with no losses. The WAC infield gave her top support and the batters connected for 12 hits.

99th Engineers Add Fourth Loss To 96-64ths Cellar Dive

The 96th-64th Engineers extended their losing streak to four in a row, losing 16-8 to the 99th Engineers at Fort Scott Tuesday.

The 96th-64th had the game in hand in its early stages and led 5-4 when they went onto the field in the bottom of the fourth. The 99th rallied for three tallies in that frame, however, and took a 7-5 lead that remained unchanged until the last of the sixth. In that inning they bunched five hits, two walks and two errors for the nine runs that decided the ball game.

The game's top hitter was Sgt. George Politis with four hits in five attempts.

Olympic Hopeful! Olympic Coach Says Mason Strongman Cinch For Berth

Sixth Army will have at least one representative in the Olympic Games at Helsinki, Finland, this July. Olympic Weightlifting Coach Dietrich Wortman stated this week that Pfc. Tommy Kono, Fort Mason's state and national title holder, is a sure bet for the seven-man team.

Kono was the sensation of the recent Olympic tryouts held in Oakland, competing in the three-lift lightweight class he shattered the National AAU Junior record. Kono's two arm press of 240 pounds bettered the old record by 10 pounds, his two arm snatch of 250 pounds clipped 10 pounds off that record and two arm clean and jerk was 35 pounds better than the old record. His 815 pound total beat the standing record by five pounds.

Tommy holds the California State AAU records in both the lightweight and middleweight classes and won his second straight state championship this year.

The muscular private first class started lifting weights about four years ago just for fun, encouraged by friends he entered competition and skyrocketed to the top of the amateur classes.

Kono's top single lift in pounds is 460 from the deep knee bend. But he is getting better each year and you can bet your bar bells that he will give Olympic rivals a tough mark to shoot at.

Pfc. Kono left for Philadelphia last week where he will train for two weeks in preparation for the Olympic finals that will be held in New York this month.

21st Photomaps Take Class 'C' League Title

The 21st Engineer Base Photomapping Company won the crucial title game in the "C" division of the City Softball League Tuesday night at Rolph Field. Drawing a bye after a three-way tie, the 21st defeated Deluxe Tavern 13-7, avenging their only defeat of the season. Deluxe Tavern had gained the finals by a smashing 12-0 win over Cervo Florists Friday night.

Cheered on by a large crowd of enthusiastic supporters led by Company Commander, Captain Miltons S. Saunders, the 21st broke away to a 12-3 lead at the end of the fifth inning and coasted to the championship. They were given a scare when their 3 runs in the first were equalled by the opposing team, but SFC Les Hartman then settled down until the sixth. Actually Hartman limited the tavern team to only 2 earned runs and 5 hits and was in serious trouble only during fielding lapses committed by his team-mates.

The Engineers gathered 11 hits and took full advantage of the one-baggers with 5 stolen bases. Hartman aided his own cause with a 3-run homer in the first inning. Sgt. Glen Worthing collected 3 singles as his parting gesture; he receives his discharge this Thursday. The 21st will now play off with the "A" and "B" divisions for the official city championship starting Friday, June 20th.

The score by innings:

Teams	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	R	H	E
21st Engineers	3	0	2	3	4	0	1	13	11	8
Deluxe Tavern	3	0	0	0	3	0	1	7	5	3

Local Golfer Cops Second In Reno Invitational Tourney

Cracking par by 19 strokes, Pfc Ted Haner and partner, Dr. William Spencer, teamed up to cop second place honors in the Reno Invitational Best-Ball Golf Tournament ending Sunday.

Pfc Haner, 21st Engineer Base Photomapping Company at Fort Winfield Scott, fired a 35-38-73 and a 36-41-77 for a 36-cup total of 150 strokes. In Best-Ball Tournament play, on each hole the lowest score of the partners is tallied resulting in sub-par golf.

Winning the tourney was the Bill Mihilovich-Bob Rennasler team of Santa Clara as they carded a 65-69-124, just one stroke better than the Haner-Spencer duo. In third place were Tommy Jacobs and Ed Cooper with a 61-67-128.

In the "play for pay" circuit, on hand for the tournament were professionals: Ellsworth Vines, Los Angeles; George Schneider, Salt Lake City, former president of the PGA; Zell Eaton, former California Open Champion; Joey Rey, nationally known as leader in the Junior Golf Movement.

Leading amateurs participating were: Ken Venturi, California State Amateur champion; Tommy Jacobs, National Junior champ; Bob Wagner, former California Junior champ; Ed Cavanaugh, Arizona State champ.

Before entering the service, Pfc Haner was a member of the University of Michigan golf team and won several open tournaments. He won the Essex-Kent Open, Ontario, Canada; the Frania Open, Ontario, Canada; and the Canadian-Ameri-

Topic

The Troop Information Conference topic for the week 23 June through 28 June is entitled: YOU CAN'T WIN . . . BUT YOU CAN LEARN, Sixth Army TI&E Section has announced.

You can't win WHAT? . . . But you can learn WHAT? The answers are based on Department of the Army Pamphlet No. 20-143.

Briefly, it points out no one "wins" a maneuver. Maneuvers are for learning not fighting. Maneuvers are unequalled by any other kind of training—to get ready for combat.

Maneuvers are part of a soldier's training, for new soldiers and veterans alike. Preliminary training, basic, or whatever term is applied to the period of early instructions, stresses "what combat is like," what the soldier needs to know to fight and survive.

When maneuvers come along the individual training, which has been arranged with maneuvers as one of its goals, shows up or reveals whether or not the soldier is now, an efficient part of the combat-ready team, an integral part of his squad, company, battalion, regiment or division.

Maneuvers are carried out under conditions as near to actual combat as it is possible to devise, outside of being shot at by a real enemy with real ammunition.

Everybody learns from maneuvers, and learns more from the second and third than from the first, because the leaders from noncoms up are veterans of actual combat. The TIC topic fills in some of the details and explains why maneuvers are held, what they reveal about training, and how well the soldier is learning his job.

This Diploma Was One Well Earned

Unique graduation ceremonies were held on the summit of Pikes Peak, in Colorado, as 145 soldiers completed a rugged six weeks course which includes instruction in tactics, marches, route selection, land navigation, evacuation, and supply—all as applied to mountain operations.

The diplomas and cards signifying membership in the "14,000 feet Club" were presented to the graduates by Lt. Col. Wythe M. Peyton, Jr., Chief of Staff, Camp Carson, Colorado.

The graduates had ascended the mountain as a climax to four days of strenuous mountain maneuvers conducted by the Mountain and Cold Weather Training Command. The students, all privates, were the first element of 900 basically trained infantrymen who are being sent to Camp Carson this summer for this highly specialized course.

NOTICE

All officers and warrant officers claiming increased allowances for dependents must file NME Form 137 "Certificate for Increased Allowances" by 1 July and 1 January each year. These forms may be procured at the Post Finance office, Bldg. 84.

Officers who occupy public quarters and those without dependents are not required to submit these certificates.

During May, post units at Fort Campbell, Ky., reenlisted 40 per cent of all personnel due for separation, and in one week 18 men reupped for a total of 96 years.

Announce Plans For Interservice Photo Contest

Washington—All service personnel in the Armed Forces will have an opportunity to participate in the Fourth Inter-Service Photography Contest to begin during the latter part of this year.

Starting with the smaller installations and working up to major command competitions, the preliminary contests will be held by all Services. Final eliminations will be done at the highest level.

Top winners of all Services will compete against each other 15 April 1953 for the Inter-Service awards. Winners will receive trophies in seven black-and-white and three color transparency categories.

The Service with the greatest number of prize-winning entries will hold for one year the perpetual Inter-Service photography contest trophy.

Entries will be in two classifications: 1. Black-and-white pictures of five by seven-inch minimum and 16 by 20-inch maximum size, unmatted and unmounted. 2. Color transparencies of a 35-millimeter minimum to four by five-inch maximum in cardboard mounts.

Entries will be judged primarily for originality, interest and appeal, with photographic technique as a secondary factor. All pictures must have been taken after 1 January 1951.

Rangers Use Hard-Hitting Techniques

The gold and black insignia of the American Ranger is more than just a tab to the men who wear it. It identifies each wearer as a member of one of the toughest fighting groups in the world and the cream of the U. S. Army's combat troops. It also tags each man as a triple volunteer—a volunteer for Korean combat, Ranger training and Jump School.

A few chosen applicants are chosen for this rugged course. After selection they undergo a period of grueling training that takes them through the Northern hills of Georgia, the sand and brush of special training areas at Ft. Benning and the wilds of Florida's swamps.

The best of the Army's top soldiers are trained as Rangers for unusual and dangerous missions. At the outbreak of the Korean conflict, Rangers were trained as small, highly specialized, hard-hitting units. That pattern has now changed. Ranger-trained personnel are now sent back to small Infantry units where they may impart some of their knowledge to others.

A trek through 20 miles of near-impassable swamp, 16 hour patrols in blizzard-like snows and a 72-hour day-and-night reconnaissance combat patrol are just a few of the "classes" that make up the curriculum of the Ranger to-be. Other classes include the handling of reptiles, mountain problems and the art of living off the land.

Fearful by hostile troops and respected by their comrades in-arms, the Rangers boast an enviable reputation. They combine brawn, brain and courage into a high degree of leadership—leadership that has helped make the Ranger one of the world's best trained fighting men.

Signal Chief Visits!

General Back Pays First Staff Visit To Presidio

Major General George I. Back, Chief Signal Officer, paid his first staff visit to Headquarters Sixth Army last week. Following conferences with Col. Lloyd C. Parsons, Sixth Army Signal Officer, the general inspected various signal sections at the Presidio.

General Back made a brief and informative address to division chiefs of the signal sections during his visit, expressing his gratitude at the fine cooperation afforded him by Sixth Army Signal during his recent tour of duty as Signal Officer of the Far East Command.

He praised the efforts of signalmen in the Korean conflict stating that wherever trained communications specialists, familiar with the type of equipment at their disposal, were available, communications were operating in a highly effective manner. He scored the rapid developments being made by Signal Corps research to meet the growing demands of modern warfare.

General Back relieved Major General S. B. Akin as Chief Signal Officer on 1 May, 1951. He has served in many varied capacities in the Signal Corps since 1917. During WWII he served as Deputy Chief and Chief Signal Officer to Allied Force Headquarters in the Mediterranean Theatre of Operations. Following the last war he served as Chief of the Army Communications Service in the office of Chief Signal Officer.

In 1947 General Back was assigned Signal Officer of the Far East Command and Chief of Civil Communications Section of the Supreme Allied Powers. With the formation of the United Nations Command he also became Chief Signal Officer for that command.

Reject Blood Donors Treated for Malaria

Overseas returnees who have undergone preventive therapy for malaria at any time during the past two years will not be acceptable as blood donors it was announced this week by the Armed Forces Medical Procurement Agency.

Reason for the rejection is to safeguard the donor rather than the fact that such donor's blood might contain malarial parasites.

ORGANIZATION CHART
HEADQUARTERS SIXTH ARMY
PRESIDIO OF SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA

NEW ORGANIZATION CHART—The new organization chart above shows the changes resulting in the recent reorganization of Headquarters Sixth Army. The reorganization chart has been approved by the Sixth Army Commander and will be printed and distributed in the near future.

Complete Top Level Reorganization

Following weeks of intensive study Lieutenant General Joseph M. Swing, Sixth Army Commander, has ordered a top level reorganization of Headquarters Sixth Army. General Swing, one of the Army's top exponents of management study and improvement, feels that the new realignment of staff and technical sections will trim the fat out of the old organizational procedure and insure maximum dollar and manpower value.

The major change effected under the new plan was the transfer of the Office of the Comptroller to the Office of the Chief of Staff. This will allow the "watch dog" of the Army's appropriated funds to exercise greater control of expenditures and manpower. And is in keeping with the Comptroller's mission of rendering advice and assistance to the Army Commander on the major aspects of the command's general management.

In line with this policy, Administrative and Technical staff section were placed under the direct supervision and control of appropriate Assistant Chiefs of Staff.

Under the previous organization, the flow of general staff actions was from each general staff direct to the Chief of Staff. As long as the Comptroller was on the same level as the other staff section, actions would not necessarily go through the Comptroller.

Although a practice of mutual coordination has existed between the Comptroller and the other General Staff Section, General Swing did not have positive assurance that the Comptroller knew every single action of the general staff. By raising the office to that of Deputy Chief of Staff he is now assured that every paper that results in expenditure of money or manpower must first go through the Comptroller.

Spending a billion and a half dollars a year at this level, the Army has the responsibility of getting the most out of every man and dollar. The new organization has been adopted to see that all programs are accomplished in the most economical way possible.

All actions of any staff section must now flow through some higher staff agency which will check for economy.

Administrative and Technical Staff Section (see chart) have been placed under the direct supervision and control of the Assistant Chiefs of Staff as follows: ACofS, G1-Adjutant General, Provost Marshal, Special Services, Recruiting and Chaplain; ACofS, G3-TI&E; ACofS, G4-Engineer, Ordnance, Quartermaster, Transportation, Signal, Chemical, Medical and Dental.

Functional responsibilities of the manpower division have been placed under the Assistant Chief of Staff G1. This division was formerly the responsibility of the Comptroller.

This Time for Keeps!

Grim Game of Hide'n Seek Proves Costly for Red Players

Korea—"When we tag a man out, he stays out," said 1st Lt. Harold A. Polson, "it was almost a game of hide and seek, except we played for keeps."

Led by Lt. Polson, two Company E squads of the 17th Buffalo Regiment took up ambush positions on the finger of a Communist held ridgeline about two miles within enemy territory. Polson planned to start the first squad toward friendly lines, and the Reds seeing the lone squad move out would think it was the entire patrol and attempt to way-lay it. The second squad would then move up and catch the enemy in a squeeze play.

As expected the Reds quickly bore down on the first squad, ordered them to halt and surrender. The Buffaloes spit out their reply with a savage burst of small arms fire. The Reds scuttled for cover, and unwittingly holed up in the dry bed of an abandoned irrigation canal.

Well protected by four-foot dike walls, the Buffaloes, led by Sgt. John L. Summers, showered the bottled up enemy with grenades, while Polson hustled the second squad to the other side to hem the Reds in.

This two-pronged attack completely disorganized the Reds and they scattered in all directions, thwarting pursuit, leaving weapons as they fled. The Buffaloes counted two dead Reds and six wounded in addition to the cache of weapons and ammo.

Lt. Polson found the only scratch received by the Buffaloes, two days later, on his hand. A wounded Red tried to pull a grenade on Polson, and when he emptied his carbine into him the grenade had gone off in the Red's hand.

Sgt. Summers won a recommendation for the Silver Star, and was cited for "turning what might have been a costly defeat to his own squad into a substantial victory."

PIO Executive Officer Leaves For Fort Sill

Lt. Col. Winant Sidle, Executive Officer of the Sixth Army Public Information Office, will leave the Presidio after nearly three years to attend the Artillery Officer's Advance Course at Fort Sill, Okla. He will be replaced by Lt. Col. Steven C. Monroe, who has been Chief of Information, U.S. Army, Alaska.

Serving with the same battalion in which he enlisted as a private in January 1941, Lt. Col. Sidle saw action in Italy, France, Germany and Austria, ending the war in the grade of major. After the war he was assigned to the Intelligence Division, War Department General Staff, where he remained until 1948 when he was assigned to the University of Wisconsin where he received a MA degree prior to his assignment to the Sixth Army.

A Harvard graduate, Lt. Col. Monroe served at Fort Mason and CBI during World War II. Leaving the service for a short time after the war, he returned to become Assistant Public Information Officer of Headquarters Sixth Army in late 1946. When the Armed Forces PIO was opened in November 1948, he became Chief of Army section, in which capacity he served until going to Alaska in June 1950.

Lt. Col. Monroe is expected to assume his new duties sometime in August.

DA Announces New General For III Corps

The Department of the Army announced this week that Major General Ira Paul Swift, Commanding General of the 25th Infantry Division in Korea will replace Major General William B. Kean as Commander of the III Corps at Fort MacArthur, California. General Kean will be the new Commanding General of the Fifth Army Area.

General Swift, a West Point graduate, class 1919, is a veteran of overseas service in both World War II and Korea and comes into the Sixth Army area as one of its most highly decorated officers. Among his awards and decorations are the Legion of Merit with Cluster, the Silver Star and the Bronze Star Medal with Cluster.

General Swift's varied Army career has carried him to several top commands. In 1944 he was Assistant Commander of the 82nd Airborne Division; in 1947 he was appointed Assistant Commander of the 2nd Infantry Division and in 1948 he assumed Command of the 2nd Infantry Division.

General Kean who has been III Corps Commander since March 1952 is a native of Buffalo, New York, and was graduated from the United States Military Academy at West Point in 1918.

His military career has taken him overseas during World War I and II and he commanded the 25th Infantry Division in Korea during the current conflict. Among his many awards and decorations are the coveted Distinguished Service Medal with 2 Distinguished Flying Cross. He has also been decorated by six foreign countries for his outstanding achievements.

DA and CSC Coordinate New Inspection Plans

A new agreement has been made between the Department of the Army and the U. S. Civil Service Commission governing the scheduling of inspections, effective 1 July 1952.

This agreement provides that the Civil Service Commission will plan its inspections so that installations will not be visited within six months before or after the date scheduled for surveys by the Office of Civilian Personnel, Office of the Secretary of the Army.

Regional Directors will notify by letter both the installation and the Office of Civilian Personnel, if it is found necessary to schedule Commission inspections within the six-month interval.

Let There Be Light!

"Operation Understanding," the well organized and successful four day inspection tour by top Army advisors of key Sixth Army training installations last week, might easily be termed the outstanding public relations project of the year, or any year for that matter.

If the recently concluded Sixth Army Advisory Groups Conference can be used as a yardstick for Army-wide application of Secretary of the Army Frank Pace Jr.'s newly initiated program of "cooperation through understanding," there can be little doubt that a whole new concept of Army-Civilian relationship will be established.

More than forty top leaders in the civic and industrial life of eight western states returned to their communities not only impressed with the workmanlike job being accomplished by the Army's training program, but enthusiastic in the forthright way these programs and their objectives were explained. They have seen! And borrowing a well-worn but proven cliché—seeing is believing.

Now when the detractors and rumor-mongers turn loose with their stock in trade, they can speedily be given the lie by respected civic and business leaders who have seen and know the answers. This is not just a step forward, but a broad jump in the right direction!

The Army, ever busy with its 177-year-old task of serving and defending this nation, has at times been very shortsighted in the ever growing field of public relations. This neglect has often left it in the wake of the aggressive policies put forth by sister services.

The Army has nothing to sell but service and duty, and nothing to hide but a record studded with glowing accomplishments. Kudos to Secretary Pace for letting the light shine on both.

Annual Survey Will Check Title Accuracy Of Civilian Positions

Commanders of Sixth Army Class I installations who are authorized civilian employees will conduct an annual review and survey of all civilian positions to establish need for positions and to determine the accuracy of title and grade level, on a fiscal year basis.

The need for positions will be established by Management, Manpower, or Operating Officials designated by the Installation Commander. The Installation Civilian Personnel Office will conduct the survey evaluating the accuracy of grade level and title.

Close coordination will be essential between Civilian Personnel representatives and officials designated by the Installation Commander to perform the review of positions for need. This review should be accomplished prior to the Salary and Wage survey, as experience has shown that joint surveys are not desirable.

Army Authorized Flag Stock For National Interment

Effectively immediately, Sixth Army is authorized to maintain a stock level of 100 Flags, National US Interment. To insure that this stock level can be maintained at strategic locations, and will be readily available for the purpose required, requisition objectives have been authorized at approximately 14 stations in the Sixth Army Area.

Authorized quantities depend on the troop population of the area and will vary from a minimum of 1 for stations serving up to 1500 troops to 17 at Camp Roberts, serving an estimated 22,000 troops.

The basis of issue of Flags, National US Interment, has been recommended for inclusion in the next revision of TA 20. Pending this revision, however, stations are authorized to issue the Flags on the basis of 1 per interment of deceased military personnel.

SIXTH ARMY COMPTROLLER Colonel R. B. McBride, Jr., uses a visual aid to demonstrate that one of the primary objectives of the entire Comptroller system is that of Program Management. Lt. Col. C. C. Coyne, the section's executive officer looks on.

Sixth Army Comptroller Scores Policy Of Economy Through Management

Army

T. I. C. Topic

"Communist propaganda—What are we doing to combat it?" that is a question every member of Sixth Army will soon have a satisfactory answer to in a TIC topic entitled: "T'LL TELL THE WORLD."

The topic is now being prepared by Troop Information & Education, and will be released "in the near future," Colonel C. B. Wilson has announced.

Based on Armed Forces Talk 403, "T'LL TELL THE WORLD" will reveal how Communist propaganda has undermined the several satellite nations and forced them into the Soviet orbit "without firing a shot," and what the United States, officially and by voluntary private initiative, is doing to combat it.

Magazines, pamphlets, land-going and sea-going radiocasts, roving movie shows, all are being utilized to expose the phony "peace" propaganda put out by the Kremlin, and to tell the story of Democracy to the deluded Red-controlled peoples.

The story of Democracy, along with the real news of the day, is being told in 36 different languages throughout the world whenever the Reds are on the prowl. Jeep-borne radio crews are broadcasting in the areas bordering the Iron Curtain. Other mobile crews are telling the story in movies. The Coast Guard Cutter COURIER is broadcasting along the coastlines.

That this many-tongued Voice of America is having a telling effect with counter-propaganda is proven by the fact the Kremlin now has 250 skywave jamming transmitters and about 1,000 local ground wave transmitters trying to drown out the Voice of Truth.

The TIC topic will give a detailed answer to: What Are We Doing To Combat Communist Propaganda?

The comfortable assurance of a push-button war is an illusion. The enormous implication of the machinery of total warfare of today rests upon manpower—not in the mass, but diffused through thousands of specialties.—Secretary of Defense James Forrestal, March 1948.

In a speech to the Civilian Aides to the Secretary of the Army from the eight western states comprising the Sixth Army area and the chairman of 30 Army Advisory Committees, Colonel Robert B. McBride, Sixth Army Comptroller outlined efficiency and economy measures used in utilization of funds.

Colonel McBride, the "watch-dog" of the appropriated funds, pointed out to the group that economy measures in this area are guided by the Sixth Army Management Improvement Program and are strictly in keeping with Secretary of the Army Frank Pace's Cost Consciousness program.

"It cannot be said that Sixth Army is totally and completely efficient and economical, nor can it ever expect to be," stated the Colonel. "However, the Sixth Army is attempting to minimize the chances of human error and human deficiencies by building a system of internal control."

A Work Simplification program used to harness the ideas of all supervisors to simplify methods and procedures is one effective means now used to combat waste and high costs. One of the keys to the "Cut-waste" program is the Work Measurement Program which is a system of measuring input of human effort and output of production against standards established after thorough study.

Dollar ceilings established by the Department of the Army must be strictly adhered to and are therefore necessarily passed on down to field installations. Regularly scheduled reports are submitted through channels to higher commands to show exactly how, why and when funds were expended.

Frequent inspections and rigid control of stock levels have cut down on waste, hoarding and misappropriation of supplies and equipment at all echelons according to Colonel McBride.

Pointing out that an aggressive application of these proven savings methods meant millions of dollars to the taxpayers, Colonel McBride cited examples to show the effectiveness of the program. Consolidation of the Army, Navy and Air Force military police functions in the Bay-Area has saved the Army alone 28 personnel and 4 vehicles resulting in a reduction of cost of more than one hundred thousand dollars per year. Other measures similar to this have resulted in an annual savings of millions of dollars.

Hardship Discharges Need Extra Copies For Processing

Applications for hardship and/or dependency discharges, with supporting documents will be prepared in sufficient number of copies to insure that on request, they can be submitted to Headquarters, Sixth Army in duplicate.

The forwarding indorsement of the commander having custody of the applicant's personnel records will, in addition to the information required by paragraphs 26 and 27 of AR 615-362, include the following information:

- Marital status and date of marriage.
- Date of birth.
- Period of enlistment.
- Convictions by courts martial during current period of service.
- Statement indicating whether or not an application for hardship or dependency discharge has been previously submitted, and, if so, the headquarters or office that took final action will be noted.

Pictorial Division Announces New Films

Initial distribution of two motion picture films, "RTTAF 141, The Role of the Combat Cameraman" and "TF 10-1742, Petroleum Supply Point Operations" has been announced by the Pictorial Division, Signal Section.

"The Role of the Combat Cameraman" shows what an impressive record the cameraman achieved during World Wars I and II, and illustrates the many ways the Armed Forces has used photography in Korea. This film also shows the hardships the cameraman has to endure to obtain his pictures.

"Petroleum Supply Point Operations" is a training film showing the complete operational mission of a Quartermaster petroleum supply unit and demonstrates the methods, procedures and mechanics in the use of all types of cleaning, dispensing and storage equipment.

Sergeant Retires After 28 Years Of Busy Service

M/Sgt. James M. Foley, manager of the Bay Area Theatres on the Presidio and sub-posts for the past 20 months, retires on 30 June, after 28 years of active service.

Sgt. Foley has had a varied career. During World War II, he was on the last ship to leave from Brisbane, Australia, going to Manila to rescue General MacArthur. The ship only reached Java, where they were cut off by Japanese submarines. Foley was then assigned to General Wavrell's command at Pandong, Java.

When the Japanese invaded the Netherland East Indies, Sgt. Foley was again on the last ship, this time to leave Java. Upon his arrival in Perth, Australia, he was returned to American troops.

Sgt. Foley will make his home in Pasadena, Calif., with his wife and daughter.

701st MP Battalion Famed as Army's Oldest Will Transfer to Fort Knox, Kentucky This Month

Oldest military police battalion in the Army, the 701st MP Battalion will be transferred to Fort Knox, Kentucky, on 30 June after three years at the Presidio.

Transfer is to be made less personnel and equipment. Most of the present personnel of the battalion will be assigned to the 505th MP Battalion, which will replace the 701st on the Presidio. Others will go to the 44th Infantry Division at Camp Cooke, 6004 ASU MP Detachment at Fort MacArthur and to various units on the post.

Prior to the formation of the 701st, a military police was just a soldier with a night stick who received no special training. In February 1941, the War Department organized the Military Police under its own arm of service.

To organize the first unit, 93 hand picked, carefully selected cademen were chosen from one of the Army's oldest and finest outfits—the famous First Infantry Regiment. Subsequent personnel were assigned from carefully screened Selective Service Trainees.

On 1 February 1941 the 701st Military Police Battalion was activated at Fort Snelling, Minnesota. By midsummer the unit was ready to be assigned to duty.

For more than three consecutive years during the war, practically each and every new military police battalion activated received its trained cademen from the 701st.

During the summer of 1942 the battalion served as a demonstration unit for the Provost Marshal General's School at Fort Oglethorpe, Georgia. When the school was moved to Fort Custer, Michigan, the 701st went along with the primary mission of a demonstration unit until November 1944. As a secondary mission, the battalion served as internal security for the Sixth Service Command.

To expedite supplies vitally needed overseas, the battalion furnished a company to Fort Wayne

Ordnance Depot in 1944. The next year they assisted in moving a large convoy of trucks from Michigan to the Boston Port of Embarkation during a raging blizzard to keep critical supplies rolling during a truck drivers' strike.

When the war ended in August 1945, the battalion was awaiting shipment to the Pacific, so instead of going overseas then they were sent to Fort Belvoir, Virginia, for duties in the Military District of Washington.

In 1946 with war raging in China the War Department faced the difficult problem of selecting an Army unit for the protection of American rights and property in that county, chose the 701st.

After they landed in Shanghai in February of 1946, the battalion furnished security for the War Crimes trials held in Shanghai at Ward Road jail and supplied execution parties for the war criminals executed.

Shanghai became the port for all China veterans returning home and the battalion was kept busy handling thousands of transients returning to the United States.

Proof that they were doing their job well was shown as shortly as six months after their arrival in China. The War Department in September of 1946 officially commended the 701st by awarding the battalion a Gold Star to the Meritorious Unit Plaque, signifying a second award.

In addition to the Gold Star award, the War Department at the same time decorated a total of 47 men and officers with the Army Commendation Ribbon for their outstanding work and devotion to duty.

With the evacuation of Shanghai, the 701st served as rear guard and left after 35 months of China duty on 29 January 1949. Landing at Yokohama, Japan, on the battalion's eight anniversary, the 701st was assigned to the Eighth Army for occupational military police duty. They left Japan three months later.

Give Once For All!

United Crusade Organized For Benefit Of Bewildered Donors

Seven major charitable drives in San Francisco to many of which military and civilian personnel of the Presidio contribute annually will be combined in one campaign this fall as the United Crusade with the slogan "Give Once for All."

Primary objective of the consolidation of the drives is to raise more funds by bringing order and unity into drives for charitable purposes through a single annual campaign.

As the result of a two-year survey, leading civic and business representatives organized the San Francisco Federated Fund, which will conduct the United Crusade. The survey was made upon the request of donors harassed by a multiplicity of appeals and because of the failure of many appeals to reach their campaign goals.

Many advantages are offered to the donor by the Federation. It establishes unity in fund raising by coordinating competing, repetitive appeals into one solicitation, thus making possible contributions on a "give-once-for-all" basis. Deferred payments will also be arranged for the convenience of donors.

The first United Crusade will raise funds for the following 78 organizations which have so far affiliated with the San Francisco Federated Fund: the 72 agencies of the Community Chest, the United Defense Fund, the American Red Cross, American Cancer Society, Arthritis and Rheumatism Foundation, San Francisco Heart Association, and United Cerebral Palsy Association.

Donors automatically become members of the Red Cross, Community Chest and other affiliated organizations for a period of one year, except in cases where the donor designates his gift for one organization.

Your Vote An Important Duty, Don't Slip and Lose It, Use It!

Why servicemen and servicewomen, in common with all other citizens, should vote will be one of the main subjects of the TIC Topic for Presidio personnel during the coming week.

Other phases of the week's topic, "Your Vote," will include how service personnel may qualify to vote; what provisions have been made for absentee voting, and why the 1952 elections are important to the United States.

Two out of every three men and women in the Armed Forces today are of voting age. As citizens in uniform they should shoulder, with other citizens, the responsibility of Americans to defend the Nation's democratic institutions with their votes as they are prepared to do by force of arms.

In order to vote, a serviceman must be qualified under the laws of his own state. Each state prescribes for its citizens who may vote in elections and how citizens become eligible to vote. Some of the qualifications for voting are uniform among the states, but others vary from state to state. Detailed information on various qualifications will be available at the discussions.

Soldier Vote Bill

Washington—Approval of a bill to guarantee eligible members of the armed services and their families a chance to vote in the November presidential election was given 20 June by the Senate. The measure now goes to the House of Representatives for action.

Greatest public interest this year will doubtless be directed toward the presidential campaign and election. However, many other important officers will be chosen in these elections. As of 15 April 1952 the entire membership of the House of Representatives, 34 members of the Senate, the governors of 31 states, and members of 42 State legislatures, as well as numerous state and local officials, were to be chosen.

Effectiveness of self-government through free elections will again be demonstrated by the citizens of the United States. To the peoples who do not enjoy a free ballot our full exercise of the privilege to vote will help point the way.

Presidio Will Play Important Part In SF Birthday Fete

Part of San Francisco's observance of its 176th birthday will be held 28 June, on the Presidio, which is one of the city's oldest historical sites.

Under the sponsorship of the California Historical Society, one of the celebration's highlights will be a luncheon, to be held at the Presidio Officers' Mess, San Francisco's oldest building, erected in 1776. The Sixth Army Band will give a concert between 1200 and 1300 hours.

Colonel Peter J. Loyd, Deputy Post Commander, will give a brief address at ceremonies to be at the Mission Dolores on Saturday morning. Starting with Mass in the old mission at 1000 hours, the ceremonies will conclude with tributes to the founders, Fray Francisco Palou and Captain Jose Joaquin Moraga in the cemetery garden.

Modest Medal Winner Here For Treatment

Medal of Honor winner Rodolfo Hernandez and friend.

Rodolfo Hernandez, an ex-Corporal in the U. S. Army and winner of the Medal of Honor, has reported into Letterman Army Hospital to receive medical care for old wounds received in Korea.

The 42nd Medal of Honor to be awarded since WWII was presented to Hernandez by the President of the United States on 11 April 1952. He was only the eleventh one to receive the decoration in person—the rest were posthumously awarded.

"Really, I don't remember just what happened," said the 21-year-old boy from Fresno, Calif. speaking of his actions which won him the highest medal of this country. "They told me later that I held off a Communist charge in order for my platoon to withdraw, and I killed six, but I don't recall anything."

The wounds for which he is now hospitalized are the result of his having been bayoneted, shot and jabbed in the head and mouth with a rifle butt. He is retired with a permanent disability.

It was announced that the July and August meetings of the Auxiliary have been cancelled and the monthly gatherings will resume in September.

Mesdames Robert H. Fillmore, Perry J. Roberts, Frederick M. Eggan and Herschel L. Butler served as hostesses for the occasion.

New Phone Book

Signal Section announced this week that publication of the new telephone directory for the Presidio of San Francisco is underway, and the new directories will be delivered the first part of July.

ARMOR GALLERY of the DeYung Museum provided an unusually appropriate setting for the I&E discussion of "Our Army 177 Years Old," held by the class of the Sixth Army Signal Section. Use of the display of historical weapons to illustrate the history of the army was the suggestion of Mrs. Gwendalyn Cody, Sixth Army Historian. Group members shown above inspecting a WWI mortar are (l. to r.) SFC. Eugene Ruffin, instructor, Sgt. Curtis Bowman and Cpl. Firmin Collins.

Letterman Amputees Are Feted at Tahoe

Twenty amputee veterans of the Korean fighting from Letterman Army Hospital and Oaknoll Naval Hospital spent last weekend at Lake Tahoe as guests of the Lake Tahoe American Legion Post #795 with the assistance of several of the resort owners of the area.

The ten soldiers and airmen and ten Marines were flown to Stead Air Force Base, Nevada, Friday night and returned Sunday in a C47 from Hamilton Air Force Base. They were driven over the Sierras to Lake Tahoe in station wagons.

Activities included fishing, rides around the lakeshore and dinners at noted resorts. A feature of their Sunday breakfast was the trout they had caught the day before.

Reason Enough!

Vacancies now exist in the trumpet and reed sections of the 22nd Army Band at Fort Mason, it was announced today by CWO Louis Ferraro. Civilians interested in enlisting for these positions should contact Mr. Ferraro, Building T-112, Fort Mason, California. Enlisted personnel should apply in writing through channels.

College Credit Set On New Silent Reading Course

Efficient and rapid silent reading will be taught in an eight-week course to be held in the I&E Building, #1220 Fort Scott, beginning 1 July. The class will meet every Tuesday and Thursday from 1900 to 2100.

Officers and enlisted men who are advancing toward a college degree may arrange to receive college credit for the course. The class is open to all military personnel and no fee will be made for the instruction.

Special equipment is provided for this class to correct faulty reading habits and to develop better eye-mind coordination. In the past students have improved from 40 to 100 per cent in reading speed without loss of comprehension.

Local Scout Troop Aids Conservation

As part of their program of assisting the Post fire department and the Post engineers, members of the Presidio Boy Scout troop have placed 80 "Prevent Forest Fires" posters in conspicuous places around the Presidio and its sub-posts.

The Presidio Scouts have been named junior auxiliaries of the Presidio fire department in recognition of the work done by the boys in teaching fire prevention to younger children. Since the Scouts took over the program last March, only one false alarm has been turned in by any of the younger children of the Post.

Bronze Star for Missing SF Ranger

Presentation of the Bronze Star with "V" device to Mrs. Florence A. Tadlock of San Francisco for heroic achievement on behalf of her son, Pfc. Alvin R. Tadlock, was made Saturday at Letterman Army Hospital by Colonel Robert B. Skinner, Deputy Commander.

Missing in action for the past 18 months, Private Tadlock was a member of the 8th Army Ranger Co. He was cited for heroism against the enemy near Unsan, Korea, on 25 November 1950.

The citation read in part: "When the fanatical hostile force launched a counter attack, Private Tadlock successfully held his position against five successive waves of enemy troops. When UN forces were forced to withdraw, Private Tadlock staunchly remained in his position, and when last seen, was still firing at the hostile troops as they overran his emplacement."

WASTE WORST ENEMY—Cpl. David Eng, 21st Engineer Base Photomapping Company, vividly pictures waste as producing bullets for the hands of a receptive enemy. This poster finished among the 10 best for the runner-up award in the 30th Engineer Base Topographic Battalion's supply economy poster contest.

ACTRESS MARJORIE STEEL, attractive star of "Berkeley Square," presents Sgt. Arthur Peck, gun commander of the "D" Battery of the 9th AAA Gun Battalion, with an award which his battery won for having the best cared for weapons in the Battalion. An ordnance inspection team visits the gun positions of the battalion each week to choose the winners. Watching the award in the background are (l. to r.) Pfc. G. Marra and Cpl. John Hageman.

Free Short Wave Class For Presidio Personnel

A free short wave class for all interested military and civilian personnel began at Fort Mason, Bldg. 207 on 24 June. Mr. William J. Butz and Mr. Theodore A. Hamby from Sixth Army's Presidio Station W6DZN will conduct the course.

Civies Made at Cooke

Civilian clothing for issue to male individuals released from Army places of confinement or separated from the service under conditions other than honorable, is manufactured at the U.S. Disciplinary Barracks, Camp Cooke, California.

This method of obtaining civilian clothing through the facilities of Camp Cooke results in substantial savings to the government and materially aids the rehabilitation program conducted at the Disciplinary Barracks.

New Stamp Issue Will Honor Servicewomen

Danielle Darrieux has looks and action that bespeak sophistication and intrigue on a high level. Joan Bennett is poised. Lena Horne is perhaps the most beautiful, graceful and talented performer in this town. Peggy Lee has the personality, looks and piquancy to make an exciting individual. Vivian Leigh has the three essentials for a great actress—beauty, intelligence and imagination. Judy Garland has a tremendous, dynamic talent. Faith Domergue looks dark, vivid and exciting. Mr. Mason's tenth choice was Pamela Kellino—his wife.

Raiders Slough Poemen, Lose Close One To Eureka Crabs

Although outhit 12-5, the Presidio Raiders smashed out an 8-6 win over the San Francisco Port of Embarkation at the Oakland Army Base on 24 June.

Steady hurling by pitcher John Caja held the SFPE in check until the eighth inning when they rallied and scored three runs.

The local lads were able to bunch their hits with the breaks of the game scoring four times in the fifth inning, three in the sixth and one in the eighth for their eight run total.

On 28-29 June, Saturday and Sunday the Presidians will travel to Camp San Luis Obispo for a two game series. Both teams will be gunning for a twin victory since the last two game series ended with the Obispomen capturing the Saturday tilt 10-3, and the Raiders coming out on top of a 10-inning thriller on Sunday 3-2.

On 6 July the Raider ball club will make a temporary move into San Quentin prison to play a non-league game. Necessary arrangements have been made to take interested spectators along to witness the game.

Presidio's Busy WAC Athletes After New Laurels

Presidio WACs—eleven strong—are competing in the Sixth Army Southern Division Volleyball tournament at Camp Cooke this week. Tourney play began Wednesday and will be concluded today.

Most members of the volleyball team are also top softball players and if they play volleyball in anything near the style they do softball, the girls should return from Camp Cooke with laurels.

Their tournament games will be the team's first test for they have only had practice games with teams composed of squad members during their two weeks of practice.

Sgt. Vivian Brill is the team manager. Others representing the Presidio are Sgt. Jean Groomes, Sgt. Jo Shafic, Cpl. Joan Mansfield, Pfc. Joy Gleason, Pfc. "Canada" Sherrard, Pfc. Grace Tate, Pfc. Marian Woods, Pfc. Neva Lynch, Pfc. Sally Shields and Pfc. Florence Hardesty.

Presidio Keglers Set Plans For Summer Meet

The Presidio bowling league which recently completed their winter season competition is now making preparations for their summer meet.

The leagues current plans call for operation of three individual departments, men's, women's and mixed, providing there are enough Sixth Army personnel interested. This would include eight 4 man teams in each league with the top team receiving individual trophies. Other prizes, to be announced later, will be awarded for top game and series.

There is still time for any interested personnel to form and enter a team for this summers action. Interested persons should contact the Presidio Service Club Bowling manager any night of the week and secure the necessary information.

21st Photomaps Dumped Twice In City "C" League

The 21st Engineers Base Photomapping Company, recent winners of the Class "C" City Softball League Championship, were eliminated from the Class "B" playoffs after losing two straight games to the Circle Club nine of San Francisco.

In both games the Engineers led during the early part of the games only to surrender their leads and go on to eventual defeat.

The first game ended in a close 7-5 loss, but the second playoff game found the Engineers losers by a wide margin as the Circle Club scored ten runs in the last two frames and winning 15-6.

Sports Roundup

(By Armed Forces Press Service)

Philadelphia, Pa.—Lockbourne AFB, Ohio, led Service squads in the 58th Penn Relays. Paced by S/Sgt. Mal Whitfield, 1948 Olympics 800-meter champ, they won the Class B mile, two-mile and 60-yard shuttle hurdle relay championships and finished fourth in the half-mile relay. Lt. Otis Chandler, USAF, upset the field in the shot put, and won with a toss of 52' 11". . . Lt. Sam Felton, USN, established a new meet record in the 16-pound hammer throw. Representing the Navy Olympics squad, he flipped the weight 183' 2 1/4" to better the standard by more than seven feet. . . Bill Miller of the Navy Olympic team and Marine Sgt. Jim Gillchrist each won an event. Miller flung the javelin 216' 1 1/4" for his first place and Sgt. Gillchrist high jumped 6' 4" to lead the field.

The pitchers were far ahead of the batters in Service baseball in the opening games of the season. Quantico's ace Dick Tomanek ran his strikeout total to 82 in four games. Seventeen Camp Lejeune batters missed connections entirely as they hit safely only twice against Tomanek. . . Ft. Meade's Jim Brosnan allowed only four runners to reach base in pitching a no-hitter against Lincoln (Pa.) University. While Meade was piling up 23 runs, Brosnan struck out 20 batters. No assists were recorded by Meade's fielders. All the putouts were made on strikeouts and popups. . . Two Keesler AFB pitchers turned in successive no-hitters against Pope AFB at Biloxi, Miss. Right-hander Harry Baker earned his third no-hitter blanking Pope, 5-0. The next night Gerald Hamm applied the whitewash, 7-0. It was his first non-hitter.

Graham Red Hot!

21st Engineers Notch Eighth Straight Win, Still Undefeated

Pitcher Jim Graham was credited with his eighth consecutive win as the 21st Engineer softball team squeezed out an 8-7 victory over Headquarters Company at Fort Scott last week. The win left the 21st leading the league undefeated and dropped Headquarters back into a tie for the cellar position.

Neither team led by more than three runs during the game and Headquarters trailed until the fifth when they came through with four runs to take a 7-6 lead. The 21st tied it up in the sixth, nobody scored in the seventh, and the game went into overtime. The 21st won it by scoring once on an error in the top of the eighth and then setting Headquarters down one-two-three.

Valandingham pitched an outstanding game for Headquarters. He exhibited flawless fielding in the clutch and produced all seven of his strikeouts with men on base. Errors accounted for the majority of the 21st's scoring. As usual, Tuttle, the Headquarters catcher, turned in the best performance at the plate; he knocked in three runs with a double and two singles in four attempts.

Jessie Owen's great Olympic record running broad jump mark has never been approached. In the 1936 Olympic Games the great colored track star jumped 26 feet 5 1/16 inches for an all time record. Willie Steele came closest to this mark in 1948 when he jumped 25 feet 8 inches.

Four Sixth Army Stars in Olympic Finals Today

Four Sixth Army men along with 11 other Army track and field stars, the survivors of more than three months rugged elimination competition, will compete in the Olympic Tryout Finals at Los Angeles, today and tomorrow.

Only a half-dozen of the Army stars are expected to win or hold their own against the nation's top amateur talent. However, off of last week's performances in the Long Beach semi-finals a slight improvement here or there could give the Army eight to twelve berths on the team that will represent the United States at Helsinki in July.

One of the outstanding performances at Long Beach last week was that of Lt. Walter Ashbaugh, Second Army, in the hop, step and jump. The rangy ex-Cornell star continued to dominate this event with a 50 foot 3 3/4 inches jump that was an inch and a half better than his nearest competitor's.

Second Army's Lt. Warren Dreutzler was second to Kansas' brilliant Wes Santee in the 1500-meter run as Santee clipped a full one-half second off the previous best Olympic time. Dreutzler has already qualified for the 3000-meter steeplechase finals and may compete in the mile.

Billy Anderson, another Second Army track star, finished fifth to Harrison Dilliard in the 110-meter high hurdles. Dilliard's time was a bristling 13.7. Anderson could easily improve of this performance and might be right there for the finish of this week's jaunt.

Sixth Army's Leon Leopard finished a close fifth in the 800-meter run beating the great Don Gehrman and has an excellent chance to finish with the top three in the finals.

Diminutive Billy Mathis was a hustling third in the 100-meter dash and though beaten by a pair of the nation's top dash stars might finish closer in the finals, in fact one of his good days could make it touch and go for the top slot. Mathis's old nemesis, Brooke Medical Center's Jerry Litman, he beat Mathis twice in the All-Army tourney, did not compete in the semi-finals, but is eligible for the finals, which could, if Litman goes, make it a very interesting race from the Army angle.

Second Army's Jesse Thomas was a double qualifier, gaining a berth in both the hop, step and jump and the broad jump.

Other Army men in the finals are: Sixth Army's John Helwig, shotput; Norman Price, Sixth Army, in the 400-meter hurdles; Larry Goins, Third Army, javelin; Jim Cooke, Third Army, discus, and E. Smith of the Fourth Army in the hop, step and jump.

How Does Your Answer Compare?

The batter was out on strikes and the game counts as a 6-to-1 win for Cleveland. By failing to return to the box, the batter forfeited his right to go to first on what ordinarily would have been a fourth ball, and the pitch became a called strike. See Section 6.06a, which says in part:

"... If, after entering the batter's box, a batter persists in unwarranted delay in taking his proper position, the umpire shall direct the pitcher to deliver the ball to the bat and every such pitch shall be called 'strike' by the umpire. ... If he has not taken a proper position when three strikes are called, he shall be declared 'out.'"

In the American League a Yankee team member has won the award 8 times, with Joltin' Joe DiMaggio a three time winner. Detroit has won six awards and pitcher Hal Newhouser was their two time winner.

Tourney Scouts Seek Talent For Local Golf Team

Golfers who would like to shoot for a place on Presidio's six-man golf team will have an opportunity to do so during a qualifying tournament to be held 8-11 July on the Presidio golf course.

Presidio's golf team will be entered in the Sixth Army Southern Division tournament slated for 12-15 August on Presidio's course. From this tourney the six men with the lowest 72-hole scores and the team with the lowest total for 432 holes will compete in an all-Sixth Army playoff at Fort Lewis, Wash., 26-29 August.

All military personnel of the Presidio and its subposts may enter the qualifying tournament. Those desiring to do so should contact the Athletic Office, Bldg. 122, Extension 3968. Arrangements are being handled by Capt. Duane Bagley and Cpl. Bill Rowe.

WACs Aid Quest For Olympic Funds

Three Presidio WACs assisted in accepting phone pledges of contributions from Bay Area residents during the Olympic Games Telethon conducted by Bing Crosby and Bob Hope Saturday night and Sunday morning.

When the calls started coming in too fast for the staff at the San Francisco local station of the Telephone at the Chronicle office, an emergency call for help was sent to the Presidio. Those who responded were Pfc Dolores Nordstrom, Pfc Phyllis Follensbee and Pfc Inez Igelsrud.

More than $1,000,000 was pledged during the show to send U.S. athletes to the Olympic Games in Helsinki this summer. At the local station where the WACs assisted, viewers pledged nearly $36,000.

International sports enthusiasts will focus their eyes next month on Helsinki, Finland, site of the 1952 summer Olympics. Just 78 miles from the Russian border a Finnish dream is coming true. Since the mid-30's the Finns have begged a chance to play host to the world's top athletes, but the Depression and WWII upset their hopes. Now they're readying their capital for 10,000 athletes and officials. House-painting, yard-cleaning, construction, and language schooling busies the populace. ... Several records should fall. New champions will be crowned in the two-month festival. How should the U.S. fare this time?

International Athletes

"We're going to have the best team we've ever had," opines Avery Brundage, 64-year-old president of the U. S. Olympic Committee.

Our pole vaulters have bettered the Olympic mark many times. In 1951, 10 world's champions were Americans. No other nation claimed more than two. Our relay teams, sprinters, hurdlers and field events competitors rank with the best available. ... In the '48 Games at London we finished more than 100 points ahead of Sweden, the second-place country. Our women's team finished sixth, but only 30 points behind the winning Dutch. Besides track, competing nations will enter teams in water polo, boxing, wrestling, horsemanship, basketball, swimming, boating, and rifle and pistol shooting. The U.S. can hold its own in all of them.

For the first time, Russian and American athletes will meet. The Reds are entered officially, but it doesn't mean they'll show up—unless they can be certain that they will excel. Moscow has claimed many world records, but they've never been witnessed by outsiders. Except for the 1950 European Championships, no Russian has competed in track outside his homeland. In the 1950 European games, they trailed Britain in the men's events, then balked at competing until their women's team score was added to the total. The Red amazons, the best in the world, gave the Russians a four-point edge over the field. ... If they could "hurl the invective" or attempt "erroneous conclusion jumps," the Russians could be conceded titles. But in ordinary events the U.S. should lead Russia and the other competing nations to the winner's circle.

Three Local Aces Chosen For City All-Star Team

Three Sixth Army softballers have been selected to play on the Class "B" Softball All-Star Team on 27 June at 1945 hours at Kezar Stadium.

Three all-star games will be played that evening beginning at 1830 hours in the Class "A," "B" and "C" leagues. Opponents will be players selected from the San Francisco Industrial league.

The three Raiders who will be among the "chosen few" are third baseman Harland Barnes, shortstop Robert Cox and center fielder Clifford Holstein.

Tickets for the games are fifty cents and can be purchased at the box office. Proceeds will be used as a hospital fund to care for players injured during the season.

WACs Submerge WAVES In Lynch's One Hitter

The softball game looked more like a track meet and ended with a football score. A total of 41 runs crossed home plate and batting averages were fattened with 20 hits.

Factually speaking that was what happened at Alameda last week when the Presidio WACs hammered out a 35 to 6 win over the WAVES from across the Bay.

The game was highlighted by the one-hit hurling of PFC Neva Lynch and the hard hitting of PFC Beatrice Allard and Cpl. Patricia Johnston who collected eight hits between them.

The WACs have won four straight league games and have scored an amazing total of 70 runs to their opponents 21 so far this season. They have a team batting average of .323.

No baseball game is scheduled for this week since the skirted soldiers from the Presidio will travel to Camp Cooke to take part in the forthcoming volleyball championship on 25-27 June.

Army Wins Two Spots on Olympic Boxing Team

Kansas City, Mo.—Army boxers outfought their brothers in arms to win two of the three berths landed by servicemen on the seven-man U.S. Olympic fight team after earght division champions of a three-day tournament here.

Cpl. Louis A. Gage, Hq. RIN-CUM, decisioned Gerald Black to capture the 147-lb. laurels and all-Army representative Cpl. Robert L. Bickle, Japan Logistical Command, FECOM, scored a technical knockout to upset Art Guglielmelli, Air Force featherweight champ from Lackland AFB, Tex., to win the 125-lb. title.

The third winning serviceman was Ed Sanders, SN, USN, San Diego, NTS, Calif. He was declared the winner at 1:20 of the second round over Jack Scherberies when the bout was stopped.

Gage, the 147-lb. winner, is a brother of Pfc. Earl Gage, photographer of The Fog Horn, Letterman Army Hospital weekly newspaper.

Bickle won the All-Army lightweight title in 1949 and fought his way through the semi-finals in the 1950-51 tourney but was ruled out of the finals because of a bad cut suffered in his semi-final bout and lost the title by default. In 1949, Bickle also won the International Golden Gloves featherweight crown. Prior to the Olympic finals, he had won 166 out of 170 bouts.

So You Think You Know Baseball!

By Harry Simmons

The umpire is one man who can do something about the weather. After a game begins, he can halt it because of rain, snow or fog. Sometimes it is a tough decision. Take this hypothetical case:

Say Cleveland has the Yankees, 6-1, in the last of the fifth at Yankee Stadium. A moderate rain began at the start of the inning. The umpire is anxious to get in five innings, the minimum for a legal game, before it rains harder.

Gil McDougald, the first Yankee at bat, runs up a three-two count before slashing a triple into left center. Gene Woodling and Yogi Berra go down on infield pops. As the rain increases, the Yankee bench, hoping to see the game called off, starts to chant, "Time! Time!"

The next Yankee up strolls to the plate and takes a count of three balls, one strike. The umpire calls the next pitch a strike, but the batter, who had made a break for first, goes back of the plate and argues the call.

When he refuses to return to the batter's box, the umpire signals the pitcher to go ahead anyhow. The pitcher winds up and lets go, but the wet horsehide slips from his hands and sails far over the catcher's head. McDougald scores from third and the batter runs to first. A deluge now makes further play impossible.

Was the batter out, completing five innings and making a legal game? Or was he safe, in which case the game was called on account of rain and does not count? How would you rule?

"It surpasses anything I've ever seen!"

"I'm convinced that today's soldier is not only the best equipped, he is also the best trained soldier in our history!"

These are typical of the comments made by the more than forty civic and business leaders from eight western states following a four day inspection tour of four of Sixth Army's major training installations.

Every member, who was either an aide to the Secretary of the Army, or a chairman or vice chairman of one of the 30 Army advisory committees in the Sixth Army Area, felt he had a new and better understanding of Army training policies and their objectives.

The four day tour started at Camp Roberts where both field and classroom training was observed and explained. National Guard training of the 49th Infantry Division was witnessed at the Hunter Liggett Military Reservation and even the experience of messing in the field was a part of the tight schedule.

At Camp Irwin the Army rolled out the latest thing in tanks, the M-17, and gave the inspection party a bristling demonstration of combined weapons in support of ground troops attack.

The impressive spectacle of a full division in review was given the visitors by the 44 Division at Camp Cooke.

"WE THE PEOPLE," number one poster in the new series, "These Are Great Ingredients of Freedom," is being pointed out to Col. John L. Chamberlain, Deputy Chief, TI&E Division, Department of the Army (left), by Lt. Col. John W. Leonhardt, Acting I&E Officer, Sixth Army. This series will climax National Citizenship Day, recently proclaimed as 17 September by President Truman. Col. Chamberlain was a recent visitor to the Presidio following a staff visit to the Far Eastern and RYCOM Commands.

Report on Korea!

First Hand Information Relates Battle Front Progress of TI&E

Following a staff visit to the Far Eastern Command, Col. John L. Chamberlain, Deputy Chief, TI&E Division, Department of the Army, paid a two day visit to the Sixth Army TI&E Section this week.

Queried on the I&E program's current effectiveness in the combat areas, Col. Chamberlain was emphatic in his praise of both the education and information offered frontline troops.

"I found that one of the finest information bulletin boards and centers in the entire Far Eastern Command was located only 3000 yards from the front line.

"Many men along the main line of resistance are avid subscribers to USAFI courses," continued the Colonel. "This in itself is indicative of the high morale among our frontline soldiers, since spare-time study indicates confidence in the future."

Col. Chamberlain also found information media exceptionally popular with troops at the front. The distribution of TI&E daily news bulletins by divisions, regiments and even battalions are very effective. The Stars and Stripes achieves an immediate and far-reaching distribution. Radio broadcasts are timely, entertaining and well received.

One important phase of his inspection was devoted to the five radio stations currently operating in Korea. He visited the Far Eastern networks in Sendai and Sapporo, and expressed a highly favorable impression of the overall accomplishments made by these organizations.

Also included in Col. Chamberlain's itinerary were visits to both the Tokyo and Pusan offices of the Stars and Stripes.

Following visits to Taegu and Seoul, the Colonel visited RYCOM components of I&E on Okinawa.

Summing up his inspection tour, Col. Chamberlain said, "One thing the American soldier is long on is ingenuity. This is evident in his utilization of the Troop Information and Education program under combat conditions. Given the proper leadership and encouragement, he continues to be the best informed and the best educated fighting man in the world."

Payments on Schedule

DCS Swears Thirty-two Into Army Airborne

Thirty-two men were sworn into the Airborne branch of the Army by Colonel D. P. Quondt, Deputy Chief of Staff, Headquarters Sixth Army in the Montgomery Theatre of the Civic Auditorium in San Jose, this week. This marked the conclusion of Operation Geronimo which was held to enlist as many young men as possible in the Airborne.

Immediately following the enlistment ceremonies the new enlistees left by government bus for Fort Ord where they will begin 17 weeks of basic training. They will then be assigned to Fort Benning, Ga., where they will take five weeks of jump training. Upon completion of their jump training they will be assigned to various airborne units in the ZI.

Prior to the ceremonies the enlistees, all of whom were from Santa Clara County, were guests of the citizens of San Jose at a dinner at the Italian Restaurant in San Jose.

In addition to Colonel Quondt other dignitaries attending the ceremony were: Lt. Col. Ray O. Busch, Commanding Officer, San Francisco Recruiting Main Station; Col. Burdette A. Palmer, USAF Ret., Chairman of the Army Advisory Committee in San Jose; Captain Sterling M. Jackson, Recruiting & Induction Officer for San Jose; Mayor Bradley and Mr. Hathaway, Mayor pro tem of San Jose.

SIXTH ARMY Star Presidian VOICE OF AN ARMY

Vol. 1, No. 5

Friday, 4 July, 1952

STILL THE LAST BEST HOPE!... "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness. That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriv-

Army Commander Urges Complete Support For "Soldier's Own" Funds

With the annual fund campaign of the Army Emergency Relief and the Army Relief Society being held this month on the Presidio and its sub-posts, military personnel will have an opportunity of supporting two organizations whose entire funds are used exclusively to aid members of the Army and their dependents.

Launched this week, the campaign will continue throughout the month concluding 31 July. Each unit and section will have a representative to whom the voluntary contributions may be made. All funds collected will be submitted the first of next month to Major Ella A. Wilton, Fund Custodian.

The fund campaign is necessary since no government funds are appropriated to care for the emergency needs of members of the Army and their dependents. It is held jointly in order to raise in a single campaign the necessary money required for both organizations.

Financial assistance provided by Army Emergency Relief is not charity in the usual sense because its funds are now being largely contributed by members of the Army. AER insures adequate and timely assistance on a personal and fraternal basis.

Each case coming before the AER is carefully and sympathetically considered and financial assistance is given on the basis of need but not on basis of convenience or desire. Loans are without interest and repayment normally is made by a Class E allotment in such small monthly payments as to not cause hardships.

Closely affiliated with AER is the Army Relief Society which assist needy widows and orphans of Regular Army personnel.

Total contributions of the annual drive on the Presidio last year was $1,305.83. So far this year the AER has made loans amounting to $2,965.00 to 29 mil-

C. G. BACKS DRIVE

1 July 1952

To All Members of the Army and their Families:

The joint Army Emergency Relief-Army Relief Society fund campaign will be held at the Presidio of San Francisco during the period 1-31 July 1952.

In the traditional Army spirit of comradeship and co-operation, Army Emergency Relief stands ready at all times to provide financial assistance to Army personnel and their dependents in cases of emergency. In recent years, the expansion of the Army and the more frequent separation of soldiers from their families due to the hostilities in Korea have greatly increased the requirements for Army Emergency Relief aid. Here at the Presidio, Army Emergency Relief has made loans during 1951 and the first half of 1952 totalling $6,835.00

Your wholehearted support of this fund campaign will be a great contribution to the common welfare of the Army, and will enable Army Emergency Relief to continue its fine work in the face of greatly increased demands. I urge your cooperation in making this campaign a success.

Senate Passes New K-Vet Bill Same Pattern

A billion-dollar a year GI Bill of Rights for Korean veterans of war was passed by the Senate last week. Veterans who have served in the Armed Services since 27 June 1950 are entitled to benefits of the program regardless of where they spent their military time.

The measure is similar to the GI Bill passed for veterans of World War II in that it calls for educational allowances, home and insurance loan guarantees, mustering out pay and other readjustment benefits.

The Senate bill is somewhat different from the bill passed by the House and a Senate-House Conference Committee will have to adjust the differences.

Veterans are entitled to one and one-half days in a school or training course for each day's military service, with a maximum of 36 months. The Senate version provides for payments of subsistence in the amounts of $80.00 a month for single veterans, $105.00 for veterans with one dependent and $130.00 per month for veterans with two or more dependents. In addition, it provides up to $40.00 a month for tuition.

The House bill lumps tuition and subsistence payments in monthly checks of $110.00 for single men and $150.00 for veterans with dependents.

A Blueprint For Freedom

Every age of great progress and decision is beset by the babble of small men, who more than anything else fear their own ability to cope with the great advances made by mankind. Call them semi-isolationists, obstructionists, or just plain short-sighted citizens, they are the detours along the broad highway that leads to a better world for all peoples. Only the clear voices of those leaders who are the inevitable products of times of great crisis and need, can obviate the detours and point the way to a better future for all. Such a voice was heard last week in Atlanta, Georgia. Speaking to the Atlanta Lawyers' Club, Under Secretary of the Army, Carl R. Bendtsen, offered a practical blueprint for containing Communism, winning the cold war, and returning to the fold of free nations those peoples lost to the inept bumbblings of pseudo-statesmen. The following are portions of that speech:

"A remorseless imperialism motivates the totalitarian state. The economy and geography of the Soviet homeland reveals the well-springs of this constant.

Historically the rulers of Russia have coveted the assets of Western Europe, the Middle East, the Far East and even beyond. It is the apparent design of the Kremlin to bring these assets under the oppressive and totalitarian yoke. But such design calls for acquisition intact.

There is no timetable for this, nor is she committed to any irrevocable plan, save that these coveted assets come into her hands undamaged.

The Kremlin will not be provoked by the defensive actions of the West. There is but one provocation to which she reacts, and that is the provocation of opportunity. If she were convinced that there were open to her the avenue of quick and easy military victory, undiminished by the smouldering remnants of a fighting war, down this avenue she would most likely go.

What we have done, and what we must continue to do is to erect a barrier across this avenue. It is almost certain that the Kremlin has been deterred by such actions up to now, not because she would be incapable of punching to the shores of the Mediterranean or the Suez, but because having once chosen such a course she would have to face the consequences. Among these is the definite possibility that these coveted assets would not come to her intact.

It is widely believed that a major part of our task in the cold war is to convince Asians and Arabs, Far Eastern, Middle Eastern, African, Balkan, European and Mediterranean peoples that they should Americanize; that the future they want is the future we want. As I view the matter, this premise is dangerous because it is false.

To each of these peoples some future goal other than the future that we envision for ourselves may be a goal. In waging this aspect of the cold war we must, in practice, not just in theory, full-heartedly agree that there are many gates to Heaven. It is not for us to assert that the gate we choose for ourselves must be taken. At the heart of Communism everything the Russians do, is for the Russians, no matter what the promises are. And we must not fail to show that we stand for an Asia for the Asians, not for the Russians; a Korea for the Koreans, an Indo-China for the Indo-Chinese, a Japan for the Japanese—not for the Russians.

This is the truth that will regain for us friends already lost to the cause for freedom. Contrariwise, the immature assumption that the rest of the world should emulate us will cost us dearly. If we accept the view that other peoples may have their own ideas, we shall be well on the road to mutual understanding.

A collateral matter is our apparent indifference to the moral, political and philosophical basis of America and freedom. This apparent indifference should be a matter of primary concern to all of us for a greater significance is the fact that it is used against us as denoting a concentration on sheer materialism with scarcely a thought for spiritual foundations.

The Communists always give something—land, food or clothing—when they take power. This is the outside of a bright red apple with a rotten core. We must have something to offer also. We must demonstrate that choosing to side with America in the fight for freedom will have immediate, tangible results, that it will mean that the starving Arab, for example, will be able to feed himself from his own land.

The preoccupation of some people with what is mistakenly thought of as a decisive global war is contrary to our democratic way of life. This preoccupation is often at the expense of a determined effort to win the cold war which is being fought against us."

Camp Cook Rehabilitates Building Training Aids For Sixth Army Area

An exhibit of special oversize training aids from Camp Cooke, California, was held at Sixth Army Headquarters this week. Purpose of the exhibit was to demonstrate both new efficiency in visual education and adaptation of the cost-consciousness program.

Many new items which are now available at training aids distribution centers throughout the Army area are being mass produced at the United States Disciplinary Barracks at Camp Cooke, California. Models of such items as the M-1 rifle, the Browning Automatic Rifle, and the 30 caliber machine gun are made to scale four to five times their normal size and are so exact in detail that they can be field stripped.

Among the visitors to the exhibit were Lt. General Joseph M. Swing, Sixth Army Commander, Colonel Wayland B. Auger and Colonel Ralph E. Hansen. Details of the new project were explained by Captain Arthur D. McCann who develops the final product before it is taken to the assembly line and by Lt. Commander Phillip E. Saunders USN, who is in charge of the training aids production at the Disciplinary Barracks.

The employment of the rehabilitates from the USDB has saved the government many thousands of dollars and has proven valuable in preparing the men for useful civilian occupations.

Captain McCann emphasized that suggestions for new training aids are welcomed and should be submitted in sketch form with detailed explanation to the nearest training aid distribution center. Ideas that are accepted will be made into an actual working model and then tested prior to forwarding to the USDB for production.

Examples of the actual cash savings to the government was demonstrated by cards placed in each exhibit showing the cost of each item when formerly purchased on the open market and the actual cost of production at the DB.

Rehabilitates were able to cut the cost of making a model 30 caliber machine gun from $700.00 to $143.00, a savings of $557.00 to you, the taxpayer. Other examples of economy production included a model Azimuth Indicator that would cost $31.00 on the open market now cost the government $6.49. A model M-1 Rifle that formerly cost $64.00 can be made now for $34.00, a savings of $30.00.

Sixth Army Area Tops All Others In Blood Donations

In the past eight months a total 79,748 pints of vitally needed blood has been contributed in the Sixth Army Area. Fort Lewis led the way with 11,025 pints. Other top contenders for honors are as follows:

Fort Lewis	11,025
Camp Roberts	10,947
Fort Ord	9,424
Camp Stoneman	9,201
Presidio of San Francisco	4,032
Camp Cooke	3,395
Fort Lawton	3,390
Fort Huachuca	2,797

The need for blood cannot be over-emphasized, so again we offer our urgent plea.

itary personnel and $575.00 to six dependents.

Largest number of loans made at the Presidio are to enlisted men going overseas who need money to meet immediate contingencies. Also a large number of loans are made to those whose allotment checks have been delayed and money is needed to tie them over until the check has been received.

Unforeseen emergency situations requiring prompt attention for which aid may be given vary widely. The Presidio AER recently assisted an enlisted man whose home had been ravaged by fire. He needed immediate funds for food, clothing, medical supplies and lodging.

An example of aid given to the dependents of soldiers was the case of a widow of a Presidio soldier who was killed in an automobile accident earlier this year. She was able to obtain sufficient money to care for herself and their invalid son until the estate was settled.

In case of hardship, the soldier or his dependents may be given an outright cash grant.

Bagdad Birthday!

Presidio Plays Important Role In SF's 176th Year Celebration

The City by the Bay, San Francisco, celebrated its 176th birthday on 28 June 1952.

A week-long celebration ended last Saturday with a luncheon at the Presidio Officers' Club. The luncheon was highlighted with a special cake baked for the occasion by two instructors of the 6002 ASU Sixth Army Food Service school.

The single layer cake was used as a base for a replica of the world famous Golden Gate Bridge. The bridge itself was made of cake icings and no supports were used. Bakers of the special cake which drew compliments from all quarters were Sergeant Fred Sullivan and Corporal David Bernstein.

Prior to the luncheon traditional services were held at the Mission Dolores. Bishop Merlin J. Guilfoyle officiated at Mass at the Mission.

Colonel Peter J. Lloyd, deputy post commander placed a wreath on the tomb of Captain Jose Joaquin Moraga, founder of the first Presidio of what is now San Francisco.

Principal speaker at the luncheon was Doctor Charles Camp of the University of California.

The entire celebration was sponsored by the California Citizens Society and the Citizens Committee.

505th MPs Take Over New Duties As Presidio Police

LT. COL. EUGENE CARSON
Commanding Officer

Military police duties on the Presidio and its sub-posts have been taken over by the 505th Military Police Battalion transferred here from Camp Roberts to replace the 701st MP Battalion now at Fort Knox, Ky.

First of the battalion to arrive on the Post was B Company, quartered at Fort Scott until the arrival last week of Battalion Headquarters, Headquarters Company and A Company. All now are permanently located on the main post.

The battalion's C Company is stationed at Camp Stoneman.

Lt. Col. Eugene J. Carson is commanding officer of the 505th MP Battalion. Prior to his departure from Camp Roberts he received the 7th Armored Division's Certificate of Achievement for his work while serving with the division. Before assignment to the division, he had served 35 months in Japan and Korea with the 25th Infantry Division.

Activated a year ago at Camp Roberts, the battalion was begun with a cadre of National Guard non-commissioned officers and filled with inductees following 14 weeks basic training at various posts. Eight weeks of military police training was given the men upon their arrival at Roberts and one platoon of each line company is now undergoing additional advanced training for the particular type of operation the battalion is called upon to perform on the post.

While stationed at Camp Roberts, the 505th sent detachments to Camp Desert Rock, Nevada, three times for duty at the camp and Las Vegas during atomic tests.

Warn NSLI Holders Not To Change Class 'N' Allotment

Washington—If you have permanent plan National Service Life Insurance and, under Public Law 23, chose to waive the "pure insurance risk" portion of the premium, then you should have:

1. Filled out a waiver form.
2. Made no change in your Class N allotment.

The Services have uncovered evidence that men with permanent plan NSLI insurance have waived a portion of their premium but, through misinterpretation, also discontinued their Class N allotment. This would cause the policy to lapse and result in the loss of the cash value of the policy and require a large cash outlay for reinstatement and a physical examination.

If the Class N allotment is discontinued, the permanent policy will lapse when the cash surrender value of the policy, is automatically applied to extended NSLI term insurance, is dissipated. Then the serviceman has lost his NSLI coverage and goes under the gratuitous indemnity insurance.

If the Class N allotment is continued, the VA will reimburse the policy holder with interest each year for the money paid on the waived portion. Plans are currently underway to outline all procedures whereby those affected will be able to reestablish their Class N allotments.

21st Engineers Check Deserted Angel Island

The once-busy embarkation point at Angel Island in the San Francisco Bay is now a deserted bit of terrain with few reminders of its busy past in the abandoned buildings of Fort McDowell, according to members of the 21st Engineers mapping party who recently "field checked" the island.

Checking the accuracy of Army maps covering the island were: Capt. Joseph L. McCormack, battalion S-3 section; Sgt. Carl D. Dent, topographic draftsman; Sgt. Waichulaitus, photographer; Pfc. Robert H. Corrin, motor pool truck driver. All of the men are members of the 30th Engineer Base Topographic Battalion, Fort Winfield Scott, California.

A self-propelled barge ferried the group from the Oakland Army Base to Angel Island. Once landed, the topo men immediately began the "field check" of the island. A "field check" includes determining whether or not the following data is correct: names of streams, lakes, roads, prominent landmarks, parks, squares, city boundaries and whether or not these points are properly placed on the maps.

The work on Angel Island is a part of a map revision project of the San Francisco Bay Area which the 21st Engineers are doing for Army Map Service. Sgt. Dent estimates that the operation is one-sixth completed with at least a year's work left for the 21st photomappers.

When completed the map revision will cover San Francisco, the East Bay cities as far north as Richmond and as far south as San Mateo, as well as Angel Island. The Engineers are consulting with county and city officials in gathering their data for Army Map Service.

New Rest Center Opened For Men Of the 9th AAA

Men of the 9th AAA Gun Battalion coming in from the field on pass after the long and sustained hours of duties which have resulted from the nation-wide alert of all anti-aircraft units will have a royal welcome awaiting them when they arrive.

At Fort Scott this week the battalion opened a rest center for these men similar to those found in the rear areas of combat. Located conveniently to the Post Exchange, movies, library and transportation to downtown San Francisco, the center will serve as an ideal base of operations.

One of the major features of the center is a policy of no duty for those on pass. Administration, police and messing facilities will be handled by the 9th Headquarters battery, whose personnel are doing all they can to help the men in the field.

Under a hotel type operation, residents of the center are awakened only at their own request. A complete schedule of places to go and things to see is maintained and free passes to many shows are to be had for the asking.

The center was opened with a capacity crowd and reservations for the future insure the success of the establishment.

FIREWORKS DISPLAY

Fourth of July will be celebrated on the Presidio in the good old fashioned way with a fireworks display at 2030 Friday night on Crissy Field.

The display will be complete with aerial and stationary firework including waterfalls, pictures of Lincoln and Washington, pin wheels, rockets, flares, bombs and star clusters.

Bleachers will be placed on the field and the public has been invited to attend.

The fireworks are being sponsored by the Post, and Special Services is handling the arrangements.

Letterman Will Offer Two New Postgrad Courses

Letterman Army Hospital will offer two postgraduate courses to Medical officers and civilian physicians and surgeons starting 25 August 1952.

The classes at Letterman are part of seventeen courses to become available at teaching hospitals, medical centers and other medical installations throughout the United States.

The program has been established to assure the maintenance of the highest level of health among Army personnel and to provide efficient care of the sick and wounded.

The first course to be offered at LAH is "Psychotherapeutic Medicine." Medical officers from the Fourth and Sixth Army Areas are encouraged to attend the classes starting 25 August through 6 September 1952.

Officers from the Fourth, Fifth, and Sixth Army Areas are also invited to attend the course on "Current Trends in Internal Medicine" from 20-24 October.

TREE TOPPING is a skilled job with no allowances for tottering. From his perilous perch, an engineer guides the crew below lowering the top by cables so as to prevent damage to nearby buildings. By topping trees progressively higher, the wind is directed upward, breaking its force against buildings and other trees in the area.

Timber Topper Tale!

315th Eng. Give Presidio's Woodlands A Treatment

"Timber!" With crews of men felling trees and clearing brush in the wooded areas of the Presidio and Fort Scott, the Post has had an appearance of logging country the past several months.

This activity is the first large-scale project ever undertaken on the Post to improve the condition of the forest stands and to prevent soil erosion, as well as to beautify the grounds.

The work is being done as a training mission by the 315 Engineer Port Construction Company from Fort Worden, Washington. Arriving by ship on 15 March, the 120 officers and men of the company began working the following day.

To date the men have removed nearly 3,000 trees, many of which were blown down during the violent wind storms of the past two winters. Others were taken out because of their potential danger or to thin out over populated areas.

Approximately 80 per cent of the trees being removed are eucalyptus, the remainder chiefly cypress and pine. From those already harvested the company has collected 450 cords of usable wood.

The eucalyptus trees have been salvaged for fender piling to be used by the San Francisco Port of Embarkation at the Fort Mason and Oakland piers. This is one of the most important phases of the training program, for as a port construction company the men are getting valuable experience of felling and harvesting trees for piling. An estimated 2,800 fender pilings are to be salvaged.

A vital part of the entire project is the erosion control work that is being carried on simultaneously. This work is being done on 12 acres of land to prevent the damage caused by heavy rains.

In the areas which have been badly eroded, the engineers survey the land and then correct the condition. In some gullies they anchor the soil with boughs and logs, while in other locations, such as under the Golden Gate bridge approach back of Stillwell Hall, drainage ditches are required.

After proper drainage has been assured, the land is covered with soil and wood chips, then vegetation—ice plant—which will break up the force of the rainfall thus helping prevent erosion, is planted.

The chips used to cover the soil are the result of coordinating the tree removal and erosion programs. A chipping machine converts brush and limbs from the fallen trees into chips for the erosion control.

The 315th has also performed several other jobs of an engineering nature on the Post. These include hauling 18,500 cubic yards of red rock from Fort Cronkhite to Crissy Field and parking areas. In doing this, the men have driven their trucks nearly 50,000 miles without as much as a minor mishap.

Assisting the Post Engineers in maintenance of equipment, the Fort Worden men have received valuable training experience in operation of cranes, bulldozers, shovels, various trucks and other machines. They are rotated on jobs so that they will have as varied experiences as possible.

Esprit de corps is high in the 315th, 50 per cent of the men being Korean veterans. Lt. Leslie M. Blair, Commanding Officer, and Lt. Palmer H. Putnam, Operations Officer, without reservations, label them the best engineering outfit in the Army.

FROM FORESTS PRIMEVAL TO PRIME FORESTS. For nearly four months, the 315 Port Construction Company from Fort Worden, Wash., has been laboring hard in the forest stands of the Presidio and Fort Scott to clear areas where violent winter storms had downed trees and to thin overgrown stands for better future growth. Top Photo—This scene is typical of many areas on the Post before the fallen timber had been removed or any thinning done. Second Photo—With the aid of a crane, the men snake a tree into the open to be trimmed for either the stock of usable wood or for fender piling at the piers of the San Francisco Port of Embarkation. Bottom Photo—One of two wood storage areas where 450 cords of wood have been collected since the start of the project.

Now Ice Cream Is in the Bag At Korean Front

With the 1st Marine Division in Korea—The Good Humor man hasn't forgotten these hard-fighting marines and even the hot weather won't stop his delivery of that staple American commodity . . . ice cream.

Through the use of insulated bags, used in the winter to carry hot rations, the Marine Corps has found the solution to the problem of keeping ice cream from melting. Each bag will keep five gallons hard for eight hours and troops can expect to receive the ice cream three times a week.

It comes in two flavors, chocolate and vanilla. However, the ability of ingenious field mess sergeants to produce variations with canned fruits and jellies is not to be underestimated.

Make mine pistachio, Sarge!

Infantry Platoon Tapes Its Talents, Wins Music Contest

Camp Rucker, Ala. (AFPS)—Without leaving the company area, the Singing Platoon of the 136th Infantry Rgt. stationed here won the Third Army Music Contest at Ft. McPherson, Ga., recently.

The tuneful soldiers sent their voices on tape while remaining on duty at Rucker. With no travel funds available, the entire contest was conducted off the spool instead of on the stage.

To be heard and not seen is the fate of the chanting champs of the 47th Division who will "go by tape" to the Department of Army championships to be held this month.

The Singing Platoon consists of 28 men from Regimental Headquarters Company who also double as the marching band.

Winners of the Army-wide contest will be recorded on vinylite discs which will be distributed throughout the Army.

WWII Favorite!

Yank Magazine 10 Years Old, Still Published Once a Year

(By Armed Forces Press Service)

Yank Magazine, the famous Army Weekly which was read and loved by upwards of 10,000,000 service men during WWII, celebrated its 10th anniversary this month and still is being published.

It's true it has undergone some radical surgery since V-J day. It has no circulation to speak of and it no longer goes to press weekly amid combat scenes when editors frequently were forced to take cover in foxholes. But it still is on its feet.

Every year since Dec. 31, 1945 when it officially ceased an illustrious war career, Yank has experienced one publication—a copyright edition. These issues never exceed more than a score per edition—a far cry from the some 2,600,000 published weekly during the peak of the war when Yank printed and distributed 23 editions. To preclude the possibility of their becoming collectors' items, these few copyright editions are guarded carefully, and only a few in official capacity have seen them.

Yank, like the Services it served so faithfully, has not escaped unification. Gone from the page one masthead of the copyright edition is the famous trademark of the wartime edition, "The Army Weekly." In its place has been substituted the badge of Service unification, "The Armed Forces Weekly."

The first issue of Yank was printed June 17, 1942 and it numbered 250,000 copies. Later it became established in 23 separate editions and at the war's end had realized a handsome profit of more than $2,000,000, which was turned over to the U.S. Treasury Department.

Four Yank men were killed during WWII and a number were wounded in action. Many won decorations and awards.

Journalistically speaking, Yank had numerous firsts to its credit, including the celebrated cartoon "Sad Sack," created by Sgt. George Baker, plus Miss Lace and others.

To preserve for posterity this unique journal of the war, the New York Public Library spent five years compiling a virtually complete Yank file. A checklist of the collection, available on microfilm, was prepared by C. E. Dornbusch, the Library's special assistant in government documents, who assembled the list after a coast-to-coast search.

Editorial preparation of the Yank copyright edition is accomplished by Armed Forces Press Service in New York City. The tremendous popularity of Yank is reflected in the fact that AFPS still receives queries from points all over the U.S., and some foreign countries. Some seek back copies or special stories while others want to start subscriptions.

Whether Yank will emerge from the mothballs and get into regular production again depends upon world developments. When Korean hostilities started in 1950, consideration was given to its reactivation. Action was deferred.

On its 10th anniversary and with its future status in doubt, one thing is certain. Should Yank ever again become a journal of war, it will not be exclusive Army property. It will be an Armed Forces publication with a unified staff in command.

A war monument is pictured on a stamp issued by Algeria "to the glory of the army of Africa."

French Exhibit Gives A Bold Answer to Red Propaganda

New York—An exhibition of more than 50 posters illustrating the successful poster and pamphlet battle against Communism waged by the French people has been shown in New York.

The exhibit, sponsored by the American Committee de Paix et Liberte, a subcommittee of the Philadelphia Council Against Communist Aggression, was provided by the French Committee de Paix et Liberte, and called "The French Strike Back."

Among the many effective posters shown was the one entitled "La Colombe Qui Fait BOUM." (The Peace Dove That Goes "BOOM") representing a Soviet tank in the form of a dove. This is one of the most widely spread posters produced by the French committee, and is used as stickers in many European countries.

The Paix et Liberte movement has spread from France to Belgium and Western Germany. Many of the posters counter Communist propaganda by comparative statements that turn Communist statements against themselves, and show up their lies.

Quotable Quip

A little girl in an East Berlin school told the class that her cat had ten kittens, adding, "and they are all good Communists." The teacher was delighted. Several days later, when an inspector came around, she asked the little girl to repeat the story, but the little girl this time added, "and they are all good Western Democrats." Surprised, the teacher exclaimed, "But you first told me that they were good Communists!" In all innocence, the child replied, "That's right. But this week they opened their eyes."

THE BOOK CORNER

"How to Travel Incognito" is Ludwig Bemelmans new book which is delighting his fans . . . "a helpful guide to the assumption of non-existent royal titles . . . gourmandizing in Paris at no expense, and a Baedeker of baroque mansions at which lodging may be free."

"The Kings of the Road," by Ken W. Purdy, is an informal history of the world's greatest motorcars which shows first hand acquaintance with the men who built and drove them.

"Slant of the Wild Wind," by Garland Roark, doesn't disappoint readers of lightning-paced sea and adventure stories. In this case, the hero is the pawn in a gigantic financial scandal "down under" who evades the charges via the sea-route.

"The Highland Hawk" brings together another assortment of colorful characters with the setting in Scotland in the time of Oliver Cromwell by Leslie T. White, author of "Lord Johnnie."

The above titles and many other new books may be obtained at the Main Post Library and the Fort Scott and Fort Baker branches. The libraries are available for use to all military and civilian personnel of the Sixth Army Headquarters as well as the Presidio and its sub-posts.

Teen-Age Activities

Friday, 4 July—Pool Tournament, 2030.
Saturday, 5 July—Bingo, 2100—$8.00.
Sunday, 6 July—Pool, Ping Pong and Record Jive—1400-1700.

TOMMY KONO

Kono Makes It!

Fort Mason Soldier Proves Sensational At Olympic Meet

When the Olympic Games open in Helsinki, Finland, this month, one Sixth Army man will be competing for top honors. He is PFC Tommy Kono of Fort Mason.

Kono set a national record in New York this week to earn his spot on the seven man weight lifting team. He hoisted 253½ pounds in the snatch division bettering the record established in 1950. The snatch in which the Mason muscle man excelled is the event in which the bar bell is raised from the floor to an overhead position in one continuous motion.

Kono came close to the world's record in the clean and jerk, but failed twice when trying to raise 330¾ pounds from the floor. He finished with a total of 799 pounds. The record still stands at 810 pounds in the lightweight division.

The Sixth Army's multiple title holder has been a sensation since entering into the weight lifting business a scant four years ago. At the initial tryouts for the Olympic team at Oakland, Kono shattered the National AAU Junior Record in the three lift lightweight class. His two arm press of 240 pounds was 10 pounds better than the previous records, and his two arm stretch of 250 pounds clipped 10 pounds off that record. His two arm clean and jerk was 35 pounds better than the old record.

Tommy Kono holds California AAU records in both the lightweight and middleweight classes and this year won his second straight state championship. He is from Sacramento.

Pointed Pearls

Resolutions are things that go in one year and out the other. People who sing their own praises seldom get an encore. Danger doesn't make people religious. It simply makes them realize how religious they are. The reason some people can't afford a vacation is that they're making too much money.

What's In A Name? Well In This Case There Is A Lot!

Even the sign is wrong.

When you step to the foot of Infantry Terrace you see a sports field with a sign "Presidio Athletic Field." Actually the correct name for this outside sports arena is "Evans Field."

Newcomers to the Sixth Army Headquarters may ask, Who is Evans? The story dates back more than twenty years to a day when Major General Hines honored the late Corporal William J. Evans of the 30th Infantry by naming the athletic field after the most outstanding athlete ever to pass through the gates of the Presidio.

Corporal Evans who died at Camp Del Monte, July 1928 received this living monument to his memory because of his outstanding military and athletic record. He combined the fine traits of loyalty, leadership and sportsmanship which are characteristic of a young American soldier-athlete. Corporal Evans excelled in baseball, basketball and football and was captain of the 1927 eleven.

It is both fitting and proper that we honor this great figure from the years past during this sports minded year of 1952.

99th Engineers Dump Hq. Company In Softball Play

The 99th Engineer Base Reproduction Company outscored Headquarters Company 23-18 last week to move within two games of the undefeated 21st Engineers in the Fort Scott softball league.

Six home runs by the Headquarters team—Robison 2, Shehan, Brooks, Davis and Valandingham—were not enough to make up for the large number of errors that decided the game's outcome.

For the 99th, Christiansen hit five for five including a home run; Roat got three hits and two walks in five trips to the plate and scored five times. Politis, the starting pitcher, also picked up a round-trip blow that accounted for three runs in the sixth frame.

In this week's games (too late for this issue of the "Star Presidian") the 21st played the 99th Engineers, and Headquarters and the 96th-64th met to determine which would climb from the cellar position with their second win of the season.

Standings as of Monday:

	Won	Lost
21st Engineers	6	0
99th Engineers	4	2

(By Armed Forces Press Service)

West Point, N. Y.—Pfc. Thad McArthur of Seattle, Wash., recently upset pre-tournament predictions by capturing the military pentathlon championship. Despite a fourth-place in cross-country riding, he collected a low score of 19 points to earn a military pentathlon berth with the U. S. Olympics team. Also named to depart July 1 for Finland with the team were Lt. Fred L. Denham, Everett, Wash., Capt. Guy K. Troy of St. Petersburg, Fla., and Lt. Harlan W. Johnson of Urbana, Ill. All are Army personnel.

Long Beach, Calif.—Two Air Force men won double championships to pace Service competitors in the two-day Armed Forces track and field meet here.

T/Sgt. Mal Whitfield scored easy wins in the 400- and 800-meter runs. He was a member of the 1948 U. S. Olympic team. Jim Gathers won the 100- and 200-meter sprints to nail down a tryout for the Olympics squad.

Second Army's Walter Ashbaugh registered the season's best mark in the hop, step and jump. He covered 50 feet, 3¾ inches, only 7¾ inches under the American record, set in 1941.

Pfc. Billy Anderson, Second Army sprinter, who upset the nation's finest hurdlers at Compton, Calif., earlier this month, made it two straight over Dick Attlesley, Navy Olympics Team, in the 120-yard hurdles. Attlesley, who won the hurdles in the 1948 Olympics at London, holds the world record of 0.13.5 in the event.

Army Lt. Warren Dreutzler, Camp Lee, Va., considered one of the brightest American Olympic prospects, moved to the front at the halfway mark and romped home first in the 1,500-meters run. His time was 3:53.2.

Raiders Drop Three! Sailors Sink Them Once; Lose Double-Header To SLO

Three defeats in a row at the hands of the sailors from Treasure Island and the soldiers from San Luis Obispo, and the Red Raiders from the Presidio slid further on down the ladder of standings in the hardball league.

The men of the sea had the advantage all the way last week—when they pounded out a 10-4 win over the Raiders on the fog drenched field by the Bay. Coach-first baseman Viviani and second baseman Lemon collected four of the five hits totaled by the Presidomen. Treasure Island's winning pitcher, Anderson, was in command all the way as his mates poured seven runs across the plate in the first three innings.

Last week-end the men from the Sixth Army Headquarters traveled hopefully to San Luis Obispo only to return to San Francisco victims of a double defeat. The Saturday game found the home crew beaten by a three run margin 8-5 and the Sunday tilt proved equally disastrous when the Red Raiders were shutout with one-hit, 3-0. Thirteen Raiders stepped to the plate in the Sunday game only to return to the bench victims of strikeouts. Corporal Dan Stupur struck out ten Obispomen to bring his season's strikeout total to 202.

Thursday, the Red Raiders make a short trip to Moffett Field for a game with the air-minded sailors.

Umpire Douglas S. (Scotty) Robb was the cause célèbre of modern baseball's biggest explosion two months ago. When the dust had cleared, he'd been (1) fined heavily and disciplined publicly by National League President Warren Giles for pushing Cardinal manager Ed Stanky and (2) offered a job in the American League after handing a terse resignation to Giles. The big fuss kicked up by the usually quiet Robb gives us a first look at baseball's newest triumvirate in action. . . . Messrs. Ford Frick, Warren Giles and Will Harridge aimed at the late Judge Landis' type of rule after Happy Chandler left office. What could baseball expect of them?

Ex-newspaperman and former National League president Frick was a popular choice for commissioner. The game needed a baseball man to answer Congress' queries about the reserve clause. Giles, as a former player and Cincinnati general manager, knew what gripes the players had. And Harridge, head of the American League since 1931, was a contented, respected official.

None could foretell the three-some's 1952 problems and reactions. In his rookie year, Giles has made things hum. Last spring he listed strict commandments for managers in spring training. One was to improve exhibition games, stop making a burlesque of the game. Next he publicly spanked Robb. A week later he reprimanded Jackie Robinson and the Dodgers for bench-jockeying. When Robinson protested, Giles said he had been misinterpreted. . . . Harridge, an older hand at the game, hired Robb to ease the stigma of Giles' error. He gave the pitchers their first boost in years by permitting a ball to remain in a game unless cut or scuffed. Giles followed suit. . . . Finally, all three withstood Congress' attack on the game and the reserve clause, without which, they showed, baseball could not operate. . . . Hot pennant races in both leagues, pitching and batting superlatives and the all-star selections keep up spectator interest. But the major leaguers themselves are stirred to wonder—what do their three chiefs have in store for them next?

Four Army Thinclads Earn Olympic Berths

WARREN DRUETZLER

Sixth Army Fails To Place One Member On Track Squad

Four members of the United States Army have earned positions on the U. S. Field and Track Team to compete in the Olympic Games to be held at Helsinki, Finland starting this month. The games are scheduled to start on 19 July 1952.

One of the four Army thinclads to garner top honors was Lieutenant Warren Druetzler, an outstanding athlete from the Second Army. He came in second in the 1,500 meter run doing the job in 3:50.8. The speedy lieutenant who captured the 3,000 meter steeple chase at the All-Army meet at Berkeley was a favorite to place on the Olympic Team in that event but was scratched from the race before the starter's gun was fired.

The Fourth Army's Jerome Biffle assured himself of an Olympic berth by placing second in the broad jump. His 25 foot 7 1/4 inch leap was bettered only by Gour-dine of Cornell.

A former Cornell University track star, Lieutenant Walter Ashbaugh hopped, stepped and jumped his way onto the Olympic team with a highly creditable 49 feet 7 inches. His record-breaking 50 foot 3 3/4 inch leap at the All-Army meet was beaten by only two inches.

Corporal Roland Blackmon of EUCOM placed third in another record-breaking event, the 440 meter hurdles to earn his opportunity to enter the Track and Field events at Helsinki.

Army Band Stars At Olympic Trials

The 44th Infantry Division Band from Camp Cooke, California, was well received last weekend as they participated in Olympic Track and Field Final Ceremonies at Los Angeles Coliseum.

The 44th Infantry Division Band, composed of about 56 enlisted men and two warrant officers, is considered among the best in the Army, and helped cheer us on to the tune of four winners in this final meet.

Local Linksmen To Pursue Par In Local Meet

The Presidio Golf Tournament will open with a practice round 7 July and run to a climax the morning of 11 July.

Low six men of the 72 hole medal play will qualify for the post team which will be entered in the Southern Division Sixth Army Tournament to be held here at the Presidio 12-15 August inclusive.

The team with the low winning score plus six golfers with the lowest individual tally, will sojourn to Fort Lewis, Washington for the play-off of the Sixth Army Championship.

Among the entries for the coming post tourney are some winners of past years and some who threaten to become the new champs.

Defending champion Cpl. Bill Rowe, shooting a three handicap, will be on hand to try and retain his crown.

Another strong contender for the title will be Fred Hanner a plus 1 handicapper who placed second in the Reno pro-amateur golf tournament.

WACs Win Southern Division Volleyball Championship

The Presidio WACs won the Southern Division Volleyball tournament last week at Camp Cooke, California with smooth teamwork that netted them six straight wins without suffering a loss.

The first series of two games with the Camp Cooke WACs were wins for the local girls by the wide margins of 15-5 and 15-4. Next victims on the agenda were the WACs from Ford Ord, California. The ORDWACs fared only slightly better than their sisters from Camp Cooke, taking their two beatings 15-5 and 15-12.

The final playoffs found the local lassies once again on the field with the ORDWACs who took another double defeat 15-6 and 15-11.

The Presidio WAC team managed by Sgt. Vivian Brill will travel to Fort Lewis, Washington to compete for the Sixth Army Volleyball Championship on 9-10-11-12 July 1952.

Other team representatives are Sgt. Virginia Grooms, Sgt. Mary Shaftic, Cpl. Joan Mansfield, Cpl. Grace Tate, Cpl. Marion Woods, Pfc. Neva Lynch, Pfc. Sally Shields, Pfc. Florence Hardesty, Pfc. Joy Gleason and Pfc. Ira Sherrard.

I&E's USAFI Mobile Unit faces "just another landslide" in the mountains of Okinawa, where the native Okinawans' idea of roads was zigzag, up-and-down, hair-pin turns on mountain slopes, with landslides the rule rather than the exception.

Neither Rain nor Sleet!

Mobile Units Live Up To Their Slogan, 'USAFI Comes To You!'

Sixth Army's USAFI Mobile Unit is now on a 55-day tour, with stopovers being made at Camp San Luis Obispo, Fort Ord, Salinas, Camp Roberts, Camp Cooke, then back to Fort Ord.

The itinerary was arranged so that the unit could visit Salinas, California, during its famed rodeo festivities, to demonstrate to the public the Army's service to members of the Armed Forces who wish to further their education.

Upon return to Headquarters Sixth Army, at the Presidio of San Francisco, the latter part of July, the unit will be serviced and restocked with USAFI materials preparatory to visiting installations in the northern part of the Sixth Army area.

In charge of the roving unit is SFC Thomas H. McComas, a veteran of Korea, who, in addition to experiencing rugged duty in carrying the message of Information to the troops in the front lines, carried out a rough itinerary of assignments with the unit on Okinawa.

With arrival of the unit at an installation, additional TI&E personnel join SFC McComas to aid in advice to applicants and registration for the many courses the USAFI has to offer to the serviceman seeking additional training and furtherance of his education.

"Transportation on Okinawa was tougher than in Korea," said SFC McComas, "for the unit visited isolated groups in some of the remotest spots on the island. Landslides were frequent on what the Okinawans term roads, especially in the mountains. Drops of 75 to 200 feet on short stretches of road often faced the vehicle after rounding a mountain turn. Vibration of the motor would often cause slides, then we'd have to spend hours digging out before we could proceed.

"Despite the comparatively unstabilized situation in the Far East, registration for USAFI courses is zooming, particularly in Korea and Japan," the Sergeant reported on his return from FECOM; and he looks forward to a similar increased interest in USAFI facilities during the current tour of the unit.

Vote Prediction!

It has been estimated by the Department of Defense that 80 per cent of Service personnel are old enough to vote in the forthcoming presidential election. However, officials believe that the 1952 Service vote will run slightly less than one million.

New Office Will Aid Army Families Community Activity

One of the more interesting new appointments at Sixth Army Headquarters is the assignment of Mr. Buford Bush as Army-Community Services Advisor.

The new office has been established to promote, develop and improve Army-Civilian relationship insofar as they involve off-duty recreation, morale and welfare services.

Mr. Bush will advise and assist the headquarters staff section who are responsible for community contacts and will be the Sixth Army representative in making the necessary contacts in line with his work throughout the entire Sixth Army Area.

A recent tour of five installations in the Sixth Army Area proved to be productive according to the new advisor. Contacts with both military and civilians interested in promoting good Army-Civilian relationship proved that there is a need for this type of program and that both sides are anxious to cooperate.

"We will attempt to anticipate any problems that may arise in connection with our work," stated Mr. Bush, "and provide solutions to the best of our ability in keeping with the best interests of the military installation and the nearby communities."

Mr. Buford Bush is not a newcomer to the field of recreation. Since 1941 he has held several important assignments including that as Recreational Specialist for the State of California Recreation Commission. He is a graduate of the College of the Pacific where he majored in Sociology.

By dealing directly with Commanding Officers, Chaplains, USO Groups and advisors, Red Cross directors and Citizens Committees, Mr. Bush has been able to lay the ground work for this new project in sections of California and Washington.

Integration of service personnel and their dependents into community life is something that takes time, planning and cooperation. A partnership must be formed to bring about a two way flow of ideas and services between the military and the civilian community in the direction of integration to whatever degree is practicable.

Sixth Army Band Forms Plans For Stern Grove Concert

Members of the Sixth Army Band are busy preparing for the annual Stern Grove Concert, the organization's contribution to San Francisco's Midsummer Music Festival. Sunday, 6 July is the day of the concert and the two hour program will begin at 1400 hours with CWO Nathan A. Cammack, Jr. conducting.

Paul Fauchet's Symphony in B Flat will introduce the program following with vocal selections by Cpl. David Dangberg of Sixth Army Special Services, and instrument offerings on the Marimba by Pvt. Richard Barnett.

An invitation has been extended to the Chief of Army Bands Branch in Washington, Lt. Col. S. E. Mear to return again this year as Guest Conductor for the 1952 concert.

Stern Grove is located at 19th Avenue and Sloat. Everyone is invited and there is no admission fee.

Sixth Army Chief Of Recruiting Will Retire This Month

COL. M. L. McCREARY

After a career of 38 years with the United States Army, Colonel M. L. McCreary, Commanding Officer of the Sixth Army Recruiting Service, will retire on 31 July 1952.

Entering the Army on 31 July 1914 as a private, the Colonel worked his way up through the ranks to his present grade. He was commissioned a second lieutenant during August 1917 and served with the 7th Division in France during the first World War.

After WWI he became an Assistant Professor of Military Science and Tactics at Ohio State University and later attended the Battery Officers and Field Officers courses at Fort Sill, Oklahoma and the Command and General Staff School at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas.

In April of 1942, he sailed with the famous 32nd Red Arrow Division to Australia and as a result of action against the enemy at Buna and Sanananda he was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross and his first Purple Heart. Although seriously wounded he refused to leave his post as a forward observer until his mission was completed. Colonel McCreary was one of four men who remained with the 32nd Division through more than 20 months of combat from New Guinea to Luzon. He commanded the DivArty during the last 9½ months of combat and occupation of Japan.

During his earlier days in the Army, Colonel McCreary pioneered air reconnaissance and trained as an Air Force observer in heavier than air craft.

Decorations Will Be Supplied Locally

This Headquarters will maintain a supply of decorations and appurtenances, as directed by the Department of the Army, to expedite the presentation to returnees from Korea.

Installations and activities within Sixth Army Area will obtain the decorations necessary to accomplish presentation from the Commanding General, Sixth Army.

Plan G-3 Picnic

Dancing, baseball, basketball and swimming will highlight the day's activities at the picnic presently being planned by the members of the G-3 Section, Headquarters, Sixth Army.

M/Sgt. Jason C. Brooks is making the arrangements for this outing, which is to be held at the Marin Town and Country Club in Fairfax on 13 July.

New 'Sweat' Tests May Reveal Troops' Atomic Bomb Fears

How much apprehension does the average person feel when he knows that he is about to meet the atom bomb face to face?

This question may soon be answered when the results of recent "sweat" tests conducted by the Air Force's School of Aviation Medicine, Randolph AFB, Tex., are known.

Technicians there have designed bags containing cobalt chloride crystals, which waiting troops grip in their hands prior to an A-bomb explosion. By the change in color (due to the sweat absorbed), psychologists hope to learn how much anxiety the troops feel while waiting for the explosion.

The experimental research kits were used by troops who took part in the recent atomic tests in Nevada.

General Storke Appointed Acting CG For III Corps

Pending the arrival of Major General Ira P. Swift from Korea, Brigadier General Harry P. Storke has been appointed Acting Commanding General, III Corps.

General Swift, present commander of the 25th Infantry Division, replacing Major General William B. Kean, is en-route to his new assignment at Fort MacArthur, California.

General Kean has been appointed as the new Commanding General of the Fifth Army Area.

General Storke just recently returned from Camp Desert Rock, Nevada where he was Commanding General and Exercise Director for the Army participation during the recent Atomic Tests in Nevada.

Training Expert!

Colonel Gilmer Will Head Sixth Army's RA Training Program

Tall gangling Dan Gilmer, the colonel who led the 7th Cavalry Regiment through some of the roughest fighting in Korea, has been assigned to the G-3 Section as chief of Regular Army training. This is in keeping with the Army Commander's desire that a combat tested veteran head this phase of the Sixth Army training.

Army Honors For HMS Sheffield Due Next Week

A 21-gun salute from the Presidio will honor Her Majesty's Ship Sheffield as she arrives in San Francisco Bay at 0800 on 21 July to visit San Francisco on a visit to further increase and strengthen the ties of goodwill and comradeship between the United States Armed Forces and the Royal Navy.

H.M.S. Sheffield took part in a number of important engagements during World War II in northern waters, the Atlantic and the Mediterranean and played an important role in the sinking of the Bismark and the Scharnhorst. The ship paid a previous visit to San Francisco in September 1948.

The Royal Navy's envoy to San Francisco wears the Flag of Admiral Sir William Andrewes, Commander-in-Chief, American and West Indies Station, who will be here at the time of the visit. Prior to his present appointment Admiral Andrewes served in Korean waters as Flag Officer Commanding Fifth Cruiser Squadron and Flag Officer, Second in Command, Far Eastern Station.

The vessel is commanded by Commodore J. G. T. Inglis and carries a complement of 57 officers and 730 men.

President Requests Prompt Action On Service Vote

Washington—President Truman has once again called upon Congress for prompt legislation to allow servicemen to vote in cases where the states fail to do so.

In two letters, one to Vice President Barkley and the other to House Speaker Rayburn, the President pointed out that nearly 1,000,000 servicemen and women will not have the opportunity to vote in the coming national elections. He reasoned that there is no longer sufficient time left for certain state legislatures to act to give servicemen and women from their states the opportunity to vote by absentee ballot.

Another important change that the Senate bill would make would be to authorize Congress to declare the emergency that would recall reservists.

One of the Army's most decorated officers, Colonel Gilmer has also been one of its busiest serving in many top staff assignments since completing the Academy in '32.

During WWII he served as executive officer Army War College; executive officer training division Army Ground Forces, Army War College; deputy chief of staff headquarters II Army Corps ETO; secretary general staff AFHQ ETO Mediterranean; secretary general staff SHAF ETO; chief ETO and Pacific Section Theater Group; War Department General Staff; Operations Division War Department General Staff and chief Pacific Section Theater Group Operation.

Following WWII he served as chief of staff for Army Delegates to the United Nations, was a student at the National War College and an instructor at the Army War College. He assumed command of the 7th Cavalry Regiment in April of '51. In January of '52 he was assigned as chief of staff to the Korean Military Assistant Group (KMAG) but was returned to the States for hospitalization before the month was out and has been in a patient status since.

Colonel Gilmer's American decorations include the Distinguished Service Medal, Silver Star, Legion of Merit and Bronze Star. His foreign decorations include the Greek Cross of Taxiarhon of the Phoenix Battalion, French Croix de Guerre with Palm, Belgium Croix de Guerre, Belgium Legion of Honor, French Legion of Honor, Commander Nishaan Iftikar and Commander Ouissan Alaouite.

A confirmed family man, the Gilmers, wife Nana and sons David 14 and Michael 6, reside in San Rafael.

Selective Service Will Tighten Draft Call For Replacement Needs

Selective Service has been requested to furnish 30,000 men in September to replace National Guardsmen, Organized Reserve Corps members and draftees, whose terms of enlistment are expiring.

At the present time, there are about 1,600,000 men in the Army, 810,000 in the Navy, 238,000 in the Marine Corps and 970,000 in the Air Force. During the new fiscal year, which began 1 July, the total armed services strength is expected to average 3,700,000.

This 30,000 men will bring the number of men inducted or put on call since draft calls were resumed in September 1950, to 1,013,430. It is expected that during the months of October, November and December approximately 54,000 men would be called each month.

Increased numbers of men are being sent overseas. Shipment of these men overseas will be done through a series of levies upon different commands throughout the country. Each command will be requested to provide a percentage of its total strength.

VOICE OF AN ARMY

Vol. 1, No. 6

PRESIDIO OF SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA

Friday, 11 July, 1952

THOUSANDS THRILLED to the brilliance of Presidio's fireworks on Crissy Field the evening of July Fourth. The brightness of rockets, flares and star clusters was reflected by the high fog of a typical San Francisco summer night. Post roads were jammed as San Franciscans drove out to see the display and all streets overlooking the post were lined with parked cars. The bleacher put up at the edge of the field were filled long before the fireworks were scheduled to start.

Require Heavy Levy On US Units To Meet Overseas Replacements

Secretary of the Army, Frank Pace, Jr., announced this week that trained replacements for enlisted personnel, returning to this country from overseas command, must be furnished in substantially increasing numbers by all active Army units and activities in this country during the next few months.

The need for men in overseas command is immediate; therefore action has been taken to reduce the minimum length of service in the United States for returnees from FECOM from 12 months to 9 months between overseas assignments. Returnees from all other overseas commands have minimum tours in this country of six months. Certain stabilized tours at home have also been reduced, in order to provide additional personnel for overseas service. Action was also taken to extend the overseas tours in Europe, Austria, Hawaii, and the Caribbean Area by six months. The increase in length of overseas tours does not affect personnel whose terms of service are fixed by law at 24 to 17 months.

This action is made necessary by the expiration of the terms of service of large numbers of selectees, reserves and national guard personnel ordered to active military service in the latter part of 1950 and the early months of 1951.

Regular Army, as well as national guard and organized reserve in the United States have always been required to furnish qualified replacements for overseas needs in proportion to respective strength. The contemplated increased levies will be in accordance with this policy.

Strength limitations restrict the Army from absorbing a greater number of inductees, at this time, which limits replacement personnel to those immediately available. Inductees require several months of training before qualifying for overseas assignment, even after entering the Army.

Dedicated to Preparedness

Departing from its regular format, the "Star Presidian" this week dedicates page 4 and 5 to National Guard and ORC Training throughout the Sixth Army Area.

Summer training for NG and Reserve units will reach its peak during the month of July.

A special message by Lt. Gen. Joseph M. Swing, Sixth Army commander, is included with the feature.

New Process!

Microfilm Military Pay Records In New Efficiency Program

All military pay records of the Presidio Finance Office were being microfilmed for the first time this week. The records covering the period from 1 January to 30 June were filmed prior to submission to the Military Pay Division of the Army Finance Center, Indianapolis, Ind.

Microfilm records will enable finance and personnel officers to make adjustments with the minimum of delay, states Lt. Col. B. H. Johnston, Finance Officer. He estimates that use of the microfilm will eliminate 90 per cent of the correspondence regarding inquiries and discrepancies with the Military Pay Division.

When the microfilm rolls are developed, facsimile prints of each record are also made. These prints will be forwarded by the finance officer to the personnel officers of the organizations concerned for filing in the field military 201 files of the respective members.

The facsimile prints of prior records in 201 files will be used by personnel officers to settle claims and make pay adjustments. When an inquiry is received by a personnel officer concerning a member's prior pay account, the personnel officer will examine the print for information on which to base his reply.

If he is unable to make a reply, the personnel officer will give the print to the service member, with instructions to return it to file after he has contacted the finance officer. The finance officer will issue necessary instructions for the preparation of a military pay order or claim for pay adjustment to the personnel officer.

When a member is transferred, the facsimile print will be forwarded with other documents in his 201 file. The microfilm of the record will be retained by the finance officer for use in answering whatever inquiries may arise following the member's transfer.

Under the former system, an average of 60 days was required to receive photostatic copies of pay records.

Army Lengthens Overseas Tours In Four Theaters

Washington—Effective Oct. 1, the Army will extend overseas tours six months in four areas: Europe, Austria, Hawaii and the Caribbean.

The order for the extensions was sent to the field in the form of a DA message dated June 6. The extensions do not affect inductees or men due to be separated or discharged.

The six-month extensions will make tours in EUCOM, USFA (Austria), and USARPAC (Hawaii and certain other Pacific islands) total 42 months. The Caribbean tour will be extended from 30 months to 36 months.

Men whose overseas tours expire before Oct. 1 will return to the States at the end of their normal tour. Some exceptions may be allowed at the discretion of the major commander.

The reason for the extension, the Army explains, is that trained replacements will not be available during the period in-valued in the extensions. Because of the present strength ceilings the Army cannot absorb new men until vacancies exist. These vacancies will begin to exist in sufficient quantities when many inductees are released this fall. Then men can be taken in and trained in numbers large enough to provide replacements for all overseas theatres.

The Far East tour of duty, including Korea, will not be affected by the new order.

Parents Warned On Children Street Play

Injury of a three-year-old boy struck by an automobile while playing near the street by his home has resulted in renewed warnings to parents to caution their children against playing on any Presidio streets, particularly service roads in the rear of family-type quarters.

Provost Marshal records show the child was hit as he ran out onto the road from behind a cement embankment. Although the driver was traveling less than 15 miles per hour and applied his brakes immediately, the car skidded over five feet, throwing the lad six feet.

Parents are also requested to take special care to prevent children from entering unoccupied buildings or areas where any construction work is in progress. Military Police have been instructed to report names of the parents of children violating these cautions.

You're Losing Money if You Ignore Waiver

Washington—Records of each Service reveal that tens of thousands of servicemen are losing money by failing to waive their NSLI term insurance premiums.

If you are an NSLI term insurance policy holder, you should request a waiver of premium (if you have not already done so) from your personnel officer. At the same time you should discontinue your premium allotment. If you don't you're needlessly throwing away money.

Servicemen who held NSLI term insurance policies should have waived their premium immediately upon passage of Public Law 23 Tpr. 25, 1951. Many did not do so, believing that if they waived their premium they would lose some of the benefits of their NSLI term policy.

This is not so. All the rights and benefits of their NSLI term policy remain intact when they waive their premium.

For those who still remain to be convinced, here are some figures to further prove the point:

If, for example, you're 18 years of age and did not waive your premiums, you're paying 64 cents every month for each 1,000 you have in NSLI term insurance. If you have a $10,000 policy then you're paying $6.40 per month.

Because you're still paying your premium, you're entitled to approximately 50 cents a month per $1,000 insurance in dividends. You paid $6.40. You get back $5.00. What happened to the difference of $1.40?

You lost it without getting any additional rights or benefits. On a yearly basis that would amount to $16.80 in needless loss. At other ages you pay higher premiums and therefore would lose more money.

If you're one of those who did not take advantage of the opportunity to waive your NSLI term insurance premium, do so now. It will save you money.

No study is possible on the battlefield; one simply does what one knows. Therefore, in order to do even a little, one has already to know a great deal and know it well.—Marshal Foch.

AER Solves Soldier Problems Through Soldiers Own Support

Although the assistance given soldiers and their dependents by the Army Emergency Relief and the Army Relief Society, whose joint campaign for funds is being held on the Presidio this month, is made without fanfare, each loan represents real help in time of emergency.

This emergency financial assistance is given whenever a condition arises which was unforeseen, sudden, and requires prompt attention. Included in this category are doctor bills, hospital or funeral expenses, emergency leave, non-receipt or loss of pay or allowances and privation of dependents.

To apply for aid, if a soldier lives on a post he should first discuss his problem with his company commander and then go to the Red Cross Field Director and finally the AER Officer. If living or temporarily in a civilian community he should apply to the local Red Cross chapter or to the AER Officer on the nearest Army installation.

Dependents, if living on an Army post, should apply to the Red Cross Field Director and then the AER Officer. Those living in a civilian community should apply to the local Red Cross Chapter.

Funds for assistance are available because of the great number of small contributions made voluntarily once a year by members of the Army and the high rate of loan repayments.

Slate New Course In Internat'l Economics

Beginning 7 July a course in International Economics will be given at Fort Mason. The eight weeks course will be held in Bldg. 207, every Monday and Wednesday from 1800 to 2030 hours.

Instructors will be from San Francisco State College and 3 units will be given for completion of this course. All interested military and civilian personnel should contact the Post TI&E Office, Bldg. 101, ext. 3228, for further information.

Spotters Plan 24-Hour Watch For Red Craft

Washington—Convinced of the threat of a sneak air attack on the nation by the Soviet Air Force, civilian observers in 27 states will begin a round-the-clock plane-spotting service July 14.

Phase One of "Operation Skywatch," initiated by the Air Force, will set up 19,400 observation points in 27 states ranging along the North, East and West perimeters of the U.S. and following a line as far south as San Diego, Calif., in the West and North Carolina in the East.

Phase Two, soon to be inaugurated, will swell the total to 500,000 volunteers and include nine additional states.

Despite a critical shortage of Ground Observer Corps volunteers, the 24-hour surveillance is designed to fill gaps in our radar fence. Sneak attacks from an altitude of 5,000 feet or lower are difficult to pick up on electronic equipment. Watchful eyes will plug that hole.

The volunteer spotters will feed their observations back through a network of 49 "filter stations." These, in turn, will evaluate the information and take action.

Gen. Nathan F. Twining, acting Air Force Chief of Staff, says the Soviet Air Force could launch a 400-plane attack by four-engine bombers—capable of carrying both atomic and conventional bombs—against the major American cities.

Nothing is an unimportant as money, unless you don't have enough of it.

Presidio TIC Topic!

High Cost of AWOL Shows Both Army, Soldier Lose

Although the number of soldiers who go AWOL each year is relatively small, the problems they create are not small as will be learned in this week's TIC Topic for Presidio units, "The High Price of AWOL."

The cost in money alone is great. The Provost Marshal General estimates that each AWOL soldier costs the Government about $10 a day for each day he is absent without leave. It costs the Government more than a million dollars a year just to provide guards to return AWOL's to their stations after they have been found.

Every time a soldier goes AWOL, it means that there is one less man available to help the Army carry out its missions. It also means other soldiers must be assigned to find and return the AWOL to his station, to guard him, to process the necessary papers for his trial, and to try him before a court-martial.

The Army loses prestige or reputation when a soldier goes AWOL. As part of the Army the individual soldier is affected by public opinion about it.

What can be done to prevent AWOLs and how the individual soldier can assist with the problem will be among the subjects discussed in this week's topic.

The Need To Know!

Post I&E Conducts College Course Survey For Fall Term

Plans are now being made by the Troop I&E Office and San Francisco State College for the program to be offered for the first eight-week session to be given at the Presidio beginning 17 September 1952.

To assure that the courses to be offered by the college will meet the needs and interests of military personnel, the TI&E office is conducting a survey to determine preferences in the proposed courses. Those planning to enroll are to submit the survey indicating the courses in which they are interested at the Education Center, Bldg. 117.

The courses will carry full residence credit and there are no pre-requisites for the courses. Personnel need not be high school graduates to enroll.

Seven proposed courses are listed on the survey. They are as follows:

Announce New Policy On Army Enlistments

Department of the Army announced this week, that in line with the current law extending enlistments of all enlisted personnel, the period of service in an indefinite enlistment that a person must serve before an unconditional resignation would be accepted, was extended from 3 to 4 years.

Inasmuch as the involuntary extensions to enlistments are gradually being reduced, this new extension to indefinite enlistments will be adjusted accordingly.

Army's Oldest Active Soldier At Fort Scott

SGT. DELBERT JENKINS

A 71-year-old veteran of two world wars, SFC Delbert W. Jenkins (RA 892-118), was recently assigned to the 30th Engineer Base Topographic Battalion at Fort Winfield Scott from the 6th Division at Fort Ord.

Sergeant Jenkins, presently assigned to the personnel section of the 30th, has what may be safely termed a unique record of service. With only 11 years and 4 months active service he has served in both world wars and has spent over 8 years overseas.

In 1918, at the age of 37, he enlisted for the duration of World War I and was discharged 16 months after seeing action in France. He did not re-enter the Army until 1942 when he was 61 years old. At that time he had 8 children—6 sons and 2 daughters—and 6 grandchildren; 4 of his sons were also in the service during World War II. It was just 10 years ago last Wednesday that Sgt. Jenkins "re-enlisted" at 444 Market Street in San Francisco, and he humorously recalls the fact that there was a 15-year-old boy (46 years younger) re-enlisting at the same time.

In 1944 Sgt. Jenkins went to the South Pacific with the 549th Boat and Shore Regiment of the 4th Engineer Special Brigade, and in September 1945 his outfit moved to Japan. He remained there until his return to the United States December 20, 1951, after having served 91 consecutive months in the South Pacific and Far East.

Sgt. Jenkins' wife, a resident of Los Angeles, was also in Japan for 5½ years prior to his return to the States. She was one of the first Army dependents allowed to make the trip overseas.

Services Now Need 3,500 More Nurses To Fill Vacancies

Atlantic City, N. J.—The need for 3,500 more nurses for the Army, Navy and Air Force was announced at the seventeenth Biennial Nursing Convention here.

Col. Ruby Bryant, Chief of the Army Nurse Corps, said 1,500 additional nurses are needed to meet the problem of rotation and expansion. At present there are 5,428 nurses in the Corps.

Lt. Margaret Kloetzli, of the Navy Nurse Corps, reported the need of 1,000 additional nurses to augment the present strength of 3,000 and replace those being released to civilian nursing.

The Air Force also needs 1,000 replacements to add to 2,800 nurses now serving in that corps, according to Col. Verna M. Zeller, Chief of the AF Nurse Corps.

Surveyors Battle Blizzards In Charting Unknown Arctic

In the bleak and barren Tundra regions of the Arctic, a group of men work to finish a job begun 145 years ago by Thomas Jefferson . . . that of surveying the entire U. S. coast.

With but little more than 100 of the original 100,000 miles of coastline remaining to be charted, the East Unit of the Arctic Field Party, U.S. Coast and Geodetic Survey, is kept busy mapping shore lines, measuring water depth and temperatures as well as ocean tides and currents. Some day this knowledge may save a pilot's life or direct a submarine under the ice.

The 30-man group is working on the last unsurveyed mainland coast under the U.S. flag. Surveyors, mechanics, tractor drivers and cooks are all members of the Geodetic Survey, which is responsible for U.S. coast measurements inshore as far as the eye can see from tide-water and offshore to the 100-fathom mark.

In this barren land where temperatures range from 20 to 30 degrees below zero, the survey team faces constant dangers in carrying out their job. The climate is so cold that motors of tractors are kept running day and night, week after week. An annual Air Force and Navy supply expedition in August brings in supplies.

Barter Island, headquarters for the group, is only 1,200 miles from the North Pole. The island is the only inhabited community on the coast between Point Barrow and the Canadian border.

Along with each bronze marker that is "planted" by the unit for future marking is the message: "$250 Fine for Disturbing." This is a warning to whatever "souvenir" hunters that might wander up in that direction.

POW Convention Will Meet In Salinas This Month

A prisoner of war convention for those residing in the western states was scheduled for 18-20 July in Salinas, California, by one of the units that survived the Bataan death march 10 years ago in the Philippines.

The convention was arranged by the 40-47 Club of Salinas, which gets its name from the 40th Infantry, and the fact that only 47 members of a company of 108 survived the march and imprisonment.

In addition to the serious discussions, which will include plans for the formulation of new chapters of the American Ex-POW, delegates and their wives will tour the scenic 17-mile drive north of Carmel, dance and enjoy a barbecue.

Persons planning to attend should communicate with Bill Garrison, Secretary, Jeffery Hotel, Salinas, California.

Just a Statistic?

It's just a statistic. You go to a blood donor station, lie down for a few minutes and give a pint of blood.

You get some coffee and doughnuts, maybe even a few hours off and then you don't think about it anymore. Sometimes you see it in the newspapers—"75,000 Pints Donated." Just a statistic.

But to someone it won't be "just a statistic." It'll be life and hope. It'll be Sunday dinner and ice cream and hot dogs and ballgames. It'll be fishing and going to the park and taking the kids to the circus.

It could even mean all that to you, some day. It could be you lying out there in a gully, waiting for a medic to come with the blood, with life, with the statistic.

It's summertime now and most people don't want to think about things like war or blood or pain. But not you. While other people will have their thoughts on swimming and picnics and walks in the country, you can't ignore the realization that some day it might be you in that gully.

There's no need for a high-powered appeal. You know just about all that can be said about the meaning of giving blood.

Next time you pass a blood donor station, go in and drop off a pint. Sure, it's "just a statistic"—but you never can tell.

Take Measures To Enforce ORC Training

Sixth Army took steps this week to implement a policy which is expected to put reluctant reservists on their toes. In line with the Department of the Army's new mandatory ORC unit field training directive that requires 15 days active duty training for all members of ORC troop program units and mobilization designees, a new civilian component circular is now in the process of publication.

Provisions of the new circular require reservists reading of DA policy media, and certifying same.

Active duty orders will be delivered in person or by registered mail, in order that an acknowledging receipt may be recorded.

Final action on requests for excuses from field training will be reviewed by military district chiefs. When practical, alternate training periods will be provided in cases where the reservists would suffer undue hardship in participating.

In cases where reservists fail to comply with active duty training orders, military district chiefs will request apprehension by civil authorities. A district representative will accompany the arresting authority for the purpose of ascertaining the reason for failure to comply. If a valid excuse is evident, district representatives may allow the reservist to remain at home and recommend appropriate action to the district chief. Otherwise the individual will be arrested and turned over to the military authorities for delivery to his field training station.

Upon delivery the ORC unit commander will take action under Article 15 of the Uniform Code Military Justice. Stringent disciplinary action will be meted out in flagrant cases.

ORC Training Chief Praises Army Aid

In a recent visit to Hunter Liggett Military Reservation and Fort Lewis, Colonel E. R. Bodey, Chief, Reserve Components Branch, Organization and Training Division, G3 Section, Department of Army, expressed gratification at the compliments he had received from National Guard and ORC Unit Commanders regarding Sixth Army support of their summer field training.

Colonel Bodey stated that he had confirmed the fact that there were few, if any, shortages in either the equipment or personnel necessary to conduct successful training and that the active Army had obviously "gone all out" to make Reserve training a success.

Army NG Nearing Full Organization; 1,700 Units Activated

Washington—The Army National Guard is almost completely organized, reports Maj. Gen. Raymond H. Fleming, Chief of the National Guard Bureau.

Since the start of the Korean emergency, approximately 120,000 officers and men of about 1,700 Army Guard units have been called into active service.

Approximately 98 percent of the more than 5,200 Army units currently allotted the states and territories have been organized and federally recognized. Organization of 28 additional units has been authorized.

A number of company and battalion-size units have already been returned to state control. Gen. Fleming estimates that at least half the Army Guard officers now on active duty will choose to remain on active duty while the majority of enlisted men will elect discharge or serve out enlistment terms with their state National Guard.

ORC Hospital Units Support Guard Units

One of the outstanding examples of cooperation during the summer training sessions was the medical support offered the National Guard by the ORC. National Guard divisions in the Sixth Army Area have no separate hospital units and there is a critical shortage of medical officers. The ORC has several hospital units including general, station and surgical and in many cases these units were attached to National Guard units during summer training.

Military Intelligence Afield!

Sixth Army MI Group Offered Realistic Training To ORC Units

The importance of coordinated intelligence in combat was one of the field problems put into practice at the recent maneuvers held at the Hunter-Liggett Military Reservation, near King City, California. Units involved were the 319 Military Intelligence Group (ORC) and the 49th Infantry Division, of the California National Guard.

The MI Group consists of more than 100 military intelligence units from seven western states each of whom specializes in one or more phases of intelligence work.

The 300 officers and enlisted men of the MI worked with the Guard Division assisting them with the many intelligence problems that occurred during the training and presented special programs emphasizing the importance of cooperation and coordination between intelligence units. The program covered such subjects as: foreign language interpreting and translating, aerial photograph interpretations, order of battle, military censorship, prisoner of war interrogation and counter intelligence.

To make the training more realistic, soldiers of the MI units were used as actors in presenting a "live-show" in seven acts to show the step by step processing of captured enemy soldiers. The play was done in two languages for realism, and to bring out several interrogation techniques. Several volunteers were selected from the troops to demonstrate the use of hypnosis in prisoner interrogation. The test proved to be very successful and will be developed further.

The United States Air Force, through the cooperation of Headquarters Sixth Army assisted in the field exercise by taking aerial photographs of the Hunter-Liggett area before and during the two-week training. Photo interpreter teams were able to study and compare these pictures for valuable training and critique data for the 49th Division.

The 319th Military Intelligence Group is Commanded by Colonel Joseph Rodrigo of San Francisco, California. He is a veteran of overseas service having served in Af-

Army Commander Lauds ORC Support

The support rendered the 1952 summer training of the National Guard and Organized Reserve units by installations and services of the Sixth Army has been energetic, attentive, and complete, and I am happy to pass on to the responsible members of this Army the many compliments and expressions of gratitude which have come to me from the units we have supported.

rica and Europe during World War II. Among the awards and decorations earned by the Colonel during the European conflict are the Legion of Merit, and the EAME Ribbon with 3 bronze battle stars. His foreign decorations include the "Commander of the Crown of Italy", an award received from the country's King and the "Star of Italian Solidarity", an award of the Republic of Italy. The Vatican honored the Colonel with its award of the "Lateran Gold Cross."

One of the highlights of the two-week summer field-training was a parade given in honor of Earl Warren, Governor of the State of California.

The author of the seven act play which dramatized the various intelligence specialties was Major T. E. Gutman. Props were difficult to find to dress up the stage during the field exercises, but the officers and men did an excellent job of leaving as little to the imagination of the observers as possible.

Mess facilities for the 319 Group were provided by the 562nd Transportation Staging Area Company from Camp Stoneman, California.

Top Supply Economy!

Reserves' Logistical Support Far Surpasses Previous Years

One of the most important factors in maintaining the high standards that currently prevail in the summer reserve training program is the fine logistical support being afforded at every echelon. This was made possible by the foresight and excellent planning that affirmed training sites and dates as early as December of last year.

By directing that requirement lists, submitted through Military Districts, must reach installation commanders, who had been designated to support training units, not later than 95 days prior to the scheduled training date of the unit, adequate time was given for a thorough screening of training unit requirements. Not only have station and military district supply sections checked stocks that were available for issue, but also stocks that could be made available on a loan basis for specific requirement dates from both ORC and regular army units.

Following intense local screening, requisitions on non-available items plus the initial requests, indicating availability to station level, were forwarded to Sixth Army Headquarters for a final screening. At this level every effort was then made to meet unfilled commitments by lateral transfer between stations, or by coordination of loans from every available source.

As a result of the wholehearted cooperation directed by all components towards this share-the-equipment-plan, savings in transportation costs exceeded fifty percent in most units. And in the case of a great number of tanks, howitzers, and other heavy equipment, it more than doubled the availability ratio of previous years.

Logistic requirements that could not be met by stations or through loan were requisitioned from depots in a quantity that would meet requirements without duplicating requisitions and result in a build-up of excessive stocks.

First reports indicate that logistical support for this year's summer training program will far surpass previous seasons. The high standards set is directly traceable to the timely submission of requirements by all components.

NG Training Tops Previous Summer Sessions Say Chiefs

"A high degree of proficiency and excellent morale have marked this year's National Guard training, now in full swing throughout the Sixth Army Area." This was the combined opinion contained in reports of inspection teams and staff officers representing Department of the Army, Army Field Forces, National Guard Bureau and Headquarters Sixth Army, who visited training sites.

Guard training this year emphasized basic unit training of small units, with special emphasis on squad and platoon teamwork and leadership.

Top guard commanders were enthusiastic in their praise of the high caliber of assistance extended by personnel of the Regular Army. The close coordination and cooperation between National Guard Units and the Regular Army have resulted in one of the outstanding summer training sessions.

The Sixth Army Instructor Group, in their mission of bringing National Guard Units up to date on the latest operation of equipment and training methods, were given a lion's share of the credit. A highly select group, these officers and enlisted men, recruited from throughout the Sixth Army Area for duty as Guard instructors, proved outstandingly proficient. This is proof again that unit commanders should encourage applications from high caliber personnel for this type duty.

All in all, this year's Guard and ORC training sessions indicated the importance of well planned and balanced refresher courses in maintaining and increasing the value of the National Guard as an important component of the Army preparedness program.

ORC Schools Program Important Phase Of Reservist Training

Coordinating branch courses offered at ORC schools throughout the year with 15-day tours of active duty in the summer at one of eight of its installations, the Sixth Army is able to give ORC personnel extensive theoretical and practical training.

Twenty schools are established in seven western states where the branch courses are conducted. With a total of ten, California has the largest number of these schools, followed by Utah and Washington with three each. States with one each are Arizona, Oregon, Idaho and Nevada.

Under the branch course program, 18 different courses are offered, although the number available at each school varies. The courses include, Command and General Staff, AAA and Guided Missiles, Adjutant General, Armored, Artillery, Chemical, Engineer, Military Police, Finance, Infantry, Judge Advocate General, Military Intelligence, Ordnance, Quartermaster, Signal, Transportation, Medical and Chaplain.

The Fort MacArthur ORC School is the only one which conducts all 18 courses, while the Boise ORC School offers the least with Command and General Staff, Engineer and Quartermaster.

For the summer's active duty, most members of ORC School student Detachments will participate in training conducted at Sixth Army installations in California and Washington nearest their homes. Students from Idaho, Montana, Oregon and Washington will go to Fort Lewis, Vancouver Barracks or Fort Lawton. Those from California, Arizona and Nevada will have their active duty at Fort MacArthur, Camp San Luis Obispo, Camp Cooke, Presidio of San Francisco or Camp Irwin.

All students of three courses will go to California installations regardless of the location of their homes. Signal men will train at Camp Luis Obispo, Armored at Camp Cooke and AAA groups at Camp Irwin.

Students of the Judge Advocate General course will be attached as individuals for on-the-job training at the closest of three installations, Fort Lewis, Fort MacArthur or Camp Cooke.

This summer the training will be for varying 15-day periods throughout next month. Attendance of students, staff and faculty is expected to be over 1,600.

Top Tee Toppers Test Turf Talent In Team Tryouts

By CPL. TOM JUDGE, Sports Editor

Eighteen expert and amateur tee-toppers stepped onto the Presidio greens this week to open the tryouts for the local golf team. Low six men of the 72 hole medal play will qualify for the post team which will be entered in the Southern division Sixth Army tournament to be held at the Presidio 12-15 August.

The team with the low winning score plus six golfers with the lowest individual tallies will travel to Fort Lewis, Washington, for the Sixth Army championship play-offs.

The number one man from the 1951 squad, Cpl. Bill Rowe, is back again this year to win a place on the team. His practice rounds indicate that he will repeat this season.

Chief contender for the number one spot is Cpl. Fred Haner, who placed second in the recent Reno, Nevada, pro-amateur golf tourney. Haner, Michigan Collegiate Champion in 1951, is currently assigned to the 21st Engineers at Fort Scott. Only 22 years of age, he has been tramping the greens since he was 12 years of age and copped the Ontario, Canada Junior Championship when he was 14 years old. In 1949 Haner won the Essex-Kent (Canada) Open Tournament shooting the par 72 course in 71-67-67-69.

Although a newcomer to the golf game, Captain Duane Bagley is expected to be among the low-scorers. The Post's assistant special services officer has been able to wrap up an enviable record although he has been golfing for only six years. He was a member of the All-Far-East Golf Team in 1949 and 1950 and captained the General Headquarters team in Tokyo in 1949, 1950 and 1951. This will be the first crack Captain Bagley has had at a championship on this side of the Pacific Ocean.

Being a radar mechanic with the 459th AAA at Fort Cronkhite is the job of Cpl. Clark Toussaint, but his first love is playing golf. Toussaint is the only Cronkhite contender for a berth on the Presidio team. Previews of his play on the local course indicate that he is a likely prospect for the squad.

Lt. Col. John N. Beck, who has been in the Sixth Army Tournament ever since 1946, is hopeful that he will win a place on the team again this year. The Colonel, who has been playing golf since he was ten years old, came in second at Fort Lewis in 1951 and is almost certain to make the 1952 Presidio team. He tied the course record at Washington last year with a blistering 69.

Several of the contestants are newcomers to the Presidio and have not had an opportunity to display their prowess on the difficult local course. A few "old-timers" who have been unable to make the team in the past will try again this year.

Skeet Team Takes Second In Western Open Championship

The Presidio Skeet Team shot their way into second place at the Western Open Skeet Championship held at the Pacific Rod and Gun Club at Lake Merced. First place was captured by the gunmen from the San Diego Naval Air Station.

The local five-man team was paced by the skillful shooting of Lt. Col. Harvey Bower, who smashed 99 out of 100 birds in the all-bore event. Sgt. Paul Broome took third place in the Class C, all-bore event, and Colonel G. J. Matt came in third in the Class C, 20 gauge shooting. Capt. L. C. McGonagle fired his way into the number one spot of the Class B, all-bore event.

The individual scoring proved the accuracy of Colonel Bower's shooting, for at the end of the skeet-meet he was awarded four trophies, having taken first place

Kono Wins Best Of Tournament In Olympic Trials

The Outstanding Lifter Trophy was presented to Pfc. Tommy Kono for his accomplishments at the Senior National Weightlifting Championship Final Olympic tryouts in New York City recently.

Kono also received a trophy and a medal for winning first place in the lightweight division. The Mason muscle man copped the crown with a total of 799 pounds. He pressed 237 pounds, snatched 253½ pounds and clean and jerked 308½ pounds for his record breaking total.

Prior to participating in the New York finals, Kono set a new National AAU Junior Record in the three lift lightweight class at Oakland, California. He holds California AAU records in both the lightweight and middleweight classes.

Kono departed this week for Helsinki, Finland to compete in the Olympic games scheduled to start on 19 July 1952.

Headquarters Team Trounces Combined Forces Of 21st-96th

Headquarters Company, 30th Engineers, beat out an 11-7 win over the combined forces of the 21st and 96th Engineers Tuesday in the only contest scheduled this week in the Fort Scott softball league.

It was the first defeat this year for participating players of the 21st who made up the majority of the losing team; and it came as somewhat of a surprise that the feat was accomplished by the Headquarters team (without the scheduled assistance of the 64th Engineers) which holds a current record of one win and six losses in league play.

The 21st-96th started the scoring in the first frame when, with two out, Robison walked three in a row and Juskiewicz doubled in two runs. Headquarters came back in their half with a 2-run homer by Valandingham and added two more tallies in the second.

In the top of the fourth, with one out, the 21st-96th rallied and surged ahead to take a 6-4 lead before Robison struck out two in a row to retire the side. Headquarters came back once more to tie up the score in their half of the inning, then added five more runs in the sixth when ten men stepped up to the plate and produced seven hits.

The game ended when the 21st-96th was able to score but once in the top of the seventh.

Presidio WACs In Volleyball Finals At Ft. Lewis Today

The Sixth Army Volleyball Championship will be decided at Fort Lewis, Washington this week. Teams in both the men's and women's division will compete.

The Presidio WACs move into this final series of games as southern division champs having won six straight games in the play-offs at Camp Cooke, California. The Fort Ord WACs, runner-up in the women's division will also vie for honors. Northern division champs are the WACs from Madigan Army hospital.

The men's division northern champs are the soldier team from Company "C", 369th Engineer Amphibious Support Regiment, from Fort Worden, Washington. Runner-up team was Battery D, 30th AAA Automatic Weapons Battalion. They will be opposed by two teams from the 20th Infantry Regiment, Fort Ord, California. They are the Headquarters Company and the 1st Infantry Battalion.

Headquarters Company Slips Deeper With One Run Loss

The 96th-64th Engineers squeezed out a 7-6 victory over Headquarters Company last week to leave the latter in undisputed possession of last place in the Fort Scott softball league. It was the third one-run loss out of their last four games for the Headquarters team.

Headquarters jumped to an early lead with three runs in the first inning and led 4-1 at the end of the second. From there on it was the 96th-64th's game. They scored six times in the next three frames while holding Headquarters scoreless and went onto the field in the seventh with a three-run lead. Hartman ran into trouble in that inning; with one out he walked three in a row, and Jarvis hit a long single that scored two runs. That ended the scoring, however, as Johnson forced Davis at third and James was thrown out at first to end the game.

A one-run homer by James in the second inning was the only extra-base blow off Hartman who limited the Headquarters team to four hits. Tuttle, who provided most of Headquarters' power at the plate in previous games, failed to connect for a single hit. Hackathorn, 96th-64th catcher, was the game's heavy hitter with a triple and a double that drove in three runs.

Major Sammy Lee Favored To Win Olympic Diving

Another Sixth Army Olympic contender was selected at New York City this week. He is Major Sammy Lee of Fort MacArthur, California.

Major Lee's championship form copped the 10-Meter Platform Dive and earned him a free trip to Helsinki, Finland, where he will compete for world honors.

The plunging Major, formerly a specialist at Letterman Army Hospital, was a winner in the same event during the last Olympic games, and is expected to repeat again. The last Olympic games were held in London, England in 1948.

Olympic swim coach Matt Mann stated that Major Lee is part of the "greatest squad we have ever put together."

Raiders Dump Moffett; Drop Heartbreaker To Sailors

A vastly improved Red Raider baseball team whipped the Moffett Field Air Station nine this week, but dropped their last two games to teams on the other side of the Bay. Pitching two of the three games, Corporal Dan Stupur, Presidio hurler, added 21 strikeouts to his seasons total which now stands at 223.

The Raiders took advantage of the "gifts" of the Moffett Field Air Station team and walked off with an 8-2 victory at Evans Field. The Presidiomen scored three times in the first inning without making a hit. Three free trips followed by three sailor errors turned the trick. The Red Raiders scored their eight runs on seven hits, three of which were for extra bases. The victory was No. 7 for Stupur this year.

Following their victory over the winged navymen the local nine traveled across the Bay on 6 July and were handed a 6-2 defeat by the San Quentin ball club. This was a non-league game.

Dick Mortenson, new Raider shortstop played even more effectively than he did in the game with Moffett Field, but the Presidiomen were unable to keep up with the smooth play of the men from San Quentin.

The fourth inning proved to be the most productive for the Sixth Army team. Husick's walk which opened the frame was followed by a 415 foot double by Potts, scoring Husick. Potts tallied when Mortenson smashed a triple to deep center field.

The Quentinmen played faultlessly during the rest of the game and went on to victory.

The Guardsmen, number one team in the league, were held in check throughout the game by pitcher Dan Stupur who allowed them only 6 hits and struck out ten. The last time these two teams met the Coast Guard won 24-0.

Miss Stay-at-Home? Officially Opens 9th AAA Battalion's New Rest Center

Men of the 9th AAA Gun Battalion will always be assured of top drawer treatment when they check into the battalion's new rest center at Fort Scott, but the first contingent had the added pleasure of being on hand last week when attractive Pat Lyons cut the ribbon to put the center in operation.

Miss Lyons, who was selected to be San Francisco's "Miss Stay at Home over the Fourth of July," registered the first guest and then turned the job over to personnel of headquarters who will operate center.

Top attractions of the center include a policy of no KP or reveille. Policing and messing facilities will be undertaken by the men of headquarters company and guests are permitted to get up when they choose.

Designed to give the men coming in from the field a place to rest, the center is near movies, library, Post Exchange and transportation.

Interim Group Will Smooth K-Vet Bill For Final Passage

Washington—It looks like a conference committee will have to smooth out differences in the K-Vet Bill before it comes up again in both Houses for final passage.

The Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee has reported its version of the K-Vet Bill which differs in some respects from the House-passed version. While most of the provisions of both bills are exactly the same, an important difference in the exact apportioning of money to the veterans still remains to be settled.

Under the House-passed bill the veteran would receive $110.00 a month if single and $150.00 a month if he has dependents. Out of this he would pay his own tuition, using whatever is left for living expenses.

The Senate bill will allot $80.00 a month for single men, $105.00 a month for men with one dependent and $130.00 a month for men with two or more dependents. In addition they would receive up to $360.00 a year for tuition.

The Senate Committee also eliminated a House provision that would give the veteran wage credits of $160.00 a month under Social Security for time spent in the Armed Forces. It also eliminated certain housing provisions of the House bill.

Intact in both bills however, is the mustering-out-pay clause as well as provisions for on-the-job training and loan guarantees.

Commenting on the possibility of a K-Vet Bill passing before the fall college term begins, Sen. Lister Hill (D-Ala.), said that he "will work as hard as I can" to obtain congressional approval of the bill this session.

Most congressional observers agree that Senator Hill's feeling toward the bill is shared by most members of Congress. Backers of the bill however, are proceeding cautiously in order not to write into a new bill any provisions which would lead to abuses.

Boost Strategic Guard

Washington—Deployment of anti-aircraft units for the protection of strategic industrial metropolitan and Air Force centers has been stepped up by the Army. The action is not designed as an emergency measure, but rather as a general assignment of units and troops.

Automotive Experts Save Army Millions On Tactical Vehicles

Washington—Tests conducted on Army tactical vehicles have led to modifications that will save $32 million on vehicles to be bought under existing contracts.

Representatives from the Department of the Army, the Chief of Ordnance and the automotive industry examined trucks ranging in size from a quarter-ton to five tons and came up with several economies. None of the changes will delay production or make present designs obsolete.

Shallow fording capabilities will replace the deep water fording feature on tactical vehicles. Other instances of economy include the following:

Some water-proofing is eliminated and a cheaper, more efficient generator is substituted for the sealed type. Nine generator assemblies and several hundred spare parts have been eliminated.

Kits will be provided some vehicles for making field changes for operations in rough terrains or extremes of climate.

Name Honor Students!

Class of Thirty-Two Completes Special Administrative School

Cpl. Gordon C. Hopper of Camp Cooke has been named top honor student in the class of 32 completing four weeks training today at the Sixth Army personnel management and administrative specialists school.

This is the second class to take the course of training for personnel who are potential company or personnel clerks from various posts, camps and stations throughout the Sixth Army area. A third class has been underway since the first of the month and a fourth will begin on Monday.

Continued shortages of trained administrative personnel instigated the establishment of the school with the Sixth Army Adjutant General Section and G3 assisting in the organization. Col. E. T. Adler, Executive Officer of the Adjutant General Section, and Lt. Col. W. A. Taylor, Chief, military personnel division, were active in the organizational plans.

Major R. Eston Smith was the first commandant of the school, which he headed until his transfer to FECOM late in June. Since that time Capt. Arthur Baumgardner has been commandant.

CPL. GORDON C. HOPPER

Eight enlisted men are the instructors for the four week course. They are M-Sgt. Paul W. Jungen, M-Sgt. David J. Ruff, SFC Edwin Roth, SFC Robert L. Lukehart, SFC John H. Agee, Sgt. Joseph L. Shepard, Cpl. Brent L. Bowen and Cpl. Eugene L. Pfeifer.

Honor students of the first class were Pfc. Alan W. Bourke, Camp Cooke, and Pfc. David F. Gerspach, Camp Stoneman. Certificates of Training are given all students completing the course.

Student of the present graduating class will be guests at a luncheon today along with the school officials and instructors, at the Sixth Army Food Service School. Graduating exercises will be held at the school tomorrow morning.

Release Info On Latest Tank Development

Washington—The Department of the Army has announced that the first completely new medium tank to be developed since WWII—the Patton 48—is now in production, and sizeable deliveries are expected before the end of the year.

The Patton 48 mounts a 90 MM high-velocity gun, two 50 and one 30-calibre machine guns. It is in the 45-50-ton class.

A new design gives it a low silhouette, elliptical sides and turrets, and stronger and wider tracks.

It has a powerful engine, cross-drive transmission and power steering. The crew includes a tank commander, driver, gunner and loader. Its sloping, elliptical sides make it extremely difficult for an enemy shell to get a "bite" and plow through the armor. Instead of penetrating, the shell would be more likely to glance off harmlessly.

This is the first time it has been possible for armor manufacturers to make a one-piece cast hull. This hull-turret combination gives maximum protection for the least weight.

Called the T-48 in the experimental stage, the new tank also carries a precision range-finder which quickly calculates the distance to a target and gives the tank gunner an opportunity to fire before an enemy can calculate his position accurately. Another new feature of the tank is a "quick change" gun tube developed by Army Ordnance which allows removal and replacement of a worn gun barrel in the field.

The power plant is a V-12 engine which develops 810 horsepower. Cross drive and power steering allows the big tank to handle as easily as a new automobile.

The tank was developed by Army Ordnance and the Chrysler Corp. and is being produced at three separate plants.

PRESIDIO OF SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA

Friday, 18 July, 1952

TOP RANKING NATIONALIST GENERALS who will begin a nationwide tour of major training and supply commands are shown on their arrival at Hamilton Field this week. They are (l. to r.): Major K. F. Chong, of the Sixth Army's G-2 Section who acted as interpreter and advisor to the group during their visit here; Lt. Gen. Wu Sung-Ching, quartermaster general; Lt. Gen. Chao Chi-Shiang, chief of staff for Army Ground Forces; Lt. Gen. Fu Ya-Fu, G-1, and Maj. Gen. Soong Ta, G-4.

"Troop Morale, Training High," Say Top Ranking Nationalist Generals

Four of the Chinese Nationalist Army's top ranking generals arrived at Sixth Army this week on the first leg of a month-long tour of this country's major training and supply installations.

In answer to questions on current Nationalist activities on Formosa, Lieutenant General Fu Ya-Fu, assistant chief of staff for Nationalist Defense Department, said, "The morale of the Chinese Nationalist Army troops on Formosa is very high. After three years of intensive technical and physical training, the spirit in every branch of the service is boundless.

"Our Army, Navy and Air Force owe a great deal to the fine assistance being given us by the American Military Advisory Mission on Formosa. Equipment and technical advice and the reorganization of our services along lines comparable to that of the United States, has done much to improve our entire military position."

The general also stated that paratroop training which was started some nine years ago in the Chinese Nationalist Army has been intensified and improved. "We have a large and excellent organization of paratroopers, trained along American lines in some instances but also specialized in the type of combat they would most likely encounter under the terrain conditions found in the Far East."

Here to study training and logistical support with General Fu are Lt. Gen. Wu Sung-Ching, quartermaster general, Lt. Gen. Chao Chi-Shiang, chief of staff for Nationalist Army Ground Forces and Major General Soong Ta, assistant chief of staff G-4.

The visitors were met at Hamilton Field by Mr. T. K. Chang, Chinese Consul General in San Francisco, and Colonel C. N. Wang of the Chinese Defense Ministry Procurement Commission. The generals were guests of the Army Commander, Lt. Gen. Joseph M. Swing, at a luncheon in the Officers' Mess and attended a press and newsreel conference at the Service Club later in the day.

The inspection team, headed by Brig. Gen. Harry P. Storke, acting Commanding General, III Corps, Fort MacArthur, California, included: Lt. Col. Conrad Hildebrandt (Officer in Charge) G-3; Lt. Col. Arthur S. Burns, G-4; Lt. Col. Kenneth A. Carson, Provost Marshal; Lt. Col. Joe R. Shepherd, G-1; Capt. Charles E. Bowers, Transportation; Capt. Roy L. Luncford, G-3; Capt. William F. Gleib, G-2 and Capt. Walter S. Trapp, Ordnance.

III Corps is responsible for the supervision, coordination, and inspection of training for all General Reserve Units and training divisions in the Sixth Army Area.

Army Surgeon Receives Orders To FECOM

COLONEL R. L. BAUCHSPIES

Colonel Rollin L. Bauchspies, Sixth Army Surgeon for the past two years, has been ordered to the Far Eastern Command for reassignment. He will be replaced by Colonel Ruel E. Hewett who leaves an assignment at the Louisville Medical Depot in Kentucky.

During his assignment here, Col. Bauchspies has greatly implemented the tremendous growth that has seen Sixth Army hospital capacities raised from 750 beds to 3500 beds. He helped initiate and administer one of the Army's outstanding Blood Bank programs, a program that in almost every instance has met or surpassed its monthly 10,000 pint quota.

Colonel Bauchspies saw almost continuous action in the European Theater during World War II. Making the first invasion with the Third Army in North Africa, he later served with the Fifth and Seventh Armies, and was Surgeon for VI Corps.

At Long Last!

Combat Pay Bonus Passes Congress As Budget Rider

A $45 monthly combat pay bonus, retroactive to the start of the Korean action, was passed by Congress this week. The bill, passed in the form of a rider attached to the $46,610,938,-912 Defense Department Appropriations bill, provides for participation by personnel having served six consecutive days with any unit that has come under enemy fire. Wounded and the next of kin of personnel killed in action will be eligible for the bonus regardless of the number of days under fire.

The bill provides that for every month of which six or more days were spent under enemy fire the veteran will receive a $45 bonus. In cases where the six days run into separate months, combat pay will be paid for only one of the months.

Personnel wounded, injured, captured or missing in action will be paid combat pay for the month and for not more than three months while remaining in this category. For those killed in action the bonus will be paid for the month in which death occurred and then figured in with the death gratuity.

Under the bill's terms, secretaries of the services must rule on the units that will be designated as combat units and eligible for combat pay. They will issue regulations for general field interpretation. Drafting of these regulations are expected to take some time.

However, current planning indicates that those now in combat will be the first to receive this benefit since easy verification of combat status will eliminate a great deal of red tape. Recent returnees serving in the same enlistments would be next in line for the same reason. Others, those serving in new enlistments and those who have returned to civilian pursuits would need record verifications from the Adjutant General's Office in Washington, and from the Demobilized Personnel Record Section in St. Louis, Mo. Submission of claims and record checks will take a good deal longer in these cases.

A Salute To Army Medicine

Army Statistics Top Topic At DA Conference

Statistical activities in the Sixth Army will be one of the major topics to be given at the Conference on Continental Army Statistics to be held at the Pentagon by the Department of the Army 21-23 July.

This report will be given by Mr. Bernard Kahn, Chief, Program Review and Analysis Division, Office of the Sixth Army Comptroller. He leaves for Washington this week end.

The conference is designed to furnish guidance to personnel engaged in statistical analysis activities. The Sixth Army report will be the only one of its type on the agenda.

One of the major topics of the conference will be consideration of methods of simplifying or eliminating reports.

Soldier Profits Are Freed

It is now possible for members of the Armed Forces to sell their home and not pay income tax on any profits they make, providing the money is invested in a new home within four years.

This act, signed by President Truman this week, replaces a law which allowed non-recognition of property profits of service personnel for an eighteen month period.

Army Comptroller To Retire After 36 Years' Service

COLONEL R. B. McBRIDE

After thirty-six years of service, the last three spent as Sixth Army Comptroller, Colonel Robert B. McBride will be advanced to brigadier general and retired on 31 July.

Colonel McBride graduated from West Point in the Class '16. He served as an artillery officer with the Asiatic Fleet in World War I and was later a member of the U.S. Liquidation Committee in Paris.

During the post war period he served as an instructor at the Field Artillery School, was a senior instructor for civilian components for six years. He attended the Command and General Staff School in '28 and for two years was a member of the historical section of the Army War College, where he helped compile and edit a history of WWI. He also served as an instructor at the Academy, the Command and General Staff School and the Army War College.

In WWII, Col. McBride served as G-2 for the Second Army for two years and was later assigned to General Douglas MacArthur's staff in Australia. He was in charge of the plans and operations of U.S. and Australian forces in Australia and New Guinea until '43.

Following WWII he was assigned as chief of the Fifth Army's Special Planning Group until he was ordered to his present assignment as Sixth Army Comptroller.

Centralize Movie And TV Support At Ft. MacArthur

The Sixth Army Commander, Lt. Gen. Joseph M. Swing, moved this week to centralize loaning of supplies and equipment to Motion Picture and Television Studios, by delegating the responsibility to the Commanding General, Fort MacArthur, California.

In view of its geographical location and proximity to the origin of these requests, Fort MacArthur is considered desirable as a location at which to centralize operations in support of this type of project.

All requests made by motion picture companies, TV companies, or other agencies of this nature, will be coordinated with Chief of Information, Los Angeles, and Headquarters Sixth Army. Requests should normally be accompanied or preceded by Department of the Army approval. Requests received without Department of the Army approval will be forwarded to Sixth Army Headquarters by the most expeditious means in consonance with the date the equipment or supplies are required. When requests are accompanied or preceded by Department of the Army authority, Sixth Army Headquarters will be notified immediately and support required.

Responsibility for the final settlement of payment in connection with service charges and equipment damage or losses incurred by the Government, as a result of such support, rests with the Commanding General at Fort MacArthur. When current directives permit, Fort MacArthur will retain supplies and equipment in station stocks in quantities indicated.

Support rendered to these projects will be limited by security considerations, non-interference with military programs, or operation of command, at no Government cost, and non-interference with private labor or civilian enterprise.

Korea Veterans' Bill Becomes Law Benefits Parallel WWII Predecessor

The President signed into law this week the long awaited Korea Veterans Bill, granting education and training, home and business loans, mustering-out pay and unemployment compensation assistance to veterans of service on and after 27 June 1950.

Concerning the long controversy and thinking of Congress which motivated enactment of the measure, Rep. Olin E. Teague (D., Tex.), principal architect of the Korea GI Bill, said, "A veteran is first a citizen and a taxpayer, and second a veteran."

"We have tried to establish a program which will provide sound readjustment assistance to veterans returning to civilian life, and which at the same time will protect the interest of the veteran and the public as a whole."

To be eligible for the benefits, you need not have served in Korea; an honorable discharge and a minimum of 90 days active duty, unless separated earlier for service-connected disability, is all that's required.

On discharge you become eligible for $100 to $300 mustering-out pay. You get $100 if you served less than 60 days; $200 if you served more than 60 days, and $300 if you served more than 60 days and spent any time overseas, Alaska service included.

Those eligible for the $300 payment will get $100 on discharge and the remainder by mail in two separate monthly checks of $100 each. If you're eligible for the $200 payment, you'll get $100 on discharge and the remaining $100 one month later by mail. If you're eligible for the $100 payment, you'll get all of it on discharge.

Benefits are retroactive, so those veterans discharged before enactment of the Bill, and before the services get the mustering-out pay accounts set up, should make an application to the appropriate branch of your service.

Officers above the rank of captain in the Army, Air Force, and Marine Corps, or full lieutenant in the Navy, are not eligible for the benefits.

Mustering-out pay received for World War II does not prevent you from collecting under the Korea GI Bill.

If you are unemployed, through no fault of your own, your local State Employment Service will administer the unemployment compensation. A maximum of $26 weekly for 26 weeks is the full entitlement, and these provisions are not effective until 90 days from date of the President's signature.

Veterans who receive $300 mustering-out pay are not eligible until 90 days after discharge; those who receive $200 must wait 60 days before becoming eligible, and veterans who receive $100 must wait 30 days before applying for unemployment compensation.

One and one-half days education or training for each day of service on and after 27 June 1950 is provided, regardless of where you served.

Those veterans who served both in World War II and since 27 June 1950 are eligible for further education and training benefits under the new law, provided the total period received doesn't exceed 48 months.

The education and training allowance is paid directly to the veteran. You pay your own tuition, buy books, supplies, etc. You will be paid $110 monthly if single; $135 monthly if you have one dependent and $160 monthly if you have more than one dependent, while you attend school. If you attend school on less than a full-time basis, the monthly training allowance will be pro-rated accordingly.

Your training or education must be initiated by 20 August 1954, or within two years after discharge, whichever is later.

The Korea GI Bill extends the World War II loan program to veterans of service on and after 27 June 1950. The Government will guarantee up to 60 percent of a home loan to a $7500 maximum. For business loans, the Government will guarantee up to a $2000 maximum.

You will have until 10 years after the President or Congress declares the present emergency over to take advantage of the loan benefits.

T. I. & E. Funds Limited to EMs In New Bill

Expenditures for Troop Education will be limited to Army enlisted personnel in fiscal year 1953, Congress indicated in the Department of Defense Appropriation Bill.

Prior to final passage, Department of the Army objected strenuously to phrases "Educational services for Army enlisted personnel" and "educational services for Army personnel whose education was interrupted when the individual began his military service." After being tossed from sub-committee to Department of Defense and back to a Joint House-Senate Committee, the original House wording was retained:

"Present status of college program is that no tuition assistance will be granted officers or warrant officers. Enlisted men will receive tuition aid of 50 per cent but not more than $7.50 per semester hour. Further advice will follow."

2,500 ROTC Cadets on Six-week Encampment

Ft. Benning, Ga.—Maj. Gen. Robert N. Young, Infantry Center commander, recently welcomed 2,500 Infantry ROTC cadets attending summer camp here.

The cadets, representing 69 colleges and universities in the Second, Third, Fourth and Fifth Army areas and Puerto Rico, began arriving in June for the six-week summer encampment, largest ever held in the U. S.

Army T. I. C. Topic

Current events and TIC topics of the past two months will be covered in a quiz to be given during T&E conferences on the Presidio next week. The recent TIC topics have included such subjects as "The Army's Rotation Policy and You," "Communist Propaganda," "I'll Tell the World," "Our Army 177 Years Old," and "Your Vote." Important national and international events discussed during conference news summaries will be the basis of some of the quiz questions.

ORC Training Exhibit Will Tour Fifty Cities

Beginning on 8 September and continuing to 10 December, four mobile instruction and demonstration teams will appear in over 50 cities in the Sixth Army Area, to give two hours of instruction and demonstration of military equipment and material to ORC personnel. Other civilian components and the general public will be invited to attend these meetings.

It is anticipated that each team will be comprised of one field grade and one company grade officer. Technical services that will furnish teams are: Team One—Ordnance; Team Two—Engineers; Team Three—Quartermaster; Team Four—Transportation and Chemical.

The purpose of these teams is to keep the reservist abreast of current trends in all military phases and to demonstrate equipment and material not readily available at the local level.

AFPS

PAUL BUNYAN might have had an easier way of felling and cutting trees, but the 315th Engineers find the portable power saw they are using to be right handy. Civilian contractors would charge as much as $100 to fell a single tree—and the engineers removed nearly 3,000 eucalyptus, pine and cypress while working on the post.

Many Jobs Well Done

Ft. Worden Engineers Finish Four Months' Work On Post

After four months of arduous duties varying from topping trees to digging ditches, the 315th Engineer Port Construction Company has completed its training project on the Presidio and will return next week to Fort Worden, Washington.

The company's accomplishments during the past months have been numerous. The major portion of the project has been the improvement of the post's forest stands and the prevention of soil erosion. However, they did much work in assisting the post engineers in demolition of buildings, preparation of parking areas and other tasks.

Improvement of forest stands involved the removal of nearly 3,000 fallen or unstable trees and thinning of over-populated areas. From these trees, the company salvaged 450 cords of wood and 2,800 fender pilings.

One of their last forest improvement jobs was to create a progressive wind screen in the area south of the cemetery. There they topped the trees progressively higher in the direction of prevailing winds starting from half the trees' height at one edge of the screen to three-quarters at the other. This top progression will turbulate the winds breaking their force so fewer trees will fall during storms.

Twelve acres of land on the post were treated for soil erosion. The last and most extensive work was done under the Golden Gate bridge approach. At that site, a complete survey of the land was made and then an adequate drainage system installed.

Members of the 315th also assisted in the demolition of 25 buildings on the post which were torn down because their cost of upkeep was greater than their value. Whenever a building was taken down, the men saved all salvagable material and in one case they removed the boards singly because the wood was in good condition.

At the parking area across from the post dispensary, the 315th first cleared the land of trees and later hauled red rock for the fill. In addition to this, they also hauled rock for Crissy Field, the motor pool near 25th Avenue entrance, and a Fort Baker parking lot.

All the work done for the post engineers by the 315th was coordinated by Capt. Delmar L. Currier of the Post Engineers.

When the 315th returns to Fort Worden next week it will continue its training in the construction of port facilities.

Sirens A 'Coming!

If you hear bells and sirens on Tuesday, 22 July, don't run and hide your head. It is only San Francisco's Office of Civil Defense testing their air raid sirens. San Francisco's sirens will blow their tops at 1100 hours.

TANGLED MASSES of fallen trees and brush were cleared by the 315th Engineer Port Construction Company men who salvaged 450 cords of usable wood and 2,800 fender pilings during the four months they worked in the forest stands of the Presidio and Fort Scott.

AER Funds Assist Soldiers To Meet Emergency Situations

Unexpected emergencies which could happen to anyone are the cause of requests for aid from the Army Emergency Relief, Major Ella A. Wilton, Fund Custodian, stated this week as the organization reached the midway mark in its annual campaign for funds.

Review of the loans made at the Presidio during the past year shows that the largest numbers of loans have been made to men whose wives had failed to receive their allotment checks in time to meet urgent expenses and to those having to make preparations for overseas assignments.

While these cases represent the majority of requests for assistance coming before the AER, the others are as urgent although widely varied.

A wounded Korean veteran expected to receive funds from his civilian insurance which would help him during the period when deductions were being made for a prior overpayment of pay. When he investigated he learned that his injury was not covered by the insurance so AER helped him to pay his immediate bills.

The mother of a soldier stationed in the East came to the Presidio AER for assistance when she was faced with eviction from her flat which she was preparing for roomers. She was able to get funds to carry her until she could rent her rooms.

This year the Presidio organization issued loans to three men in cases where a dependent was in serious need of an operation and the hospitals required at least a partial payment in advance.

When the wife of one Presidian died, the AER loaned the man sufficient funds for funeral expenses and to send their children to the grandparents to live.

The funds for this assistance are for the most part the result of the yearly campaign during which voluntary contributions are made. No government funds are appropriated for such emergency needs of members of the Army and their dependents.

Blood Donations Still Below Weekly Quota

Blood collections in the Armed Forces Blood Donor Program, which were at a 24-week low on 22 June, increased slightly the following week, but remained well below the weekly quota of 75,000 pints of whole blood, Department of Defense and the American Red Cross announced today.

During the forty-second week of the Campaign, 23-29 June, donations totaled 58,912 pints, an increase of 6,457 pints over the previous week. The American Red Cross and cooperating blood banks contributed 48,030 pints and the Armed Forces Blood Donor Centers collected 10,882 pints.

Since the Armed Forces is on the receiving end of this Program, let's get on the giving end also. Let's listen to all the cliches . . . we may save our own life!

Base Topo Heeds Call for Blood

Twenty pints of blood were donated to the Letterman General Hospital by the 30th Engineer Base Topographic Battalion last week in answer to an emergency call by the hospital.

The contributions were part of a revised program of blood donations at Fort Winfield Scott. This plan includes donations to both Letterman Hospital and the Armed Forces Blood Bank.

Each week, a list is compiled of the eligible donors and their corresponding blood types with the information being relayed to the hospital. This week, 58 men are standing by in case of an emergency call.

Total contributions to the Armed Forces Blood Donor Program by the 30th since January 1 now stands at 526 pints of blood.

SERVICE PLUS!—A modern Florence Nightingale—trim, efficient and of course pretty—prepares to aid in the frontline evacuation of seriously wounded troops via a helicopter ambulance. Immediate and expert attention weighs heavily in the favor of battle casualties that might either have died or been crippled from delayed treatment. In sharp contrast is the horse drawn ambulance (second photo) of Spanish American War days. Old Dobbin would have trouble keeping up with modern warfare even if he were Seabiscuit. Photo three shows the interior of a modern traction ward that specializes in orthopedic and general surgery cases. The last word in equipment and efficiency, the modern Army hospital has kept abreast of science in its contributions to patient care. In the bottom photo is shown a traction ward of the World War I variety.

Army Medical Service Will Be 177 Years Old On 27 July

Proud in the knowledge that the combined efforts of its 90,000 physicians, nurses, medical specialists and enlisted men and women have created the healthiest combat force in history, the Army Medical Service will celebrate its 177th anniversary on Sunday, 27 July 1952.

Participating in the Sixth Army Medical activities are 6,000 officers, enlisted men and women and civilians. They assure the smooth functioning of two General Hospitals, 146 medical units and one dental laboratory.

Currently the Sixth Army area has available over 3,000 hospital beds, as compared with 668 before the start of the Korean conflict. During the year ending 30 June, admissions in the Sixth Army hospitals, exclusive of Letterman and Madigan General Hospitals, totaled 51,792.

From the tiny band of doctors and assistants organized as a medical department by the Continental Congress in 1775 at the behest of General Washington, the Army Medical Service has grown to the largest military medical service in existence. Whether in combat or out, Army medical personnel are dedicated to the task of safeguarding and restoring the health of the individual soldier as the best means of conserving America's fighting strength.

Most Army doctors, dentists, medical administrators, nurses and members of the Army's medical team will be too busy on the 27th to take more than passing note of the anniversary of their organization. They will be so engaged in surgery, X-ray therapy, research, teaching or one of a myriad other activities that they will have no time for celebration.

The extraordinary success of their efforts in Korea and elsewhere is manifest. For one thing, fewer wounded men are dying once they reach treatment than ever before. After that more of them are returning to full duty faster than ever before in the history of warfare.

Figures bear out the story. Since last year's anniversary the number of men who survive after getting medical treatment of even the most rudimentary sort has risen from 975 to 977. Both figures contrast strikingly with the 955 per thousand rate of World War II and the 915 per thousand ratio of World War I.

But the Army's "medics" are not complacent. The tactical battlefield may have been stabilized in Korea but there can be no respite in the war on disease, injury and infection. The Army Medical Service must wage an unrelenting offensive lest it lose the battle to its hosts of unseen enemies.

Since last 27 July Army Medical Service personnel in Korea have continued to improve the quality of care being received by all Army patients on the battlefield, in the smoothly operating mobile Army surgical hospitals or in rear evacuation hospitals.

Medical research and development program for the coming year includes work in such fields of military importance as cold injury, plasma substitutes, thermal burns and shock.

Surgeon General's Message

The 177th anniversary of the Army Medical Service on July 27 affords each of us an opportunity to renew the historical sense of mission which alone can enable us to maintain the finest military medical organization in the world. We realize that we are the inheritors of a tradition of "service above self," upheld over a period longer than the life of the United States itself.

The anniversary is a fitting occasion for all of us to rededicate ourselves to the mission for which so many of our members gave their lives during the past year in Korea. We draw strength from the heroism of our fallen enlisted aidmen, from the devotion of our nurses, from the skill of our physicians and from the contributions of our medical specialists, other enlisted personnel and civilians.

Entering the third year of the Korean conflict and the 178th year of our own existence, I am confident that the Army Medical Service will continue to perform its duties in a manner befitting the greatest of our predecessors.

Maj. Gen. George E. Armstrong, MC
Surgeon General of the Army

Devoted Few Do Much

Civilians Play Important Role In Advancing Medical Service

As the Army Medical Service observes its 177th anniversary on 27 July, few persons will realize the role played by civilians since the earliest days of the Army's medical service. Hardly any of the many thousands who have benefited from the triumphs of Army medicine know that these advances have been due in large measure to the tireless devotion of a relatively small group of civilians employed by the Army Medical Service.

These civilians include physicians, scientists, technicians and the less exalted personages who have sterilized the equipment, laundered the surgical gowns and maintained the laboratories and hospitals. More than 25,000 civilians of the service have good reason to take pride in the anniversary.

Civilians are performing a wide variety of jobs, especially in such crucial areas as medical research and development and hospital administration. They are assigned mainly to work that does not afford military training to Medical Service uniformed personnel and does not involve military discipline.

Because military personnel are subject to frequent changes of assignment on short notice, civilians have proved indispensable in providing the permanent administrative and technical core for such long-term undertakings as research on new drugs or development of an improved management program at a hospital.

At present 1,400 civilian nurses are serving with members of the Nurse Corps. Two hundred of these civilian nurses are now with American troops in Europe and the Far East.

Some 1,500 civilian consultants are currently on the rolls of the Medical Service subject to call at a moment's notice. They include world-renowned specialists in all fields of medicine, together with authorities in such subjects as supply, production, diathermy, hospital management, personnel and sanitation. They lecture at Army medical schools, inspect overseas installations, advise medical staff office in Washington and generally perform an invaluable service to the Army.

Armed Forces Boast Largest Medical Library

From a humble beginning as the Army Medical Library started in 1836, the recently established Armed Forces Medical Library is the largest institution of its kind in the world.

It will serve as a central medical library for the Army, Navy and Air Force and as a National Library for medicine and related sciences. The extensive facilities will also be available to medical research and development contractors, other governmental agencies and civilian physicians and medical scientists of all countries.

Having more than 650,000 bound volumes, together with a vast collection of journals written in practically every known language, the library is the center of attraction to physicians and medical scientists from all over the world. In the course of a few weeks it is not unusual for attendance register to show the names of scholars from countries such as Venezuela, Panama, Germany, Sweden, England, India and Thailand.

contributions to modern field dentistry. "Say boys how about giving the victim some air!" (photo three) might well be sound advice to the stalwart group of doctors and technicians in this Spanish American War tintype. If those same proud medics of grandpa's day could get a look at the modern mobile hospital (bottom photo) of today they would no doubt be speechless. Staffed by the finest doctors and technicians in the world, the Army's Mobile Surgical Hospitals have reduced the death-rate resulting from combat casualties to a new all-time low.

TOP TEE-TOPPERS of the Presidio golf tournament line up their golf balls (in boxes) awarded as individual honors for low 72-hole scores on the Presidio golf course. They are (l. to r.): Capt. Duane Bagley, M/Sgt. George Derosia, Cpl. Bill Rowe (holding his 1952 Championship Trophy), Capt. Rollin Kapp and Pfc. Fred Haner. These five and another golfer, yet to be selected, will compose the Post team to compete in the Sixth Army southern division tourney to be held here next month.

Remains Champ!

Rowe Successfully Defends His Presidio Golf Crown

Presidio's golf championship was retained by Cpl. Bill Rowe, 6002 ASU, as he successfully defended his 1951 title against a field of 18 in the annual post tournament last week on the Presidio golf course.

Leading throughout all four days of the tourney, he finished five strokes ahead of M-Sgt. George Derosia of Food Service School, his closest competitor.

On the last 18 during the final day's play, Derosia was within two strokes of Rowe as they started the 17th. Derosia then finished par bogey for 77 while Rowe shot birdie birdie for a total of 75.

Rowe's total score for the 72 holes was 295, with rounds of 71-77-72-75. Derosia's tally was 77-73-73-77 for a final of 300.

Capt. Rollin Kapp of CBR school placed third in the tourney followed by Capt. Duane Bagley, Special Services, and Pfc. Fred Haner, 21st Engineers. Together with Rowe and Derosia, these men will represent the Presidio in the Sixth Army southern division golf tournament to be played on the Presidio golf course 12-15 August.

When the Presidio team enters the southern division tournament another player will be added. The sixth position on team is being left open temporarily to offer newcomers a chance to compete. Otherwise, this spot will be filled by Pfc. Clark Toussaint, 459th AAA or Pvt. James E. Reeves, 47th Brigade, both of whom were in the top division of the post tourney.

With his second Presidio title, Corporal Rowe adds to championships won while a civilian in Seattle, Wash. In 1949 he took the Inglewood Invitational and the next year followed up with Seattle City Amateur and Scot's Two-Ball tourney. He also placed second at the Esmeralda meet in Spokane, Wash., and played in the quarter finals of the Washington State Amateur in 1950. Derosia was the 1950 Presidio titleholder and both he and Captain Kapp are veterans of Sixth Army tournament play.

(By Armed Forces Press Service) A no-holds-barred two-round bout is in the making. The challenger is Jack Dempsey, one of boxing's all-time greats and certainly one of the sport's most colorful performers. His opponent—Jim Norris of the International Boxing Club. In the first round, Dempsey's attack will seek to break I.B.C.'s so-called monopoly on the better fighters. In the second stanza Jack aims to eliminate the practice of televising any inferior match just to satisfy commitments.

Locale for the start of the brawl is Toledo, Ohio, where Jack's knockout win over giant Jess Willard in 1919 made him heavyweight champion. Dempsey has corralled 200 amateur and professional hopefuls to fight, he says, in a heavyweight tournament. The I.B.C.'s big boys—Walcott and Marciano—are the target of the tournament survivors. They will have to answer the challenge of Jack's proteges. A win by one of the youngsters can wrest control of boxing promotion from the I.B.C.

Jack may be right about I.B.C.'s system of exclusive contracts with fighters but unless he has piles of money with which to wage his fight, he can't hope to best such a big outfit. They have the cash to promote more cash. And that's why fighters are available to knock each other's brains out. TV fare is not always good, but club treasuries earn little from TV time purchases. They make their profits from cash-paying customers. It's hard for small-time organizations to buck I.B.C. there, too. But Jack never gave up in seven years as the world's champion or at any other time in a long, praise-worthy career. He won't quit easily in this bout either.

Kono Retains Top Form in Olympic Practice Session

Pfc. Tommy Kono, the Fort Baker weightlifter and Sixth Army's big hope in the Olympic Games, is still retaining the top form that enabled him to crack a world's record in the Olympic Trials.

Last week in a practice lift he came within a pound or two of a world mark, a feat that led Olympic Coach Bob Hoffman to state enthusiastically, "Tommy has as good a chance for an Olympic gold medal as does Bob Mathias." Kono already holds the three-way world record of 815 pounds for press, snatch and clean and jerk.

WACs Return From Fort Lewis With Volleyball Championship

Presidio WACs defeated Fort Ord WACs to win the championship in the finals of the Sixth Army volleyball tournament at Fort Lewis last week. The tourney was forced into extra games by an earlier victory of the Ord team.

Playing three-game series, the Presidio WACs lost the first series of the tournament to Fort Ord, 15-21, 11-15, and 10-15. Having won the Sixth Army southern division title without a loss, this was their only defeat in two tournaments.

In their second game the Post team eliminated Madigan Army Hospital WACs in two straight, 15-3 and 15-12.

The Presidio team avenged their earlier loss to Fort Ord by taking two straight in two series. The first series they won by scores of 15-8 and 15-2. They took the final championship 15-9 and 17-15.

Both of the last two series against Fort Ord were played the same evening, with the men's championship play being staged between series. In the final game Fort Ord started with an 11-3 lead, but the Presidio WACs fought back to their two-point victory.

In the men's series Ford Ord Special Troops won the championship over 20th Infantry Fort Ord. This tourney also went into extra games.

The women's championship trophy and individual awards were presented to the Presidio WACs by Brig. Gen. John J. Burns, Fort Lewis, Commanding General.

99th Engineers Call Halt To Headquarter's Win Skein

In an unsuccessful attempt to extend their winning streak to two in a row the Headquarters Company softball team suffered a 15-4 loss to the 99th Engineers at Fort Scott Tuesday.

Headquarters held the lead only once—when they scored a run in the top of the first. The 99th came back with five runs in the same inning, then added six more in the fourth, leaving little doubt as to the game's outcome. The Headquarters team ran true to form and committed nine errors in six innings of fielding.

Six-hit pitching by Aranza, 99th pitcher, was aided by a double play in the first inning and by the fielding performance of Center Fielder Vic Christiansen who converted most of the well-tagged balls into easy outs.

The 99th hitting was led by Kirby, who drove in four runs with a homer and a single.

Raiders Discover Errors Can Make Some Difference

Playing two civilian teams over the weekend, Red Raiders first turned in a game without errors to defeat the San Rafael Merchants 8-2, then followed by losing a game by an error to the Jefferson Club of San Francisco 4-3.

Pitching his first game for the Presidians, Luna of the 505th MPs allowed only two runs in six innings and was the winning pitcher. Stupur took over the mound in the seventh to strike out three men and bring his season's total of strike-outs to 326.

The Raiders made nine hits, six of them doubles. Potts topped his team mates' hitting display with a 400-foot double.

On their own field Sunday afternoon the Presidians did not do so well, losing to the Jefferson Club by one run made possible by an error in the ninth inning. Left-hander Woods, another newcomer from the 505th MPs held the Jefferson players to six hits.

Although the Raiders scored one more hit than their opponents, the hits were scattered and their three runs were made in separate innings. The team's player-manager, Viviani, scored two hits, the seventh consecutive game in which he has connected.

In 61 bouts, former world champion Joe Louis won 51 by knockouts.

The longest scoreless tie baseball game ever played was between the Cincinnati Reds and the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1946. The game was called because of darkness after 4 hours and 40 minutes of play. Johnny VanderMeer pitched 15 scoreless innings during the game.

Bikini Critique—

The French bathing suit—known to the masses as the Bikini—has been denounced by many and upheld by few. Since this is the season when American girls are shopping for swim togs the battered and bleeding Bikini once again has hit the spotlight. Here are a few samples of opinion from Hollywood: Esther Williams—"Bikinis are not flattering and they're impractical; you can't swim in them." Janet Leigh—"I like low-cut evening gowns, but the nudity of French suits isn't attractive." Betty Grable—"If the French girls want to show their navels, it all right with me. I'll stick to American swim suits." Marilyn Monroe upheld the virtues of the Bikini—"I think you should expose as much area to the sun as possible. And I don't understand why people say you can't swim in Bikini. If the suit is fastened properly, nothing should go wrong. At least I've never had any trouble with mine."

Vargas Girl—

Jeanne Dunn, the original Vargas girl who possesses one of the most photogenic torsos in the nation, obtained her first starring movie role recently by answering an ad in a Hollywood trade paper. The ad read: "Beautiful athletic girl not afraid to wrestle a tiger, for feminine lead in new jungle film." Miss Dunn also skis, rides horses bareback, plays tennis and is an expert swimmer.

Top Records—

G-3 Picnic Proves Popular Success With 175 Guests

Marin Town and Country Club in Fairfax was the setting for the Hq., Sixth Army G-3 Picnic held on 13 July.

Colonel W. B. Augur greeted the 175 guests and presented a cake to Colonel J. R. Culleton, former G-3 Executive Officer, who recently retired after 35 years of service. Honored guests were Mrs. M. B. Halsey and daughter, Mrs. J. R. Culleton and daughter, and Mrs. G. Cody, Sixth Army historian. Mrs. Cody is leaving soon with her husband for Fort Benning, Ga.

The Training Section proved to all who attended the picnic that they were the champion softball players by winning their games against the Administration Section in both the Men's League and the Powder Puff game. Highlights of the entertainment were Dona Ali-bang's costumed hula, dancing at the pavilion to the Lamp-lighter band, swimming and volley ball.

Ages of the guests ranged from two month old James Loudon, son of Lt. and Mrs. E. J. Loudon to 87 year old Mrs. Ada Dickerson, mother of Mr. C. R. Dickerson of the G-3 Section.

The Sixth Army Food Service School prepared the luncheon, which was proclaimed as outstanding by the members of the G-3 Section.

Service Plus Safety!

Special Missions Squadron Provides Necessary Airlift

Providing essential air transportation to the Sixth Army's Commanding General and his staff is the assignment of the 1117th Special Air Missions Squadron at Hamilton Field, California.

The unit, comprising 12 Officer Pilots and 29 Airmen, has six VC-47 aircraft at their disposal to carry on their mission. The men and their planes are in the air approximately 400 hours each month to fly 250 passengers 370,000 miles.

The "old man" of the unit is Major Fred W. Hartley Jr., who is also Lieutenant General Joseph M. Swing's personal pilot. The Major is a veteran of overseas during World War II and Korea. In both wars he flew Troop Carrier planes and in the Korean conflict he commanded a Troop Carrier Squadron.

"Our mission," stated the flying Major, "is to give prompt, efficient and courteous airline service to the Sixth Army with safety as the most important factor."

The safety record of the unit cannot be surpassed. Activated in March 1945 the specialized air force unit has never had an accident. Also during that time, there has never been a mission delayed or cancelled due to mechanical failure.

Eleven of the twelve pilots are "green card" men. That means they have served at least seven years as a pilot, logged 2,000 hours in the air and passed rigid physical and mental examinations. A "green card" pilot is authorized to take off or land an airplane in any weather.

The squadrons duties include flying VIP's both military and civilian anywhere in the United States. Approximately 60% of their work is done in the 6th Army Area, and the other 40% anywhere in the country to where an assignment may take them. The officers and airmen are critically selected for this type of work by Headquarters United States Air Force. Qualifications include flying ability, appearance, personality and judgment.

A recent example of the outstanding work done by the group took place when the Civilian Aides to the Secretary of the Army and Chairmen of the 30 Army Advisory Committees, air-toured the Sixth Army Area. Three planes set out from Hamilton Field to pick up these VIP's throughout the eight states comprising the Sixth Army Area. After pick-up the target was Camp Roberts, California. The tight schedule set for the airmen was to have all three planes complete their mission between 1645 hours and 1715 hours, a spread of only thirty minutes. The first plane landed on the airstrip at Camp Roberts at 1653 hours and the last plane touched its wheels to the ground at 1714½ hours.

The twelve pilots who average between 60 and 110 hours in the air each month are thoroughly trained for this top assignment. In order to retain this desired position, each pilot must pass a three hour written examination three times a year plus three proficiency checks of four hours each per month. The flyers average about 18 days per month away from their home base.

The SAM squadron has carried many important personalities including Army Secretary Frank Pace and Secretary of Defense for the Philippine Republic, Ramon Magsaysay. Leading military figures and outstanding persons from the entertainment world have frequently been passengers. Among those who have been flown to Sixth Army Posts, Camps and Stations for live-shows are Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis, Edgar Bergen, Bob Hope and his group and Jane Russell. These shows require flights four or five times a month.

Travel agents for the air-arm are the members of the military Air Division at Sixth Army Headquarters. Officer in Charge of MAD is Lieutenant Alex L. Alpers. He is assisted by Ruth Cable in planning and scheduling flights that are necessary. They received the information concerning flights from General Swing, his chief of staff, or chiefs of the General's staff.

The Hamilton Field Squadron is one of six that are stationed throughout the Army areas. All six squadrons belong to the 1110th SAM Group with Headquarters at Bowling Air Force Base in Washington, D. C. The Group is commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Robert Carlson.

Planes used for these special flights are VC-47's and differ from the standard air force C-47 planes in the interior only. They are constructed in such a manner so as to assure complete comfort for the passengers.

The squadron has been cited on many occasions for its outstanding work. A recent inspection by the Auditor General brought praise for the active cost-consciousness program now in effect. The development of maintenance practices to cut costs has saved the government many thousands of dollars without decreasing the efficiency of operations.

Leaves Alaskan Command!

Veteran Cavalry Leader New Commander At Fort Lawton

Fort Lawton—Col. Garnett H. Wilson, former CO of Fort Richardson, Alaska, has assumed command of Fort Lawton, Washington. He replaces Col. R. E. Willoughby, who retired 30 June.

The 56-year-old colonel entered the service 39 years ago, and since that time has compiled an enviable record of achievement in a war and peacetime army which has been highlighted by commands at Stuttgart Military Post in Germany, a member of the Dachau War Crimes Commission, and more recently a highly lauded effort in building a top notch army post out of the wilderness surrounding Anchorage, Alaska.

The latter achievement began on Oct. 15, 1950 when Col. Wilson—along with four officers and three enlisted men—began to put Fort Richardson back into shape. Since then the fort has grown from a quonset hut installation into a post of concrete barracks and modern chapels and other recreational and training facilities.

Col. Wilson began his military career in 1913 when he enlisted in the Marine Corps and participated in the Mexican Border campaign in 1914, later attending OCS, he was commissioned 2nd Lt. in the Cavalry in 1917. His first assignment was as tank commander in the 6th Cavalry Regiment with which he served in the U. S. and in France. Following WWI Col. Wilson served in the 6th, 8th and 12th Cavalry Regiments; as an instructor in the Kentucky National Guard; and from 1938 to 1940 served as Regimental Adjutant and Executive Officer in the 25th Cavalry in the Philippine Islands. He returned to the U. S. to become a member of the General Staff with Third Army Corps in 1941.

In December of 1941 he joined the 115th Cavalry as their CO, and took the unit into the EAME theater of operations for combat. At the war's end, Col. Wilson remained in Europe as commander of Stuttgart Military Post, and to serve on the Military Commission during the famous Dachau War Crimes Trial.

He returned for duty in the U. S. and was assigned as an instructor in the Texas National Guard during 1949 and part of 1950. In May, 1950, he received orders placing him in command of the 2nd Task Force in Alaska, and when that unit was deactivated he assumed command of Fort Richardson on Oct. 15, 1950.

Besides the Mexican Border and EAME theater ribbons, Col. Wilson has been awarded the Bronze Star, American Defense, American Theater, Army of Occupation (Germany), and the World War I and II Victory Medals. He also holds the Good Conduct Medal from his service in the Marine Corps.

No Late Change In Service Vote Procedures

Washington—Although Congress failed to pass the "Serviceman's Voting Act of 1952," there is no change in the absentee voting procedures previously outlined in the voting information booklet compiled by the Office of Armed Forces Information and Education.

The booklet describes the methods which the State Legislatures have set up for absentee voting by servicemen and women. The bill in Congress would have ironed out some of the obstacles that might cause servicemen some difficulty in casting their ballots in a few states.

The Senate had passed the proposed voting measure and sent it to the House. But it was never reported out of the House Administration Committee.

The bill was originally introduced in response to a Presidential message pointing out that some servicemen might be deprived of their vote because of procedural obstacles contained in voting laws of a few states.

Some state legislatures have themselves, however, eased some of the requirements. These have been announced through supplements to the original I & E booklet.

PRESIDIO OF SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA

Friday, 25 July, 1952

VICE ADMIRAL SIR WILLIAM ANDREWS, Commander-in-chief of the Royal Navy's America and West Indies Station, and Deputy Supreme Allied Commander in the Atlantic, paid an official call on the Sixth Army Commander, Lieutenant General Joseph

M. Swing, this week. The Admiral, who flew from the East Coast to join his flagship, HMS Sheffield, in port here, was greeted with full military honors at the Presidio. (Army Photo by Cox.)

Army Honors For British Flagship; Admiral Andrewes Presidio Visitor

Sixth Army extended a royal welcome to Her Majesty's Ship Sheffield when she arrived in San Francisco Bay this week for a ten-day goodwill visit.

Just before passing under the Golden Gate Bridge at 0900, H.M.S. Sheffield fired a national salute answered by a 21-gun salute of Presidio's guns.

Shortly after the ship's arrival, an official visit to Lt. Gen. Joseph M. Swing, Sixth Army Commander, was made by Vice Admiral Sir William Andrewes, Commander-in-Chief, American and West Indies Station, and Deputy Supreme Allied Commander in the Atlantic, whose flag the H.M.S. Sheffield flies.

Sir Andrewes was given a 15-gun salute and, accompanied by General Swing, he reviewed an honor guard of Presidio troops. Among the dignitaries present were Commodore J. G. T. Inglis, commander of the Sheffield, and British Consul General Kenneth White.

Officers and men of the Sheffield will be guests of honor at several functions given by city officials, the Army and the Navy. On Wednesday a party for nearly 400 children was held aboard ship.

Saturday and Sunday afternoons, the Sheffield will be open to public inspection from 1400 to 1700 at Pier 7. On Sunday afternoon at 1700, the ceremony of "beating retreat" will be given by the ship's seamen and the Royal Marine band. This 25-minute ceremony will take place on the pier along side the vessel. The Royal Marine band will give a concert in Golden Gate Park earlier Sunday afternoon.

During the war H.M.S. Sheffield had more than the average engagements with the enemy and earned more battle honors than other ships of her class. Launched in 1937, the cruiser was assigned to a special patrol between Iceland and Greenland when the war broke out. Early in 1940, she took part in the Norway landings and later assisted in evacuating troops under heavy attack.

Following action in the Mediterranean, the Sheffield took part in the destruction of the German battleship Bismark. Shadowing the vessel in extremely bad weather, the Sheffield sighted the Bismark and continued to maintain contact although under heavy fire. She succeeded in "homing" Ark Royal's aircraft and Home Fleet destroyers on to the enemy in time to strike the final crippling blows.

Three months later, the Sheffield was the first ship to report sighting the Scharnhorst in Northern waters. With two other cruisers, she twice drove the German ship away from a convoy before the battleship Duke of York took up the fight and closed in after darkness.

Transportation Corps!

Youngest Tech Service Marks Tenth Anniversary This Month

On 31 July 1952, the Transportation Corps, the youngest of the Army's technical services, will celebrate its tenth anniversary. From a World War II fledgling, the Corps has developed and established itself so well, that few people, within and outside the Armed Forces, are aware of its recent origin.

The achievement of maturity and unequivocal acceptance by others within the span of a decade is an accomplishment for any organization. Yet circumstances left no other course, for the Transportation Corps, created in the throes of a world-wide conflict, was not granted time to grow up through adolescence. It was given a man-size job right from the start.

Within a 36-month period of World War II, the Corps transported more than 7,290,000 soldiers and 126,780,000 measurement tons of cargo to 330 ports and beaches overseas. To accomplish this task, as well as moving millions of troops and huge tonnages of freight within the United States, the Corps grew from 87,000 military and civilian personnel to over 400,000 within the same period.

After fulfilling the challenging assignment of returning the millions of troops and their equipment to American shores at the cessation of hostilities, the Corps settled down to perform its smaller, but still on a world-wide scale, transportation responsibilities and at the same time establish a peacetime organization and training program.

In this period the Corps founded a home base at Fort Eustis, Virginia, where the Transportation School and the Transportation Research and Development station are now located. Today its name, "Transportation Center" indicates the variety of activities carried on at Fort Eustis.

With the outbreak of war in Korea, the Corps again was suddenly faced with moving large numbers of men and material at top speed. By applying the experience acquired in World War II and the lessons learned from its post-war training, the then eight-year-old organization displayed the same stamina, adaptability and resourcefulness as its older counterparts. The activities of its port units, the Military Railway Service, and the versatile truck units in Korea are well-known.

In spite of antiquated indigenous equipment, inexperienced local labor, supply lines clogged with refugees, difficult terrain and inclement weather, Transportation Corps troops have moved U. N. men and materials whenever and wherever needed.

Few people realize the size and variety of the Corps' mission. TC personnel, both civilian and military, do not balk at the magnitude of the task, instead they know that everything they move is urgently needed and way and means must be found to get it there on time. Statistics may be dull, but they do indicate quantity and offer a basis of comparison. For example, during the past 12 months the ports of embarkation handled 348 per cent more in-bound passengers than in the preceding year. At the same time the number of outbound passengers increased at 74 per cent. Cargo statistics tell a similar story.

"On the tenth anniversary of the Corps," Maj. Gen. Frank A. Heileman, Chief of Transportation, said, "I wish to commend all TC personnel for their devotion to duty and the high standard of service rendered. On the basis of a ten-year period of outstanding performance, the Corps can be justifiably proud and look at the future with full confidence. It must, can, and will continue to meet all demands made upon it."

EuCom Troops Note: Blarney Stone for Rent

Cork, Ireland.—This is no blarney, lad; Blarney Castle and the Blarney Stone are for rent.

It's not for fun we're telling you this. Sadly, Mrs. Penelope Hamilton, the castle's trustee, reports that high taxes have forced her to offer the place for rent for six months. The 17-room castle, the beloved stone and the ruins of an older castle are included in the bargain.

Those who kiss the stone, we are reminded, gain eloquence. Thousands have traveled miles just to plant one on the old stone. The stone itself is not for sale. The will of the late Sir George Colthurst, who once owned the 150-year-old structure, willed it to a family trust.

No matter what happens in Korea, we must not go back to sleep and pretend that the alarm never sounded. It would be as ridiculous for us to cut back our preparedness program in the present state of world tension as for our law enforcement officers to close up shop when an outbreak of crime has momentarily abated.—The Honorable Frank Pace, Jr.

ROKA Engineering School Is Bright Hope In South Korean's Future

(This is the first of a series of four articles about the Republic of Korea's Army Engineering School, established by the Korean Military Advisory Group. Although the Engineering School is only a single phase of KMAC's overall mission, a mission that has as its aim the complete technical self-sufficiency of the ROK Army, it is an important one. A lesson in practical democracy, the ROKA Engineering School is an excellent example of the Army's help-them-to-help-themselves planning, a policy that will pay dividends in well trained and staunch allies in the Free World's efforts to stem the Communist tide. Art and copy were prepared for the Star Presidian by Cpl. Tom Mapp, and forwarded through the 8th Army Public Information Office. Editor's Note.)

Special to Star Presidian

By Cpl. Tom Mapp
PART I

With KMAC — The American Corporal walked over to the bulldozer. "What's up?" he asked the Korean sergeant. Clouds of chalk white smoke billowed from the machine, spiraling up into the chill of the Korean morning.

"It's the fuel pumps," said the Korean. "I bled them just now. I found one of them was not operating properly."

"Okay," said the American. "We'll get it fixed."

Six weeks ago, Sgt. Kim Yang, of the Republic of Korea Army, didn't know a fuel pump from a camshaft. As for bleeding . . . he'd have thought you crazy.

Thousands of students at the ROKA Engineer School at one time may have thought the Americans a little crazy. Like Sgt. Kim, they had come from small thatched hut villages the length and breadth of the Republic, had been issued a uniform and a few weeks later were expected to know some of the mysteries of modern mechanical monsters.

For thousands of Kims this transition was terrifying and revolutionary. It called for drastic readjustment to American engineering methods and was in sharp contrast to the traditional Korean scene.

Kim's life had been harnessed to the plow. His very existence was rooted in the rice paddies round his home and when a job was to be done in the fields it had meant back-breaking work with the aid of some crude tools fashioned from sticks and a chunk of iron.

Today, on this rocky, chill-swept hill overlooking the Engineer School, Kim was operating a machine that could do the work of one hundred men and which would take him years of earnings to buy, a figure he would find difficult to conceive.

It was to teach Kim how to operate, apply and maintain these machines that The Engineer School, Korean Army, was established. Proof of its early success can be found in the skilled Korean Army engineers who are at present serving with ROKA combat divisions. These engineers, both officers and enlisted men, are engaged in every phase of combat engineering from minelaying to bridgebuilding. Reports coming back to the school indicate that the Koreans are proving skilled at combat field improvisation and are hard and conscientious workers, even in the face of extreme personal danger.

Nothing is spared to give these engineer recruits the very best training that can be provided. Equipment is American and the training program is on almost identical lines to that at Fort Belvoir, where the United States trains its best engineers.

Captain David W. Dale, of Houston, Texas, Advisor from the United States Military Advisory Group to the Republic of Korea (KMAC), agrees that the students have the very best materials with which to work. "Nearly every device our men get at Fort Belvoir they have here. They sometimes forget to repair and maintain equipment . . . but that's understandable considering their earlier lack of mechanical know-how."

Major Samuel M. Van Hook, of Sanford, Florida, KMAC Advisor to the school's Engineering Department, points out that "We Americans have had mechanical appliances since we were knee high. What American boy hasn't torn apart an alarm clock or a Model T? The Koreans haven't had these things. We often expect too much of them. It just isn't there . . . but believe me they are learning."

(NEXT WEEK: ADMINISTRATION AND CURRICULUM.)

Everywhere in life, the true question is not what we gain, but what we do. . . . Carlyle.

Army Doctors Learn Aviation Medicine

The course will last for 11 weeks and graduates will be designated Army Aviation Medical Examiners. Officers interested must be regular officers or reserve officers who agree to sign for an additional 12 months following completion of the course. They also must be physically qualified for flying as outlined in AR 40-100.

Sixth Army Band To Sonoma Fair

Sonoma County Fair will host the Sixth Army Band on 24 July. A parade and concert will be on the band's agenda for this gala affair. Massed bands of all of the services will play the concert with guest conductors from each of the services at their head. The latter will be conducted by the Sixth Army Band's own bandmaster, CWO Nathan A. Cammack, Jr.

Quotable Quip

An East German official showed a visitor around his office. Seeing an instrument that looked like a telephone but had no mouthpiece, the visitor asked in surprise. "How can you talk into that?" "I don't have to," the official explained. "It's my direct line to Moscow. All I do is listen."

Camp Irwin Housing

Camp Irwin, Calif., is one of four Army locations to have been allotted temporary housing units in an assignment of dwellings for critical defense housing areas announced this week by the Housing and Home Finance Agency. One hundred temporary units will be put up at Barstow near Camp Irwin. These are in addition to 100 trailers previously assigned to the area.

Fort Scott Will Get Face-Lifting For 26 Buildings

A face-lifting program involving 26 buildings in the Fort Winfield Scott area began this week.

Exterior painting of these buildings is part of the general clean-up and improvement program being conducted by the Post Engineers on the Presidio of San Francisco, according to Mr. William E. Utiss, Post engineers Executive Officer. Lieutenant Colonel Daniel R. Moss, Post Engineer is in charge of operations.

Work is already underway and the Dave Russ Company of San Francisco expects to finish the job within 90 days.

Mr. Utiss emphasized that the "maintenance program must be set up in order to get the full value from the initial building costs." Pointing out that the project is in line with the Army's cost-consciousness policy, Mr. Utiss said that "by taking the proper steps in painting and general repair the life of any building is prolonged."

Another improvement underway at Fort Scott is the paving of the 30th Engineer Base Topographic Battalion Motor Pool. Grading has been completed and the Lowrie Paving Company of San Francisco started laying the blacktop covering on the graded area Monday. When completed, the new pavement will eliminate the dusty conditions caused by the old gravel base.—Pfc Allan W. Van Soest.

Shoeless Shuffle Talent War Slated by USO

USO is fostering a talent war between members of the Army, Navy and Marines. Final objective of the war is to select the best Armed Forces talent to appear on a USO television show next month.

First battle to be staged will be at the Presidio Service club at 1830 tonight. Six acts of soldier talent will be presented and two will be selected to compete for final honors at the club on Wednesday 30 July.

Similar contests are being held for personnel of the Navy and Marines. Finalists will appear on the USO Armed Forces Show along with the winning soldier act.

Talented Presidians are urged to enter the war. Singers, dancers, hill-billy groups or any other entertainers are wanted for the competition.

Following the talent show tonight, the club holds a dance entitled the Oklahoma Shoeless Shuffle. Shoes will be left at the door of the club and prizes will be given for those wearing the brightest socks.

A Czechoslovakian newspaper recently reported that Vera Hamelkova, a 21-year-old student at the mining college in Moravska Ostrava "has spent her wedding night in true people's democratic fashion. She took her groom down to the Stalin mine, where the couple put in a voluntary night shift to increase coal production."

VM's Suffer Bottle Fatigue!

"Some of our bottle vending machines are ill," Major Marks, Exchange Officer at Bay Area Exchange, diagnosed last week. "The trouble is bottle fatigue and the underlying cause is nutritional." He added that this particular malady is caused by a lack of empty bottles.

"It is quite simple," he said. "A vending machine must have bottles with which to operate. When empty bottles are not returned to their proper place a shortage of bottles develops. This contributes to vending machine bottle fatigue. The best prescription is a lot of returned empty bottles."

Noting that customers lose when a bottle is lost, Major Marks stated that losses at this installation were running at $495.00. As bottle losses are a part of exchange operating costs, it makes it tougher for the exchange to meet its dividend requirements. These dividends help pay for many worthwhile entertainment and recreational projects on this installation.

"Bottle fatigue can be beaten," Major Marks concluded. "One good way is for each unit to set up its own 'B' Day and collect and return all the bottles in the area. It's one way that PX customers can help the PX help them!"

HIGHLY SKILLED SPECIALISTS are required to operate the MRU's electrical accounting machines. Military personnel are first given eight weeks of intensive training in operation of the machines and MRU procedures at the Adjutant General's School, Ft. Benjamin Harrison, Ind., and they supplement their experience on the job with weekly classes. Pfc. Joy Gleason (top photo) operates a card punch machine coding individual cards with information regarding personnel changes. Sgt. Donald F. Hamilton (second photo) is running a reproducing punch machine used to duplicate any group of cards with either part or all the coded information. At the tabulator in the bottom photo Cpl. Henry C. Whittier checks as a roster is being printed with information automatically taken from punch cards. (Army Photos by Pfc. N. Igelsrud.)

Pictorial Division Announces Latest Picture Releases

Initial distribution of a new motion picture film "RTAF 142 Japan Logistical Command" has been announced by the Pictorial Division, Signal Section.

"Japan Logistical Command" is intended to acquaint service and television audiences with the operation of the Army organization chartered with the logistical support of the fighting forces in Korea and the occupation forces in Japan, by presenting highlights of its main operations.

Diversified activities such as the reclamation and rebuilding program using war surplus and battlefield salvage, hydroponic farming, processing of casual replacements, evacuation of casualties and the commissary train are shown. The rebuilding and reclamation program, which helped to meet the critical shortage in arms and equipment in the early days of the Korean War, and the wide use of indigenous labor and facilities and cost savings to the American taxpayer, are particularly emphasized.

Eight NATO Nations Plan Big Exercise In EuCom This Fall

Washington—Ships, planes and men of eight North Atlantic Treaty Organization nations will participate in "Main Brace," a 13-day exercise to be held in northern Europe in September.

More than 150 warships and hundreds of aircraft will resist a theoretical enemy flank attack in that area. Carrier, antisubmarine and convoy operations will begin Sept. 13.

The maneuver, largest of its kind ever conducted, will be under the dual leadership of Gen. Matthew Ridgway, USA, Supreme Allied Commander Europe, and ADM Lynde D. McCormick, USN, Supreme Allied Commander Atlantic.

Fast carrier forces made up of British and American units, and aircraft and other ships manned by military forces of Canada, Denmark, France, the Netherlands, Norway and Portugal will support NATO's northern flank.

MRU Furnishes Necessary Statistical Magic For Operating An Army

Preparation of prompt, up-to-date statistics on all Sixth Army personnel and equipment for the Department of the Army and the many varied reports for local stations is the responsibility of the 102nd Machine Records Unit.

Local machine records units are maintained at only two Sixth Army installations, Camp Stoneman and Fort Lawton, the rest all being handled at Headquarters on the Presidio by the 102nd. Consolidated reports from these two local units are forwarded to the Presidio for inclusion in some reports.

Establishment of the machine records system in November 1940 was the result of extensive surveys conducted by the Adjutant General Corps proving that electrical accounting machines could be relied upon to achieve maximum success in obtaining more accurate strength reports.

Prior to World War II, the Army consisted of approximately 250,000 troops, most of whom were scattered throughout the United States. The system of clerical handling of these troops was adequate but unsuitable for efficient management of military forces in the event of war.

Personnel reporting procedures were then, as now, dependent upon a Morning Report. However, in order to increase efficiency, a more progressive supplementary form was devised so that the breakdown of personnel could be more exact and more easily handled.

A manually prepared roster of each organization's personnel was required monthly, reflecting all changes in an individual's status since the previous month's roster. In addition, a change memo was prepared and forwarded to the Department of the Army.

The handling and processing of these countless memos presented a great problem. In the first World War, tons of these change memos showered down upon the offices of the AEF. Millions of unprocessed memos were boxed and shipped to Washington at the end of the war where they were still to be processed and filed 25 years later.

The surveys on use of electrical accounting machines were begun in 1939 and the system was placed into operation on 15 November 1940 with units at the Corps Area Headquarters, overseas departments and several large posts.

Today the MRU's daily responsibility is to keep account of thousands of troops, their promotions, reassignments and other activities affecting their status. Every day is a due date and every man is an individual case.

Once the sum total of strength is compiled, it is relayed to the Department of the Army. When the demands of the Department of the Army have been complied with, the MRU then turns to all the local reports to be supplied.

Too much importance cannot be placed on Army strength accountability and on the MRU's part in determining strength figures. Yet, the MRU plays still another vital role—that of accounting for and itemizing each piece of equipment in the Sixth Army area.

Since troops require the backing and support of equipment of every kind, the MRU has established the Equipment Branch whose sole purpose is to keep a running inventory of all stock on hand in every company, whether it be a Regular Army organization, National Guard unit or Reserve Corps unit. The branch makes certain that the Department of the Army is continuously furnished with these compiled stock inventory figures.

As a highly specialized clerical phenomenon, the 102nd MRU performs Herculean tasks quickly and efficiently.

TO THE AVERAGE SOLDIER these IBM Cards are about as easy to decipher as ancient rock carvings or Egyptian hieroglyphics, but to the fabulous machines of MRU they can spell out a soldier's entire past, present, and then indicate his future. Information coded on the Status cards ranges from MOS to language fluency, and records everything from promotions to reassignments of the individual. The Organization-Strength card serves a similar purpose in recording data on Sixth Army units.

Post Exchanges Will Celebrate 57-Years Service This Month

The Army and Air Force Exchange Service takes time out this month to honor the anniversary of the establishment of the PX as an integral part of the Armed Forces.

It was on 25 July 1895 that the first PX was established under General Order No. 46.

Prior to that date, the soldier had been forced to buy from roving merchants, called "sutlers." These men had no hesitation in cheating and overcharging the troops who, at that time, were scattered throughout the west at places like Fort Laramie, Dodge City and Bent's Fort—the roughest of frontier towns.

To partially alleviate this condition, the men banded together to form their own canteens. These were far from efficient, but by each of the men putting a dollar or two into it, they found they could procure small items of necessity and convenience for themselves. If, as sometimes happened, they made a profit, it was put into a general recreation fund.

Word of this canteen arrangement eventually reached the War Department, where top military men were impressed. They found that the canteen system provided badly needed services, satisfied the basic needs of the troops, and was a definite improver of morale. It was decided to make it an official operation.

The mission of the first exchanges, in that last decade of the 19th century, as outlined in General Order No. 46, 25 July 1895, read as follows:

"... its primary purpose is to supply the troops, at reasonable prices with articles of ordinary use, wear, and consumption not supplied by the Government and to afford them means of rational recreation and amusement."

Exchanges today operate for the same basic purpose. However, through the experience and know-how gained over the last half century of operation, the PX has emerged as an efficient, well-established morale factor that is dedicated to giving "the best service to the world's best servicemen."

This month, 57 years after its inception, PX's can be found in all corners of the globe—Korea, Europe, the Pacific, Africa—as well as at each installation within the United States. It is the corner drug store, the gathering place for men far away from home, whether they be stationed at home or abroad.

It is a wiser and better equipped PX that you find today. But it is still dedicated to service to military personnel.

Biffle Wins!

Fourth Army Private Wins Olympic Medal In Early Games

The U. S. had one of its greatest days in modern Olympic history when it swept to four victories in Monday's events. While Finland's Military Band played the Star Spangled Banner almost from memory, Jerome Biffle, a private in the Fourth Army stepped forward to receive the most coveted award in the athletic world, the Olympic Gold Medal.

Biffle, tagged a "cinderella man" by Olympic coach Brutus Hamilton, is an ex-Denver University star. The husky spring-legged Negro made his last jump the winning one when he soared 24 feet 10.03 inches as better regarded opposition fell by the wayside. Medal winner Biffle has indicated plans for decathlon competition when he returns to Denver. An all-around athlete he might well become a future decathlon great.

Cpl. Roland Blackmon, Army's 400-meter hurdle qualifier, failed to survive the semi-finals. His time against the barriers was 52.7 and had he drawn the second heat instead of the first would have qualified for the finals.

Lieutenants Walter Ashbaugh and Warren Druetzler, two top Army Olympic hopefuls, had not seen action as of this writing. They will both see of action towards the end of the week when their specialties, the hop-step and jump and the 1500-meter run are contested. Pfc. Tommy Kono from Fort Mason, will show his wares on Friday and Saturday.

Sixth Army Major Proves Diving Diplomat At Olympic Games

Major Sammy Lee, US Army Medical Corps Officer and the United State's leading Olympic diving champion, flabbergasted the German team in Helsinki Tuesday.

He had just finished a long cool workout and stood shivering in a brisk wind, when a German diver asked the genial Major if he would explain how he executed a difficult dive.

"Sure," answered Sammy, and he climbed up the tower. He performed the dive seven times until the German got it.

"What a man," the German exclaimed. "What a beautiful display of friendship."

Announce All-Army Sports Schedule Contest Seven Major Sports In '53

The Army recently announced plans for seven all Army tournaments covering all phases of major sports for the athletic year of 1953. Current scheduling calls for the six Army areas, plus the Military District of Washington, to host top Army teams for championship playoffs in a particular sport.

Boxing heads the agenda and will be settled in a three-day session (29 March-4 April) hosted by Fifth Army. Basketball finals follow hard on the heels of the leather-slinging finals. Second Army hosts the hoop finals.

Sixth Army will host the golfers when the Army's top tee toppers vie for high honors at either the Presidio of San Francisco, or Fort Lewis, Washington from 27 to 31 July. Top tennis players will compete for ranking honors in a six-day play-off (17-22 August) with First Army playing host.

The Army top aspirants for softball honors will go to the Washington Military District to compete for the crown on 21 to 23 September. Baseball will be the Army's center of attraction when GI baseballers and fans converge on the Fourth Army Area for seven days beginning 4 October for the big playoffs.

The seventh sport, with the Third Army as host, has not been determined as yet. Track and field, volleyball and soccer compose the list which is under consideration. Although football is considered a major sport, it will not be on an All-Army competitive basis this year.

All in all, 1953 promises to be one of the biggest and best years in Army athletics.

Fort Mason's Kono Finally Wins Local Sports Plaudits

"Kono alone was worth traveling all the way across country to see."

This was a joint statement made by Manager Dietrich Wortmann and Coach Bob Hoffman of the U. S. Olympic weight-lifting team. On May 3-4 they came from Oakland for the National Junior weight-lifting championship, and saw Pfc. Tommy Kono of Ft. Mason break the world's record for light-weights (148 pounds).

Wertmann and Hoffman rate Kono as much of a cinch to win an Olympic medal as Bob Mathias. Kono and Mathias will be performing on the same day—next Saturday.

Kono it seems had to travel 8000 miles to Helsinki to be discovered by sportswriters in his own district of Northern California.

Mason's mass of muscle originally lifted in the middle weight class of 165 pounds. He has since trained down under 148 pounds without losing strength. In Oakland competition where he broke the world's record, he pressed 240 pounds; he snatched 250 pounds, and in the clean and jerk mastered 325 pounds.

Each attempt set a new national junior mark, but the total of 815 pounds established a world's record exclusive of any classification. It was the first time in history that a world record had been established in junior competition.

The Memorial Coliseum at Los Angeles, California, has a larger capacity than Soldier's Field in Chicago. The LA stadium seats 105,000 persons and the Chicago stadium seats 101,180.

In 1949 Ralph Kiner hit 54 home runs to lead the National League. This was within 2 homeruns of the all-time National League record of 56 set by Hack Wilson of the Chicago Cubs in 1930.

So You Think You Know Baseball!

By Harry Simmons

Is the catcher an infielder? A lot may depend on the answer. Here, in a simulated big-league setting, is a major problem over the catcher's status.

Let's say Brooklyn and Cincinnati are tied, 1-1, as the Reds come to bat in the top of the fourth at Ebbets Field. With one away, Andy Seminick laces a double along the left-field line. He goes to third as Ewell Blackwell grounds out.

Bobby Adams then lifts a dinky pop-up in front of the plate. Dodger catcher Rube Walker lunges for the ball, but it twists down between his outstretched hands, untouched.

Now the ball takes a freak backward hop toward the third-base foul line. While still in fair territory, it hits Andy Seminick on the seat of the pants as he sprints home.

That puts it squarely up to you as the umpire? Is catcher Walker "an infielder?" If so, Seminick is saved by Section 7.08f of the Playing Rules, which says a base runner is out when hit by a batted ball only if the ball strikes him "before it has touched or passed an infielder." But if the catcher is not an infielder, Seminick is plainly out. How would you call it?

ANSWER

Although there is something to be said for the claim that the catcher is an infielder, major league umpires are instructed to call the base runner out on a play like this one.

Bankers have conceded a point—you can spend money faster with both hands than with one at a time.

At any rate, they've begun issuing left-handed checkbooks to please southpaw signators. Ninety per cent of today's transactions are paid by check. To increase that, the check printers will add the left-handed type to their present six billion annual total.

UNCACK Aids Koreans In New Back To The Farm Movement

With UNCACK in Korea—The resounding clap of a nail being driven into a new board, the soft crunch of earth—having laid fallow for more than a year—being turned with a shiny new spade, and the delightful squeal of racing children feeling their very own soil push up between their toes, competed with the sound of cannon fire on Korea's battlefield today!

More than 7000 members of Korean farm families have been returned to their homes north of the Han river in the Seoul area.

UNCACK isn't just another group of initials to these farmer refugees. It is a part of the five-phase agriculture resettlement program sponsored by the Republic of Korea with help from United Nations Civil Assistance Command, Korea. Morale is again very high with these people.

It would bring to mind the old stories of gold rush days to see this temporary housing, in the form of 5400 tents from UNCACK, mushroom up over night and family groups burdened with personal and household goods on their heads and backs trudging into camp.

Thirty-five freight cars and an unknown number of trucks have moved these refugees, armed with passes, back to Uijonbu and Kumchon-ni.

Jack A. Purves, UNCACK public welfare officer of the newest resettlement project, says this cultivation of hundreds of acres of unused farm land will accomplish two purposes. It will increase South Korea's vitally needed rice and vegetable crops this fall, and will decrease requirements of relief goods for these people next winter.

Besides the aforementioned tents, UNCACK has supplied 4,000,000 feet of lumber and 34,000 pounds of nails for permanent housing. Seed grain for 1952 crops totaled 250,000 bushels, while 550 metric tons of seed potatoes were imported and distributed to farm families.

Korean farming is done on a much smaller scale than in the United States; therefore, essential farm tools were issued on the basis of two hoes and one sickle per family, one shovel for each two families and one plow per 15 families.

Sixth Army Signal Supply Chief Is Upped to Colonel

COLONEL L. E. FOUCHS

In a brief ceremony this week, Colonel L. C. Parsons, Chief of Sixth Army Signal Section pinned a pair of eagles on the shoulders of former Lieutenant Colonel L. E. Fouchs, Chief of Signal Supply Division, Sixth Army Signal Section.

The new Colonel entered the service in 1918 and was commissioned as a 2nd Lieutenant in the ORC in July 1923. He was recalled to active duty in October 1940, and served as Post Signal Officer, Fort Mead, Maryland, until he received orders to Europe in April 1944.

Colonel Fouchs arrived in Europe to participate in the Normandy, North France, Rhineland and Central Europe campaigns and June of 1946 found him in Nanking Headquarters in China as Signal Officer and Advisor of Training.

In January 1947 he was transferred to Eighth Army Headquarters in Tokyo where he served in the capacity of Assistant Signal Officer until January 1948 when he was ordered to the 24th Division in FECOM as Division Signal Officer.

Colonel Fouchs became Assistant Signal Supply Officer, Headquarters Sixth Army, Presidio of San Francisco in December 1949 and in May 1952 he was elevated to Chief, Signal Supply Division, Headquarters Sixth Army.

Clever Crafter Cramine!

Appoint Staff Crafts Director For Sixth Army Arts Program

Leisure time activities received a boost this week with the appointment of Mr. Cramine T. Sena as Staff Crafts Director for the Sixth Army Area.

The purpose of the new office is to further develop the crafts program already under way and to bring a light crafts program to every service club where men can pursue their hobbies.

"This is not something being done just to keep men busy," stated Mr. Sena, "rather it is our intention to raise creative standards so men of the Sixth Army can gain self-confidence plus actually having the pleasure of doing what they like."

Mr. Sena is a natural for the job. The former Army Captain, now a reserve Major, started this type work while a hospital inspector at Fort Bragg, North Carolina.

Seeing the need for patients to have something to do, he went to his superiors and received permission to set-up a craft program. Since there was no money available, everything had to be done the hard way. Fort Bragg is located in a belt of clay so the first project was setting up what was to become known as "Sena's Mud Shop". Wide eyed soldiers leaped at the chance to create inexpensive gifts for wives, mothers and friends. With the help of the Red Cross and citizens of nearby towns, Mr. Sena was able to establish art classes, woodworking shops and other interests for Joe Soldier.

The current project, financed by appropriated funds, will eventually find many types of off-duty projects available to those interested.

Photography, sculpturing, painting, ceramics, and jewelry are just a few of the fields to be developed. Mr. Sena's specialty is lapidary, the art of grinding, polishing and engraving on stone. The western states have much natural material to work with and lapidary is expected to be one of the top interest projects.

Being a firm believer in using up spare time to one's best advantage, Mr. Sena stated further, "It is my contention that a person with many interests is a happy person".

No desk jockey, Mr. Sena will travel to every Post, Camp and Station in the Sixth Army Area to promote the program. He will teach and advise and help set-up work shops for the men and women of this Army Area.

Mr. Sena received his Master of Arts degree at Mills College and is now a candidate for the Doctor's Degree of Education (Art) at Stanford University.

His background includes membership in the Potters Association of San Francisco, and he is a past member of the New York Museum of Natural History.

Plan AFCA Chapter At San Luis Obispo

Establishment of a local chapter of the Armed Forces Communications Association at Camp San Luis Obispo is being planned for both military and civilian residents of the area who have either an amateur or professional interest in communications, electronics or photography.

The association is a semi-professional organization that enables its members to hear and see top people in the field to discuss and demonstrate their work. The Camp San Luis Obispo chapter will attempt to include military and civilian personnel on the post and at Camp Cooke, Camp Roberts and civilian industries.

Pictorial Division Offers Three New Films This Week

Initial distribution of four motion picture films has been announced by the Pictorial Division, Signal Section.

"AFIF 27, Strategic Iran" is a brief study of Iran, often referred to as 'The Crossroads of the East.' This film highlights Iran's geography, terrain, government, past and present aspects of cultural, economic and political activities, and shows how Iran has suddenly become strategically important to the rest of the world because of its fabulous treasure, which is oil, the lifeblood of the modern world.

"Misc 8057, The Inner Man Steps Out" is a film designed to motivate managers of all levels to review their own behavior towards others, defining the importance and development of effective human relations in the shop, office and community. This film dramatizes the story of Jerry Allen, a supervisor who encounters problems handling other people as well as coping with himself, emphasizing the need to understand the fundamental forces of human behavior coupled with extensive use of "common sense" as essential requisites for the improvement of human relations practices.

"Misc 7883, Operation Inchon" shows the UN forces in Korea in August 1950. The hard pressed UN forces were cornered by the enemy inside a 120-mile perimeter around Pusan. General MacArthur decided upon an amphibious landing on the western coast, with the twofold object of freeing the South Korean capital, Seoul, and cutting off the main Communist supply line. After preliminary bombardment by B-29's and naval guns, the 8th Marine Regiment landed at Inchon and together with the 7th Infantry Division advanced toward Seoul. Enemy resistance was relieved by the 8th Army breaking out of the Pusan area, and by the 2nd Infantry Division fighting southeast of the city, liberating Seoul on 26 September.

"PMF 5167, Heat Disorders: Heat Exhaustion, Heat Stroke and Heat Cramps" covers the causes, symptoms, treatment and preventive measures for these three common heat disorders. Animated scenes and diagrams are used to analyze the physiological aspects of Undue Heat Load, the common cause for the various heat disorders. Treatment includes analysis of the balance between heat gain and heat loss in the body, touching upon: metabolic heat, heat exchanges by radiation, convection, conduction and vaporization; regulation of body temperature by the circulatory system, sweat glands and nervous system.

Army Chaplaincy Celebrates 177th Year Of Service

The Army Chaplaincy celebrates its 177th Anniversary on 29 July.

The history of the Army Chaplains is as old as the history of military operations, dating back to the early struggles against the Indians and French.

When George Washington appealed to pastors of colonial congregations to provide religious ministrations for his Continental Army, they put on their hats, locked up their churches, shouldered their muskets, and were off to war. Chaplains have served in every war in which this country has engaged.

In World War II, 8,700 ministers, priests and rabbis answered the call to duty and served their country as Army Chaplains. Today, the Chaplains are again recording a great history with their faithful service and heroic deeds in Korea, as well as in other parts of the world.

Army Offering Choice Jobs To Reenlistees

Washington—The Army has launched a concerted drive to retain on active duty as many qualified and experienced personnel as possible.

Outlining its campaign in DA Circular 57, the Army explains the various choices and assignments that are open to personnel who elect to stay on active duty. Enlistments are for periods of three, four, five and six years but those who have permanent grades of E-5, E-6 and E-7 may reenlist for an unspecified period.

Various options, too, are open to men who decide in favor of staying on. For example, a man serving in the ZI who reenlists may have a choice of assignments to fill any vacancy currently existing in any installation in the continental U.S. He may also have a choice of assignment, if qualified, to the Army Language School, Counter Intelligence Corps or Army Security Agency.

This circular lists seven options and gives detailed information on how enlistment in the Regular Army from any one of the Reserve components or reenlistment will affect grades, temporary promotions, bonuses and extensions.

September Release Set For New Infantry Insignia

Washington—Quartermaster has announced the new Infantry Insignia should be in the hands of troops world-wide by 1 September or shortly thereafter.

The insignia is designed to set the Infantry apart by distinctive uniform touches. Included are blue scarf, blue-rimmed cap, collar insignia, blue shoulder cord and blue piping for the garrison cap.

These items will be issued at different stages of training. Blue-piped cap will go to those who complete eight weeks of Infantry basic. The scarf, lapel and cap insignia will be issued after the full 16 weeks of basic.

When an assignment to a combat ready unit, and as long as he is a member of the unit, an infantry man will be permitted to wear a blue shoulder cord.

National Parks Free To All Servicemen

A recent letter from Raymond E. Hoyt, Assistant Regional Director, National Park Service, U.S. Department of Interior, San Francisco, California, states: "Information received from the National Park Service, U.S. Department of Interior, indicates that motor vehicle admission, guide and elevator fees prescribed for areas administered by the National Park Service are waived for members of the Armed Forces when in uniform and when properly identified under conditions where the uniform is not required by the Department of Defense; an Armed Forces ID card is the proper identification when the uniform is not worn. To avoid confusion and loss of time, especially during rush periods, personnel are urged to identify themselves immediately upon arrival at entrance stations."

New Organization For Sixth Army Recruiting Districts

Direct control of ten recruiting main stations and Armed Forces induction stations was placed under the Sixth Army Recruiting District this month. The change was made to enable Command headquarters to control, assign or reassign personnel, funds or responsibilities with greater effectiveness and economy.

Sales teams consisting of one officer and one enlisted man will assist recruiters in the field in a supervisory capacity to facilitate the unification of units throughout the eight western states.

Command of the Recruiting Headquarters was taken over this month by Col. M. M. Montgomery following the retirement of Col. M. L. McCreary. Colonel Montgomery was formerly commanding officer of the Southern Recruiting District at Los Angeles.

CG Urges Top Support For Blood Program

In a message to installation commanders throughout the Sixth Army Area, the Army Commander, Lt. General Joseph M. Swing, again stressed the continuing importance of the Armed Forces Blood Donor Program.

Noting that blood collections during the month of June were the lowest since the beginning of the program, he reaffirmed the Sixth Army's goal of collecting one pint of blood per year from all individuals, both military and civilian, on duty or employed at Army installations.

June collections were only slightly more than one-half of the amount necessary to attain this goal.

The following list is a summary of blood collections for the month of June and the total collections for the first nine months of the Armed Forces Blood Donor Program.

Eighteen Graduate In PMA Ceremonies

The Sixth Army Personnel Management and Administrative School held graduation ceremonies on Friday 25 July, for eighteen men.

Colonel M. H. Marcus was the guest speaker and Chaplain Kenneth E. McDaniels gave the invocation and benediction.

The diplomas were presented to the graduating students by Major Arthur Baumgardner, Commandant of the school.

Plumbing To Demolition! ROKA Engineers' School Offers Candidates Top Curriculum

(This is the second of a series of four articles about the Republic of Korea's Army Engineering School, established by the Korean Military Advisory Group. Although the Engineering School is only a single phase of KMAG's overall mission, a mission that has as its aim the complete technical self-sufficiency of the ROK Army, it is an important one. A lesson in practical democracy, the ROKA Engineering School is an excellent example of the Army's help-them-to-help-themselves planning, a policy that will pay dividends in well trained and staunch allies in the Free World's efforts to stem the Communist tide. Art and copy were prepared for the Star Presidian by Cpl. Tom Mapp, and forwarded through the 8th Army Public Information Office. Editor's Note.)

Part II

Administration of the school is under the control of ROKA officers, who are advised at all levels by six American officers and seven enlisted men of KMAG. The instructors are Korean officers, former TESKA graduates who periodically undertake post-graduate courses at the school in order to keep them thoroughly versed in new trends and techniques.

The curriculum, which offers four engineer officer courses, 15 EM specialists courses and one basic army engineering course, covers subjects from plumbing to demolition and includes instruction in such skills as road grading, welding, carpentry, rigging, water supply and tool room keeping and many others. Each course is highly specialized, although some margin is allowed to familiarize each student with machinery and equipment he may be required to operate in the event of an emergency.

During the early days of the present conflict in Korea, there was a desperate need of skilled ROKA engineers. The American officers of KMAG were hard pressed to train Korean engineers capable of tackling the tasks eventually expected of them. Language and literacy barriers further complicated their problems and coupled with this was the acute shortage of trained Korean instructors, essential to effect adequate field work. With the rapid surge of the Chinese Communists from the north, four and six week courses replaced the normal six and eight week semesters and classes were considerably overcrowded. A sense of urgency drove both students and instructors and the KMAG advisors, working side by side with the Koreans, hurdled many obstacles. Fort Belvoir training schedules were constantly adapted to fit the immediate needs of the army at the front.

"To fully appreciate the complexity of the school a visitor must spend considerable time with personnel here," explains Major John A. Patterson, of Santa Ana, Cali-ornia, KMAG Operations Advisor. "Americans are accustomed to big scale operations. Schools in the United States are large, fully equipped down to the last bolt, well staffed and perfectly organized as a result of years of experience. The Korean is intelligent, but his background contains very little of our mechanical age. He has only one thing to offer and that is a driving urge to learn. Progress is being made, however, even in the face of considerable difficulties."

Now that a reserve of ROKA engineers has been built up the trend is toward longer courses and smaller classes. This allows for more intensified and adds to the overall effectiveness of the school. Special classes now are small, usually from ten to 20 men, but this is not surprising considering the complexity of many of the subjects taught. For example; very few unskilled Americans, let alone Koreans, would master the fundamentals of the Ingersoll-Rand 315 cfm air compressor in half an hour. With a small class, working as a unit, the instructor is able to take his time and explain the mechanism step by step until the subject is firmly grasped by the students.

Possibly the greatest difficulty KMAG has had to overcome is the language barrier. Textbooks, training aids and other written materials used in the course must first be translated from standard American engineering manuals. This has proved a major operation, calling for a large group of interpreters and translators, working sometimes into the early hours of the morning preparing for the next day's lectures. Such translations have formed a basis for all current in-

Three Presidio Captains Earn Their Majority

Railroad tracks were exchanged for gold leaves this week by three officers on the Presidio.

Major George W. Morris, Signal Section, Headquarters Sixth Army was commissioned in the reserve in 1940. He came on active duty in 1941 and was shipped to Europe in June 1944, where he participated in the Northern France and Rhineland. Upon his return in 1946 he was sent to the Signal School at Fort Monmouth, N. J. and in June of 1947 he went back to Europe in the Army of Occupation as Commanding Officer of the 7796th Signal Photo Company. While CO of this Unit he covered the pictorial aspect of the Berlin Airlift and the Russian Blockade from Helmstedt to Berlin. In June of 1950 he was transferred to the Pictorial Division, Signal Section, Headquarters Sixth Army.

Major Lawrence W. Bucy, Signal Section, Headquarters Sixth Army, was enlisted in 1929 and was commissioned in February 1943. Prior to arriving at Headquarters Sixth Army on 8 July 1952, he was with the Alaska Communications System. He had been with this unit for 22 years.

Major Arthur Baumgardner was commissioned in the Infantry in 1942 in Shreveport, England. He was in the first OCS graduating class to be commissioned on foreign soil during World War II. Major Baumgardner was recalled in 1948 and prior to his arrival at the Presidio in August 1951 was stationed at Fort Ord and Fort MacArthur. He is a graduate of the AG Personnel Management and Administrative School.

Silver Star, Two Bronze Stars Awarded Letterman Patients

Colonel Robert B. Skinner, Deputy Commander Letterman Army Hospital awarded one Silver Star and two Bronze Stars this week to Major Lois H. Alfred, ANC, Cpl. Johnnie U. Pitts, 1st Cavalry Division and Sgt. Alfonso T. Anzures, Army Medical Service.

Major Alfred, Chief Nurse on Ward E-2 was awarded the Bronze Star for her distinguished service as Chief Nurse of an Army hospital in Kobe, Japan. During World War II she served in the India-Burma theater and was with the first contingent of nurses to reach Pusan after the UN entry into the Korean war. While there she served as Chief Nurse of the 8054th Evacuation Hospital.

Major Alfred returned to Kobe, Japan in January 1951 as Chief Nurse of the former 8th Army Station Hospital. It was for her outstanding record from January 1951 until her return to the U. S. in March 1952 that she received the award. The citation read in part:

"The influx of sick and wounded from Korea more than doubled the patient census without a comparable increase in the nursing staff. Major Alfred organized the nursing service in accordance with the most up to date principles, augmented it with civilian nurses, and recruited nurses' aides from every possible source. She personally supervised and conducted training programs and nursing conferences and trained enlisted technicians for work in various sections of the hospital. Major Alfred also gave valuable advice on organizing the hospital central supply and other facilities. Her ability and devotion to duty materially contributed to the accomplishment of the mission of the hospital and reflect great credit on her and the Army Nurse Corps."

Cpl. Johnnie U. Pitts, Inf. Co. F, 8th Cavalry Regiment, 1st Cavalry Division, was given the Silver Star for gallantry against the Armed enemy on 21 November 1951 near Sonbyok, Korea. His citation read in part:

"During the last stage of the platoon defense of an outpost, the enemy over-ran the perimeter. Cpl. Pitts realizing the need for a tight defensive of the perimeter, to be formed by the supervisors of the unit, voluntarily ran from one position to the other urging the men to withdraw to the command post. He continued in this manner until painfully wounded. Only when he was certain that all the supervisors had been notified did he himself withdraw. Reaching the perimeter he continued to fire effectively at the foe until he collapsed from loss of blood and shock. Corporal Pitts' gallantry reflects great credit on himself and the military service."

The Bronze Star was awarded to Sgt. Alfonso T. Anzures, Army Medical Service, Medical Company, 7th Infantry, 3rd Infantry Division, for meritorious service in connection with military operations against an armed enemy in Korea during the period 9 March 1951 to 26 January 1952. His citation read in part—

"Sgt. Anzures serving as a company aid man performed his duties in a superior manner even though subject to adverse conditions and laboring for extra periods of time he met all difficulties and obstacles incurred on the battle field in his continuous care and treatment of the wounded. His ingenuity and supervision of medical techniques proved him a vital asset to his unit. Sgt. Anzures' outstanding skill, initiative and untiring devotion to duty reflects great credit upon himself and the military service."

Dangerous Practice!

Presidio Fire Chief Warns On Failure To Report All Type Fires

Before using your fire extinguisher in event of fire, first call 117 and notify your Fire Department, warns George Geller, Chief of the Presidio Fire Department. "Often you may believe a fire is out when it isn't. Fire travels unseen and can strike again unexpectedly causing needless destruction. Only experienced and seasoned firemen can determine if a fire is out. Don't take chances. Play Safe!"

Recently, fire extinguishers have been delivered to the Fire Station for recharging, having been used to put out fires—fires which were not reported promptly to the Fire Department. In the interest of reminding all personnel, military and civilian, of the necessity of promptly reporting all fires, no matter how small, Fire Chief Geller has initiated action to remind everyone on this post by having a warning painted on each fire extinguisher in red letters on a white background:

FOR FIRE CALL 117

"Occupants of all buildings should know just what to do in case of fire," says Chief Geller. "Be familiar with the location and operation of your fire equipment before fire strikes. Read the directions printed on each extinguisher on how to use same now. After a fire starts it may be too late. The first step to take in any emergency is notify your Fire Department promptly. Don't trust inexperience. You may think a fire is out when it isn't. By calling the Fire Department you rely on men who are trained and qualified to determine when a fire is out."

"Remember, the next time you have a fire, no matter what its origin or size, first call 117 and report it. Don't take chances. Play safe."

NEW LOOK—Fire extinguishers on the Presidio were taking on a new look this week. In a move to encourage the reporting of fires of any and all types, the lower portions of all the extinguishers are being repainted in white on which red letters announce FOR FIRE—CALL 117. This will also effect a saving in printing costs of signs formerly used for this purpose.

Tropic Nursing Film Slated for Release By Pictorial Section

Initial distribution of motion picture film, "PMF 5144 Nursing In the Tropics," has been announced by the Pictorial Division, Signal Section.

This film will prove of exceptional interest to nurses, doctors, and other hospital personnel. Realistic problems incident to living and working in a military hospital in the tropics are documented and discussed. Special consideration is given to problems of preventive medicine and to aseptic techniques. Nursing procedures involving the treatment of gastro-intestinal disorders, fungus infections, malaria and dengue fever are also emphasized.

Army-wide circulation is being given this film, and all medical personnel are urged to attend showings.

Warn Army Drivers About License Date

If you drive a government vehicle on the Presidio you had better check the date on your federal driver's license. All operator permits over one year old from date of issue are no longer any good.

Section Chiefs and Unit Commanders will arrange appointments with Motor Officer, Ext. 2143, for the renewal of driver's permits. Don't wait until you have an accident to check to see if your license is still in force. Check now and be on the safe side.

Next TIC Topic

The American soldier is today's number one target for enemy propaganda and needs constantly to be on guard against it. "Truth Is Our Defense" is the answer, and next week's Troop Topic, Major F. L. Mann, Troop Information and Education Officer, has announced.

Though enemy propaganda has not been too effective against us, we should understand it. The American soldier is the enemy's number one target. A positive defense is built by learning all we can about our Country's aims and interests; how and why we fight.

To be safe from enemy propaganda, soldiers must know the truth about our national objectives and interests so well they cannot be taken in by enemy propaganda.

A FAMILIAR SIGHT to students and instructors of the Sixth Army Chemical Biological and Radiological School was the mushroom clouds that followed recent atomic tests in Nevada. Students and instructors served in various technical capacities during the tests. Operating Geiger counters, ion chambers and other radia instruments during the intensive tests, gave the soldiers valuable practical experience.

Sixth Army CBR School Fills Needs For Training In Latest Techniques

The Sixth Army's Chemical Biological and Radiological School will celebrate its first anniversary this week. Teaching the latest methods of defense against Chemical Biological and Atomic or Radiological attack, the school has trained 298 officers and 554 NCOs since its inception last August.

Graduates of the three week courses become qualified operators of Geiger counters and other Radia instruments. Current Army policy calls for a minimum of two CBR NCOs and one CBR Officer for every unit of company size or larger.

"We are currently conducting Officer and NCO classes simultaneously," said Captain W. A. Hearne, the school's director. "Last week we graduated a class that totaled 106 members, this is about the average sized class."

One of the high points in the school's short history was the participation of the entire fifth class in the recent atomic tests at Desert Rock in Nevada. They were charged with the safety phases involving the bomb radiation effects, and were the first personnel to enter Ground Zero following the blast. This gave the class top practical experience in the use of Geiger Counters, Ion Chambers and other Radia Instruments.

One of the highlights of the three weeks course is a trip to the Hunters Point Navy Yard for participation in a Radiological Monitoring problem, using the methods developed during and after the atomic test at Bikini.

Each class also attends a colorful munitions demonstration on Bakers Beach at Battery Chamberlain. There they witness first hand results of chemical grenades, smoke generators, land mines and flame throwers, and learn techniques that can later be used in training their units.

The school's enlisted faculty are assigned from Department of

Army's selection of scientific and professional personnel. They include nuclear physicists, mathematicians, chemical engineers, chemists and teachers.

Eligibility requirements for attending the school are high, requiring that enlisted candidates be of grade E-4 or higher, with a standard score of 100 or higher in Aptitude Area 1. Both officer and enlisted candidates must be cleared for access to confidential material.

Six WACs have completed the course since the school's inception, among them Pfc. Dolores V. Nordstrom of the Gillette Pictorial Center.

CBR School's Origin Imbedded in History

In biblical days Samson tied burning firebrands to the tails of 300 foxes and sent them into the enemy's grain fields—the early Greeks burned pitch and sulphur beneath the walls of besieged cities—Janos Hunyadi drove the Turks from the walls of Belgrade with a mysterious smoke created by Gombas the Alchemist. Our age has known the ravages of gas warfare in WWI—the incendiary raids of WWII—and the fiery destruction of the Napalm fire bombs in Korea. The Army Chemical Corps, charged with the development and defense of Chemical Warfare, is also responsible for the relatively new and technical phases of Radiological and Biological Warfare.

In the Sixth Army Area highly specialized training in these fields is emphasized at unit levels by Unit CBR Officers and NCOs, who for the most part have been trained at the Sixth Army Chemical Biological and Radiological School at the Presidio.

Practical Experience Pays!

CBR Trained Students Provide Safety Margin At Atomic Tests

The Army took no chances with the lives of troops participating in the recent atomic warfare maneuvers at Yucca Flat, Nevada.

On hand to screen the maneuver areas after the bursts were highly trained monitors, watchdogs for the death-dealing radioactive particles, from all over the Sixth Army Area.

These men preceded the troops into the blast areas, registering radiation intensity before any soldiers were sent into action.

In one of the tests the Army had over 80 monitors carrying out this important job. More than half of these men were students and instructors from the Sixth Army Chemical Biological and Radiological School, at the Presidio.

This proved beneficial from both a practical and psychological standpoint, sending Unit CBR officers and NCOs back to their units with first hand knowledge of what has been one of the most terrifying forces known to man.

School Director Capt. William A. Hearne led the first military group into Ground Zero, the area directly under the bomb's blast, during one of the exercises. With him were Sfc. Bruce Jones and Pfc. Charles R. Sublett, two of the school's instructors.

They were in and out of the blast area within an hour after detonation time. Radiation detected with their ion chambers, instruments similar to the Geiger Counters, was negligible and troops were given the green light to enter.

Other monitor teams accompanied leading elements of each unit engaging in continuing field test for the entire exercise.

As an added safety measure the Army provided decontaminating groups with Geiger counters to check soldiers and vehicles returning in this capacity and was commended by Exercise Director Brig. Gen. H. P. Storke for the excellence of his work.

CBR Instructor Is Top Veteran Of Atomic Tests

One of the Sixth Army Chemical Biological and Radiological School's top flight instructors, Lt. Rudolph S. Buddee, Cml. C., departed last week for the Chemical Corps School at Fort McClellan, Alabama.

A former professor of physics at the University of Oregon, he was recently assigned Assistant Radiological Safety Officer for the atomic exercises at Camp Desert Rock. He participated in nine atomic tests while serving in this capacity and was commended by Exercise Director Brig. Gen. H. P. Storke for the excellence of his work.

Assisting Lt. Buddee in many phases of the job of field operations to ensure the adequate training and protection of participating troops were Pfc. Howard J. Myers and Pfc. Joseph E. Johnson, CBR instructors.

Lt. Buddee will continue in his capacity as an instructor in radiological defense on his new assignment.

Tops In Teaching!

Faculty's Background Central Key To CBR School's Success

A PFC who is a nuclear physicist, a supply clerk with a degree in business administration, a corporal who is a graduate chemical engineer, this is a cross section of the highly trained and efficient personnel that make up the faculty of the Sixth Army Chemical Biological and Radiological School.

The school's enlisted personnel are selected by Department of Army in accordance with regulations governing scientific, technical and professional personnel. Their backgrounds tell a varied and interesting story.

Cpl. Kenneth C. Schriber is a graduate in chemical engineering from the University of Colorado. Cpl. Ralph A. Broman is a professor of mathematics with a degree from Ball State College. The nuclear physicist is Pfc. Charles R. Sublett, a UCLA graduate. In civilian life Sublett is a designer of radia instruments and had his own business supplying research organizations with these devices.

Pfc. Lloyd Nelson, a graduate in business administration from Luther College, keeps his hand in by handling the school's supplies. Staff chemists include Pfc. Jack Roeder, BS from Lafayette; Pfc. Howard Myers, BS from Bowling Green College and Pfc. Joseph Johnson, a graduate chemist from Baylor University.

The school's director is Capt. William A. Hearne, Cml. C., a WWII veteran and a school administrator in civilian life.

Teaching the effects of various chemical agents is Capt. John B. Deasy, Cml. C., a former agent for the San Francisco Tax collector's Office.

SFC Bruce C. Jones, a veteran of Korea, serves as instructor and advisor to enlisted students. He specializes in weapons and munitions and is in charge of demonstrations in grenades, flame throwers and smoke generators.

Complete First of Four New Warehouses At Sacramento Depot

First of four new warehouses under construction at the Sacramento Signal Depot has been completed and was put into use this week. Work is progressing on the remaining three buildings being erected under a $10,000,000 expansion program begun last year.

When completed the new structures will bring to eight the total number of warehouses at the depot. They are all identical, each being over one-quarter mile in length and containing 261,360 square feet.

The "Star Presidian" departed from its regular format, on 11 July, 1952 to dedicate a special insert to National Guard and ORC Training. Quite accidentally, this special page seems to have become a "regular." We have been deluged with requests to do a similar spread on individual units. If the idea appeals to you, and you want publicity, call and get on our list. We'll be very happy to oblige, as we like the new format too!

IT'S REALLY REAL. The children at Letterman Army Hospital were thoroughly entertained, amused, awed and all the other adjectives, last week by a dressed up bird. Subject of the quandary was "Dollie," a canary, trained and owned by Mrs. J. E. (Louise) Tuttle of

Dollie's Delightful Deed!

Smart Canary-Feathered Type Entertains Letterman Children

"I see it, but I don't believe it!" was the sentiment expressed by the excited children at Letterman Army Hospital here last week.

The cause of all the "Ohs," "Ahs," and round-eyed wonderment was a pint-sized bird, a canary, by the name of "Dollie." And what a doll! With a fresh costume for each entry, she rode a tricycle, a merry-go-round, and relaxed with tea served on a doll table.

At first the children couldn't believe "Dollie" was really alive. "Oh, it's just another toy you wind up," piped one small voice. But when they saw her hopping to obey commands, and sitting until told to move, they crowded around in amazement. "She IS real!" breathed one little boy, eyes popping.

"Dollie" is an old trouper, having been in show business five of her six years. She started training at the age of two-weeks, and it has certainly payed off because she is now a local TV star!

Recently "Dollie" gained nationwide recognition in a two-page spread, with colored photos, in Collier's Magazine. Dollie is trained and owned by Mrs. J. E. (Louise) Tuttle of San Francisco. "The happiness she has brought so many is more than worth all the hard work and trouble," sighed Mrs. Tuttle.

Incidentally, "Dollie's" complete wardrobe is hand-made by Mrs. Tuttle.

Matter of Muscle—

With the male population standing smugly on the sidelines, women of the U.S. continue to voice their opinions on the merits (and demerits) of the Bikini bathing suit. Corinne Calvet, the Frenchman's answer to Marilyn Monroe, has leaped into the battle with the announcement that "American women don't know how to wear a Bikini. They don't have the muscles for them. French girls, though, ride bicycles from the time they are youngsters and this exercise eliminates bulging thighs which is a common ailment among American women. It isn't anatomy alone that makes a French girl more at home in a Bikini, it's a state of mind. American girls are much too conscious to figure faults. Only a French woman has the personality to wear a Bikini properly!" Any questions?

What Imagination!—

Men of the 1st Marine Division in Korea keep the Chinese Communists guessing by naming Korean hills after their favorite movie stars. When a patrol leader ordered a certain area cleared of mines, he barked this order, "I want the hill Ava Gardner explored thoroughly."

This 'N That—

Adolphe Menjou received a $10,000 bonus for shaving off his mustache for his role of a police lieutenant in "The Sniper." . . . Janet Leigh and hubby Tony Curtis are about to realize their fondest hope. The will appear together in a film for the first time. The picture? "Just This Once."

Top Musical Slated For Sunday Showing To Presidio Personnel

"Show Happy," a musical revuette, will be the order of the day Sunday, 3 August at 2000 hours in the Presidio Service Club. Sydney Alldridge and Larry Irving, producers, have gone all-out in this 10-act show to gather together top radio, television, and night club artists. They have been well received at Travis Air Force Base, Camp Cooke and Ford Ord.

The mimicing, singing comedian, Larry Irving, is Master of Ceremonies, and Bob Fischer does his clowning through magic.

Mary Ellen, known as San Francisco's Ethel Merman, gives out with some lively lyrics, and John Donoghue, the Irish tenor, also well known here, is among those featured.

Paul Barkdoll and "Danny," the Ventriloquial Wonder, is considered really "tops."

Norine Peel, peals forth as a Sophisticated Songstress, and Betty Padget, acrobatic dancer, is sensational in her exhibition of the chair dance from the film "American In Paris."

If you like pantomime, "Bloop and Bleep" will probably lay you in the aisle, as they're considered among the greats.

Helene Moss, well known Musical Comedy Soprano, and Sydney Alldridge, British stage and radio artist, complete the bill.

This one and a-half hour show is open to all-service personnel.

WACs Taste Defeat!

Good Pitch! No Hit! WAFs Win! Slip Past El Toro's Marines

You can't win them all—the Presidio WAC softball team experienced defeat for the first time last Thursday when they were knocked off their untouchables pedestal to the heart-breaking tune of 4-1 by the Hamilton Field WAFs.

The Presidio girls to date had narry a blemish on an altogether too perfect record. This oversight proved that they were still mere mortals and not above failure or defeat. Loss though it was, no damage was done to their league standing for ironically enough the league's second place team, the Treasure Island Waves and fighting contender for the championship, suffered an equally disastrous blow from the Travis WAFs. A big day all in all was had by the lady soldiers of the air, who put the axe to the league leaders. Whether the win can be accredited to the red-hot hand handling of the WAFs or the entirely out of form sloppyness of the homecrew, it was still a decided defeat and costly in a morale sense.

Lawhorne, Presidio's old faithful on the mound, hurled a very fine game, fanning seven of the Hamilton girls and walking only two. Their biggest trouble was that they just couldn't lay the lumber to that elusive ball. Not one hit was gotten by the locals and only three were made in the complete game, all made by the fly girls. Jean Groomes, WAC center fielder, made Presidio's sole run by combination walking and stealing bases.

Back to their old tricks straight from a momentary setback at the hands of the Hamilton WAFs, the Presidio WACs softball team came back stronger than ever to wallop the talent laden and hard fighting El Toro Marines 8-7 in an over-time Sunday.

The hard hitting locals swung their clubs and connected with a not so elusive ball, this time garnering eleven big hits to El Toro's seven. Lynch, star hurler for Presidio, struck out six but was wild enough at times to walk eight. Groomes, hard hitting left fielder, slammed out the game's only home run, plus a driving basehit giving her two for four.

The lady Marines put up a game fight all the way, keeping the tied game scoreless the sixth through the ninth until finally the WACs came through with a run at the bottom of the tenth.

The El Toro Marines are champions of the Eleventh Naval District and the game played Sunday was for a sort of mythical championship of the Eleventh and Twelfth Naval Districts.

Local Marksmen Seek To Repeat Gun Club Win

Winners of last year's gold cup in the five man service team event of the Lake Merced Open Skeet Championships, the Presidio skeeters will be out to realize a repeat performance in this year's Open to be held the 2nd and 3rd of August on the Lake Merced range.

The local five will be vying with representative from most of the service installations throughout this area and the best in skeet shooting competition is promised for the 10 event meet.

The two day meet, held under the auspices of the Pacific Rod and Gun Club, offers $2,000 worth of silver trophies to winners of the various events and although the names of the Presidio participants are not yet known, it is thought that the team will be well comprised with last year's cup winners.

Saturday's events, starting at 9 a.m., will include matches in sub. small gauge—50 targets, small gauge—50 targets, 20 gauge—100 targets, two man 20 gauge AA team and two man 20 gauge B team. The Sunday events will get underway at 9 a.m. with an all gauge—100 targets match, a ladies' event, the five man service team matches, a two man all gauge AA and two man all gauge B match, a junior event and a high over all at handicap will wind the meet up.

Jimmy Foxx was selected as the "Most Valuable Player of the Year" in 1932, 1933 and again in 1938.

George Herman (Babe) Ruth hit 714 homeruns in his baseball career.

All American lineman, Les Richter was granted an 18 day delay in his Army induction orders and will play with the College All-Stars against the Los Angeles Rams in Chicago, August 15.

The husky California line-backer was scheduled to report for duty with the Army at Camp Cooke, Calif., Friday. He will fly to Chicago Thursday to start working out.

Richter was recently obtained from the Dallas Texans by the Rams.

Presidio Gun Club!

Announce Busy Schedule But Short Small Bore Marksmen

With the summer season well underway, the Presidio Gun Club makes announcement of their current firing schedule and wishes to issue a call for small bore rifle marksmen.

The present firing schedule includes big bore rifle at Fort Barry Rifle Range at 1700 hours and pistol at Fort Baker indoor range at 1900 hours on Tuesday night; small bore rifle at Fort Baker indoor range at 1945 hours on Wednesday nights and skeet at the Crissy Field Range at 0900 hours on Sundays. Guests and visitors are welcome with rifles, cal. .45 pistols, ammunition and targets are available at the ranges.

Persons interested in firing the 22 calibre rifle and becoming club members should attend the Wednesday night meetings at the Fort Baker indoor range. In a recent club shoot, Sgt. Donald Sparks of the 22 calibre squad, placed high with a score of 369 out of 400 and Capt. James P. Hennen with a 362 out of 400 tally placed second.

In the July 6th Oakland Pistol and Revolver Matches, Mr. E. L. Johnson of the local club, shooting in the sharpshooter class, placed among the leaders in all events. Firing in the 22 calibre NRA Short Course his score of 281 won a gold medal while his center fire score of 283 over the Camp Perry Police Course netted a bronze medal. Fine shooting in all events brought a score of 827 in the Aggregate Match and another bronze medal.

The Presidio marksmen will participate in the next Oakland Pistol and Revolver Matches which will be held on Sunday, 3 August 1952.

Raiders Waltz To Victory Over Sailors

Presidio Red Raiders in another post-season game Tuesday romped to an easy victory over the Navy lads from the U.S.S. Manchester.

The afternoon, cool and foggy, was more like football weather than baseball and earmuffs and scarfs were almost needed to keep the biting wind out. Big Dan Stupur, Presidio's old reliable on the mound, took honors for the game and struck out 16 navy boys despite the unco-operative weather. Stupur, after a couple weeks' rest, looked good but was a little wild in the first innings giving the gobs ten gift bases.

The Navy drew first blood by getting three runs in the top of the first and then going scoreless until the eighth where they scored one run.

Stix, Red Raider third baseman, hit two for three for batting honors along with Wright and Mortinson who hit a single apiece.

Bob Feller and Cy Young are the only two pitchers in the history of baseball ever to pitch three no-hit baseball games.

Take Some, Leave Some!

Raiders Dump Navy Nine 6-3; Drop Second Fracas To Oaks

Sweet victory was finally tasted by the Presidio Red Raiders last Thursday, when they grabbed a long-sought 6 to 3 win from a smooth Navy team representing the U.S.S. Chourne.

Tordo, a newcomer to the team, proved himself a very capable man on the mound by holding the sailors to four hits and fanning seven. The gobs proved no match for the red hot local boys who slammed out ye olde horsehide to the tune of fourteen hits.

It was a fine day for the boosting of batting averages and center fielder Wright did right well for himself by getting a nice 3 for 4. Viviani, the player manager of the Raiders and a usual heavy hitter and point maker, sat this fracas out to give his time solely to mastermind the team's strategy, which proved quite fruitful.

Sunday spelled defeat for the Red Raiders who fell before the Palo Alto Oaks in a tight 3 to 1 ball game.

The home crew outhit the Oaks 8 to 7 but failed to ring up the tallies that count. Husick, steady and capable second baseman, kept his fine record clean by highly creditable performance on the bag, Sunday. Stix, Presidio's regular center fielder, was back in the lineup after sitting on the sidelines for three weeks with an injury. The few weeks of inactivity didn't seem to slow either his clean fielding or batting when he slammed a basehit his first time at bat.

Coach-player Viviani was back in the play once again, this time in left field. Versatile Viv. lambasted a hard base drive to bring his enviable batting average to .315.

Presidio At War!

49th EOD, 516th OAM End Successful Army Training Test

A visitor passing through the Presidio woodlands earlier this month would have been startled to find himself in the middle of a small scale war, complete with attacking guerrillas, roadblocks, minefields and foxholes. Had he lingered too long to watch the excitement he might have become the victim of the enemy's striking air arm, and found his blue serge rendered hors de combat by their flour-packed punch. In reality he would have been witnessing an Army Training Test prepared by the Post Ordnance to determine the preparedness of the 49th Explosive Ordnance Disposal Squad and the 516th Ordnance Maintenance Detachment.

Start Drive To Save Presidio Wildlife

It might surprise a lot of people to know that there is wildlife on the Presidio and it is slowly becoming extinct, particularly the Quail.

The Provost Marshal's office is now making a concentrated drive to keep our little feathered friends from being a thing of the past. All dependents owning pets on the post are required to register them with the Provost Marshal's office. In addition to registering their pets, people living on the Presidio have been requested to put a bell on their cats and collars on the dogs. The bell serves as a warning to scare off the birds when the felines approach.

Also the Military Police have become trappers. People have moved off the post and left their cats. Meantime the cats have become wild and a general nuisance. Traps are being set and baited with salmon and sardines. When ever one of the strays are caught in the traps, they are taken to the Post Veterinarian where they are held for 14 days and advertised in the Daily Bulletin. If they are not claimed in the 14 days they are given to Pets Unlimited to be placed in good homes.

Cpl. Arriage Named Soldier of Month In 47th AAA Brigade

Corporal Octavia Arriage of the 718th AAA Gun Bn. was chosen as July's Soldier of the Month from the 47th AAA Brigade. Selection was based on appearance, conduct and knowledge of his specific job assignment.

Arriage is a combat veteran, having seen recent service in Korea, and holds the Korean Service Medal with seven campaign stars.

As a reward for the Soldier of the Month distinction, the Corporal was awarded a 72 hour pass, served for one day as Special Orderly to the Commanding General of the 47th AAA Brigade, and was commended in writing by the Commanding General, 47th Brigade.

This marks the second time within the last four months that the Soldier of the Month event has been won by the 718th AAA Gun Bn., presently stationed at Fort Cronkhite.

Nation's Oldest Soldier Is Hail and Hardy at 111

Rochester, N.Y.—"I feel fine except for the heat and the cut in my cigar ration," commented James A. Hurd, believed to be the nation's oldest soldier, on the celebration of his 111th birthday here recently.

One of four living Union Army veterans of the Civil War, he received, of all things, cigars and greeting cards from well-wishers all over the nation honoring the occasion.

With Capt. Ralph R. Vaden in command of the 49th EOD and 1st Lt. Harrison Fite in charge of the 516th OAM Detachment, the problem got underway with a tactical motor march along the narrow cliff roads of upper Presidio. Plans called for a rendezvous at a pre-arranged bivouac site, units were supplied with maps indicating the area.

The first problem to confront the convoy was a mined roadblock established by Capt. S. A. Stidham's aggressor forces. While attempting to neutralize the mine block, the convoy was brought under heavy small arms crossfire from three separate high points, heavy damage was inflicted on the convoy's advance party.

In concert with the guerrilla attack Lt. Brewster Locke of the 87th Ordnance Light Aircraft Maintenance Detachment made an air strike on the units, and used his flour-bombs with devastating effectiveness.

On arriving at the bivouac area the units immediately dug-in and began establishment of operational requirements for tactical bivouac. They were well entrenched in short order.

Lt. Col. Bowersack, representing III Corps, monitored the training test and commented on the units' initiative, giving them a "well done" upon the successful completion of the problem.

Major Walter A. Tobias, Post Ordnance Officer, and chief umpire during the test, conducted a critique following the operation. He stressed the continuing importance of combat readiness in all phases of tactical training and encouraged unit commanders to further stimulate this type of training through praise, encouragement of effort and constructive criticism.

DOD Outlines Rules To Korean Veterans For Combat Bonus

Washington—Under the recently passed Combat Duty Pay Act of 1952 entitling Korean veterans to extra compensation, certain restrictions have been outlined.

To be entitled to combat pay during a month the individual must have been subjected to hostile fire for not less than six days while serving with a combat group, vessel or aircraft. However, if the individual received incentive or special pay (aviation, submarine, parachute, medical or dental), he is not entitled to combat pay for that month.

Claim forms will be distributed by the Department of Defense in the near future for those veterans entitled to the payment. A delay in the settlement of the claims is expected because of the large number of payments and additional inquiries.

Finance Officer Posts Regs. On Payment Of MOP Bonus

Regulations and procedures for administering mustering-out pay authorized by the Veterans Readjustment Assistance Act of 1952 (the K-Vet Bill) were received this week by Lt. Col. B. H. Johnston, Presidio Finance Officer.

All claims for separation occurring after 27 June 1950 and prior to 16 July 1952 will be forwarded to the Military Pay Order Branch, Finance Officer, United States Army, St. Louis 20, Missouri. Members currently on active duty who are entitled to payment will also forward their claims to this address.

Application forms are available at the Veterans Administration office, 49 Fourth St., San Francisco, and have also been published in Bay Area newspapers. In-service personnel using these forms should delete the statement: "I am not now serving on active duty in the armed forces of the United States."

The Presidio Finance office has been making payments to members separated after passage of the bill where military payment records and forms DD214 (Report of Separation from the Armed Forces of the United States) were available.

Personnel on active duty can expect their mustering-out pay in $100 installments. Only veterans already honorably discharged or released will receive the payment in a lump sum.

The new law stipulates that mustering-out pay will be paid to enlisted personnel and officers below the grade of major. The exact sum of payments are given by the Defense Department as $100 for less than 60 days service, $200 for more than 60 days service without foreign duty, and $300 for more than 60 days service including foreign duty.

Personnel who are honorably discharged to reenlist will also receive mustering-out pay in monthly $100 installments. They will have the option of collecting the money either at the time of discharge or at the end of their enlistment period.

Veterans discharged or released before the passage of the bill have until 16 July 1954 to submit an informal application for the lump sum payment. Included with the application must be the original copy of Report of Separation from the Armed Forces of the United States (DD214).

Personnel honorably discharged or released after 26 June 1950 are eligible for the pay except:

1. Personnel transferred or returned to the retired list who receive retirement or retainer pay. Those retired or separated because of physical reasons are excepted.
2. Personnel who are discharged or released on their own request to accept employment and have not served outside the continental limits of the U.S.
3. Personnel whose total period of service has been as a student in a civilian institution.
4. Personnel whose only service has been as a cadet or midshipman in the three Service academies or in a prep school for candidates to one of the Service schools.
5. Personnel discharged to enter the U.S. Military Academy, Naval Academy or Coast Guard Academy.
6. Personnel ordered to active duty merely for training or physical examination for a period of less than 60 days.

Bataan Veterans In Honor March For Blood Bank

Fourteen veterans of Bataan made a march of honor recently when they led a group of seven hundred soldiers and civilians to the Irwin Memorial Red Cross Bloodmobile at Fort Mason.

The fourteen former servicemen were recruited by Blabino Esplana for the blood donation and others working at Fort Mason and the Oakland Army Base quickly followed suit.

Since the intensive blood drive started 1 October 1951 soldiers and civilians of these two posts have given a total of 2,252 pints of blood for wounded soldiers and veterans.

Esplana, who was a Sergeant with the American troops in Bataan, escaped from the Japanese and fought with guerrilla bands in the Philippines until the islands were liberated by troops under the command of General Douglas MacArthur.

AER Drive Tops Former Collections

Contributions to the annual fund campaign of the Army Emergency Relief and the Army Relief Society conducted on the Presidio last month exceeded those of last year, Major Ella A. Wilton, Funds Custodian, announced this week.

By Wednesday with all but a few sections reporting, a total of $1,615.63 had been received. The final figure for the 1951 drive on the post was $1,305.83. All reports for this year's drive were to have been submitted by today.

Adding to this year's total will be the funds raised at the AER Benefit Dance held last night at the Presidio Service Club.

AFPS Reports Time Lag In Payment Of Combat Bonus

Washington—It will be at least several weeks before the Services can begin to pay claims authorized under the Combat Pay Act of 1952.

In a special announcement the Department of the Army explained that although rapid progress is being made in developing procedures for payment, extensive administrative information still must be compiled.

The process must first await a report from the Far East Command listing Army units whose combat service in Korea qualified their personnel for the $45-a-month payments. The list of eligible units must be determined before the claims of individuals can be acted upon.

The FECOM report, which required an examination of records covering more than two years' action, is expected to be received by the Department of the Army by Sept. 15, 1952.

General Halsey Decorates 7 Combat Veterans In Mid-Week Ceremonies

Gallant soldiers, who distinguished themselves during recent months in the Korean conflict, were honored Wednesday when Major General Milton B. Halsey, Deputy Commanding General, presented awards and decorations at the Presidio.

The decorations included an Oak Leaf Cluster to the Legion of Merit, two Silver Stars, two Bronze Stars and a Commendation Ribbon with Metal Pendant.

The Oak Leaf Cluster to the Legion of Merit was presented to Colonel Dan Gilmer, a newcomer to Army Headquarters. The San Rafael officer earned his newest award while serving as Commanding Officer of the 7th Cavalry Regiment in Korea. His citation tells the story. "Following the Chinese Communist forces' spring offensive, Colonel Gilmer, by his outstanding professional knowledge and tactical skill, maneuvered his regiment in an ingenious delaying action which inflicted innumerable casualties on the determined foe and gained valuable time for the United Nations' forces to regroup."

Silver Stars for gallantry in action were presented to two Camp Stoneman soldiers. Corporal Jesus Rodriguez then of Company 1, 35th Infantry Regiment, fought so gallantly that his courage inspired his fellow soldiers. His citation reads in part: "On the night of 2 February 1951, a numerically superior hostile force launched a determined assault on friendly positions near Anyang-ni, Korea. Despite the proximity of the onrushing foe, Corporal Rodriguez remained at his post on the right flank to deliver a heavy volume of effective counterfire. When his rifle jammed, he used it as a club against the encircling enemy until the attack had been repulsed. Corporal Rodriguez's exemplary courage, tenacity of purpose and unwavering devotion to duty were an inspiration to his fellow soldiers and reflect the highest credit on himself and the Armed Forces."

The other Stoneman hero was PFC Melvin G. Abbott of Tolona, Illinois. Although already wounded the 2nd Infantry Division Corporal distinguished himself.

self by his brave acts. His citation: "Private Abbott distinguished himself by gallantry in action on 13 October 1951 in the vicinity of Satae-ri, Korea. On this date Private Abbott's unit had the mission of attacking and securing a heavily fortified enemy held hill. In the ensuing fire fight he was wounded by enemy fire and upon refusal to be evacuated was left behind to guard the unit's equipment. After being informed that the friendly elements were in dire need of ammunition, Private Abbott unhesitatingly left his site of comparative safety to deliver it. Despite the pain from his wound he advanced over the fire-swept area to the forward positions and distributed the vital ammunition. In the course of this act he was wounded a second time and was forced to be evacuated."

MAJOR GORDON S. LEE

San Francisco's Major Gordon S. Lee, Sixth Army Engineer Section, was awarded the Bronze Star Medal for meritorious service. His citation: "Major Lee consistently carried out his many duties in an exemplary manner. His tact, outstanding professional ability and constant attention to duty earned him the deep respect and admiration of all those with whom he worked and contributed immeasurably to the success achieved by his group in accomplishing its vital mission."

Former Platoon sergeant Vincent Macias, 7th Infantry Regiment, was also awarded the Bronze Star Medal. The citation accompanying the award of this 3rd Division Master Sergeant states: "While serving as a Platoon Sergeant he performed his duties in a superior manner. Training the replacements assigned to his unit, he gave them full benefit of his own combat knowledge and experience, enabling them to meet and overcome the obstacles and difficulties encountered on the battlefield."

Two additional meritorious awards were made at the ceremonies. The Commendation Ribbon with Metal Pendant was awarded to Master Sergeant Jacob Remsing, who is now assigned to the Sixth Army IG Section. Sgt. Remsing's superior handling of his job as Chief Administrative Clerk earned him this award.

The Sixth Army Certificate of Achievement was presented to Captain Herman O. Freeman for outstanding service as Executive Officer of the 46th Ordnance Group, Fort Lewis, Washington.

Commander of the Troops at the Presentation Ceremonies was Captain Earl Martin of the 505th MP Bn. Battery B of the same unit also participated. Other units represented at the ceremonies were: Hq. Company, Sixth Army; the 6002D ASU, WAC Detachment, the 6002D ASU Station Complement.

The Sixth Army Band was on hand to furnish music for this special occasion.

Ft. Lewis Ceremonies Decorate Six Veterans In Two Parades

Pfc. Robert F. Golightly and Pfc. Wesley R. Walker, both of the 195th FA Bn., received Bronze Stars at a 57th FA Gp parade.

Sgt. Roy Morris, Jr., 195th FA Bn., received a Purple Heart at the 57th FA parade. SFC Kenneth R. Smith, 720th FA Bn., and Sgt. James C. Foote, 546th FA Bn., received Commendation Ribbons with metal pendants.

Western Influence Evident In Korea's Newly Developed Technical Terms

RUGGED KOREAN TERRAIN is readily adaptable to the more difficult problems that heavy engineering equipment must often face. Here in the ROKA Engineering School's heavy equipment area, students get a chance for practical application of classroom theories. One of the Korean Military Advisory Group's proudest achievements is the rapid advancement made by students in the newly established school.

(This is the third of a series of four articles about the Republic of Korea's Army Engineering School, established by the Korean Military Advisory Group. Although the Engineering School is only a single phase of KMAG's overall mission, a mission that has as its aim the complete technical self-sufficiency of the ROK Army, it is an important one. A lesson in practical democracy, the ROKA Engineering School is an excellent example of the Army's help-them-to-help-themselves planning, a policy that will pay dividends in well trained and staunch allies in the Free World's efforts to stem the Communist tide. Art and copy were prepared for the Star Presidian by Cpl. Tom Mapp, and forwarded through the 8th Army Public Information Office. Editor's Note.)

Part III

As a result of Western influence, American technical terms are fortunately and rapidly finding their way into the Korean tongue. A cotter pin is a cotter pin in both languages; so also is a piston a piston, a spark plug a spark plug and so on. The Koreans have no equivalent translations for these terms and it is not unusual to hear bursts of American "technicalese" being fired back and forth across a classroom of non-English speaking Koreans. Introducing these terms into the Korean language has proved a great boon for the Americans, who experience difficulty enough with the language, let alone having a headlamp described to them by a Korean soldier as "a shiny rice bowl with a candle in the center." A headlamp is now a headlamp in both languages, thanks to the school's standardization program.

Both the American advisors and the Koreans have considerable pride in their school; a pride that always comes with sincere teaching and student accomplishments. A skilled United States Army engineer from Little Rock, Arkansas, Lt. Col. Lucius B. Moon, is KMAG Senior Advisor, while the school's commandant is Lt. Col. Hwang In Kwon, a 32-year-old graduate of the Manchurian Technical College. Both Col. Moon and Lt. Col. Hwang are graduates of the Fort Belvoir course and they work jointly on all problems of administration and operation.

"Fort Belvoir taught me a great deal that I can use here," says the Korean colonel. "I am anxious to stress mechanical training here . . . we're improving but we can go faster. Korean engineers are good, but they need a much greater technical knowledge with which to work . . . this will come in time, I am sure."

Mutual co-operation at the school has paid off handsomely and the program is now geared to maximum efficiency, with more and more students arriving each week in a continuous flow as other students graduate. Some 1700 students are now taking classes at TESKA, which is operating almost at peak capacity levels. The esti-side, while below on the road, the remainder of the class watches silently and with an air of expectancy as the machine grinds to its work. Soon it will be their turn at the controls.

Down to the right, on the next ridge, a second class of about 100 men are at work on construction of a Bailey Bridge. This is a tough job that calls for the maximum teamwork. The men work on the sections, bolting them to the framework, ready for the nose to be pushed out across the cut. The Bailey Bridge has proved highly adaptable to the Korean scene and has been used extensively by the Republic of Korea Army.

To the left of the Bailey, a third class is at work on rigging a rope and trestle bridge. "In this work they do as well as the Americans, if not better," says Colonel Moon. "Most of their construction scaffolding is rope-lashed and there is little we can teach them in the way of knots, shearing, splicing and block and tackle work."

Across the draw, a demolition team is drilling hard rock, preparatory to the placing of charges. After the blast and the debris has been cleared the road construction crew will come in with bulldozers and shovels. With each new class, the school training areas are improving steadily. Roads built by the students as part of their practical work wind through the area, while experimental buildings erected by former classes are adding to the appearance of the school site.

An experimental bathhouse, of which the faculty is justly proud, is shown all visitors to the school. The bathhouse, complete with a novel heating unit, electric lighting, showers and washbowls, was built by students of the plumbers, carpenters, electricians and construction classes. The structure is of rock and cement. A second building, a guardhouse, was constructed of mud, wood and flint. This improvement plan will continue and the foundations for a permanent brick headquarters for the school will be laid shortly.

Personal freedoms guaranteed by the Bill of Rights, the name usually given to the first ten amendments to the Constitution, will be compared with the rights people have who live under Communist dictatorship during the Troop Information Conferences of Presidio units next week.

Among the most important of these rights are: freedom of religion, speech, press, assembly and petition, and the right not to be deprived of "life, liberty, or property without due process of law." They have protected American citizens against abuse of power by their own government ever since ratification of the amendments proposed by the first Congress in its first year.

Comparisons to be made during the conferences will show that under communism the people cannot protect their rights, because government is not by majority rule but by dictatorship of party leaders, backed by force of arms.

Unbeatable Team!

Army Nurse Visits Wounded Son At Letterman Hospital

"Like mother like son," is a paraphrase of an old saw, and one that is frequently debunked by the experts, but whether the exception or the rule, in the case of 1st Lieutenant Sidsel LeFleur and her son, Sergeant First Class George LeFleur, valor and duty to country seem inherent at least in two generations. For surmounting all personal obstacles both have served gallantly and gloriously in the last two major conflicts that have darkened the world.

Last week they were together again, when Nurse LeFleur, taking time off from her current Army assignment, visited George at Letterman Army Hospital, where he is undergoing treatment for combat wounds received in Korea. And their happy smiles were assurance that despite the darkness of the past they will assault the future with the same valiant disregard for personal sacrifice that marked their ready acceptance of their country's call to duty.

Lieutenant LeFleur entered the Army Nurse Corps in December, 1942, and requested service in the Pacific Area where she hoped to, at least on occasions, be able to see her son who was fighting with the Marines. Her first assignment was with a ship's platoon and during WWII she crossed the Pacific eight times before being assigned to a hospital in the Philippines. Meantime, George, who was in the thick of the Corregidor fighting had been taken prisoner by the Japanese and was being forced to work as a coal miner in Japan.

At the cessation of hostilities, Lt. LeFleur, having heard that George was a prisoner of war, got in touch with the Prisoner of War Board and after a long period of anxious waiting, George was finally located in a hospital on Guam and was flown to Manila to continue his recuperation under the care of his mother. "Seeing my son again was the happiest moment of my life," said Lt. LeFleur.

As if all this wasn't enough, George came back to the States and as soon as he'd recovered from the ill effects of his PW experience, he promptly enlisted in California's famed National Guard 40th Division and went with them to Korea. There he lost his leg fighting with the 223rd Infantry Regiment of the 40th.

Sgt. LeFleur's decorations include the Bronze Star with "V" device; the Purple Heart with two Oak Leaf Clusters; the Philippine Defense Ribbon and one of which he is most proud—the Marine Good Conduct medal covering a period of four years.

Lt. LeFleur left the service in 1946 and served at the Veteran Administration's Brentwood Hospital, Los Angeles, until August, 1951, when she answered the Army's urgent call for nurses and returned to active duty.

Initial Enrollment Indicates Success For Church School

Over 75 children, between the ages of 4 and 12, enrolled in the two-week Vacation Church School at the Presidio Post Chapel which opened Monday. Boys and girls from Fort Mason are attending the school, as well as the children of Protestant personnel of the Presidio and its sub-posts.

Organized by Chaplain (Major) D. D. Drake, acting Sixth Army Chaplain, this is the first vacation church school to be held on the post. "Our Bible Heritage" is the topic of the school and class themes are "Child Life in Bible Time," "Bible Homes Today," and "Learning to Know the Bible."

Classes are being held Monday through Friday from 0900 to 1130 and the schedule includes games and singing. Plans for the coming week include field trips and a family picnic.

Colorful Rites As Army Couple Wed In Presidio Chapel

The Presidio Chapel was the setting for the 4 August wedding of Private First Class Jeanne Y. Sanderson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy S. Sanderson, Glenville, Minnesota, to Sergeant First Class Thomas C. Jackson, son of Mrs. Lucille Sonnier, Port Arthur, Texas.

Chaplain (Major) Charles E. Ross, performed the ceremony, followed by a reception at the home of the newlyweds.

Given in marriage by Lt. Col. Charles K. Fox, Chief, AGM, Sixth Army, the bride wore a ballarina length white satin gown. Her brief veil was draped from a small juliet cap, and she carried a colonial bouquet of white Stephanotis.

Mrs. Vera Kelly was matron of honor and Sergeant First Class Gordon W. Lowe, Sixth Army Public Information Section, served Sergeant Jackson as best man.

After a brief honeymoon, Sergeant and Mrs. Jackson will return to the Sixth Army, AGM Section, where they are both assigned.

The Jacksons reside at 275 15th Avenue, San Francisco.

Presidio Fire Record Result Of Top Prevention Program

The Presidio has reason to be proud of its fire record. In the past year property losses were less than $500. An aggressive fire prevention program is largely responsible for this exceptional record.

"An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," says George Geller, Chief of Fire Prevention and Protection at the Presidio. "We hope to maintain this record. It has been made possible by the wholehearted cooperation of everyone on this post and its sub-stations."

"Fire prevention inspections promote safety practices that protect both life and property. Through the elimination of fire causes you limit resultant losses. Post Fire Inspector Le Duc conducts continuous fire prevention inspections throughout the Presidio and sub-posts, assisted by Assistant Inspector Williams. These inspections serve the two-fold purpose of eliminating hazardous conditions and educating personnel in fire prevention practices. Usually when irregularities are discovered, spot corrections are made. If not, a written report is submitted with request for a signed endorsement of corrective action taken by responsible personnel. Reinspections are made as often as necessary to determine compliance. All fire prevention reports become part of the Fire Department records. The findings of the Fire Inspectors are not intended to be in the nature of criticism but solely with a view of being helpful in the elimination of hazardous conditions which may cause fatalities and loss of government property."

Post Fire Inspector Le Duc, with fourteen years of experience as a fire preventionist, stresses the part that carelessness plays in fires. "Eliminate carelessness and you wipe out the chief cause of fires," says Le Duc. "One ignorant of the nature of fire causes and fire hazards can scarcely hope to be an efficient fire preventionist. Discipline during the present emergency is vitally necessary and is developed only through habitual obedience to good housekeeping orderliness, safe disposal of smoking material and proper storage of combustible and flammable materials."

Continuous building inspections are made at the Presidio and sub-stations. "The careless disposal of cigarettes is responsible for most fires on this post," says Le Duc. "Grass and brush fires are next. Other fires are a result of excessive accumulations of trash, defective wiring or careless handling and storage of flammables. A fire hazard, if carefully analyzed, will be found to be merely a violation of common sense. It is much easier to prevent a fire than it is to put one out. No matter how 'fireproof' a building is, it is only as safe as its contents and occupants."

Post ExO Leaves For Ft. Leavenworth CGS School

Major William K. Toy has been assigned as acting executive officer of the Presidio of San Francisco, replacing Lt. Col. John N. Beck who is to attend the Command General Staff School at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas.

Major Toy has been stationed on the Presidio for the past year and a half. Prior to his new assignment he has served as Post Intelligence Officer and Administrative Inspector.

Colonel Beck served as executive officer a year and a half under Colonel Peter J. Lloyd, present Deputy Post Commander, and Colonel O. L. Davidson, his predecessor.

ENEMY AIRCRAFT BEWARE—The 40-mm. Automatic Gun and carriage (shown at the left) is able to fire 120 rounds per minute and is especially effective against dive bombers. The "big job" (shown at the right) is the 120-mm. gun Mi and anti-aircraft mount. This 30-ton hell-raiser spits out 10 rounds of fire every 60 seconds.

SIGNAL CORPS FIELD EQUIPMENT—Included with the display of the Signal Corps are three important items for field and combat use. Items shown are: field telephone, switchboard, wire carrier and a roll of telephone wire.

Army Commander Inaugurates— New Sixth Army Equipment Display To Stress Economy

An exhibit of Army equipment and supplies ranging from an eight-penny nail to a quarter of a million dollar 120 mm. mounted anti-aircraft gun, is being held at the Static Display Building No. 644 at the Presidio. The exhibition which opened unofficially 15 July, 1952, will run for an indefinite period of time. Army Commander Lt. Gen. Joseph M. Swing, who conceived and fostered the program, was one of the early visitors.

Purpose of the show, which will be viewed by all Presidio personnel is to demonstrate as convincingly as possible to all soldiers the fabulous cost of maintaining a modern Army and the importance of conservation.

Although no building is large enough to hold one of each of the 3½ million items used by the Army, a representative group of items from various branches of the service have been selected and are in the display. Each item is supplemented with a card which describes the piece and indicates the current cost of purchase.

Visitors expressed amazement as they passed the displays and noted the high cost of each item. Few soldier-viewers were aware of the increased costs and left the exhibition more aware of the importance of the cost consciousness program put into effect sometime ago by Secretary of the Army Frank Pace, Jr.

"The vigorous economy program is producing excellent results throughout the entire Army," according to Chief Warrant Officer Louis Epstein, OIC of the displays, "but we still have a long way to go."

Just how far we have yet to go is dramatically demonstrated in a film shown at the Signal Corps exhibition. Titled, "A Penny Saved," the film depicts various ways that Joe and Jane Soldier can save the Army many thousands of dollars each day by conserving water, office supplies, etc. if only they will exercise more care while performing their jobs.

Some of the displays include WWII equipment and these items are placed alongside the latest developments of the same item. The place card also indicates the vast difference in cost to the Army for the purchase of the item.

One exhibit which drew much favorable crowd comment was the ration display of the Food Service School. This included a showing of the various types of rations served to troops during the wars in which this country has engaged. Earliest ration shown was that served to members of the American Army in the year 1775.

Personnel interested in furthering their education found the T I & E booth the most interesting at the show. The exhibit, through a series of cards and charts, proved the many advantages of advanced education. The cards and posters also covered the variety of subjects discussed at T I & E lectures.

The exhibition which will be permanent in nature will by no means be permanent in station. Current plans call for the "movable show" to be taken to County Fairs, and halls and stores in the Bay area so that Mr. and Mrs. John Q. Taxpayer can see exactly how his military dollar is being spent. Interested organizations such as the Junior Chamber of Commerce will have an opportunity to view the exhibitions when their groups are invited to be guests during conducted tours.

Each branch of the service provides a speaker stationed at their exhibit and he gives a short talk pointing out the more interesting aspects of the display.

It is intended that the program be constantly improved. New ideas which spring up from time to time will be incorporated into the show.

During normal duty hours, Monday through Friday, the building located in the Crissy Field Area will be open from 0800 to 1200 hours and from 1300 to 1630 hours. Special arrangements can be made for Saturday and Sunday viewings.

Field Forces Colonel Wins 8th Silver Star

Recently awarded his eighth Silver Star, Colonel John T. Corley, commander of the 24th Infantry Regiment, moves closer to the top of the Army's list of most decorated heroes.

The 37-year-old Army officer, now assigned to the G-3 section of the Army Field Forces at Fort Monroe, Virginia, also proudly wears 2 Distinguished Service Crosses, 4 Bronze Stars, 2 Legion of Merit awards, Purple Heart, Soldiers' Medal, Combat Infantryman's Badge with Star and other decorations from foreign countries.

T I & E Mobile Unit Does Land Office Business In South

The majority of Sixth Army personnel now seeking further education through USAFI are heading into college courses, if recent registrations by the USAFI mobile unit at five posts in the southern end of the Sixth Army area are a criterion, Sixth Army's T I & E Section has announced.

SFC Thomas H. McComas, who this week returned from a 58-day itinerary that included stopovers at Fort Ord, Camp Roberts, Camp San Luis Obispo, Camp Cooke, and the Presidio of Monterey, reported that out of over a thousand courses signed up for, approximately 60 per cent covered study of courses included in the first two years of college work.

Most of the other 40 per cent of registrations were for technical and vocational courses, especially in railroading and automobile repairs, and only a minor registration for high school courses, the latter indicating the great progress USAFI has made since the program was launched to encourage military personnel to further higher education, McComas believes.

SFC McComas stated, "the arrival of the big USAFI caravan at a post was an advertisement in itself, for soon as we selected a spot to park on, applicants immediately began to fall in line."

In one day alone, at Camp San Luis Obispo, over one hundred applications were listed and seventy-two courses were "sold" and registrations processed.

Toward the end of August the USAFI caravan will tour the northern end of the Sixth Army area, and preliminary signs are the registrations there will be just as high, if not higher, as those listed in the southern end of the area.

Roberts Honors C of S On Departure For AF Staff College

A full division parade was held at Camp Roberts, California recently honoring Colonel Paul G. Hollister, Chief of staff of the 7th Armored division who is leaving for Norfolk, Virginia. He has been selected to attend the Armed Forces Staff College in that city.

The new assignment will help round out a brilliant military career which started in 1926 when he enlisted in the Montana National Guard. His record during World War II, while overseas with the famed 41st Infantry Division, is outstanding. Among the awards and decorations he received are the Silver Star with two Oak Leaf Clusters and the Bronze Star with "V" Device.

Colonel Hollister has served as chief of staff of the 7th Armored Division since its re-organization two years ago.

Plans for the Sixth Army Photography Contest to be held preliminary to the Fourth Inter-Service competition were announced this week by Headquarters Sixth Army.

Installations throughout the area will conduct local contests between 15 September and 15 October to select entries for the Sixth Army contest. Each installation may submit seven entries in the black and white division and three entries in the color transparencies division.

Ten cash prizes will be awarded to the winners of the Sixth Army Contest. Prizes in the black and white category will be: first place, $35; second place, $30; third place, $25; fourth place, $20; fifth place, $15; and sixth and seventh place, $10 each. In the color transparencies division the prizes will be $35 for first place, $30 for second and $25 for third.

Local installation entries must be submitted to the Sixth Army contest by 15 November as the judging will be done between that date and 15 December. Black and white pictures may vary in size from a minimum of 5 by 7 inches to a maximum of 16 by 20 inches, unmatted and unmounted. Color transparencies will be in cardboard mounts with a minimum of 35 millimeter and a maximum of 5 by 7 inches.

All Services are conducting similar contests beginning with smaller installations and working up to major command competitions. Final eliminations will be done at the highest level.

Top winners of all Services will compete against each other 15 April, 1953, for the Inter-Service awards. The Service with the greatest number of prize-winning entries will hold for one year the perpetual trophy. Individual winners will also receive trophies.

Red Raiders Gain Ground
Trounce Two More Teams

A top notch San Francisco baseball club got caught in the rush last week when they met the hot Presidio Raiders and fell by the wayside to the tune of 10-1.

The eight-inning contest saw Holohan, Presidio's consistent mound threat, fan 18 batters and hold the Marketers to three hits, one run, while his teammates in "battery row" nailed 10 runs for 12 hits.

Player-Manager Viviani continued his reliable batting performance by hitting in his 11th straight game, while Third Sacker Stix pasted three for three.

Potts turned in three hits for four times at the plate and picked up a homer in the seventh.

Holohan made it a perfect day by slamming the horsehide 415 feet for a triple with two men on.

Presidio's Red Raider baseball machine continued to roll with a 15-4 victory over the sailors from the USS Shields Tuesday, their fourth straight win in two weeks.

Mound duty was capably handled by Luna who held the gobs to eight hits while the opposing pitcher gave up 12 hits and several bases on balls.

Second Baseman Silva rapped out four hits for five times up to take plate honors for the day with Stix and Potts, both consistent hitters, turning in two for five apiece.

Unable to connect with Luna's tricky ball, the sailor nine was held scoreless in six of the nine innings while the locals faltered in only two frames.

Stars Will Clash
In Tourney Finals

Rated as one of the fifteen top racket stars in the nation, Presidio's Pfc Gilbert I. Shea, copped the singles event in the Sixth Army Southern Division Tennis finals this week and is now on the Camp Cooke court vying for all Sixth Army honors, 6-9 August.

SFC William B. Millikan, Madigan Army Hospital, Ft. Lawton, Washington, net star, flashed to a clean sweep in the Northern Division tourney by capturing the singles crown in straight sets, and teaming with Maj. Paul L. Beckman, Madigan Special Services officer, to cop the doubles title, also in straight sets.

Millikan and Shea should be facing each other on the court in the final playoff with the winner being crowned Sixth Army champ.

Kicking off with this, my initial column as Sports Editor, my first goal shall be to express my aims and desires in an endeavor to give the Presidio the best possible sports coverage.

For 22 months a public information representative of the 11th Airborne Division, Fort Campbell, Kentucky, I am new at the Presidio and for the most part unfamiliar with local sports activities. For this reason I must ask for the same support and cooperation the former Sports Editor received.

The sports section is an integral part of any newspaper. In the Army paper, however, it carries a bigger load. To GI Joe, who needs read everything on the run, it is the most interesting portion of the paper. That is why the sports coverage must be timely, varied and accurate. It has to be worth the time spent reading it!

This is a "community style" newspaper and is only as informative and interesting as the people wish to make it. The sports department has excellent facilities for coverage—photographic equipment, adequate transportation, typewriters, pencils, paper and one warm body to hustle about collecting and processing the information.

To you sports fans and readers who wish to contribute, the action on your part is very simple. Just dial—5542—ask for me, give your location and I'll be right over to get the straight dope. And remember—within every story there should be a picture. We won't overlook that possibility.

Sports coverage is my business. Sports participation is another story, a project capably handled by Special Services. Without overstepping my bounds, I'd like to lay it on the line and make brief mention of that project—Headquarters Posts are not usually known to have the best in

Presidio Skeet Team Takes Second In Lake Merced Open

Presidio's skeet team waded through some tough competition in the 5-man Service Team event of the Lake Merced Open last Saturday and Sunday, but failed to retain the championship they won in 1951.

Four birds out of first place, the local skeetsters were second only to the Oakland Naval Station team, but not disheartened as the competition was sharp. The event saw crack teams from most of the service installations throughout California competing for awards.

Final tally gave the Oakland gobs 476 hits out of a possible 500 birds. Presidio cracked 472. Moffet Field copped third place.

Individual scores for the local marksmen were: Capt. McGonagle, 98 out of 100 birds—Lt. Col. Bower, 96—Pvt. Theis, 96—Maj. Reid, 92—Sgt. Broome, 90.

Firing individually in the other events and competing with civilians as well as servicemen from far and wide only Col. Bower was able to place. He picked up a 3rd in the Class "A" 410 gauge match. Capt. McGonagle tied for 3rd in the Class "A" 12 guage event, but was eased out in the final playoff.

The 10-event meet, a highly rated yearly match, was held under the auspices of the Pacific Rod and Gun Club, which offered $2,000 worth of trophies.

30th Engineers Vie
For Berth On Presidio Rifle Team

Ten berths on the Presidio Rifle Team are at stake this year as the 30th Engineer Base Topographic Battalion fire for record on the Fort Barry range, according to Major Paul L. Hudson, Battalion S-3 Officer.

Squeezing off his rounds last week, PFC Fred K. Pratt, Casual Detachment, proved his mastery over the carbine with a sizzling 256 out of a possible 260. His sharp eye gave him 48 out of 52 bulls eyes. Just 5 points back at 251, was Pvt Thomas S. Fewlass, 99th Engineers, and Sgt Allen Pasbrig, 21st Engineers. PFC Tommy R. Coy recorded a 249, Cpl John Engler 248, Cpl Martin Portala 247—all representing the 21st Engineers. Bunched behind the leaders at 246 were a host of expert riflemen.

Other faces can be expected in the winners circle late in the fall when the Survey Companies, now in Alaska, will take their shots at the bull's eye. The ten men in the battalion with the highest total score will match their shooting-eye against the best riflemen of various units in another burst of bullets to determine the ten best riflemen on the Presidio.

These ten men will represent the Presidio of San Francisco in rifle matches with other teams in the Sixth Army area.

Trophy Winners!

21st Engineers Cop Class "C"
Softball Title In City League

The victorious 21st Engineer baseball team was presented with the trophy given annually to the winner of the 2nd Division of the Class "C" City Softball League by league officials last week. Each squad member received an individual trophy similar to the team award. M/Sgt. Robert Dow accepted the symbol of victory for the team. Sgt. Dow led the winning nine to the championship and is in the midst of a campaign for another league title this summer.

With the ardent backing of the company personnel the team scored six triumphs against only one defeat, and qualified for the All-City playoff. Company Commander Captain Milton S. Saunders and his staff gave the team the utmost support, offering practical suggestions during critical situations and cheered the club on during the games.

Special tribute should be paid to Sgt. Bruno Juskiewicz, who joined the team in mid-season after returning from 8 months in Korea. Winner of the Purple Heart and veteran of the first U.N. counter offensive and the Chinese spring offensive, he quickly regained his catching finesse and joined Dick Akita, third baseman; Tom Duff, second baseman; Chuck Ziegler, shortstop; and first baseman, Dick Standish in the winning infield combination. Cpl. Dick Jackstadt did the catching before leaving for a tour of duty in Alaska.

team sports. Perhaps it is the nature of each individual's work that prohibits full participation. Most of these obstacles can be overcome if the team spirit is within us. Presidio has an enviable sports record, but we can do better. We can get above the bare mediocrity by active and concentrated support. With the right attitude in mind we can rake the bigger posts, who have a choice selection from 20 to 30 thousand men, over the coals.

This column will be a weekly feature designed to give a rundown of Presidio's week in the sporting world along with personal comment about the outstanding participants of the various events.

If I continue to receive the type of cooperation rendered me by Lt. Col. Harvey Bower, Post Ordnance; Sgts. Jean Groomes and Fred Viviani, Post Special Services, this past week, my two pages in the Presidian will strike home.

The Star Presidian is the best paper in the Sixth Army Area. As it progresses and strives to become the best in the Army, so will the Sports Department progress—"Small Leads Make Big News, Dial 5542."

Olympics—1952—finis. The statistics are in the hands of historians. Memories are in the minds of the participants. The Russians tried to overhaul the final tally and the US Army gained a lot of prestige and satisfaction.

Army's khaki clad athletic ambassadors did a nice job in making their individual bids for honors. A few won medals, the rest were edged out in the semi finals or final rounds, but all of them won something if nothing more than respect for the Army.

Our special pride was aquatic star Maj. Sammy Lee who made his points when they were needed most. Lee demonstrated his usual precision and form by eliminating the world's best high divers for a gold medal.

Limber legged track star Pfc. Jerome Biffle spanned 24 feet, 10 inches, 757 centimeters for a gold medal in the broad jump. Tabbed as the Cinderella man of the Olympics by Coach Brutus Hamilton, versatile Biffle also gave a creditable account of himself in the post Olympic track meet in Stockton.

Early Start! Complete First Two Games In Scott Intra-Mural Basketball

Cutting the net with a barrage of points, the 21st Soltechs dealt with 99th 99'ers a stinging defeat, 52 to 12, in the curtain raiser of the Fort Scott basketball tournament Monday night.

Employing the fast break the Soltechs simply outran the 99'ers dropping most of their points from within a 10-foot radius of the basket.

The Soltechs scored first in the contest and held a commanding 26-6 lead at halftime. Hartman and Shaffer shared scoring honors in the first half with ten points each. Campbell hit from the floor twice in the first half for the 99'ers.

Haug sunk eight points in the second half to lead the attack and his teammates tallied 18 points to douse all 99'er hopes of a last minute victory. The 21st Soltechs definitely proved that they are a leading contender in the two-month Round Robin Tournament although they lacked the poise and coordination characteristic of smooth basketball.

Headquarters Lakers topped the 21st Deuces in the second game of the evening, 19-13.

The 32-point total may be a record low for the Round Robin Tourney. Both squads played wild, ragged basketball, neither team being able to control the ball long enough to get a good shot at the basket. Field goal attempts by the Lakers bounded off the rim as though a cover had been dropped over the hoop.

After breaking into the scoring column early in the first quarter, the Lakers led all the way. It was a 6-0 game at the end of the first quarter and a tight 7-6 duel at half time. The third quarter stop found the Lakers still clutching a one-point lead, but in the closing minutes of the game they widened the gap to 6 points winning 19-13.

Wrong Colors—No Grudge! Two EM Play Against Former Boss in 49er-Bronco Game

When the big San Francisco 49er-San Francisco Bronco football classic gets underway this Sunday in Kezar Stadium, two enlisted men from Letterman Special Services will have their sights set on a former boss.

Cpls. Tom Busalacchi and Bob Catlin will be in the Bronco line digging for the chance to dump ex Lt. Sammie Cathcart, 49er half-back and a former Special Services Officer here at the Presidio.

There is no personal grudge involved, other than the fact that in the eyes of Tom and Bob, Cathcart is wearing the wrong colors. They will witness an opportunity not realized by many servicemen.

It should make for an interesting pigskin spectacle for local grid fans and that also includes the patients at Letterman. Through the courtesy of the 49ers, the patients will see this and all of their home games to be played this season.

Other classics on the agenda for the hospital football fans will be the home games of the University of California, University of San Francisco and Stanford, through courtesy of the respective schools.

The preparation tourney went 54 holes.

Hooper's Tight Pitching Gains Tie for 21st

The 21st Engineers were held to a 5-5 tie last Friday evening when a fluke hit by a General Mills of San Francisco batsman knotted the count in the bottom of the fifth in a City League baseball battle. The game was called at the end of the sixth inning in compliance with a City League curfew ruling.

M/Sgt Hopper held the General Mills nine to two hits, but untimely walks set up three runs in the third and the two important runs in the last of the fifth.

The seven-hit attack of the Fort Scott nine was led by Cpl Tom Duff who had three consecutive singles. The Engineers pushed two runs across in the first frame on their double-steal play. With Haug on third, Hartman was walked and trotted toward first. He broke for second after rounding the bag, catching the pitcher off guard. The hurler whirled and threw to second, but Hartman was safe at second and Haug scored from third. A single then scored Hartman with the second run. The 21st added one more tally in the second and two in the fourth inning.

General Mills knotted the game in the fifth when they filled the bases on three walks. With two men out, the batter swung hard at the pitch but only partially connected. The ball scooted down the base line, hopping over third, stopping just out of the infield. Before it could be recovered the tying runs had scored.

Cpl Duff's three hits raised his average for the season to .389, the highest percentage on the team. Having left on a 30-day furlough last Saturday, Cpl Chuck Ziegler will be badly missed for the remainder of the season. The lack of the regular shortstop's hitting and fielding could mean hard times for the 21st.

SPORT SHORTS

In the 1951 National Rifle and Pistol shooting championships two of the four men's events were won by servicemen. Sgt. 1st Class Huelet Benner, Fort Knox, Kentucky, is the National Pistol champ and 2nd Lt. Remes De LaHunt, Camp Lejeune, North Carolina, won the National High-Power Rifle (Service Rifle M-1) match.

Sixteen In a Row! Stupur Fans Twenty-Two As Raiders Wax San Carlos

Led by "Dynamite" Dan Stupur, Presidio pitching fireball, the Raiders continued their baseball onslaught by trouncing a top Bay Area team, San Carlos, 17-3, last Sunday on the civilians' home field.

Twenty-two San Carlos batters were caught in Stupur's sizzling heat wave, unable to see the hot ball, much less hit it. Sixteen of the strikeouts were in succession. Of a possible 27 outs in a 9-inning game, Dan's 22 margin spelled a phenomenal performance.

Paced by Lemon's 5 hits for 7 times up and the only homer of the game, all of the local batters were shouldering an accurate stick picking up runs in 7 of the 9 innings.

Stix and Viviani continued their consistency at the plate. Stix now has 10 hits for 16 times up since his return and Viviani's 3 hits made it his 12th straight hitting game.

In the past three games Presidio's pitching staff has fanned 56 batters.

Enlisted Promotions Thaw; Sixth Army Allotted 2,307 Ratings For August

Sixth Army has received an allocation of 2,307 enlisted promotions for the month of August as its quota under the new promotion system inaugurated this month by the Department of the Army.

Under the new system, the Department of the Army will authorize specific promotion quotas for each command every month. Upon receipt of these quotas Headquarters Sixth Army will allot promotions to subordinate commands to fill existing authorized vacancies in the grade and MOS specified in applicable T/O&E and/or TD.

Grades of the promotions allocated to the Sixth Army for August are as follows: 46 M/Sgt., 88 Sfc., 272 Sgt., 300 Cpl. and 1,501 Pfc. These monthly quotas cannot be carried over to the following month, but must be used during the month allotted.

Under the new system, longer time in all grades is now required before promotion and time-in-position requirements have also been increased.

To receive promotions, the following time-in-grade requirements have been set:

For promotion to M/Sgt., a person must have had a year as Sfc.

For promotion to Sfc., a person must have 10 months as Sgt.

For promotion to Sgt., a person must have 8 months as Cpl.

For promotion to Pfc., a person must have 4 months as Pvt.

Formerly, two months' time in any grade was all that was required for promotion to the next higher grade.

Under the old regulations, the time - in - position requirement was three months, except for Korea and FECOM. Minimum periods now are:

For promotion to M/Sgt., a person must have held a M/Sgt.'s job for six months.

For promotion to Sfc., a person must have held a Sfc.'s job for five months.

For promotion to Sgt., a person must have held a Sgt.'s job for four months.

For promotion to Cpl., a person must have held a Cpl.'s job for three months.

For promotion to Pfc., a person must have held a Pfc.'s job for two months.

Those men serving in forward positions in Korea will be subject to a more liberal promotion policy. But all promotions, world-wide, will still be under the firm control of the Department of the Army.

Because of the increase in number of men being separated from the Service and other factors, gradual increases are expected in numbers to be promoted in all grades during September and October.

The Army was forced to suspend many promotion authorizations in March because of strength limitations. Many men, while eligible and deserving of promotions, were unable to obtain them.

700 MP Reserves Begin Summer Training Session

Approximately 700 members of Military Police Corps Reserve Units in the Sixth Army Area are undergoing a two weeks' summer training camp at Fort Ord which began on 3 August and terminates 17 August.

Colonel Richard F. Locke, Jr., Commanding Officer, 351 Military Government Area Headquarters "A," was designated the Senior Officer of this group for the purpose of coordinating the Camp activities and maintaining liaison with ORC Company Commander at Fort Ord. The G-5 Section, Sixth Army Mobilization Group, under the direction of Colonel John Rickardson, is responsible for the planning and execution of the CPX for this summer camp which will be conducted the 13 and 14 of August. All of the equipment, supplies and facilities were provided by the Commanding General, Fort Ord.

The entire Military Government Reserve Program is the responsibility of the Provost Marshal, Sixth Army. The training program and all arrangements incident to this camp were completed by the Provost Marshal Section, Sixth Army. During this period Lt. Colonel John C. Bucher, Chief, Reserve Components Division, Provost Marshal Section, Sixth Army, is at the camp to assist the Reserve Units in their training.

Either with or without dependents, tours in Asmara, Eritrea, and Tripoli, Lybia, are 30 months. For Azores the tour is 18 months without dependents and 24 months with dependents, while the Casablanca, Morocco, tour is 18 months without and 36 months with dependents.

Colonel Donahue Assigned Sixth Army Chaplain

COLONEL DONAHUE

Assignment of Chaplain (Col.) Edward T. Donahue as Sixth Army Chaplain has been announced by Maj. Gen. Ivan L. Bennett, Army Chief of Chaplains. Chaplain Donahue replaces Chaplain (Col.) Patrick J. Ryan, who has been chosen as Deputy Chief of Chaplains, Department of the Army.

Chaplain Donahue will assume his new duties at Headquarters Sixth Army 1 September, coming to the Presidio from Fort Lewis, Wash., where he has been post chaplain for the past year.

The new Sixth Army Chaplain has been on active duty for the past 12 years, nearly six of which he has spent overseas. From August 1940 to May 1945, he served with the 1st Armored Division and was division chaplain for one year. His decorations include the Silver Star, Legion of Merit, Bronze Star Medal and Purple Heart.

Since World War II, his assignments have included post chaplain of Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md., and nearly three years in Caribbean area.

A native of Missouri, Chaplain Donahue was graduated from the Northern Baptist Theological Seminary after first being graduated from the Kansas City School of Law. He attended the Kansas City Baptist Theological Seminary in 1929 and 1930 and in 1947 attended the Chaplain School.

Chaplain Donahue and his wife will leave Fort Lewis for the Presidio 28 August.

Joint CPX Plans!

Giant Defense Problem Will Involve All Local Services

A two-day joint defense exercise, the first of its kind involving all branches of Armed Forces and Civil Defense operational personnel, is slated to get underway this Saturday.

Participating in the giant CPX will be elements of Sixth Army, Western Sea Frontier (Navy), Western Air Defense Force and the 4th Air Force, Western Area Coast Guard, Western Army Anti-Aircraft Command, Marine Corps Units and Federal and State Civil Defense organizations.

Army installations throughout the Sixth Army Area will stage limited movements during the problem.

Regions 8 and 9 of the Federal Civil Defense Administration, with headquarters in Berkeley and Seattle, respectively, and encompassing the states of California, Arizona, Utah, Nevada, Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana, will join with State Civil Defense Offices of the eight states in the solution of operational problems.

There will be no movement of Civil Defense personnel or equipment, and in most cases municipal Civil Defense offices will not be activated.

Directors of the exercise emphasized that the demonstration not only will be the greatest joint service defense rehearsal in the Continental United States but also will mark the first occasion of such nature in which Civil Defense has been activated in its official role, as, according to Secretary of Defense Robert A. Lovett, "the co-equal partner with the military in the defense of the nation."

The Armed Forces will utilize their plans and provide training in inter-service coordination of operations incident to a war emergency.

A series of simulated attacks and incidents involving cities and installations in the West will be developed.

While the Armed Forces act in concert in meeting the make-believe problems from a military standpoint and in rendering mutual assistance, Civil Defense staffs at Federal and State levels will take necessary theoretical action designed to protect and provide for the welfare of the civilian population.

During the exercise, a joint umpiring group composed of Armed Forces and Civil Defense representatives will oversee the widespread operation from the Presidio of San Francisco.

Ranking officers of the Armed Forces involved are: Lieutenant General Joseph M. Swing, USA, Commanding General, Sixth Army; Vice Admiral J. L. Hall, Jr., USN, Commander Western Sea Frontier; Major General Walter E. Todd, USAF, Commanding General, Western Air Defense Force; Major General William E. Hall, USAF, Commanding General Fourth Air Force; Rear Admiral R. T. McElligott, USCG, Commander, Western Area Coast Guard; Major General Alfred H. Noble, USMC, Commanding General Department of the Pacific, US Marine Corps; Brigadier General Robert W. Berry, USA, Commanding General Western Army Anti-aircraft Command.

Heading the Civil Defense personnel in the exercise will be Henry S. Eaton and Roger E. Dunham, Directors, respectively, of FCDA Regions 8 and 9, and the following State Directors:

Major General Walter M. Robertson, California; C. C. Carlson,

Jr., Nevada; Colonel Alvin Sessions, Utah; George B. Owen, Arizona; Admiral D. E. Barbey, Washington; Jack Hayes, Oregon; Colonel Philip Doddridge, Idaho, and Colonel H. A. McKinney, Montana.

New Officer Promotion Lists Show Steady Gain

Officer promotions for the month of August have begun at an overall rate double that in July, which has been reflected in the number of promotions within the Sixth Army area.

The first two promotion lists—to captain and to major—contained approximately 200 names apiece. The list of Sixth Army promotions to captain is not available; however, the 11 promotions within the area to major are as follows:

Roderick Huff, 747 Amph. Trac., Camp Cooke, Calif.

William G. Mitchell, 6512 ASU ORC, Missoula, Mont.

Richard F. Mitchell, 6513 Calif. ORC PSF, Calif.

Harvill H. Patterson, G-3 Sec. Hq. Sixth Army.

Roy Damore, 6006 ASU, Ft. Lewis, Wash.

Jack B. Rigby, 6003 ASU, Ft. Ord, Calif.

Wilma K. Sandberg, 6013 USAH, Ft. Lawton, Wash.

Peter N. Holmes, 16 Sig. Bn., Camp San Luis Obispo, Calif.

William N. Taylor, 6219 RC, Ft. Lewis, Wash.

Carl M. Johnson, 6017 USAH, Camp Hanford, Wash.

Atkins W. Norville, 6002 ASU Med. Lab., Ft. Baker, Calif.

In both the captain and major lists, a gain of a month in the cut-off date has been registered. For captains to major, the cut-off date has been advanced from 23 May, 1946, to 21 June, 1946. For first lieutenants to captain, the cut-off date has been advanced from 4 August, 1947, to 4 September, 1947.

In the last two lists of new majors, there had been no gain in the cut-off date.

Sixth Army PM Completes 3-Day Narcotics Seminar

A narcotics seminar, conducted by the Provost Marshal, Sixth Army for the instruction of Military Police Personnel, was completed last week. Representatives from related City, State, Federal agencies and from major installations in the Sixth Army Area attended the conference which numbered approximately 75 individuals.

Facilities for the seminar were provided by the California Military District in the Armory and arrangements were planned and executed by Captain Edward G. Luce, Commanding Officer, 60th CID, Presidio of San Francisco.

The Commandant, The Provost Marshal General's Center, Camp Gordon, Georgia, and the Federal Bureau of Narcotics provided instructors for this three-day seminar.

Executive Order Allows Retention Of RA Colonels

Up to 500 Regular Army Colonels, out of about 800 facing forced retirement, will be retained in the Army under terms of executive order number 10379 signed by the President 2 August 1952.

The Army announced that a board of general officers would meet immediately to consider whose retention is desired, and the officers affected will be notified as soon as action is taken. A second group facing retirement on 30 June 1954 will also be considered.

The President's order suspends the operation of the forced retirement clause for four years from its effective date, or until the end of the Korean emergency. The suspension provides that the Army may retain up to 60 per cent of the officers who come within the provision of the Act on 30 June 1953.

Criteria by which the officers are to be selected for retention shall be based on military needs, qualifications and such other factors as the Secretaries of the Army and Air Force shall determine.

Miracle At Bragg!

Magic Of Whole Blood Saves Life Of Colonel's Young Son

The little five-year-old boy on the reviewing stand at Ft. Bragg, N. C., had a man-sized job to do.

But how could you thank those smart-stepping soldiers on parade for giving 169 pints of their own blood to pull you through an almost hopeless illness?

As Tommy Sanford's father lifted him to the microphone, tears welled up in the child's eyes, and his oft-repeated speech stuck in his throat.

Tommy's father, Col. Teddy H. Sanford, had said it was a miracle the child had lived, and his father often spoke of those "miracle-working" soldiers of the 504th Airborne Infantry Regiment. He was their commanding officer.

Tommy was alive that day and cured of nephritis, a serious kidney disease, because 200 members of the 504th Regiment of the 82nd Airborne Division donated blood anonymously. It took 169 transfusions over a period of more than two years to cure the child.

His recovery is apparently complete now, although doctors decline to guarantee against a possible relapse.

The first call for blood came almost three years ago when Tommy was a patient at Highsmith Hospital in Fayetteville, N. C.

Some 25 paratroopers of the 504th were the first to answer the call. From then on the regiment kept in touch with the hospital, and each new summons brought 25 or 30 more anonymous volunteers. The 307th Airborne Medical Battalion of the 82nd Division also contributed blood, but most of it came from the 504th.

But the regiment was passing quickly in review, and still Tommy couldn't find the words. Finally the dryness in his throat disappeared, and with a deep feeling of gratitude, he blurted out:

"I'm very proud of my blood line now—because it comes from the finest soldiers in the world."

ROKA ASSAULT PROBLEM—Students at the Korean Army's Engineering School prepare an assault landing in one of the many problems that play a major role in the school's curriculum. Under the supervision of U. S.

Army technicians assigned to the Korean Military Advisory Group, officers and men of the revitalized Korean Army are making rapid advancement in the techniques of modern combat engineering.

Short But Sweet!

ROKA Engineer School Boasts Brief But Brilliant History

(This is the conclusion of a series of four articles about the Republic of Korea's Army Engineering School, established by the Korean Military Advisory Group. Although the Engineering School is only a single phase of KMA's over all mission, a mission that has as its aim the complete technical self-sufficiency of the ROK Army, it is an important one. A lesson in practical democracy, the ROKA Engineering School is an excellent example of the Army's help-them-to-help-themselves planning, a policy that will pay dividends in well trained and staunch allies in the Free World's efforts to stem the Communist tide. Art and copy were prepared for the Star Presidian by Cpl. Tom Mapp, and forwarded through the 8th Army Public Information Office. Editor's Note.)

Special to Star Presidian

By Cpl. Tom Mapp

Part IV (Conclusion)

Although the Engineer School has produced thousands of trained engineers and is a contributing factor in the vast revitalization program for the Republic of Korea Army, its history has been brief. A small component engineer school was first opened at Kimpo in 1946 when a handful of American experts from the Korean Military Advisory Group trained engineer officers and conducted four EM specialists courses.

With the start of the present conflict the school was closed temporarily and reopened as part of the Ground General School, Korean Army, in September 1950. In February 1951 the school was redesignated the Engineer Training Center and in December 1951 it was moved to its present location when it became known as the Engineer School, Korean Army, or TESKA.

Indoctrination in modern engineering techniques has brought with it a number of developments primarily an intense desire by educated Koreans to advance their new republic along mechanical lines, patterned on U. S. methods. Colonel Hwang readily admits that his country has already greatly benefited from application of western principles, learned not only at TESKA but from all phases of the vast KMA advisory program for the Republic of Korea.

It was General James A. Van Fleet, Eighth U. S. Army Commander, who last year personally instructed Brig. General C. E. Ryan, Chief KMA, to organize and administer a replacement and training center and school system, in the tradition of U. S. military institutions, with which to build a revitalized and rapidly expanding ROK Army. The Engineer School constitutes a vital link in the chain of military training establishments, which include a Command and General Staff College, a Korean Military Academy, patterned after West Point and a dozen specialist schools for both officers and enlisted men.

ROKA combat divisions are sent to four Field Training Commands, where American basic training methods are adapted to give battle-seasoned troops the advantages of western combat tested tactics. The master program includes an increasing number of ROKA officers being sent to the United States for more detailed training at U. S. schools and military colleges. Some officers have already returned, like Colonel Hwang, to take up key positions as instructors in Korean military schools.

KMA officers believe that they are building an efficient fighting force from the raw material of the Republic of Korea. If determined application of principle is any indication of future progress, the sight of bulldozers and crane shovels engaged on three-lane road construction throughout Korea is convincing proof that the Korean people are taking their lessons to heart, especially when the operator is a former graduate of The Engineer School, Korean Army.

Signal Depot Stages Benefit For Sgt's Very Sick Child

The Sacramento Signal Depot, Sacramento, California, is staging a benefit drive for little Mary Jo Johnson, 3½ year old daughter of Security Sgt. and Mrs. Carl Johnson of Sacramento.

Mary Jo is the victim of a congenital heart condition. Her only hope for survival is a delicate operation that can be performed by only one surgeon in the United States. Proceeds from the drive will help send Mary Jo back east for the operation.

Major Floyd B. Racy, Public Information Officer, Sacramento Signal Depot, is spearheading the drive to raise the necessary funds.

Topic

Progress the United States is making in building up the democratic world's defense against Communism will be discussed at Troop Information Conferences of Presidio units during the coming week.

This progress will be judged by the answers to questions which arise in regard to effects of current national and international affairs as far as the Democracy versus Communism conflict is concerned.

Some of the questions which will be answered during the conferences will be:

- (1) What gains have we made and on what fronts?
- (2) Are the original plans to prevent Democracy falling victim to Communism making real headway?
- (3) Can we carry out the plans, economically speaking?
- (4) What progress has SHAPE made and what kind of a report did General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower render on it when he relinquished his command?
- (5) What is NATO's role in the over-all defense program?
- (6) What have we accomplished in our attempts to line up Greece, Turkey, Yugoslavia and Spain on the side of Democracy?
- (7) Are we making progress in Korea; and what was one of our main, underlying aims at the Yalta Conference, the meeting that has resulted in the United States and our co-members of the United Nations taking action in Korea?

Many of the answers have been given in previous conferences, but next week's conference will give the over-all picture of the defense progress.

ACG Maintenance Teams Save $432,000 Taxes

Army Chemical Corps maintenance teams have saved the American taxpayer more than $432,000 by rebuilding and modernizing 18 World War II field impregnation plants.

Used by the Army to gas-proof combat uniforms and equipment in event of a poison gas attack, a new unit bought today would cost $61,800. The World War II models were rebuilt at a cost of $37,800 each.

Intended to serve as mobile impregnation plants, the units have served as field laundries in Korea.

HONOR GUARD for Lt. Wilma A. Elbert, Fort Lawton nurse who was grand marshal of California's 1952 American Legion convention parade at Fresno, was composed of representatives of women's branches of service. These women also addressed the Legionnaires and made radio broadcast telling of the opportunities for women in service. Shown above preparing for a broadcast they are (l. to r.): Lt. Barbara Northrup, Air Force Women's Medical Specialist Corps; Capt.

Lillian Kinkela, Air Force Flight Nurse; Capt. Pauline V. Johnston, Army Nurse Corps and Procurement Officer of the Medical Section Headquarters Sixth Army; Chief Yeoman Mildred Doherty, WAVES; Technical Sgt. Florence Newport, WAC; Capt. Gertrude Murray, Procurement Officer of the Women's Medical Specialist Corps, Headquarters Sixth Army; Capt. Lee M. Heykens, WAF; M/Sgt. Ruth Haungs, Marines, and Lt. Burdetta Balaska, Navy Nurse.

Sixth Army Area Service Women Are Honored By California Legion

Service women of the Sixth Army area were among the honored guests at the California state convention of the American Legion recently held in Fresno and at the same time they told the Legionnaires of the need for blood for the armed forces and the opportunities for women in service.

Ruling as grand marshal of the convention parade was Lt. Wilma A. Ebert of the Army Nurse Corps. Lieutenant Ebert was selected for this honor in recognition of her 16 months of overseas' service. She is now stationed at the United States Army Hospital in Fort Lawton, Wash.

Two of the grand marshal's honor guard representing the nine branches of the women's service were from Headquarters Sixth Army at the Presidio. These two were Capt. Pauline V. Johnston, Army Nurse Corps, Procurement Officer of the Medical Section, and Capt. Gertrude Murray, Procurement Officer of the Women's Medical Specialist Corps.

Lieutenant Ebert wears the Korean Service ribbon with four battle stars. She went overseas in November, 1950, with the 10th Station Hospital and was in Pusan for a time, moving to Honsong just as the Spring thaws made the roads even muddier than they usually were.

She later joined the 8225th Mobile Army Surgical Hospital, based about 25 miles from the fighting front.

"The wounded came to us from battalion aid stations and collecting points," she recounted. "They came by ambulance and helicopter."

Her experiences in Korea have made her vitally interested in promoting the volunteer blood donor program of the armed forces and the American Red Cross.

"We never ran completely out of blood," she related, "but often we were afraid we would, especially when the wounded would flow into our unit after heavy action forward."

"Blood, blood derivatives and those blessed helicopters have made it possible for many seriously wounded soldiers to survive. It would have been difficult to pull some through without such aids."

While in Fresno, the service women did five radio broadcasts, two of which were wire recorded for future broadcasts.

In addition to the three representatives of the Sixth Army, the branches of women's service represented by the honor guard included: the WAVES, the nurse corps of the Navy and Air Force, the WACs, the Women Marines, the WAF and the Air Force Women's Medical Service Corps.

Looking For A Melody!

Army Seeks Rousing Theme Song In Nation-wide Search

If there are any aspiring young song writers in the Sixth Army Area, here is the chance to help the Army and also help yourself. The Army is looking for an official Army song, and song-writing members of the Armed Forces are urged to "give out with an Army tune."

The Honorable Frank Pace, Secretary of the Army, has a personal interest in this project and through the Special Services Office in Washington song writers in both New York and Hollywood were approached. Publicity has been given this project through the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Columbia Film Studios. It is hoped that this publicity will serve as a challenge to song writers in the movie industry.

The Army will publish the songs submitted and publicize them through Army media, Army band records, Armed Forces Radio Service and through sheet music distributed to the Service Clubs. Song writers are also encouraged to have their songs published commercially. Final selection of the Army Song will be through popular acclaim. In addition to the selection of an official song, it is felt that this program will add to the body of Army Music.

General Joseph M. Swing, Commanding General, Sixth Army, has delegated a portion of the work on this project to III Corps and at the present time Lt. Wm. M. Cowl, Sixth Army Special Services is project officer for Sixth Army.

At the present time, the Sixth Army Band is auditioning a song submitted by Mr. Harry Harris of Hollywood. Mr. Harris has worked with such famous personalities as Bob Hope and Jerry Colona and is in the song writing and publishing business in Hollywood.

"Suffocation of human freedom among a once free people, however quietly and peacefully accomplished, is more far-reaching in its implications and its effects on their future than the destruction of their homes, industrial centers and transportation facilities. Out of rubble heaps, willing hands can rebuild a better city, but out of freedom lost can stem only generations of hate and bitter struggle and brutal oppression."—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

30th Topo Collects Large Amount For AER Drive

Funds collected in the Army Emergency Relief campaign recently soared as the 30th Engineers Base Topographic Battalion added $212.85 for the purpose of emergency loans to soldiers and their dependents.

This total represents contributions from less than half of the battalion personnel as most of the men are now engaged in survey operations in Alaska. They will contribute to Army Emergency Relief after returning to their home station at Fort Winfield Scott this fall.

Donations were broken down among the companies as follows:

Unit	Amount	Average Per Man
Headquarters Company and Casual Detachment	102.00	.42
21st and 96th Engineers	20.35	.15
64th Engineer Survey Liaison Detachment	10.50	1.14
99th Engineers	80.00	.82

Army Emergency Relief funds are utilized whenever a situation is sudden, unforeseen and demanding quick financial assistance. In this category are doctor bills, emergency leave, hospital or funeral expenses, non receipt or loss of pay and allowances and privation of dependents.

AAA Unit Welcomes Military Visitors

Military personnel of the Presidio have been extended an invitation by the 47th AAA Brigade to visit some of their gun positions. Demonstrations on the operation of some of the guns will be given and AAA operations will be explained. Those desiring to visit the positions should contact S-1 so that the visits may be scheduled.

SAFETY RECORD of the Ninth AAA Gun Battalion motor pools has been termed "outstanding" by Mr. Frank Harrington, post safety engineer. The sign shown in the top photo is prominently displayed at the motor pool to serve as a constant reminder to the drivers of the excellent record which the unit has maintained. A major contributing factor to their record is the daily service and inspection, such as shown in the center photo where a 6,000 mile maintenance is being performed by Cpl. John Parrella under the supervision of M/Sgt. William E. Loyd. Taking their 15-minute coffee break in the bottom photo, the motor pool personnel are: (l. to r.) Bottom row—Pvt. Dana Scott, Cpl. Charles Allgeir, Pvt. Jerald Crowley, Sgt. Richard Porter and Cpl. Michael Flammia. Top row—Cpl. I. Keeven, Cpl. John Parrella, Pfc. William Hopper, Cpl. Jarold Schempf, Sgt. Thomas McAfee, Sgt. S. Grubbs, Cpl. William Hoffart and Cpl. Raymond Robinson. (Army Photos by Matsuo.)

Safety and Service!

Serve As Modern Camels To Outlying Anti Aircraft Batteries

Transporting gasoline, water and rations to field positions and support of movements of heavy guns throughout a three-county area are daily problems of the motor pool of the Ninth AAA Gun Battalion which make their activities more like an overseas outfit than the average state-side unit.

Outlying batteries in Marin, San Francisco and San Mateo counties are dependent upon the motor pool for supplying their daily needs. Although these batteries are within a metropolitan area, none has such conveniences as running water or electricity.

Six days a week a gasoline tanker from the Ft. Scott motor pool makes the 60-mile round trip to all batteries in the field to refill storage tanks. Each battery has a water trailer which they take to established water points, supplied by Ninth water tankers, to obtain their daily needs for cooking, drinking, cleaning and washing.

The transportation of rations to these batteries is a mission which the motor pool is certain not to bungle.

Movement of the heavy guns of the anti-aircraft battalion is no small job. However, problems such as moving a 70-ton gun and tractor combination through a metropolitan area is considered a breeze by the crew.

This support of field units calls for considerable specialization of personnel of the motor pool, who are under the supervision of M/Sgt. Arthur Jacobsen. For example, one man, Sgt. George Lowder, is a generator specialist who makes continuous inspections of field positions to check the generators that operate the guns, range and radar equipment.

Equipment of the battalion motor pool includes jeeps, dragon-type retrievers, tankers and 35-ton tractors. The vehicles are serviced and inspected daily during motor stable period.

Drivers of the unit traveled 600,000 miles last year. Praising the safety record of the battalion drivers, Mr. Frank Harrington, post safety inspector, says, "The Ninth has an unusually well run motor section and their record is outstanding."

The emphasis placed on maintenance enables the motor pool to provide superior support for the battalion and also carries out the "cost consciousness" program to the letter.

The men are proud of their motor pool which they have made a show place. With the recognized ability of anti-aircraft men to "scrounge," the improvements have been made at no cost to the government by using their skills and ingenuities.

Crews of the Fort Scott unit not only do their own work but also direct the activities of four subordinate battery motor pools which are in the field.

Presidio Military Can Use Space On Local Flights

Space on military planes in and out of the San Francisco Bay area to various points in the Sixth Army area may be applied for by Presidio military personnel at the Post Transportation office under new arrangements completed by Sixth Army Military Air Division.

All arrangements will be on a space available basis and even at the last moment personnel may be "bumped."

Application for space should be made to the Post Transportation Officer who will be informed by Sixth Army of flights set up generally along the west coast to such points as Long Beach, Seattle, Monterey and Victorville.

Arrangements made on the Presidio cover only one-way travel, return transportation not being guaranteed. Personnel making a trip by plane should contact the operations office of the field at the time of arrival to determine if there is a scheduled flight available for return within the time desired.

The accommodations on military planes has been made possible because of planes making flights without capacity loads. Both enlisted and officer personnel are urged to take advantage of arrangements.

Giant Diesels Stop At Fort Mason En Route to FECOM

Two giant locomotives, each weighing over 100 long tons, were deck-loaded at Oakland Army Base recently for movement to the Far East Command and service on Army-operated railroads there.

Representing an entirely new type of Diesel locomotive, they are capable of being operated on any track except narrow gauge. A new design of a six-wheel, three-motor truck permits moving the wheels on the axles to fit any size track from American standard gauge to the widest encountered anywhere in the world. They are designed to operate in temperatures ranging from 40 degrees Fahrenheit below zero to 125 degrees above and have a top speed of 77 miles an hour.

Built by Electromotive Division of General Motors Corporation on specifications of the Army Transportation Corps, the locomotives are 57½ feet long, 9 feet 8 inches wide and 13 feet 6 inches high from the rail. They are powered by 16-cylinder, 1600-horsepower diesel motors and they can be used on any type of railroad operations—freight, passenger, or switcher.

The locomotives shipped through the San Francisco Port of Embarkation were the first of a number now on order and were tested on Midwestern railroads prior to their delivery at the port.

Army Corporal Finds Fabulous Turtle; Lays Golden Egg

If finders could be keepers—as the old adage would have it—an American soldier in Korea would be $50,000 richer today.

Corporal Joseph M. Grabowski, of New York City (324 E. 27th St.), bought an old Korean relic in a Seoul market for 50,000 won ($8.33), and casually dropped it "among his souvenirs" in his duffle bag.

Months later he came across the gold-colored object cast in the form of a turtle, and asked his houseboy to see if it was worth anything. The houseboy took it to appraisers, and returned with the word that it was of no value.

Grabowski then tried to give the "turtle" away, but nobody wanted it.

Later the corporal, a member of the 55th Military Police Company, was assigned to duty at the Seoul Post Exchange (PX). He asked the Korean clerk at the brass counter to examine the turtle. The Korean left with the relic and returned a few hours later with the word that the Korean police had the item.

With an interpreter, Grabowski went to the police station and found that his turtle was a national treasure missing from the Queen's Palace. Therefore, the police said, it should be returned to its rightful owner—the government of the Republic of Korea.

According to Colonel Kim Wan Yong, Commander of Martial Law and Defense in Seoul, the turtle is one of two official stamps about 70 or 80 years old which disappeared from the palace during the Communists' reign over Seoul. The other stamp already had been returned.

Few Koreans know about the stamp, the colonel said, but it is pure gold and appraised at more than $50,000.

Corporal Grabowski got $8.33 for his "treasure."

A frog told his dinner companion: "I won't be able to do much talking tonight. I've got a man in my throat."

THE BOOK CORNER

Journey to the Far Pacific, by Thomas E. Dewey. After traveling forty-one thousand miles and visiting seventeen republics, kingdoms, territories, and colonies to view at first-hand the effects of Communism in the Orient, Governor Dewey is convinced of a deep determination to remain free of Red domination.

Fancies and Goodnights, by John Collier. An unusual collection of imaginative short stories by this master of weird and fantastic fiction, containing such curious characters as a fiend with a cold in his head, and a cleaver murderer with a taste for nutmeg.

Submarine, by Commander Edward L. Beach, USN. An intimate story of a deadly business—the lethal raiders of World War II who searched, stalked, and killed the enemy in every area of the great Pacific Ocean, written by a man who fought in them.

The Silver Chalice, by Thomas B. Costain. This popular writer of history and fiction turns his talents toward Biblical times and gives us an exciting and inspirational story about the Cup used by Christ at the Last Supper with His Disciples.

Homage to Catalonia, by George Orwell. A first-hand account of the Spanish Civil War by a man who fought and was wounded in it. It is a tribute to the writer that when this book first appeared in England in 1938 the Communists instantly recognized in him an eloquent and dangerous foe.

Able Easy Over Out!

Available Able, Battling Baker, Chopping Charlie, and Dangerous Dog while the daylights out of Communist soldiers in Korea, and if they ever need assistance—Never Fear, Easy's Near.

As if that were not enough, Fighting Fox, Hustling Hog, and Mighty Mike always are on hand to bang off a few well-aimed shots.

All these spirited names cropped up when the Army's 27th "Wolfhound" Infantry Regiment fighters decided the Army's phonetic alphabet didn't do their crack outfits justice.

So A is not Able and B is not Baker. Not in the 27th. It's Available Able and Battling Baker.

This hard-fighting outfit also has a wealth of slogans for its companies.

K Company's slogan—"King of the Wolfhounds"—antedates the Korean conflict. But most of the current titles were coined after the 27th got into the scrap.

The regiment's Third "Old Blue" Battalion once warned the enemy with a sign written in English, Chinese and Korean: "You have had a taste of Old Wolfhound Blue. Go no further or he will get you."

The spirited signs—a tip-off on high fighting morale—even are used for booby traps. Once a sign extolling the fighting qualities of the Wolfhounds was erected several thousand yards in front of the farthest outpost.

Wired to it, in case the Communists decided to remove the annoying taunt, were 50 pounds of TNT.

Even the unit's dentist gets into the act. His shop's promise: "We sharpen old fangs."

Presidio PFC Wins Sixth Army Net Crown

Presidio's Pfc Gilbert I. Shea lived up to his pre-tourney publicity on the Camp Cooke Tennis Court last week when he copped the singles finals for the Sixth Army Championship.

Shea, one of the Nation's best, flashed to a clean sweep over Northern Division net star, Sfc William B. Millikan, of Madigan Army Hospital, Tacoma, Washington, in three straight sets, 6-2, 6-4 and 6-3.

Millikan, however, was not vamped as he went on to win doubles honors with Maj. Paul L. Beckman, Madigan Special Services Officer.

Singles competition in the four day meet narrowed from sixteen of the Sixth Army's best down to the smooth Shea, who had complete control throughout.

Too Much Beef!

Presidio's Perricone Great In 49er — Bronco Grid Rout

Coach Buck Shaw's professional San Francisco 49ers literally smothered the semi-professional San Francisco Broncos, 79-0, in Kezar Stadium last Sunday, yet no individual action was anymore sensational than that displayed by Bronco full-back, Corporal Gaspar Perricone of the Presidio.

Perricone, former Northwestern University star who played in the Rose Bowl against California as a sophomore, carried the mail right through the middle of the line six times for gains of four to eight yards on each carry, an astounding feat, when you consider his avenue of approach—directly into Shawtown monsters, Nomellini, Tanner and Campora, beefy 265-pound line pillars. Taking honors for yards gained by rushing for the Broncos, his day was capped with a fourth-quarter pass reception for a net of 23 yards, one of the Broncos' few long runs. Playing three full periods on offense, the last quarter saw a demonstration of versatility when he played several defensive plays.

Opening holes for Perri in the concrete line was the almost impossible task assigned another Presidian, Corporal Bob Catlett, a guard from Letterman. Catlett, outweighed by 50 pounds as was each man in the Bronco line, did an outstanding job considering the weight and experience handicap.

Lieutenant Roland "Pops" Daigle, a newcomer to the Presidio and also a backfield ace, along with lineman Corporal Bob Ottoson, saw action throughout and turned in favorable performances in their attempt to stop Frankie Albert and Company.

Quotable Quip

Two Communist Officials discussed the possibility of substituting Stalin's birthday, Dec. 21, for Christmas. "Well," one of them remarked somewhat dubiously, "it could be done, but how are you going to get people used to a Santa Claus who doesn't give presents but comes around to collect them?"

In the fourth quarter, Daigle batted a 49er pass down intended for Nomellini and became "airborne" at the hands of the short-tempered Lion who forgot to leave his wrestling tactics on TV.

Corporal Tom Busalacci, previously scheduled to see action for the Broncos, was unable to play due to a shoulder injury.

Bronco footballers are men from all walks—teachers, businessmen, servicemen who play as a sideline to their regular routine and while not in the 49er class, will be a tough combination to beat in the semi-pro category.

The fracas was a warmup for both teams and no major injuries were reported which was one of the reasons for not having the usual intra-squad game.

On 27 September, the Presidio eleven will meet the Broncos in Kezar, a real test for the local machine.

Sports Short

Longest baseball game on record in the Major Leagues was 26 innings which was played between Brooklyn and Boston, May 1, 1920. After three hours and fifty minutes of play, darkness forced calling of the game. Score: 2-2. Longest game from standpoint of time saw Detroit close out the Philadelphia club 3-1 after four hours, forty-eight minutes (24 innings, July 21, 1945).

Raiders Win Five Then Drop Two With Revamped Nine

Presidio's Red Raider diamond crew won their fifth straight game last week and then cooled fast to drop two in a row this week.

A 19-11 win over the sailors from the U.S.S. Chourne ended their brief victory march.

Tardo and Lehl handled mound duty for the locals, holding the gobs to nine hits. Presidio rapped 17 hits off losing pitcher Dossett.

Lemon, Potts and Stix, Raider's heaviest hitters, held fast with a three for six .500 game average. Potts nailed two triples and Lemon got one while Stix upheld his .555 batting average.

Sardo Athletic Club from San Francisco defeated the Raiders last Sunday in a tight 3-1 ball game.

Presidio outhit Sardo, seven to three, but failed to rally in the clutches.

Stupur, the losing pitcher, continued his strikeout wave with 13 for the day.

Catcher Potts hit two for four to maintain his usual batting performance.

Another cold wave in the form of the U.S. Coast Guard Seahawks caught the club on Tuesday resulting in a 4-2 loss.

Holohan, pitching for the Raiders, started wild, walking two in the first inning, but settled down to his usual style and blanked the Bay Area Armed Forces League Champs the remainder of the game. The first inning also saw the locals commit two errors.

Silva, Raider shortstop, slammed two for four and Potts, unable to score himself, rallied to drive in the only two runs.

Player-manager Viviani hit in his 16th straight game.

Hospital Reopens "Pool of Stars" For Local Use

Letterman Army Hospital swimming pool was reopened last Wednesday morning after undergoing extensive repairs to the inner tank. The pool, one of the finest of its kind on the West Coast, has had many swimming and diving stars perform before service audiences here. Among the many stars were Pat McCormick, Zoe Ann Jensen, Barbara Stark and Letterman's Major Sammy Lee.

The pool will be open seven days a week. On week days from 0800 to 2000 hours and Saturday and Sunday from 1300 to 1630 hours. A further breakdown on the times that certain personnel may use the pool are:

- 0800-1100 Monday through Friday; Letterman patients only.
 - 1100-1300 Monday through Friday; duty personnel only.
 - 1300-1500 Seven days a week; dependent children seven to 13 years of age.
 - 1500-2000 Seven days a week; patients, duty personnel and dependents over 13 years of age.
- Children under seven years of age must be accompanied by a parent or adult.

All dependent and military personnel not assigned to Letterman Hospital must have a pass from the Letterman Special Service Section, Building 1048.

To keep the pool clean at all times, full cooperation is requested of the patrons. Attendants, both male and female, will be on duty at all times the pool is in operation.

Army Sgt. Assigned To Davis Cup Team

Tony Trabert, SN, USN, Bainbridge NTS, Md., and Army Sgt. Bernard Bartzon, Ft. Sill, Okla., were named with four others for the American Zone eliminating matches with Japan. Trabert was American clay courts champion in singles and doubles (with Hamilton Richardson, Jr.) last year.

Soltech Speed Proves Difference In Kasba Play

The old saying in basketball that "a good offense is the best defense" is not just so many words as the 21st Soltechs hoopsters can tell you. During their last two games the Fort Scott tournament leaders have piled up points by breaking down the floor with lightning speed and dumping the ball through the hoop in easy lay-ups.

Last week, the Soltechs peppered the bucket with 25 field goals to defeat the Headquarters Lakers. The Lakers pressed the Soltechs the first half and trailed 24-13 at the midway point. But the driving offense of the Soltechs netted them 31 points in the second half to win, 55-23.

But a rejuvenated and determined 21st Deuces squad made it anything but easy for the Soltechs Monday night. The Deuces kept within striking distance until the closing minutes of the game. At the third quarter stop the Deuces lagged just eight points behind the tournament leaders and at times during the quarter it looked as though the Deuces would push into the lead. But when the going was tough the Soltechs poured on the coal to stay on the long end of the score.

In the second game Monday night, the 99'ers, facing Headquarters Lakers, tried desperately to climb out of the cellar spot in the tourney and nearly succeeded. But their do-or-die spirit did not produce enough field goals and they lost their third straight game, 39-28.

It is still anyone's tournament to win with all four teams showing more class and basketball ability as the season shifts into high gear. Observing the teams in action, it is hard to predict which team will be on top of the heap come final statistics time. Naturally, the 21st Soltechs with an unmarred record must be counted a slight favorite. Headquarters Lakers have shown that they can play smooth heads-up, plucky basketball and must be considered in any dopester's calculations. The hoopster rating of the 21st Deuces took a decided jump for the better this week as they threw a scare into the Soltechs team. Even the cellar-dwelling 99'ers may pull themselves out of the doldrums and come up with a winning combination.

Service Marksmen Prove Tops In World Competition

Oslo, Norway—Sharpshooters of the Air Force Strategic Air Command paced the world's skeet champions and captured the first three places here in the recent competition.

Col. Clarence T. Edwinston, CO of the 42nd Air Division, Bergstrom AFB, Tex., fired 150 rounds without a miss to win top honors. M/Sgt. Cecil B. Jones finished second, knocking down 149 of 150 birds. A/2c Charles J. Michaelis took third, missing only two of 150 shots.

Army Sgt. Huelet L. Benner of the Canal Zone finished second in the individual center fire pistol competition and third in the free pistol event of the world shooting championships. The U. S. team took the international title for all pistol events, compiling a record score.

With that Fall chill in the air, football looms as the next activity on the sports agenda.

Throughout Army installations in the U.S. and overseas soldiers will be hitting the gridiron in an effort to net their respective units "pigskin prominence" and Presidio will be no exception to the trend.

CPL. PAUL LIPPMAN

Last year's ill-fated season netted Presidio two wins and five times as many losses. A repeat is not hoped for. At this writing, there is a lot of fire in Raider camp and the bandwagon is taking shape. More wheels are needed to make it roll.

To round out a well-balanced squad of 35 men, a coach should have 100 men to pick from. Let's give the coach the benefit of the doubt. There is a lot of hidden football talent in the Presidio and if your job will possibly permit, let's get behind the bandwagon and push so that when it gains the required momentum, we can justifiably get on and ride.

Perchance you can't support the team actively, but your interest, moral support and attendance can help.

The coaches are ready. Still lacking bodies—

A tip of the Presidian hat to the San Francisco 49ers for permitting Letterman patients to attend last Sunday's grid game. According to Sfc. Henry Heissner, Letterman PIO and my top sports informant this week, 75 patients viewed the game through the courtesy of the pro team. Sfc. Heissner adds: "The patients will see some 27 games this season with the schedule including some of the nation's top grid tilts." A few more, possibly, will be added to the list.

After watching the 49er-Bronco fiasco last Sunday and then reading the various sports accounts in the downtown dailies, one thing keeps looming in my mind. All of the "monarch pen pals" spoke softly of Perricone's football prowess. Although it is improbable to say too much about a team or a man on the team that gets trounced 79-0, the mention fell short of the grid star's performance. Why? Perri is Chicago Bear property and to make news on the West Coast would have to defeat the 49ers singlehanded — he might some time!

CORRECTION: The hours for deer hunting are one-half hour before sunrise to one-half hour after sunset instead of sunrise to sunset as reported last week in the Sports section. Incidentally, you Army people who can only be "week-end nimrods," the following is noted: Latest reports have it that Mendocino and Monterey Counties seem to offer the best in buck hunting thus far this year. A lot of luck has been reported from that area.

Schedule Set For Sixth Army Softball Tourneys

Sixth Army's preliminary softball tournaments for both male and female military personnel will be held from 25-30 August.

Teams representing installations and units from Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana will meet for Northern Division play at Madigan Army Hospital, Tacoma, Washington.

Southern Division teams from California, Nevada, Utah and Arizona will congregate at Fort Ord, California, on dates indicated.

To participate in these tourneys, military personnel must have 90 days or more active duty and assigned to this Army Area.

Companies or comparable unit softball teams, representing an organization or combination of organizations not exceeding 250 personnel, are eligible to participate with exception of training divisions who are authorized to enter on a battalion level utilizing only cadre personnel.

The winning and runner-up teams, both male and female from each tourney will be selected to compete in the Sixth Army championship tournament to be held 8-13 September here at the Presidio.

At this writing, Presidio's WACs are the only known team to journey to Ford Ord, but it is expected we will be represented by the men by tourney time.

Tuesday morning at 1130 hours, 68 golfers representing Utah, Nevada, Arizona and California teed off on the Presidio course to open the Sixth Army Southern Division Tourney and vie for a trip to the Sixth Army Championships at Fort Lewis, Washington, 26-29 August.

Tee experts from Presidio, Letterman Hospital, Fort Mason, San Francisco Port of Embarkation, Two Rock Ranch, Camp Stoneman, Camp Cooke, Camp Roberts, Fort Ord, Camp San Luis Obispo, Camp Irwin, Fort MacArthur, Fort Huachuca, Arizona and Dugway Proving Grounds, Utah, are competing on the tough 36-hole, 72-par course.

Corporal Bill Rowe, Presidio champ, led the field at the end of first round play with a one over par 73 and one stroke ahead of the nearest rival. First day team competition ended with Presidio and Camp Cooke sharing first place.

Tourney play has been by two divisions. The main division takes in golfers with a handicap of ten or less. Participants in the senior division are only required to be 50 years of age or older.

Winners and runners-up of the meet, ending today, will meet representatives from the Northern Division—Washington, Idaho, Oregon and Montana in the Fort Lewis match for all Sixth Army honors.

Sport Short

Sarazen, Mangrum, Hogan, Middlecoff and Snead are names synonymous with golfdom's hall of fame, but little is known or remembered about the man who won the National Open and National Amateur tournaments more times than all of these men combined. R. T. Jones, Jr., dominated the greens for eight consecutive years alternately winning one of the contests each year and in 1930, his last big year, copped both titles having won golf's "big two" nine times to seven for the five aforementioned greats.

Small Turnout Greets Plea For Presidio Football Players

Presidio football got underway last Monday morning with a 36-man turnout, far short of the power needed to favorably compete in the tough season ahead.

Many men were unaware of the first practice call and the ranks are expected to grow throughout the coming week.

Under the expert tutelage of Corporals Gaspar Perricone, who will handle the reins as backfield coach, and Bob Ottoson, line mentor, along with several returning veterans from last year's eleven, a bright future is predicted for the Raiders. Coach Ottoson, a top-notch lineman, played three years in Marquette University's forward wall and has one year of Army ball under his belt.

Returning from last year's Raider eleven are Sergeant Nick Kirby and Corporal Bob Rhoades, 99th Engineers and Corporals Louis Brown and Gerold Petersen, 505 MPs. Lieutenant Roland Daigle, a prominent and well-known figure in Army athletic circles, has stated "he will be available and glad to contribute to the Presidio cause" whenever it doesn't interfere with his regular duties in the new 6002 Detachment A. New and favorable talent has already been discovered in the newcomer ranks and as practice wears on more men will probably demonstrate gridiron promise, yet unknown.

Practice sessions this week were carried on all day. However, beginning Monday, will be held afternoons only.

Conditioning exercises and running a few plays dominated the meetings these first few days.

Potential Granges, Thorpes and Nagurskis who are interested from Presidio, Scott, Baker, Barry and Cronkhite are urged to contact Sfc Cook at the Special Service Office in Building 122 immediately.

FIRST STEP in making the plates for the offset presses of the Sixth Army Class A field printing plant at Fort Scott is taken by Cpl. Tokuko Endo shown above preparing to photograph a chart. This photograph will eventually be etched onto a metal plate. In addition to five offset presses, the plant has a photostat machine and an Ozalid machine, the latter making reproductions from diagrams or charts. A total of 1,300,000 impressions each month are turned out at the plant which is an activity of the Publications Branch of the Sixth Army Adjutant General's Section. (Army Photo by Matsuo.)

Impressive Impressions!

Printing Plant Does Big Job For Sixth Army Headquarters

With an average of 1,300,000 impressions a month, the Class A field printing plant operated by the Publications Branch of the Sixth Army Adjutant General's Section turns out a continuous flow of forms, manuals, memorandums, letterheads and charts for Headquarters Sixth Army and Presidio units.

Formerly part of the Sea Coast Branch of the Artillery School, the plant at Fort Scott was turned over to Headquarters Sixth Army in April 1949 when the Sea Coast Branch was discontinued. Since that date it has proven to be a valuable asset to Sixth Army and Presidio units.

Plant facilities include five offset presses, a photostat machine and an Ozalid machine. From photographing the material to final etching, plates for the offset presses are made right at the plant.

The Ozalid machine can make reproductions from tracings, diagrams or charts with a maximum width of 42 inches and any desired length. It is in use over 25 per cent of every day performing its highly specialized work.

Sizes of the jobs turned out at the plant vary from single charts to many-paged manuals. At present a 300-page handbook is being prepared for the Sixth Army Comptroller and is being run off in sections of 3,000 copies each.

The staff of four enlisted personnel and eight civilians is supervised by M/Sgt. Allen Holder, plant foreman, under the direction of Capt. Charles R. Alban, Chief of Publications Branch, Adjutant General's Section. The layout work, other than that done by staff sections, is accomplished by the Forms Control and Design unit of the AG Section.

Letterman Opens New Practical Nurse Course

Letterman Army Hospital has been approved by the Surgeon General's Office as a training medium for the newly installed Practical Nurses training course.

The 48-week course was recently tried out at Walter Reed Army Hospital in Washington and proved to be a success. The course has been accredited by the National Association for Practical Nurses' Education and is divided into four quarters of 12 weeks each.

The purpose of the program is to augment the acute shortage of nurses throughout the Army. All of the students are enlisted personnel, with Letterman's initial quota set at 12 women and 23 men. In order to qualify for the training personnel must be a medical technician at present.

A director for the first classes will be furnished by the Surgeon General's Office, presumably one who was engaged in the instruction at Walter Reed. Four other instructors will also be provided, three from Letterman's nursing staff.

Two buildings have been set aside for classroom and laboratory work. The first classes here will begin October 27. All interested personnel should contact Captain Pendrak for details of qualification and an outline of the proposed curriculum. Selections for this course will be made by the Surgeon General's Office and will be Army wide.

Approximately 90 guests were in attendance at the Military Police Corps Officer's monthly party held at the Presidio Officers' Club, 13 August.

These monthly parties of the Military Police Corps Officers in the Sixth Army have become a regular function at the Presidio Officers' Club.

You Never Had It So Good!

A stock answer to the complaining soldier has long been, "You never had it so good!" The statement, obviously originated by "old-timers" to put the complaining raw recruit in his place, is usually followed with a detailed description of the advantages of the modern Army and the hardships of the old. A word portrait more often than not taken with a grain of salt. Recently the Army unearthed some old travel orders dated 6 July 1779, Yonkers, New York, the text of which should lead the modern soldier to count his blessings.

TDY 18th Century Style

"Issue necessary orders sending one enlisted man on horseback, via safest and most convenient route, at Government expense to Fort Van Stueben, for purpose of carrying secret dispatches to Major Alonzo de LaFayette, who at last official roll call, is the commandant of Fort Van Stueben. If, upon arrival, Major LaFayette is either dead or resigned, the soldier will deliver the dispatches to the immediate commanding officer.

"If the finance department at the destination is not functioning the enlisted man is authorized to barter with neighboring Indians for necessary salt and other miscellaneous necessities for the return trip. Uniform buttons and musketry badges may be utilized in connection with bartering.

"Government mounts and subsistence will be furnished, and if used in bartering, uniform buttons and marksman medals will be replaced by the Government upon application for same by the enlisted man concerned.

"Upon return to his home station soldier will submit a written report showing full names and ranks of commanding officers of all military forts visited, so that the Department of War can be informed and bring their rosters up to date."

Important Change!

Service Aliens To Be Affected By Repeal Of Immigration Law

Recent repeal of this nation's immigration law has resulted in an important change governing the naturalization of aliens now serving in the armed forces, announces the San Francisco District of the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Under the law in effect at the present time until the new law becomes effective on 24 December, 1952, aliens who complete three years of honorable service in any branch of the armed forces may become naturalized without being lawfully admitted for permanent residence.

After the December date when the new law goes into effect, lawful admission for permanent residence must be established, in addition to the three years of service.

An admission for permanent residence can be accomplished only by entering the United States with an immigration visa issued by a U. S. Consul abroad, which is a rather lengthy procedure in most cases. In addition, the issuance of the visa is subject to the quota restrictions placed on the country of the alien's birth. For example, the quota for the Philippine Islands is 105 annually, and is at present oversubscribed for at least ten years.

Officials of the San Francisco District of the Immigration Service believe that aliens who will have completed the required three years' service in the armed forces by 24 December, 1952, will want to take advantage of the present law in view of the difficulty—and in some cases, the impossibility—of securing a lawful admission for permanent residence.

"The San Francisco office will handle the applications as fast as possible," state the officials, "but it must be remembered that an application is not a formal petition for naturalization. The formal petition must be made by the applicant and two witnesses in the office of the clerk of a naturalization court. A reasonable time should be allowed to permit the processing of the application."

The new law does not change the status of aliens who enlisted, or were inducted, into the armed forces in the United States and served for any length of time between 1 September, 1939, and 31 December, 1946. Those in that group may be naturalized without a lawful admission for permanent residence.

Local MH Winners In National TV Stint

Three Medal of Honor winners in the Sixth Army area have been invited to participate in an NBC nation-wide TV program from New York on 30 August, honoring all living medal of honor winners.

Those from the Sixth Army area to appear are Captain Raymond Harvey, Fort MacArthur, M/Sgt. Kouma, Camp Irwin, and Mr. Rodolfo Hernandez (formerly Corporal) presently at Letterman Army Hospital.

This Army-indorsed show is being sponsored by the Pet Milk Company and designed to stimulate ORC recruitment.

Stress Field Tasks In Month Long Lewis Bivouac

Fort Lewis, Wash.—A full month of field training that will stress primary unit missions, is slated for nearly all Fort Lewis personnel during August.

Only two units will be exempt from the mammoth bivouac which began Aug. 3. These are the 6006th ASU WAC Det and the 6219th Reception Center.

Training for the performance of primary missions will be stressed in the training of all units except the 436th MP Co. and the 6006th ASU. These two units, which will stay in the field only for the first two weeks and on a "night-time only" basis, will have mandatory training subjects scheduled for one to two hours per day after the completion of their normal work.

Personnel of these two units and the 10th and 22d Finance Cos. will be transported by bus to and from the field, keeping normal duty hours on the post and sleeping in the field at night.

Tactical concealment and blackout precautions will be in force during the hours of darkness until Aug. 9.

Seven mobile PX units will serve Fort Lewis soldiers in the field. Four of these will serve sandwiches, ice cream and snacks and the other three will provide toilet articles and soft drinks.

Ex-Presidio Photographer Wins Citation For Body Armor Shots

A former Sixth Army combat photographer, Private First Class Robert N. Feldman, has been cited for contributions toward the study of nylon body armor in Korea.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter L. Feldman, 338 Hale Street, San Francisco, Private Feldman was serving as a combat photographer with the Eighth

Pfc. Bob Feldman

Army when he was assigned to the Body Armor Team commanded by Lt. Col. Andrew A. Aines of the Quartermaster Corps. As a member of the body armor team, Feldman served with the combat troops testing the nylon armor, photographing them in action in both black and white and color film.

The citation written by Colonel Aines said:

"I take this opportunity to congratulate you for your outstanding contributions to the study of nylon body armor in Korea. The duty you have performed is unusual in its requirements for personnel of extremely high technical, physical and personal standards. Constant sacrifice of safety and comfort under hazardous conditions, while taking photographs and assisting in team operations on the front line, marks your efforts as outstanding. As an important part of this scientific team, by your actions you have helped save soldiers from serious and perhaps fatal injuries. The gratitude of your fellow soldiers and their families is an unusual reward which should bring you great personal satisfaction in years to come. Should nylon body armor, or a modification thereof, be adopted by the Army as a standard method of protecting combat soldiers, you will know that you have made an important contribution to the research leading to its acceptance."

Feldman entered the service in January, 1951, and following completion of basic training at Fort Ord, California, was assigned to the Sixth Army Central Photo Laboratory at the Presidio of San Francisco. He has been in Korea since December, 1951.

He is a graduate of Balboa High School and San Francisco City College and was studying at the Art Center in Los Angeles when he entered the Army.

Just An Overgrown Village

One national magazine is not fooling around with the address of the Presidio of San Francisco and is making sure that their unsolicited advertising gets here. Capt. Jeff D. Wright received the magazine's ad this week addressed, "Presidio of San Francisco, 5 miles north of City Hall, San Francisco, Calif." That's right, bub, take that cow path up through the north 40 for five miles and turn west jest before you get to the bay.

Newly Assigned Marine Corps Chief Visits Army Commander

Honors were given Major General Ray A. Robinson of the U. S. Marine Corps, Commanding General, Department of the Pacific, when he paid an official visit to Lieutenant General Joseph M. Swing, Sixth Army Commander, at the Presidio Thursday morning.

Units participating in the Honor Guard were the 505th MP Battalion, Detachment 1 of 6002 ASU, Headquarters Company, Sixth Army, and the Sixth Army Band. Lt. H. K. Russell was in charge of the guard.

A veteran of two World Wars and 35 years in the Marine Corps, General Robinson assumed command of the Department of the Pacific, 100 Harrison St., San Francisco, on Friday, 15 August. He relieved Major General Alfred H. Noble who left San Francisco last month for his new post as Chief Military Assistant Advisory Group at Hague, Netherlands.

The Department of Pacific's new commander is a native of California, born in Los Angeles 1 July, 1896. He enlisted in the Marine Corps as a private in May, 1917 and was commissioned as a 2nd lieutenant in October of that year.

He went to France in 1918 with the 13th Marine Regiment, returning to Quantico, Va., for duty in July, 1919. Two years later he was overseas again as a company commander in Hawaii.

Between the two World Wars, his tours of duty included Bremerton, Quantico and China. He first went to China in 1927 with the famous 4th Marine Regiment and in 1939 was with the American Embassy in Peiping. He was Commanding Officer Marine Forces in northern China in March, 1941, holding that command until his return to the United States three months later.

Later, while Chief of Staff of the 3rd Marine Division during the recapture of Guam in June and August, 1944, he earned the Legion of Merit for "most outstanding professional ability."

Following Guam he became Chief of Staff of the 5th Marine Division in time to plan for and participate in the Iwo Jima Campaign. For his action in this engagement he was awarded a Gold Star in lieu of a second Legion of Merit.

In July, 1945, he became Assistant Division Commander of the 5th Marine Division for organization and commanding the Fukuoka Occupation Forces which entered Japan in September, 1945. For this he was awarded a Bronze Star Medal.

After serving as Chief of Staff Fleet Marine Forces Pacific, General Robinson went back to Headquarters Marine Corps in Washington in 1947 to become director of Division of Plans and Policies. He became Inspector General of the Marine Corps in July, 1949.

General Robinson became Commanding General of the 2nd Marine Division at Camp Lejeune, N. C., in June, 1950. He was Commanding General of Marine Barracks, Camp Lejeune, at the time he was ordered here.

Hormones Poison to Local Poison Ivy

Poison ivy on the Presidio has been eliminated—all 102 acres of it. The spray that was used is non-poisonous even to plants. Instead of killing the plant from the roots up, this spray acts as a hormone builder, making the plants outgrow themselves and kills from the top leaves to the roots. It usually takes approximately six weeks for this spray to completely eliminate the plants.

In addition to the Presidio's poison ivy being sprayed and eliminated, plants at Fort Cronkhite, Fort Baker and Fort Barry have been given this "hormone treatment."

Military Funeral For Former Air Force General

Full military services for Major General John Edwin Upston, retired former commander, of the Fourth Air Force, were held at the Presidio Chapel at 1400 hours, 21 August, followed by burial at National Cemetery in the Presidio.

General Upston, 61, died 18 August at Letterman Army Hospital after an illness of several weeks.

A graduate of the University of Michigan, he joined the Army soon after World War I began and was commissioned in 1918. He became a pilot and was stationed at Crissy Field, Presidio of San Francisco, in the early Thirties.

He was deputy chief of operations for American Air Forces in the Middle East during World War II and later became Chief of Staff of the 20th Bomber Command in the China-Burma-India theater, the first B-29 unit to operate against the Japanese.

General Upston assumed command of the Fourth Air Force in January, 1948, and served at that post until his retirement 1 October, 1950.

Some of the decorations he held were the Distinguished Service Cross and the Legion of Merit.

General Upston is survived by his wife, Claudia, and a son John, Jr., who live at 20 Newhall drive, San Rafael.

Here's A Bright Idea!

One of this week's feature articles (page 8) tells the story of a Sixth Army Nurse, 1st Lt. Mary Couch, who is currently serving as a technical advisor on MGM's "Battle Circus."

The feature, which resulted from a recent conversation with Capt. Pauline Johnson, ANC, Procurement Officer for the Sixth Army Medical Section, doesn't tell the whole story. That is the story behind the story.

What the news article left out, and this was intended, was the unusual circumstances that brought about the writing and filming of a story that rushes already indicate will be an Academy Award contender.

Last year in an effort to stimulate interest and win recruits for the Army Nurse Corps, Lt. Couch was telling the story of her service in Korea to civic organizations throughout California. During a tour of Los Angeles, someone suggested the story's film possibilities. After several false starts, MGM, realizing the story's potentialities, gave the assignment to their crack writer-director, Richard Brooks.

The finished script so impressed Humphrey Bogart, noted for his shrewdness in his selection of starring roles, that he elected to do the picture. As the executive officer of the MASH unit, his is the film's top role. Of course he must compete with such scene stealers as Keenan Wynn, as a rugged top-kick, and the charms of June Allyson, who plays an Army Nurse.

Top Army Commanders have given the picture their blessing in the hope that it will stimulate nurse recruiting, for which a critical shortage continues to exist.

We share that hope, but would add to it the hope that scenes showing multiple whole blood and plasma transfusions will prove equally impressive. For the National Blood Donor Program is still lagging badly in the civilian world.

To us one of the most dramatic pictures painted by Nurse Couch, was the importance that whole blood and its derivatives played in the amazing reduction of battle casualties in Korea. She described scenes where lifeless bodies, into which sometimes as many as six pints of whole blood were being force-pumped simultaneously, suddenly responded with a miraculous surge of color to what had moments before been waxen and deathly looking features. Dramatically conceived and enacted, such scenes could do much to spur lagging civilian interest in the National Blood Donor Program.

Let's face it! Servicemen are giving blood (80,000 pints in the Sixth Army area alone, during the nine-month period ending in May) and shedding it. The need does not have to be dramatically pointed out to the soldier, who knows that Korea may be just around the corner. But to a great deal of the citizen populace, to whom Korea means only a distant battlefield, a request for blood donation meets with the same question as higher taxes: "Is it really necessary?"

Here's a happy thought that might be worked into a publicity man's dream. If MGM, in cooperation with theatre owners throughout the nation, would admit free to the film's initial showing anyone who had recently donated a pint of blood to the National Blood Donor Program, and the national press would cooperate in the publicity, it might well be a shot in the arm for the whole program. Afterthought: why not preview the film at four of the West Coast's Army Installation Theatres simultaneously, with stars, kleig lights, et. al., admitting free those who donated, or have donated a pint of blood during the most recent period.

Fantastic? Well, a more worthy cause and greater national service couldn't be performed, and the cooperation given film companies by all branches of the Service, during the filming of a multitude of pictures with military themes in recent years, would in part be repaid.

Latest Issue From Army Film Library

Initial distribution of a new motion picture film, "FB 248 Outloading of Diesel Locomotives," has been announced by the Pictorial Division, Signal Section.

This film presents the problems and proper techniques for loading diesel locomotives aboard a cargo ship. Rigging, lifting, slinging, lowering into wooden cradles, lashing, bracing and water-proofing the 120 ton locomotive are graphically illustrated in detail. "Outloading of Diesel Locomotives" emphasizes that teamwork among all engaged in keeping our industrial strength flowing to United Nations in Korea, plus the knowledge of proper stevedoring "know-how" are essential to effect smooth and efficient operations.

Those who would give up essential liberty to purchase a little temporary safety deserve neither liberty nor safety. B. Franklin.

USAFI Mobile Unit Touring Northern Army Area

Sixth Army's mobile USAFI unit is now on a sixty-day tour of the northern section of the army area, an itinerary that includes visits to all the major posts.

The unit, in charge of SFC Thomas H. McComas, who recently toured the Korean front with the caravan, has been assigned to the Sixth Army for the past three years, and has stimulated much interest among enlisted men and officers alike in the Army's self-education program.

A recent tour in the southern section of the Sixth Army's area resulted in record registrations at every post visited, and the TI&E Section anticipates the same results in the northern district. The USAFI program offers over 300 courses, including a full high school course leading to a diploma and courses enabling students to complete the first two years of college-level work.

Major George Fielding Eliot, the famed writer on military affairs, in a recent Sunday newspaper article distributed throughout the entire country, declared: "... you can come through your two Army years with considerable educational progress chalked up to your account."—by participating in the USAFI program.

AER Drive Final

Contributions to Army Emergency Relief campaign on the Presidio last month totaled $1,918.35, according to final figures announced this week by Major Ella A. Wilton, Funds Custodian. This total was $613.52 higher than the amount received during last year's drive.

Donations of $1,872.35 were reported by the sections and units of the post and $46 was raised at an AER Benefit dance held at the Presidio Service Club.

Not Halos, Just New Cap Covers

White cap covers recently authorized as an item of issue are now being worn by Military Police on the Presidio. These new cap covers are now a permanent part of the MP uniform.

Not only do these cap covers add to the appearance of the Military Police but makes them easier to see while directing traffic in darkness or when visibility is bad due to climatic conditions.

This change is in line with the supply economy program as it eliminates the issue of white leggings, white cap bands.

Private Celebration!

Silesia Escapee Enjoys First Year As An American Soldier

Wednesday, 20 August 1952, was a big anniversary for Pvt. Horst Gruner. He celebrated one year of living in the United States, and expressed his great appreciation for the freedom and happiness he has found, and the "good luck" of being here.

Escape from an occupied country and a long wait for admission to the United States is the story of this 21-year-old soldier, a student at the Sixth Army Food Service School.

Completing school in Silesia in 1945, Gruner first got a job in a printing shop. When the Polish Army, with the aid of the Russians, took over occupation of Silesia (now part of Southwestern Poland), the shop equipment was taken and shipped out of the country. The young lad then found a job in a bakery, working first for a Russian and then a Pole. One of his employers warned him that the young men of the country were being shipped to Siberia, and that he better escape.

With only the clothes he was wearing, Gruner started out alone on 27 April 1946. His destination was Western Germany, but he had no definite route, going wherever his chances seemed best. He had to leave his widowed mother, who was ill, and later sent to a camp. She was eventually taken to Western Germany, in a group of seriously ill permitted to leave, and he has seen her once since his escape.

He walked more than 30 miles through the forests at night, and hid on trains when possible. Often he had no idea where the train was going, but he was at least moving.

Two Russian borders had to be crossed, going in and out of the Russian zone. Both he passed by hiding on trains and narrowly eluding the strict guards of Russian and Polish Police. When he crossed one border, he was hidden beneath a pile of coal, while several others on the same train, not as well hidden, were captured.

Gruner skirted around Berlin and went as far south as Dresden before heading back north again. After four days he finally passed the border into Western Germany at Helmstedt.

Then he went to Bremerhaven to begin what proved to be a long wait for admission to the United States. While waiting there he worked in a food store and a bakery. An accomplished contortionist, Gruner joined a group of entertainers, who spent their weekends and free time presenting shows in the outlying districts of the city. Technicalities prevented his departure twice after he had purchased tickets. He finally left by plane, arriving in this country on 20 August 1951, four years and four months after his escape from Silesia.

His admission to the United States was made possible by an uncle in White Plains, New York, who sent him the money for his fare, and assured U. S. officials he would have a job for him when he arrived.

Pvt. Gruner remained in White Plains with his uncle until he enlisted in the Army last April. He is presently assigned to the 820 Aviation Engineers at Fort Huachuca, and is currently enrolled in the cooking course at the Food Service School, Presidio of San Francisco.

To be prepared for war is one of the most effective means of preserving peace. . . . George Washington.

Device Starts Gas Engines At 65 Below

New York—A new device that can start gasoline engines at 65 degrees below zero is now being tested at the Army's Engineer Research and Development Laboratories, Ft. Belvoir, Va., for possible use in Engineer Corps equipment.

The gadget, recently demonstrated here by its inventor, Robert Reichhelm of Stratford, Conn., is known as the "gasifier," and enables engines to start in extremely cold temperatures in less than 30 seconds.

Gasoline engines exposed to freezing temperatures ordinarily require external heat for starting. The gasifier, however, is essentially a fuel pre-combustion chamber with a conventional spark plug.

The chamber heats and vaporizes a portion of the fuel which flows into the engine. The resultant rich, warm, gaseous priming charge is sucked into the engine upon cranking. This causes easier combustion independent of initial carburetor performance. The gasifier has started a "frozen" engine in as little as eight seconds.

Mr. Reichhelm, who has been working on the device since 1938, reports that it can also be used to start engines at excessively hot temperatures. Simple to install, the gasifier is inexpensive, since there are no moving parts or extra accessories for operation.

Recent figures show that approximately three million dollars in gasoline and man-hours are wasted each year in starting automobiles during the cold season.

The Army Corps of Engineers is now working on the problem of supplying cranking power for the device.

Top Montana Students View Sixth Army Life

Fifteen of Montana's outstanding high school seniors were guests of the Army Commander, Lieutenant General Joseph M. Swing, at the Presidio this week.

Arriving Wednesday evening after a day-long visit to Fort Ord, where they witnessed current indoctrination and basic training methods, they attended a dance at the Service Club and spent the night at the Presidio.

Thursday morning they toured the static display, and paid a call on the Army Commander. They departed by plane at noon.

OPERATION OF A M-55 MOUNT is explained by M/Sgt Troy Deatherage of A Battery, 9th AAA Gun Battalion, to four members of the Ground Observation Corps who were among the corps members to visit A Battery last week to learn how their activities tied in with the defense of the San Francisco Bay Area.

For Better Understanding!

Defense Leaders Given Tour Of Ack Ack Placements

Visiting A Battery of the 9th AAA Battalion over the weekend, a group of civilians from the Ground Observation Corps were shown just how their activities for the civil defense program tie in with the actual defense of the San Francisco Bay Area.

The visitors were taken directly to the battery near Daly City following their tour of duty as observers at the Sutro Forest tower. As civilian observers they are among the volunteers who are now keeping a 24-hour watch for surface and aircraft in the area.

During their two-hour visit they were shown equipment of the battery and were given operation demonstrations. The radar equipment was explained and they were informed of how their observing supplements the radar.

Craft seen by the civilian observers which they are unable to identify are reported to a filter center in Oakland. The visitors were shown how, in case of an actual attack, the information they had sent to the filter center would come down to the battery as firing orders.

Plans have been formulated to conduct similar tours of the 9th AAA Battalion batteries each week for other members of the Ground Observation Corps, which is still in dire need of more volunteers to carry out its mission.

Included in the first group of visitors to A Battery were: Mrs. Ruth Lee Peabody, county co-ordinator and Chief Observer, Ground Observation Corps; Ed Moltani, corp supervisor; Frank Bowen, observer and Explorer Scout; Art Swerman, Civil Air Patrol Cadet; Mrs. Verna A. Rourke, Mrs. Grace E. Leech and Mrs. E. Moltani, all observers, and Ed Schroeder and Art Swerman, Civil Air Patrol Cadets.

The young men of the group who are Civil Air Patrol Cadets received some of their training at Crissy Field on the Presidio. They are considered among the best of the volunteer corps members.

Timely Fire Tips!

Expert Advice That Could Save You Serious Injury Or Death

The menace of fire can be mitigated by preparing for it in advance. George Geller, Chief Fire Prevention and Protection, mulling over the lessons learned during 32 years of fire fighting as Deputy Chief of the New York Fire Department, earnestly expressed his firm belief that, "Sound judgment indicates the necessity for a plan of escape from fire danger. However, before outlining the plan, let me first as a professional fire fighter emphasize that danger from fire is one of the major functions."

A fundamental principle to remember when trapped in a room is to "place the palm of your hand against the door," says Chief Geller. "If the door feels hot to your hand, that passageway or hallway is already permeated with the dangerous heat, smoke and gases." In that case, escape through the window—if on ground floor—or wait at window for rescue by your Fire Department.

Another method would be to brace your foot against the door, open it slightly, if it does not feel hot. Place your hand over the opening to check the heat. If it is too hot whip the door closed and seek other means of escape. The closed door acts as a defense barrier for a while and consequently allows ample time for retreat from the danger zone.

Whenever leaving a burning room, it is also just as important to shut the door in order to prevent the flame from spreading and thundering out and raging up and throughout the entire building.

When you make your escape from a fire-involved building, search out the natural means of egress. If that is cut off by smoke, heat or flame, find other exits or fire escape. If this fails there is always the possibility—and many times resorted to—of attempting to get to the roof as a temporary measure. However, if cut off, always close the door to prevent fire from sweeping in. Go to the window and make your presence known. The fire department will have a ladder to you in a matter of seconds. Remember, once out of a building never go back. Records and experience reveal names of the foolhardy, who, safely out of danger, return to retrieve possessions only to perish in the attempt.

WHAT TO DO

1. Prepare a definite route of escape from several possible conditions with specific instructions.
2. Call your Fire Department "117".
3. Arouse all occupants and put your "Fire Plan" to work.
4. If door is too hot, don't open it.

5. Open any door with extreme caution. If it is too hot beyond, close it.
6. When leaving a burning area, close door behind you.
7. Do not return to a burning building.

The rules are simple. The stakes are great. Fire may not wait until tomorrow. Why not have that little round table conference now! How about clipping this piece, keeping it handy and also passing the information to your family, friends, co-workers and neighbors.

Wapakoneta, O.—Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wehrle Jr. have things down to a science. Their children Laura Joan, Nancy Jane and George Joseph all celebrated birthdays June 19.

Local Officers Test Firing Skill With Pistols and Carbines

The Martins and the McCoys are not fuedin' down on the firing range. All that shootin' is by officers of the Post and Headquarters Sixth Army who are all required to fire their basic weapon—pistols for field grade officers and carbines for company grade officers.

Those with 15 years or less service are required to fire the qualification course which is scored and recorded in their 201 file. To date only ten officers have turned out and three have qualified as expert, four as sharpshooters and three as marksmen.

Officers with 15 years of service or more are only required to fire the familiarization course which is not scored but designed to insure that all officers are familiar with their basic weapon.

Child's Play?

Korea Patrol's Stakes High In New Version "Hot or Cold"

Four soldiers on patrol in Korea had to stake their lives on the old grammar school "hot or cold" game.

The 45th Infantry Division patrol strayed into a mine field one dark night and one of the men stepped on a mine. A freak explosion tossed him, without injury, eight feet to his right, where he landed less than a foot from another mine, straddling its trip wire.

The men froze like players in a nightmarish game of "Red Light," while Sergeant First Class Lewis C. Spears, of Route 6, Tallahassee, Fla., the patrol leader, radioed for help.

Sergeant Augustine Villarreal, of 717 North Jefferson Street, Saginaw, Mich., cautiously led an engineer demolition team to the rescue. Quietly, the rescuers edged into the trapped patrol's area, where the Communists, alerted because of the mine blast, were playing their own game of "hide and go seek" with the patrol.

Villarreal's problem was the same as that of the enemy—how to locate the marooned men? He radioed that, as he moved along the ridge he was following, he would toss a cartridge to the ground.

When the men in the mine field heard the "plonk" of the cartridge, they radioed their rescuer whether he was going in the right direction.

If the sounds became fainter, they radioed "colder." As the rescuers worked their way forward, they got the word they were "hotter" and "hotter" until they located the patrol at the "boiling hot" point.

The rescue squad crawled 250 yards from the ridge before reaching the barbed wire marking the mine field. Then Villarreal, methodically feeling every inch of ground, went on alone.

He had to cut three trip wires on his way to the stranded patrol. After circling each man in a search for wires, Villarreal led the patrol back to safety.

The four men had remained literally "frozen in their tracks" for nearly four hours.

MPs Exchange Gold Bars For Silver In 505th Battalion

Gold bars were exchanged for silver bars this week by two members of the Military Police Corps at the Presidio.

Lieutenant Colonel F. Tait, CI Division, PM Section, Sixth Army, was commissioned in January 1951 in Vienna, Austria. At that time Lt. Colonel E. D. Connors pinned on his newly won gold bar.

Now almost a year and a half later Lt. Colonel Connors, presently of the Sixth Army PM Section, again pinned a bar on Lt. Tait—this time a silver one.

The presentation was made in the office of Colonel J. L. Driskell, Sixth Army Provost Marshal.

Lt. Robert J. Foley, who was also promoted, is the Executive Officer of "B" Company, 505th MP Bn. He was first commissioned in February 1951, and served as Assistant Confinement Officer at Camp Cooke until July of 1951 when he was transferred to 505th MP Bn, Camp Roberts, Calif. Lt. Foley is presently awaiting shipment to FECOM.

Sturdy Soldiers Study

In Army Schoolrooms As Boom In Education Moves Into High

Army railroad cars and tents in Korea rapidly are replacing the legendary little red schoolhouses.

Thousands of soldiers in the battle areas are attending classes in makeshift schoolrooms to add impetus to the boom in soldier education.

A total of 184,182 soldiers took part in the Army Education Program in the third quarter of fiscal 1952.

This is an increase of 77 per cent over the same period in 1951.

Soldiers participating in the program include those enrolled in Army-supervised classes given during duty hours, as well as those attending civilian schools or taking group study and correspondence courses in their spare time. On-duty classes are for soldiers who cannot speak the English language and include basic education courses for men who lack a fifth-grade education.

Col. Otis McCormick, Army Chief of Troop Education and Information said the increase was encouraging.

"As a soldier raises his academic level," he said, "he automatically increases the efficiency of the Army, helps us conserve our manpower, and thereby saves money for the taxpayer."

Most rapid rise in troop education during the third quarter of fiscal 1952 occurred in correspondence courses, which showed an increase of 128 per cent over the third quarter of fiscal 1951.

Main reason for the boost in this type of study was the long stalemate in Korea. Soldiers there had more time to devote to mathematics lessons, courses on communications and other subjects.

Almost 11,000 fourth and fifth-grade certificates were awarded to soldiers in the third quarter of fiscal 1952. Only half this number were given out during the same period in 1951. Much of the increase was due to enrollment of aliens and Puerto Ricans in the Army's English language classes.

These courses are required study for all non-English speaking soldiers. Students in the classes include many aliens who enlisted in the Army for five years with the promise of American citizenship at the end of that period.

Fourth and fifth-grade schooling also is a must for all soldiers who did not complete these grades before joining the Army. It is given soon after these soldiers are inducted. They need it in order to understand the various courses in Army training.

During the third quarter of fiscal 1952, more than 40,000 group study courses were completed by serious-minded soldiers bent on increasing their knowledge of everything from history to electronics. This was a 58.5 per cent increase over the third quarter of fiscal 1951.

Enrollees in these courses include thousands of troops in Europe who are required to study the language of the country in which they are stationed. Other popular courses in this category are communications, electricity, typing and other vocational subjects, as well as mathematics courses.

A 52 per cent increase was recorded in the number of eighth grade certificates awarded to soldiers during the third quarter of fiscal 1952 as compared with the same period a year ago.

The added knowledge of American soldiers represented by these figures reflects an Army advancing in its general educational level and in its number of technical specialists trained for better defense of this country. It also helps boost soldiers' chances of getting better jobs when they return to civilian life.

Port Blood Drive Draws 3028 Pints Since October

With the closing of the August drive today, 3028 pints of whole blood have been given by San Francisco Port of Embarkation military and civilian personnel since the Armed Forces blood donation campaign began in October last year.

This month 401 pints were given by those of the port at Fort Mason. After the visit of the Irwin Memorial Red Cross Bloodmobile 7 and 8 August, still others of the post who were absent on those days were taken direct to the Blood Bank to afford them the chance to give. Of the port total to date 1688 pints have been obtained at Fort Mason during the quarterly visits of the Bloodmobile.

Oakland Army Base, which is visited monthly by the Oakland Red Cross Bloodmobile, gave 97 pints on the August visit, bringing its total since the start of the drive to 1340 pints.

Fort Baker Boasts Budding Shaw In PIO Private

A Fort Baker soldier, PFC Bill Dailey, has been awarded a $50 prize from Stanford University for an original radio play entitled "Too Late to Hide," recently produced over radio station KNBC.

Private Dailey, who used his Army leave time to attend the Stanford University Radio-Television Institute's summer session, also shared a $100 prize with Herbert Seiter, Stanford graduate student, for the outstanding student award.

The institute's summer session includes an eight-week comprehensive course in radio and television taught by staff members of KNBC and KPIX.

Selected from a large number of plays written by institute students, "Too Late to Hide" is the story of embittered parents who influence their son to avoid the draft after another son had died in battle.

A 1950 graduate of Stanford, Private Dailey is presently assigned to the Public Information Office, Headquarters, Western Army Antiaircraft Command, Fort Baker, California.

He also attended the Armed Forces Information School, Fort Slocum, N. Y.

After completing his Army service, Private Dailey intends to enter the radio-TV field.

Accidental Activation

Those sirens that the personnel on the Presidio heard blowing on Tuesday of this week were actually sirens. It wasn't a figment of anyone's imagination.

It seems that someone who was working on a telephone cable accidentally set off the siren in Building 1230 and caused much confusion around the Post.

Quotable Quip

The Soviets have added the trolley car to the long list of things "invented" by Russians. Moscow radio stated that the trolley was first developed by Igor Appolonovic Perovsky sometime in the 1870s. If that is so, it is hard to understand why so many Russians have been off their trolley so long.

Local Armed Services YMCAs Boast Interesting Histories

San Francisco's two Armed Services YMCAs, the Presidio and the Embarcadero, have long and interesting histories. Both of these branches are operated by the Metropolitan Association of San Francisco.

Presidio's YMCA had its beginning in 1898 when troops for the Spanish-American War were being mobilized. Secretaries employed at that time not only worked with the trainees but accompanied them to the Philippines thus inaugurating the first YMCA in the Islands. Permanent quarters for a Y were provided by the War Department in an old wooden barracks at the end of the War.

Washington—Douglas and Ernest Lee, six-year-old twin sons of Lee Jung Wan, dutifully presented the honored guest at a recent reception with a set of chopsticks. Later they were heard asking their mother: "What were those things we gave that man?"

Ladysmith, Wis.—Shep, a playful dog, ended his career as a retriever in a blaze of glory. His master, Gust Sillman, was dynamiting tree stumps and had placed a lighted stick of dynamite in place. Shep, playing a game, picked it up and chased after his master. Gust managed to run faster, all the while shouting to Shep. The dog played dumb and, when 100 yards separated the two, Shep and the dynamite exploded. "We'll miss old Shep around here," panted Gust.

Frankfort, Ky.—State legislator Earl Rogers insisted that the ballot include his nickname, "Dirty Ear," in the identifications.

Hell, Mich.—It was hot in Hell recently. The temperature soared to an unofficial 103 degrees. In nearby Purgatory, the mercury was five degrees lower.

THE BOOK CORNER

Miss Abby Fitch-Martin by Kathryn Loughlin. Though mourned by her neighbors as a God-fearing woman, this sadistic old hypocrite actually spent decades in waging a psychological warfare which eroded the morale and health of the members of her household.

Concord Bridge by Howard Horne. A well-written, credibly told tale of Revolutionary Boston, Lexington, and Concord in which the author maintains a good balance between the Boston patriots and the British government in Massachusetts.

Harpoon Venture by Gavin Maxwell. The author picks out an isolated spot on the map during a London blitz and actually goes there to harpoon sharks for the only marketable part of them, their liver oil—providing us with proof that even in this streamlined world there are still adventures of the old, pre-atomic type to be found in the yet untamed sea.

Fancy Dress Party by Alberto Moravia. With sly malice and an unerring eye for the comic inadequacies of human nature, this popular author gives us a story of intrigue and attempted assassination beginning with the air of a comic opera, but which moves with increasing momentum to a macabre and unsettling climax.

Are you aware that the three Presidio Libraries provide a book slot in the door for the return of books at any hour the libraries are not open? Bearing this in mind would eliminate many misplaced books caused by suddenly getting emergency leaves, etc.

Special Services Lists Rules In Inter-Service Photo Contest

Local competition by personnel of the Presidio and its subposts in the Fourth Inter-Service Photograph Contest has been detailed by Post Special Services. Seven cash prizes will be given by Post Special Services in the black and white category of the contest and three in the color transparencies division.

Entries for the Presidio contest must be submitted to the Post Special Services office, Bldg. 122, not later than 15 October. Contest rules and entry blanks may be secured at the Presidio Camera Club at Fort Baker, the Post Special Services office, the Post Service Club and the Post Libraries.

Only photographs and color transparencies taken after 1 January 1951 will be eligible for competition. Subject matter should have appeal and meaning. The individual or individuals who are subjects of portrait photographs must authorize in writing on the entry form the submission of the entry in the contest and use in contest publicity.

To facilitate the cataloging and handling of entries, black and white enlargements will be identified by name, grade, service number, name of major command, military address and title of entry printed on a 3 x 5 card affixed to the reverse of the photograph. Identification of color transparencies will include the same information printed on the cardboard transparency mount.

Winners of the Presidio contest will be entered in the Sixth Army Photography Contest to be held later in the year. Entries in the Sixth Army competition will be judged between 15 November and 15 December.

To say "Presidio has a tough football schedule this year" would be a mild understatement. Proof of this lies in the fact that we are opening up on 12 September against Alameda Naval Air, one of the top service teams on the West Coast. We'll be playing the Pacific fleet, no less, and if the locals can emerge without getting their feet wet, they will be the team to be reckoned with throughout the coming season. Definitely a job for men—not boys. Incidentally, still need more men to try out for team berths.

CPL. PAUL LIPPMAN

There is a lot to be said about any athlete or sportsman who can excell in a particular field of sports, but the real test comes when the heat is on, when you are playing under pressure and Sergeant Charles Malchaski, ace golfer from Camp Roberts, could probably give us a "King's English" version of the need to come through under fire. Missing that two-foot putt and the chance to tie Corporal Bill Rowe in the Golf Tourney, Malchaski at least displayed his coolness by not breaking his club into bits as would many great golfers.

Les Richter, fresh from an outstanding performance as defensive linebacker for the All Stars last week, jumps into Army togs this week to begin his two-year stint in the service. His training cycle at Camp Cooke will run right through football season so it is not probable that Richter will see much Army gridiron duty this fall.

At this writing, Fort Ord, Sixth Army's only representative to the National Baseball Congress, Wichita, Kansas, has won their first two games and stands a good chance to clean up. The tourney is played on a sudden death basis and one loss puts a team out of the running.

Another team has been slated to represent this area in the Southern Division Softball Tourney at Fort Ord. Forty-Seventh AAA Brigade, Fort Baker, will make the trip along with the 102d MRU and Presidio Wacs. Winners of the competition will meet the Northerners here at the Presidio for the Sixth Army finals, 8-13 September.

21st Soltechs Still Dominate Scott Basketball Play

Twice during the past week the 21st Soltechs nearly toppled from their perch high above the other contenders in the Fort Winfield Scott basketball tournament, but in both cases a timely rally of field goals assured them of victory.

Dividing their scoring between Schaeffer, Volk, Hackathorn and Hartman the 21st offense was too well balanced to be stopped by the 99'ers. Sparked by the 15 points scored by Stollies, the 99'ers came within five points of dethroning the 21st powerhouse. Their showing proved that they will not be a push-over in the tournament. They have steadily improved their offense and probably will be breaking into the win column soon.

Headquarters Lakers dropped two full games behind the torrid pace being set by the 21st Soltechs Monday night as the Soltechs came from behind to win 37-28. The Lakers led 5-2 at the end of the first canto and 11-10 at half time. But in the third quarter the 21st offense clicked and piled up a 29-19 lead. Scoring was about equally divided in the final quarter and the game ended 37-28. Haug led the 21st scoring with 13 points and Germain racked up 11 counters for the losers.

With Tate playing the pivot spot well and garnering 12 points, Headquarters Lakers defeated the 21st Deuces 31-22 Wednesday night. The Lakers surged to a nine-point edge at the end of the first half and held that lead throughout the final quarters. Coy swished 15 of the 22 tallies on the 21st Deuces side of the score book.

In the first contest Monday night, the 21st Deuces eked out a 37-33 win over the 99th 99'ers. Less than five points separated the two clubs throughout the game and at half-time the squads were deadlocked at 14-14. Stollies one-handed push shot accounted for 12 of the 99'ers points. Coy and DiCarlo shared scoring laurels for the Deuces with 14 and 13 points respectively.

The four teams in the tournament are still in the same order as far as games won and lost are concerned as they were after the first week of play.

Pigskin "Raiders" Boast Shifty Backs Plus Gibraltar-Like Forward Wall

Football season is young and it may be a little early to make predictions, but if the Red Presidio grid machine continues to develop as it has these past two weeks, any favorable predictions made could be true.

Thirty-six men answered first call last week and the ranks grew to 46 at week's end. The team has not progressed to the stage where more manpower is not needed. The coaches continue to urge more men to come out and try out. Any football aspirant from Presidio, Forts Baker, Barry, Cronkhite, Mason and Oakland Army Base is welcome to hit the Presidio turf and make an active bid for a team slot.

For men who have the necessary pigskin ability, but lack experience with a polished squad, this should be the opportunity, a chance to play with stars from high school, college, semi-pro, pro and army ball, some famous, many unknown as yet, but all football players in the true sense of the word.

Coaches Gaspar Perricone and Bob Ottoson report that "team spirit is exceptionally high and first scrimmage sessions reveal an unusual amount of cooperation and organization."

Backfield Coach Perricone expressed much satisfaction with his backs, labeling them as "sharp and quick." Among them are: Half-backs Roland Daigle, an old hand at army ball having played with some of the post war FECOM teams in Japan, and Dallas Lamb, a fleet former high school star from Ohio; Quarterbacks Will McGee, a smooth T operator from Mississippi State and Lewis Brown, veteran of the Presidio '50 and '51 squad; Fullback Nick Kirby, 185 pound line buckler, all around athlete and another returnee from Red Raiders '51 team.

Coach Ottoson's forward wall will boast a 210-pound average, a good-sized line for any army team, and with such seasoned standouts as: Center Bob Rhodes, a '51 squad member; Linebacker Matthew Piccini, formerly with Camp Edward's team; Guards Bill Burchell, with one year of Texas A & M football under his belt, and DeLane Pankratz, outstanding for his aggressiveness; Tackles Frank Karls, Graham Jonston, Robert Bava and Leo Miller, a 260-pounder; Ends Leonard Bates, Bill Albrecht and Gerald Petersen, another veteran of Presidio's '51 team.

We will be hearing about many more of the backs and linemen who have not yet made their impression, but as practice gets into full swing, will gear up to turn in top performances. Some of these potential stars have not donned a uniform yet and are urged to see Sfc. Cook in Building 122, Presidio immediately.

Scott Softball Nine Contests So. Army Div.

The 21st Engineer softball team is heading South this week-end to encamp at Fort Ord for the southern division of the 6th Army Softball Tournament. The tourney is on the company level and the 21st has its sights set on victory. Team manager M/Sgt Robert Dow is training the squad as if they were preparing for the channel swim and is confident that they will win.

On past records they should rank high on the list of favorites. Throughout the spring and summer they have dropped only two contests to Army nines. After many tries Headquarters Company at Fort Scott defeated the 21st as did the Letterman Hospital team in early spring. In some games they scored as many as 30 runs and constantly ran up margins of victory similar to the '49ers football team. Since the tournament is being played on a sudden-death basis, comparative scores will mean little if any of the ball clubs have a bad day. However, the experience the 21st has gained in San Francisco City League play could provide the deciding punch.

Pfc's Tom Ware of Kansas City, Missouri, and Les Stevens of Wichita, Kansas, are newcomers to the company who could take up the vacancies created by leaves. Stevens will play third while Ware will be in center field. Their hitting will be welcome support to pitcher SFC Les Hartman.

Red Raiders Fire Up Again; Take Lopsided Test From Tiburon

Red Raider baseball is on the upsurge again as the locals dealt a sluggish Tiburon club a stinging 8-1 defeat at Tiburon this week.

Revived after losing two in a row, the local nine fired up knocking sixteen hits to five for the opponents.

Seneiante, Raider pitcher, started the game giving up one run in the first inning. He was relieved by Holahan in the third, who held Tiburon scoreless throughout the remaining seven. Holahan's entire game was above par as he nailed three for three at the plate, one a 425-foot triple to start a fifth inning rally.

Lemon, third baseman and a consistent hitter, rapped a pair of doubles and scored three runs himself.

Catcher Potts batted in three runs and collected four hits for five times at bat.

Corporal Bill Rowe, Presidio's fairway king, surged from behind to a spectacular last round victory in the Southern Division Golf Tourney on the Presidio links last week to earn a top berth to the Sixth Army finals, 26-29 August at Fort Lewis, Washington.

A one over par 73 in the final round and a total tally of 303 capped the victory for the Presidio titlist over a field of 68 golfers from Arizona, Utah, Nevada and California.

After leading the field in first round play, Rowe yielded to Sergeant Charles Malchaski, Camp Roberts, who held the lead through the second and third rounds and 17 holes of the final skirmish. Landing in the sandtrap near the 18th green, Sgt. Malchaski recovered nicely with a stroke that put the ball two feet from the cup and then blew a heartbreaking 24-inch putt and the chance to tie Rowe for top individual honors.

In team play, Camp Roberts dominated the scene with a comfortable 27 stroke margin over Presidio. Letterman Hospital placed third. Roberts will represent the Southern Division in team competition at the finals.

Other low individual medalists who will make the trip to Fort Lewis along with Rowe and Malchaski are: Corporal Tom Williams, Camp Roberts; Sergeant Oliver Shoaf, Camp Cooke; Private First Class George Nicoll, Camp San Luis Obispo; Corporal Leland Lewis, Letterman Army Hospital; and Master Sergeant George DeRosia, Presidio.

In Senior Division play, the over-50-years-of-age category, Colonel Augustus J. Regnier, Camp Roberts, tallied 338 for the four rounds to edge Colonel George Horsfall, also of Roberts, with a 350 total.

Statistics for the individual low medalists and winning teams are:

- Malchaski—76, 77, 74, 77—304
- Williams—74, 77, 74, 81—306

Effects Of Long Rest Show As Wacs Lose A Tight Game

Presidio Wac's softball team, after a three-week lull, received a first-hand account of the type of competition they will meet in the Northern California Softball Tournament for women from the Napa Shamrocks in an eight-inning contest last Monday.

Napa's high powered civilian gals, top contenders for the state crown, defeated the locals by a close 8-7 margin on the Shamrock's home field.

Lynch held down the mound for Presidio, fanning 14 and giving up 13 bases on balls while her teammates outthit the civilians 11-6.

Nordstrom had a perfect day hitting four for four and scoring two runs. Groomes slammed a homer with the bases loaded in the fifth.

Napa remained scoreless for six innings but turned the seventh into a rout getting seven runs.

Although defeated, Presidio's showing was good considering the competition and they will also be a top contender in the state event, 5-7 September at Napa.

MRU Nine Nods Officer Team For Softball Crown

Presidio League softball ended last week with the 102d MRU, first division champs, defeating the second division champion officer team in a best two out of three game series.

MRU coasted to a 15-4 victory in the opener but met a rejuvenated club in the second game and had to go nine innings before winning by a scant 3-2 tally.

Sturuss, Coester and Waldron crossed homeplate for the 102d while Putman and Frisch scored for the Officers.

Outen slammed a triple in the ninth to bring in MRU's winning run and the Post Intra Mural Softball Championship.

MRU will journey to Ford Ord to participate in the Southern Division Softball Tournament, 25-30 August.

America's future in amateur tennis rides with two youngsters—a boy and a girl. Here and abroad this summer they'll be paired in mixed doubles as the strongest of the younger tennis stars. Alone, each is a strong contender in the singles field. . . . Maureen Connolly, the women's national champion of the U.S., at 17 and 19-year-old Hamilton Richardson represent the coming generation in U.S. tennis. . . . "Little Mo" Connolly's future appears rosy. The blond Californian already has been ranked with the great Helen Wills. Winner of 12 of 15 major tournaments last year she's expected to retain her laurels against Louise Brough and the other top gals of the sport. Miss Brough says Maureen "puts more pressure on you than any other player in the game. She hits the ball harder and flatter than any woman ever did."

Richardson was chosen a Davis Cup alternate a year ago. In 1950 he was national junior titlist and presently ranks ninth in the nation's senior division. Now at Tulane University in his hometown of New Orleans, La., he's rated a "comer." With Dick Savitt and Vic Seixas playing up-and-down tennis and little Herb Flam a streaky competitor, Richardson can move to the top of the mediocre American crop at a leisurely pace, barring a call to Service in the near future.

Tennis enthusiasts will see plenty of hustle and a young spirit in the driving play of these two youngsters.

In 71 ring contests between years 1934 and 1951, inclusive, Joseph Barrow scored 53 knockouts, 15 decisions, was KO'd twice, lost one by decision and yet only went the full 15 rounds four times. Who is Joe Barrow? Joe Louis, natch.

MGM's "Battle Circus!"

Sixth Army Nurse Technical Advisor For MASH Unit Film

First Lieutenant Mary I. Couch, Army Nurse Corps, presently stationed at Letterman Army Hospital, Presidio of San Francisco, is one of the technical advisors for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's latest film, "Battle Circus," the story of a Mobile Army Surgical Hospital (MASH) unit in Korea. The stars of "Battle Circus" include Academy Award winner, Humphrey Bogart, June Allyson, and Keenan Wynn. This is the first film to be made about a MASH unit.

Lt. Couch served nine months in Korea, where she was assigned to the 8076th Mobile Army Surgical Hospital, and was in the Kuneri area at the time of the heroic retreat of the Second Infantry Division in late November 1950. The unit moved over most of Korea and at one time had advanced to within 70 miles of the Manchurian border.

After the withdrawal of the Second Division, the MASH Unit to which she was assigned, set up facilities in Pyongyang. Lt. Couch received patients in the pre-operative and shock ward (brought in by ambulance or helicopter), treated them for shock and hemorrhage, and kept them alive for surgery. Despite the fact the unit was understaffed (the 8076th had 17 nurses at the time), they were operating as a 60-bed hospital and were able to treat from 500 to 1000 casualties per day.

These MASH units are something of an innovation. They have been planned since 1947, and came into existence at the start of the Korean War. Combining the better elements of the portable surgical hospitals and surgical teams used in World War II, they are set up to function as close as the division clearing station behind the front lines.

These units are equipped to do major emergency surgery, and have literally saved thousands of lives. At a MASH unit, a wounded soldier usually gets his first definitive surgical treatment. It is here that vicious stomach and chest wounds are operated on before they have a chance to take a life. Casualties are given blood transfusions and antibiotics to reduce the chances of shock and infection. As soon as a man is well enough he is moved to bigger, better-equipped hospitals in Korea, Japan, or the United States.

"Battle Circus" was written, and is being directed by Richard Brooks, who gained a widespread reputation for "Crisis" and "The Light Touch" done for MGM. Much of the picture was filmed at Camp Pickett, Virginia, where the only complete MASH unit, the 915th, is stationed. And Pickett's deep woods, dusty roads, and vast ranges provide an excellent imitation of Korea. The picture will not be released to the public before the end of the year.

The authenticity of the film is vouchsafed by technical director, Lt. Col. K. E. VanBushkirk, who commanded one of the first of three MASH units in Korea.

It is hoped that "Battle Circus" will be an incentive for young women to join the Army Nurse Corps, as Army Hospitals in the United States, as well as in Korea, are critically understaffed.

With respect to time, no man can know at what hour, if ever, our defensive organization may be put to the ultimate test. Because our purpose is entirely defensive, we must be ready at the earliest possible moment. Only an aggressor could name the day and hour of attack. We have no time to waste. Our current mobilization, properly adjusted to our peaceful security needs, should be as rapid as any required by the emergency of war.—General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower.

1st Lt. Mary Couch

Wise Counsel

The strength of a democracy is no greater than the strength of its individual components. This is a time when we must examine ourselves to see whether we are playing individually a part that must be played collectively if our way of life is to survive. I hope that every man and woman before going to bed at night will ask himself the question, "What have I done today to justify my citizenship in the United States of America?"—The Honorable Frank Pace, Jr., Secretary of the Army.

Initial Conference!

Sixth Army Instructors Meet To Form Associate Course

The initial conference for instructors of the Sixth Army Area in the Special Associate Course, Command and General Staff was held here last week. The purpose of this conference, for members of the permanent faculty group of the Sixth Army area, was to bring instructors up to date on formation and revisions of programs of instruction, and to survey preliminary planning for the following year's school program.

Colonel Wayland B. Auger, Chief G-3 Section, Headquarters Sixth Army, Presidio of San Francisco delivered the welcoming address to the instructor group to open the conference.

Lieutenant Colonel Milton B. Herr, Acting Executive Officer, Information Section, spoke on the subject "Put Publicity on Your Staff" and stressed the importance of publicizing the advantages and opportunities of the program to obtain maximum fulfillment of student quotas from their respective districts.

Colonel Lafayette D. Matthews, Senior Instructor for SAC, C&GS, presided over the conference meeting. He briefed the instructors on the course program during FY 1953 and made instructor assignments and issued instruction material.

The Special Associate Course, Command and General Staff, conducted annually in a three-phase segmentation, is to provide instruction in the light of war lessons and modern developments to qualified officers of the Regular Army, National Guard, Organized Reserve Corps and Volunteer Reserves.

Each phase of the program consists of 50 to 55 hours of non-resident instruction by the employment of extension courses, which in turn is followed by a 72-hour period of resident, or active duty instruction. The course is conducted by designated Army Commanders at locations selected within their respective areas.

Yuma Heat Tests Soldiers As They Test Clothing

Yuma, Ariz.—In raging wind and dust storms and temperatures that soar to 123 degrees fahrenheit, a group of 19 Army officers and men are undergoing tests to discover the effect of mid-summer temperatures on Army troops in the open desert.

In addition to studies covering human reactions to work under high temperatures, a group of scientists and observers are testing and studying a new uniform designed for use in a dry-hot climate. Six of the soldiers were test subjects in the Far North last winter and data on their reactions to a dry-hot environment will be combined with data covering similar reactions to dry-cold environment.

The party is also studying the effect on the men from wearing the newly developed nylon body armor. Although used successfully in Korea, it is not known if the jacket can be worn in an extremely hot climate.

Members of the party will compile first-hand data on desert weather conditions while engaging in typical military activities. In evaluating desert clothing, comparison will be made of the reactions of men wearing standard uniforms with those wearing the new-type experimental hot-dry uniform.

The Commandant, Command and General Staff College, Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, is responsible for the formulation and revision of programs of instruction along with other supervisory and administrative details, while the Army commander controls the selection of staff and faculty as required and the determination of student qualifications for initial enrollment.

Officers who meet the necessary prerequisites for enrollment may submit their applications to unit instructors concerned for forwarding through channels to Army commanders for approval.

Army Tops Marines And Navy In Nat'l Pistol Team Match

The Army outshot the Marine Corps in the National Pistol Team Championships this week. The Army team broke a world's 22 caliber pistol record, and won all three championships.

The Marine team placed second in all three divisions with the Tampa, Florida Pistol Club in third place.

Scoring was as follows: 22-caliber—Army 1,174, Marines 1,156, Florida Pistol Club 1,121; 38-caliber—Army 1,147, Marines 1,144, Florida Pistol Club 1,096; 45-caliber—Army 1,136, Marines 1,133, Florida Pistol Club 1,032.

The Army's 22-caliber score broke the oldest mark in the book—1,172 set in 1941 by the U. S. Treasury Department team.

Stomach and Feet!

Shank's Pony Still Chief Mode Of Travel In Modern Army

Even in this machine age, a soldier's chief method of transportation is his feet—and, as a result, the Army Medical Service constantly is seeking new "policies" that will insure his foot health.

Although the modern U. S. Army infantry division has more motor vehicles than any similar combat unit in the world, tactical situations on the battlefield still require infantrymen to move by foot quickly from one area to another—in order to launch an attack or halt an enemy onslaught.

American soldiers must be able to cross virtually any type ground—whether it is swamp, desert, mountain, or plain—and road marches and speed marches are an important part of every soldier's basic training.

Therefore, foot care is all-important to the Army. It begins even before a soldier arrives in camp to report for duty. His feet are given a careful examination when he receives his pre-induction physical check-up. Upon his induction, a thorough physical examination will show up any defects his feet may have—and, if any are noted, he may be placed in a special category to receive less rigorous training than that given to new trainees.

Each soldier is assured of a perfect fit when his Army shoes are issued to him, and authorities agree that Army shoes offer a maximum of protection and comfort. During his training, a soldier's feet are inspected daily and foot care is emphasized at all levels of command, from the squad leader up. Frequent bathing, sock changing, and inspection are "musts" in all Army units.

Foot trouble is at an all-time low in the Army today, and the number of march fractures—dislocation of bone brought about by prolonged walking—is small. A study at Fort Ord, Calif., showed only 91 cases out of 107,544 men in training during 1951—less than one-tenth of one per cent.

While march fractures do not constitute a serious problem from the stand-point of long-term disability, the Army Medical Service is interested in reducing even further the march fracture incidence. It is encouraging research such as that conducted at the California post by Lt. Col. Francis D. Threadgill.

Marches are a part of all basic training at Army posts in the United States, and most are speed marches—a common movement of infantrymen on an actual battlefield. These usually are two or three miles, and the speed of march is approximately two and one-half miles per hour. Long marches—25 or 30 miles—no longer are a part of Army training and would not be attempted on an actual battlefield unless it was an absolute necessity.

While road marches serve to train troops in quick movements by foot, they also serve to add to soldiers' physical conditioning, a gradual hardening process which takes into consideration the fact that few men coming into the Army have had the advantage of enough outdoor exercise to put them in top-notch physical condition.

Even the atomic scientists have not been able to eliminate the infantryman yet, and as long as he is necessary to win battles he is going to have to walk—and put his two "best feet" forward.

Announce New CO For Sacramento Signal Depot

Colonel Storbraaten

Colonel Sidney N. Storbraaten will assume command of the Sacramento Signal Depot upon the retirement of Colonel Floyd T. Gillespie in September.

A native of Otsego, Wisconsin, Colonel Storbraaten enlisted in the Army at Jefferson Barracks, Missouri, in 1920 and was commissioned a 2nd Lieutenant in the Reserve in June 1928.

Prior to being assigned to the Sacramento Signal Depot the Colonel was the Deputy Chief and Chief of Special Projects, Production and Requirements Directorate, Munitions Board, Office of the Secretary of the Defense.

Colonel Storbraaten is a graduate of the Signal Corps Wire Communications School and the Industrial College of the Armed Forces. He holds the Good Conduct Medal, American Theatre Medal, American Defense Medal with one star, WWII Victory Ribbon, Korean Occupation Ribbon and the Army Commendation Ribbon.

Tower Nine Raps Letterman Lakers In City Game

Letterman's Lakers suffered their first defeat in the Class "B" City Softball League when they tangled with a strong Tower team and ended up on the short end of a 2-1 score.

Ed Amons, Lettermanite pitcher, hurled a three hitter, one a hot liner over first base to bring in the Tower team's only two runs.

The Lakers were held to their lowest hitting performance of the season. Hurst with three hits and Trevino with two were the only locals to get anywhere on the slants of the opposition.

Saturday afternoon the Letterman club will leave for the Sixth Army Southern Division Finals at Fort Ord, in high hopes of copping a trophy to add to the already filled trophy case in the Letterman Administration building.

People are most grateful for what others do if they do it spontaneously and not as a sacrifice.

New Memo Clarifies ORC, NG Obligated Service Rule

Clarification of the eight-year service obligation for enlisted members of the National Guard and Organized Reserve Corps under the Universal Military Training and Service Act has been made by Headquarters Sixth Army in answer to the numerous inquiries received from personnel completing active duty within the next few months.

Medal Winners Will Headline TV Show

Eleven of the Army's 13 living Medal of Honor winners in the Korean hostilities will appear on the All-Star Summer Review, a nation-wide NBC-TV show originating in New York. The live broadcast will take place on Saturday, 30 August at 5 p. m. PDST but will be shown a week later in the Bay Area on KRON-TV on Saturday, 6 September at 5 p. m.

Among those to participate in the program will be Captain Raymond Harvey, Infantry, of Fort MacArthur; M/Sgt. Ernest R. Kouma, Armor of Camp Irwin; and Mr. Rodolfo Hernandez, of Fresno, former Infantry Corporal, who is convalescing after a recent serious operation at Letterman Army Hospital.

This show is being sponsored by the Pet Milk Company in the interest of the Army and its reserve program.

New Sixth Army Surgeon Reports To Assignment

Colonel Reuel Hewitt

Colonel Reuel E. Hewitt assumed the duties of Sixth Army Surgeon this week at Headquarters Sixth Army, Presidio of San Francisco. He came to the Presidio from Louisville, Ky., where he was Commanding Officer of the Louisville Medical Depot.

A native of Iowa, Colonel Hewitt attended the University of Iowa and as a reserve officer was called to active duty with the Army in July 1925, serving as an intern at William Beaumont Army Hospital, Ft. Bliss, Texas. He was commissioned in the Regular Army in 1926.

Prior to World War II, Colonel Hewitt was stationed at various hospitals in the United States and did a two-year tour in the Philippines. He also attended the Army Industrial College in 1938.

Colonel Hewitt served in the Office of the Surgeon General during World War II. In May 1946 he went to Japan where he was I Corps Surgeon from October 1946 until March 1948. He became Eighth Army Surgeon in May 1948 serving until June 1949 when he returned to the United States.

He holds the Legion of Merit.

Colonel Hewitt replaces Colonel Rollin L. Bauchspies, who was recently ordered to the Far East Command.

A member of the National Guard does not have to serve the eight years of obligated service if he is called to active duty either as a member of a National Guard unit or as an individual.

If a Guardsman is inducted or if he enlisted in the Regular Army before the age of 26 and on or after 19 June 1951, the date of the UMT&S Act, he loses his National Guard status and does incur the eight-year service obligation. This obligation will be effective from the date of his enlistment or induction and no prior service will be credited toward the completion of the obligation service.

Both National Guard and Enlisted Reserve Corps Commanders are required to report to the State Director of Selective Service the names of men who do not attend at least 90 per cent of their drills. These men are immediately ordered for pre-induction physicals and are inducted into the Army within a minimum of 21 days and a maximum of 120 days.

Individuals who enlist in the Enlisted Reserve Corps on or after 19 June 1951 and before the age of 26 do incur the eight years of obligated service. If they are inducted after their enlistment in the ERC, or if they enlist in the Regular Army, all service from date of their enlistment in the ERC will be credited towards the eight years.

Members of the ERC who enlisted in the reserves before 19 June 1951 and who have since been ordered to active duty, voluntarily or involuntarily, will not incur the obligation by virtue of their active duty.

Those of the ERC who enlisted or re-enlisted prior to 19 June 1951 and have since been inducted through Selective Service or have enlisted in the Regular Army before their 26th birthday lose their ERC identity and incur the obligation effective from the date of their induction or enlistment in the Regular Army. Prior service may not be credited toward completion of their obligation.

An individual who once incurs a service obligation under the Universal Military Training and Service Act does not incur a new eight-year obligation by reason of any subsequent enlistment, re-enlistment, induction or appointment.

"Streetcar" Named Yun Jea Chul

Streetcars, taxi-cabs, subways and convertibles may sound like strange weapons to bring into the Korean conflict, but men of Company I, 7th Infantry Division, will testify to their effectiveness against the enemy.

A "Streetcar" named Yun Jea Chul, Republic of Korea soldier fighting with the outfit, explained his Army name in this way: The company commander couldn't remember the jaw-breaking names of his ROK soldiers, so he re-christened them after forms of transportation—thus a Streetcar, Taxi-cab, Subway, and Convertible were added to the company roster.

Combat Pay In Effect; Retroactive Payment Delay Due To Record Check

Combat pay may be included in this month's pay for those who performed combat duty last month, but payment due those who served in combat before 1 July 1952 will not be paid for at least several more months, according to Washington reports following the recent approval of the pay regulations.

In making claims for combat duty prior to last month, each individual must file a DD Form 667, whether or not they are in service. These forms are now being printed and are not expected to be available before 15 September.

After claims have been received, they must be checked and verified, which may take up to six months. On the application form the services ask that no inquiries be made until six months have elapsed after first making the claim.

Regulations require that combat units must be designated by the commander-in-chief, Far East or by Army corps and division commanders delegated by him. These units will be named on the first of each month for the preceding month in a general order.

An element or detail of one or more men serving with a combat unit may be eligible for combat pay. To qualify, the members of the element must come under hostile fire for six days in one month—not necessarily consecutive—or for six consecutive days spanning the end of one and the beginning of the next month.

The parent unit from which a detail comes does not become a combat unit by reason of supplying a detail to a combat unit. Likewise, members of a unit designated a combat unit will qualify only if they were present and serving with the unit on the days it came under fire.

The regulation defines the terms "under hostile ground fire," "under hostile fire" and "subject to hostile explosions" as meaning that they were fired on, not merely that they were under the threat of being fired on.

Those who are wounded or injured in action do not have to serve six days in combat but are eligible for combat pay for the month in which they were injured and wounded if this results in hospitalization and for three months thereafter or until they are released from the hospital, whichever is earlier.

The same applies to those missing in action. For those killed in action, combat pay is figured in the death benefit payments.

In determining back pay claims, the headquarters of each service, with the assistance of FECOM, will decide which units qualify as combat units. This will require extensive research and may also slow down processing of claims.

Whether the list of units designated combat units for the period before 1 July 1952, will be made public is not yet known. The general order specifying units entitled to current combat pay may not be made public because of security.

When DD Forms 667, Claim or Combat Pay, are printed, they will be available in orderly rooms and personnel offices for those still in service. For those no longer in service, they may be obtained at local post offices and possibly veterans organizations.

In the case of those still in service whose personnel records are available, that is, who are still in the same enlistment or category during which they saw combat duty—they must fill out the form, give it in duplicate to their commanding officer or personnel officer who will authenticate it and pass it on to the finance officer. The finance officer in turn will send it to the proper finance office—in the case of the Army, the Military Pay Division in Indianapolis, Ind. MPD will return the claim to the finance office with the necessary information to insure payment locally of combat pay claims.

In the case of those serving in a new enlistment or whose records are otherwise not available, the finance officer will send the claim form to the Adjutant General in Washington with a request for a determination of fact. The AG will forward the claim to the Military Pay Division if it is approved for action as in the case of those still in combat term status.

Former members of the services will send their claims direct to the proper office. The proper office is given on the back of the form along with instructions for filling it out.

The right of appeal from eligibility decisions of local commanders or personnel officers is preserved in the regulations. Instruction are given to higher authority (the Adjutant General in the Army) to set up appeals mechanism for back combat pay.

In filling out DD Form 667, members of the armed services claiming back pay should give their unit address for the return of the claim.

Survivors claiming pay of those killed in action or filing the claim for one classed as mentally incompetent should fill in the address of the next-of-kin.

Combat pay amounts to $45 a month for all ranks. Those receiving other extra pay such as medical or dental pay, hazardous duty pay, submarine pay, or flight pay are not eligible for combat pay. However, if a man receives less than $45 a month hazardous duty pay and is eligible for combat pay, he may waive his right to hazardous duty pay and take combat pay instead.

Army Ups 98 Majors, 53 Lieutenant Colonels

Washington (AFPS)—Adhering to its policy of promoting officers in small increments, the Army has announced two more small lists.

The first list contains the names of 98 majors promoted to lieutenant colonel. Of those promoted, 38 are regular Army and 60 are reservists.

The second list contains the names of 53 lieutenant colonels promoted to colonel. Of those promoted, 48 are regular Army, four are reservists and one is a national guardsman.

Oklahoma Fetes Thunderbird Hero As Top Soldier

M/Sgt. William G. Gustafson, a patient at Letterman Army Hospital, was the honor guest of his home town of El Reno, Oklahoma, this week, as a statewide celebration was held in recognition of the 45th (Thunderbird) Infantry Division, a National Guard unit from Oklahoma recalled to active duty.

Governor Johnston Murray of Oklahoma set aside the week of 24 August to honor those members of the division who served in World War II and in Korea. The local VFW Post of El Reno determined that Sergeant Gustafson was the most seriously wounded member of the unit that came from his home town and county and requested that he be their guest of honor.

Sergeant Gustafson, a member of Company "B" of the 179th Infantry Regiment, a part of the 45th Division, was wounded in Korea on 15 March 1952 while he was leading his platoon in an attack on a hill. A land mine exploded shattering his left leg and badly injuring his right leg.

The sergeant's wife, who has been living in San Francisco during his hospitalization here, and his 14-months-old daughter, flew back to El Reno to be with him during the celebration.

Please Put A Bell On That Cat!

Big game hunters from the Presidio looking for the black "catlike" animal reported on the prowl the first of the week at Fort Barry, returned empty-handed from an extensive search Wednesday evening.

First reported on Tuesday, the whatchamacallit animal was believed to have been injured by bullets fired by the initial group of skeptical Military Police who were as surprised as anyone to find something to shoot at. Although believed to have been wounded, the critter escaped and as the Star Presidian went to press was still on the prowl.

Military Police have taken over the dangerous task of tracking down the varmint. However, even CID got in the act, when one of its members reported on Wednesday at 1810 hours having seen a mysterious four-legged, catlike, black, whatchamacallit animal.

As previously requested by the Provost Marshal's office in an article recently published in the Star Presidian: "Won't somebody please put a bell on that pet?"

"Use or Lose" Policy!

Detail Regulations Governing Civilian Employees Leave

Details of the limitations placed on the accumulation of annual leave of civilian employees by Section 401, Independent Offices Appropriation Act of 1953, have been announced by Headquarters Sixth Army.

This act requires that annual leave accrued during any leave year be used by 30 June of the following year or be forfeited on that date. The limitation will become effective on 30 June 1953 for the leave year of 1952.

Provisions of the act are separate and apart from the restrictions on accumulation of annual leave prescribed by the Annual and Sick Leave Act of 1951, which require forfeiture at the end of the leave year—the last full pay period in a calendar year—of any unused annual leave in excess of the maximum accumulation.

Purpose of the two laws is to prevent any further accumulation of annual leave by a civilian employee employed in the continental United States. A maximum accrual already credited to an employee will not be taken away from him unless he himself uses it.

The difference between the "use or lose" provision of the leave act applying to employees with maximum accruals and the new "use or lose" limitation of the Independent Offices Appropriation Act applying to all other employees is that those with maximum accruals must use or lose all leave accrued over that maximum by the end of the last full pay period in the calendar year, while the rest of the employees have until 30 June of the following year to use or lose the current year's accumulation of annual leave.

Under the new provisions, employees may not accumulate annual leave balances which are in excess of the unused balance to their credit at the beginning of the 1952 leave year.

The regulations require that each civilian employee be given an opportunity to use his leave. This will necessitate chiefs of sections, supervisors and employees planning vacation schedules and other periods of leave in order to prevent forfeitures.

Topic

Training of one kind or another is continuous throughout everyone's military career and the necessity for it will be discussed at the Troop Information Conferences of the Presidio during the coming week under the subject title of "Training Saves Lives."

The conference will bring out the fact that a soldier is never too old or too good to stop learning. The skills of war today are so complex that no one is a naturally good soldier and even during combat soldiers may be pulled out of the line to learn some important new skill.

Stress will be given that now—not when the shooting starts—is the time to learn the skill that training gives. In learning how to fight, first by individual training and then teamwork, every subject is "most important" because it is related and affects all the others.

Training cannot be exactly like combat but many combat conditions are closely duplicated. Battle indoctrination courses and maneuvers are examples of realism in training.

One of the main points to be brought out will be: "Training is tough because battle is tougher. Training can save your life."

A water glass is called a tumbler because it recalls the silver drinking cups used in the 17th Century when cups were weighted at the bottom, like a child's toy which can be tipped over but always rights itself.

Sixth Army Equipment Demonstration Readied For State Fair Showing

The Sixth Army Equipment Demonstration Unit is being moved from Building No. 644, Crissy Field Area, to the California State Fair in Sacramento for showing from 28 August through 7 September.

A 40 x 140 overhead tent has been constructed to house units from Chaplain Section, Chemical Section, Engineers Section, Medical Section, Ordnance Section, Quartermaster Section, Signal Section, Special Services, Transportation Section and Troop Information and Education Section.

Two NCOs from each section will be on hand to act as information guides to answer questions and give other pertinent information concerning the equipment units. Security and Safety of the demonstration units will be in the hands of fifteen Military Police from the 505th MP Bn with 1st Lt. Samuel C. Green in charge of troops.

Lieutenant Colonel C. E. Diehl is the Project Officer for Sixth Army and Colonel Harrie E. Hoxie, S-4 officer, has assembled and been responsible for the equipment demonstration. Chief Warrant Officer Louis Epstein is the Property Officer and Captain Edwin T. Fenwick from Fort MacArthur, Calif., is in charge of the equipment demonstration unit while at the State Fair.

Also on their way to the Fair from the Western Anti-Aircraft Command is a composite anti-aircraft battery, 90 MM AA Guns, 40 MM Guns and a 50 caliber quadruple Mount and a large detail of men to explain the intricacies of these guns.

The Equipment Demonstration Unit will be open to the public from 1000 hours in the morning to 2200 hours at night.

A Living Memory!

School days have returned not only for children here on the Presidio but also for boys and girls in Korea. Through the efforts of the members of the 44th Division, enough money was donated for the construction of a high school in Kap-yong, Korea.

This High School is to be in memory of Sgt. Kenneth Kaiser, Jr., who was the first member of the 40th Infantry Division to be killed in action in Korea.

Dog Poisoning May Endanger Children

Two dogs died from poisoning recently on the Presidio with the Medical Laboratory reports indicating that one of the deaths was the result of strychnine.

Although the form of the strychnine was not definitely determined, the laboratory toxicologist stated that all symptoms were parallel to that of a dog dying from a strychnine pellet at Fort Baker a short time ago. This pellet was described as being about the size of a large marble, round in shape, a rough surface, light fudge in color and containing a certain amount of sugar.

Chief concern of Post officials is that a child might find a similar pellet. Anyone having information regarding the pellets is requested to inform Post Headquarters.

Send Claims Forms To WWII POWs For New Benefits

Washington (AFPS) — New claims forms have been mailed to 132,000 ex-POWs of WWII who are eligible for the benefits under Public Law 303. The final date for filing these claims has been set for April 9, 1953, according to the War Claims Commission.

In case of a recent change of address, claimants may obtain forms from regional offices of the Veterans Administration, the American Red Cross, State Departments of Veterans Affairs or through recognized veterans organizations.

A separate claims form has been issued for survivors of deceased ex-POWs. The War Claims Commission also stated that veterans of the Korean campaign are not eligible for the benefits under this law.

Former Presidio WAC Only Woman Awarded DSM

One of the first women ever to receive the Greek Distinguished Service Medal is Cpl. Christine F. Crones of the Japan Logistical Command WAC Detachment, who was stationed at Sixth Army Headquarters, Presidio of San Francisco, prior to going to Japan.

The award was presented to her for services to the Greek expeditionary forces as an interpreter and translator from October, 1950, until January, 1952. She was stationed at the Tokyo Army Hospital, where she interpreted and wrote letters for wounded Greek soldiers returned from Korea.

Corporal Crones was assigned to her job upon a request from the Greek liaison group after she had spent many off-duty hours visiting Greek patients in the hospital.

Presentation of the medal was made by A. Sakellarios, the Defense Minister of Greece.

Corporal Crones is from Los Angeles, Calif., and she has been a member of the Women's Army Corps since 1 November 1948.

"Bread Upon The Water..."

An Army master sergeant in Korea beat a traffic charge by paying the $2 fine—in Korean won.

M/Sgt. Woodrow W. Scheppmann, of Twin Valley, Minn., a 2nd Infantry Division soldier, received a letter from Harrisburg, Pa., requesting that he pay a $2 traffic fine. The sergeant quickly dispatched payment.

Later, a reply came from the Harrisburg Police Department: "We are excusing your violation and are returning your 12,000 won and suggest that you use it for your own personal amusement or charity."

Sergeant Scheppmann chose the latter course, and turned the money over to the division orphanage fund to aid homeless children.

TECHNICAL PERFECTION is necessary in adjusting the lens on the giant Monotype copy camera. Here Sgt. Russel Vickrey, camera section chief, sets the lens

Fort Scott Unit Specializes In Top Quality Five Color Topographic Maps

Producing five color Army topographic maps demanding extreme accuracy and minute attention to detail is the difficult job being done by the 99th Engineer Base Reproduction at Fort Winfield Scott.

As a unit of the 30th Engineer Base Topographic Battalion, the 99th Engineers have printed maps of a multitude of projects in the Pacific, Europe, Alaska and the United States. Their latest assignment from Army Map Service is the reproduction of maps of areas in Switzerland.

During their first month of logging impressions at Fort Scott, the plant turned out 510,000 impressions. This is an enviable record considering the preciseness and time-consuming steps necessary in producing a topographic map. But with new equipment recently added to the plant, Lieutenant George Gallant, Operations Officer, expressed the hope that this total may be surpassed soon.

For maximum efficiency, two 8-hour shifts—35 men to each shift—keep the plant at peak production from 8 a.m. until midnight. At midnight, a graveyard shift goes on duty to prepare the plant for the following day's operations.

"A considerable amount of work is done in support of the 30th Engineers Alaskan and Southern California projects," according to Lt. Gallant, "but the bulk of the work is done in reproducing mapping projects assigned by Army Map Service."

A maze of presses, grainers, and cameras all are part of the production of these vital maps. When the data is received in the operations office it is reviewed, analyzed and sent to the camera section. Here it is photographed by an enormous copy camera under brilliant arc lights. This $20,000 camera is capable of achieving a certain degree of correction as regards scale and dimension if the copy being exposed is faulty. Sgt. Russell Vickrey, camera section-chief, pointed out that the camera transfers the image from the copy onto a glass negative which has already been prepared for exposure. A glass negative is used instead of the usual film because the glass will not stretch or shrink.

Harking back to the early days of photography, a solution is poured over the glass, coating it with an emulsion base. The glass plate is then given a silver nitrate bath rendering it sensitive to light.

After exposure, the background of the glass negative is built up. Next, the glass plate is taken to the layout section where skilled workers deftly retouch and opaque the negative. In this section, the bulk of the effort is put forth as far as time is concerned. Six hours of work by highly specialized personnel on one plate is not unusual.

The bright lights of Broadway are no match for the arc lights of the plate section which transfer the image from the glass negative onto a zinc plate. This plate is also treated before undergoing exposure. It is first grained by the joggling action of hundreds of steel marbles. It is then sensitized by covering the plate with a solution while an appropriately termed "whirler" assures an even coating. A greasy coating is then applied to the plate which will provide the image when the plate is properly washed.

The press room is the next stop. Here, four Webendorfer offset presses and two huge Harris offset presses convert a zinc plate image into readable Army contour maps. The Harris offset press capable of 5,000 impressions an hour is used mostly for large jobs. Valued at $45,000, this press will take a maximum sheet size of 35x45 inches.

FOR LARGE JOBS this Harris offset press is capable of 5,000 impressions an hour, and takes a sheet up to 35 x 45 inches, and is valued at $45,000. Sgt. Vincent Ortiz, foreground, and Sgt. Mario Fontana check mechanical adjustments as the big press goes into production. Four Webendorfer presses are used in turning out the smaller jobs. (Army Photo by Yimm)

Base Reproduction Company Boasts Interesting History

Grain warehouses in Africa, a large underground tunnel in Hawaii, and a barracks at Fort Winfield Scott all have been used as a base of operations by the 99th Engineer Base Reproduction Company.

It was in Affreville, Algeria, in 1944 that the unit used reverse lend-lease grain warehouses from the French. Tent quarters replaced the standard Army barracks and living conditions were far from ideal. Living conditions did not impair the effectiveness of the unit, however, as they produced more than 500 separate large scale maps in support of the push to Rome, the invasion of the Dalmation Coast, the landings in Southern France and the northward march to Lyon.

Just one year later, the 99th, as part of the 30th Engineers, were turning out maps this time in an underground tunnel in Hawaii. The faces of the maps were also new. Now they were working on maps in support of the Pacific campaign; maps and charts of the Japanese held territories. Sgt. William H. Wetjen recalls that all the companies were billeted in one building which was ideally suited for a barracks. Marble floors, well-clipped lawns, fruit trees in abundance and all forms of recreation were all part of an enjoyable tour of duty for Sgt. Wetjen, one of the few men still with the 99th who worked in the reproduction section of the underground tunnel. The tunnel was used for an assembly line of aircraft motors before the 30th Engineers began operations there.

When the 30th Engineers returned to San Francisco and Fort Winfield Scott, a barracks was utilized as the 99th Engineers Reproduction Plant. Heat and humidity were their major headaches in the building now used as the 99th barracks and in 1950 the plant moved into another former warehouse rebuilt by the Post Engineers.

Since that time, heat and humidity controls and new items of equipment have been installed. Major items of equipment used in the plant are valued at $200,000 and the actual worth of the plant is approximately $500,000.

layout section-chief, also relates interesting bits of history of the Reproduction Company. Sgt. Hatch is the only man now with the 99th who was part of the original Company C, the forerunner of the present-day 99th.

In 1941, Sgt. Hatch recalls that the standards of accuracy were not nearly as high as they are now. At that time they were printing maps of Africa in addition to many maps of areas within the United States.

"However, my most fascinating tour of duty was in printing top secret maps in an abandoned harness shop in England," Sgt. Hatch added. "We used boxes, glass plates and anything that was usable for our layout tables. Our press equipment consisted of two old British presses as an enemy submarine had sent the shipload of our machinery down to Davy Jones locker."

From December 1942 until V-E day the "harness shop" plant and later a plant in France tallied 67,806,010 impressions of the Omaha beach and other points used in planning beachhead strategy.

Secret Enemy—Waste!

Army Waging Ceaseless War On Communism's Sixth Column

The Army is waging all-out war against Communism's most effective ally—waste.

Wherever U. S. soldiers are stationed, they are hearing a never-ending sermon that stresses economy in the three M's—money, material, and manpower.

American soldiers are confident that Communist armies cannot defeat them on the field of battle, but until recently few realized that wasted dollars also could destroy America's military might.

Frugal by nature and by choice, most U.S. citizen soldiers are taking pride in finding new ways to do things better and cheaper—and at the same time curbing the drain on the Treasury that they help fill. The result has been a flood of suggestions and inventions, ranging from a cheaper way to slice bacon to an equipment re-building program that has saved billions of dollars.

During the past 12 months, the Army has received from its soldiers and employes more than 38,000 suggestions as to how to save money. Of these, 6,700 have been adopted and they have resulted in a first-year savings alone of more than $7,000,000 (M).

Every person in the Army, from five-star general down to buck private, is being affected by programs designed to cut costs and increase efficiency. To calculate the exact savings made during the past year is impossible, but had the cost-consciousness program not been in effect and vigorously pursued, the Army would have required several billion more dollars in order to fight the battles of Korea and improve its state of readiness.

Economy is a part of the Army's basic training program, and the subject is preached in every training program throughout a soldier's or officer's career. "Take care of your equipment—throw away nothing," are typical of the phrases a soldier hears from the time he enters the Army until the day he leaves it.

One of the most effective methods used to bring home to soldiers the cost of the weapons and equipment they use is the tag system. At various times, everything from rifles and bayonets up to 48-ton tanks are price-tagged. Then the soldier sees for himself exactly what it costs. While he knew all along that weapons are expensive, he usually finds that his M-1 rifle is much more expensive than the shotgun he used to carry on bird-hunting expeditions. In the back of his mind always is the thought that he, as a taxpayer, helped buy it.

Lectures, cartoons, posters, billboards, camp newspapers, camp radios, and other media constantly remind him that he and his folks at home are footing the bill for America's defense against Communism. In combat zones particularly, soldiers realize the truth of the daily reminders they hear—supply economy may be the key to success or failure in battle.

Commanders and staff officers also come in for a big share of the economy campaign, for they control the use of supplies and equipment.

The Army is fighting the war against waste with enthusiasm.

(By Armed Forces Press Service) Sex Queen!—

It took Hollywood 14 years and a couple of million dollars to find a successor to Jean Harlow, who melted movie celluloid from 1927 to 1937. The search ended recently when Marilyn Monroe took over the title of filmland's Queen of Sex Appeal. Like Jean Harlow, she is blonde, buxom, curvesome and a show-stopper in blue denim trousers, a gunny sack or a low cut evening gown. Also, like Jean Harlow, she is happiest wearing as few clothes as the law will allow—a sort of "best undressed" star complex. Another reason she has lassoed so much publicity are intimate comments like: "What do I wear when I go to bed? I wear Chanel No. 5." When asked what she thought of sex, she flipped, "I've never given it a second thought."

Army War Dogs Protect U.S. Property From Kum Shaw

War dogs—the Army's walking burglar alarms—are pounding important beats in Japan.

Trained as a one-man dog, "man's best friend" assumes the role of man's worst enemy as he walks sentry duty with the guard protecting property stored in warehouses at Kobe, Japan.

The canine sleuths—72 German Shepherd police dogs stationed at Camp Kobe's War Dog detachment—walk their beats with grim determination in a vigil to deter thieves in the night.

Working the night shift on a day-on, day-off schedule, these roaming sentries guard Uncle Sam's property from five p.m. until eight a.m. against all unauthorized intruders.

Eagerly awaited by these nighttime operators is the three-pound repast—their individual reward for a night's work well done.

To keep in shape, the canine policemen engage in a physical fitness program jumping hurdles, practicing commands and other exercises. A daily run in the fields near the detachment area provides the relaxation needed to break the strain of keeping constantly on the alert.

Many of the dogs now at the detachment are combat veterans rotated from scouting duty in Korea.

Kobe's police dog operation—the largest dog detachment in Japan—has been in operation since April, 1949.

Leg-o-genic

The Society of Illustrators' newly-formed Committee on Anatomical Nomenclature announced that a new word has been coined to describe comely legs—"Leg-o-genic." At ceremonies held in New York, Monica Lewis (above), talented young actress and singer, was chosen as "the most leg-o-genic girl in America."

Resort to Teach Cooks How to Brew Borscht

South Fallsburg, N. Y. (AFPS)—The serviceman may soon be getting an ancient exotic dish added to his chow—and its name is "borscht."

The Army has arranged to give a few of its trainee cooks a post-graduate course at a summer resort hotel here. They'll study the preparation of borscht and other foreign dishes under a renowned European chef.

(Editor's Note: "Borscht," according to Webster, is "a soup of several ingredients, colored with red beet juices.")

Raiders Break Even Again On Diamond; Win One - Lose One

This week, Presidio warmed up to take a 11-6 tally over Camp San Luis Obispo here on the home field. Sembiente pitched excellent ball for the Raiders up through the sixth, but tired and had to yield to relief hurler, Tardo, who completed the brilliant pitching for the day.

Sherrill, local first sacker, started a big six run, fifth inning rally with a double to left field.

Mortensen, Silva, Lemon and Potts, all old reliables, collected two hits apiece.

Right fielder Wright has returned to the lineup and should bolster the hitting in coming games.

On Saturday, 23 August, the hot and cold locals were running at low tide again after a 9-6 defeat at the hands of the San Francisco Marines.

A second inning rally saw the Presidio nine in the lead, but through faulty fielding from there on in, were unable to hold the Leathernecks.

Bieck, Marine left fielder, uncorked a hot hitting siege, getting four for four, three of them doubles, against losing pitcher Tardo.

Presidio third baseman, Roy, rapped two for four, the only local to maintain a .500 batting average.

Shoulders A Mean Stick!

Lemon Continues Slugfest As Red Raiders Dub Tough Ukiah

A tough Presidio baseball nine defeated an equally tough Ukiah, California team, 4-1, last week in a close batting duel that saw John Lemon, local third sacker, continue to pulverize the horsehide.

Lemon's two hits for four times at bat served to maintain his above .500 batting average. In the past eight games, Lemon has rapped 17 hits for 33 times up, picking up 12 runs during the stretch.

Stupur was back in the fold after a brief rest, creating his usual havoc with sixteen strikeouts, nothing new for the Presidio fireball who has fanned as many as 22 in a single game.

Potts, always a threat at the plate and another top contender for batting honors, batted in two of the runs with Viviani and Smith bringing in the other two.

Ukiah's lone run in the sixth as unearned.

Season, Bag Limit Increased for Duck Hunters

As announced by Oscar Chapman, secretary of the interior, this week, California duck hunters will get a 10 day extension on the normal waterfowl season and a two duck increase in daily bag limit.

Pacific flyway states will get a straight 70-day season starting 24 October and ending 1 January in California, Arizona and Oregon, and from 17 October to 25 December in Utah, Nevada and Washington.

Daily bag and possession limit remains at six, with two widgeons or two pintails or one of each added to the daily bag.

A considerable increase in migratory birds over the Pacific flyway, has been predicted by Albert Day, director of Fish and Wildlife Service.

Daily hunting hours will run from one half hour before sunrise to one hour before sunset except on opening day when the shooting starts at noon.

Aubrey Springer filled his 1950 big game quota in a half hour near Craig, Colorado, October 15, when he consecutively shot a 600 pound bear, a 700 pound elk which came in sight while he was skinning the bear, and finally a seven-point buck deer. All the game was bagged within 200 yards of his truck.

The American track record for the 25 mile run is two hours 44 minutes and 50 seconds set in 1909.

Over a million dollars was raised to send the United States Olympic Team to the World Games in Helsinki this summer. Television and radio, to name only a few, played a major role in getting contributions to support the good will ambassadors, but did not account for all of the total sum. G I Joe and his buddies from the U. S. Eighth Army in Korea took brief leave from the bloody ridge fighting and came down long enough to drop $36,611 into the kitty, then returned and faced the enemy while their fellow athletes made a clean, justifiable sweep in the symbol event of free world competition. Requests for funds were not pressed by the Army, but, as in this case, many units and installations came through with sizeable sums.

Local sporting competition is now, and will be within the next two weeks, under fire and challenge from all directions.

Up north, Master Sergeant George DeRosia and Corporals Bill Rowe and Leland Lewis, from Presidio and Letterman respectively, are vying for all Sixth Army golf honors on the Fort Lewis links.

To the south, at Fort Ord, four teams—WACS, 102 MRU, Letterman's Lakers and 47th AAA Brigade are out to beat Southern Division's best diamond crews for a berth to the Sixth Army Softball Tourney here at the Presidio, 8-13 September.

Presidio WACs softball nine will journey eastward to participate in the California Women's Tournament, 5-7 September at Napa.

And to the west—well, besides water, there soon will be large flights of ducks coming down the Pacific flyway, pitting their speed and maneuverability against any Presidio hunter who dares enter the man versus fowl contest. Incidentally, full details and dates have not yet been announced concerning the migratory bird hunting, but according to wildlife experts, there will be a considerable increase in ducks this year and two 35-day seasons are a probability.

Some of the essential qualities that help net gridiron success for any football club are: (1) material, (2) competent coaches, (3) practice, (4) a little thing called "spirit." While the first three are usually present at the outset of each season, spirit normally has to be injected by the coaches and people behind the team. Some teams never have spirit and likewise, never win.

Corporals Gaspar Perricone and Bob Ottoson, Red Raider backfield and line mentors, a couple of boys who have kicked around on some big gridirons, strongly emphasize in every interview "an unusually high amount of spirit within the team for this early in the season." Very unique. From here on in, the season's success will be measured almost totally by the will to win.

Much comment has been voiced lately concerning art on the sports pages. Most of the sporting pictures are taken by Private First Class Kenneth Yimm, a Gillette Pictorial staffer.

Pfc. Yimm has been lensing around the Presidio for some 20 months and has quite a name as an "aggressive reliable photographer." For newspaper reproduction, prints have to be exceptionally sharp with a definite black and white contrast and Yimm is quite an expert at achieving that effect.

Hot Ord Nine Still In Wichita Tourney

Fort Ord's hot baseball team, previously rated a top contender at the National Non-Professional Baseball Congress, Wichita, Kansas, cooled last week, victims of a second round defeat, but retaliated to gain a third round victory this week.

In a tight 1-0 game, Ord gave way to Fort Leonard Wood, Missouri State Champions. A 7-2 win over Crossville, Tennessee's champion nine, this week brought their standings to two games for three.

Earlier in the tourney, the California Champs went into the second round by defeating Camp Lejeune Marines, North Carolina titlists by a 9-3 tally.

Every state is represented in the annual event.

Local Football Team Passes In Review In Profile Series

It looks like a big year for Presidio's Red Raider Football team. The club is big, quick and experienced. Your grid machine will pass in review throughout the coming weeks as the Presidian presents football profiles, a brief rundown on each man and an idea of what can be expected from him in the days ahead.

In this, the first in the series, the bulk of the local forward wall is represented:

Holding up the middle of the line as offensive center is Corporal Matthew Piccini, Battery "D," 459 AAA AW (SNBL), a swarthy 210 pounder from Newark, New Jersey.

Piccini rocked Newark East Side High School's opponents for three years as a lineman and then went to University of Nevada, playing first string ball for two years, '44 and '45.

His well-rounded football education is topped off with one year of first string army ball at Camp Edwards last season.

Private First Class Frank Karls, Company "B," 505 MP Battalion, is slated for an offensive right tackle slot.

Weighing 220 pounds and in his football prime at 20 years of age, Karls hails from Seattle, Washington.

For three years he helped anchor Seattle's Ballard High School line as a member of the first team.

Although this is his first year of rough and tough Army ball, this big, tough lad from Washington will be no soft touch for Presidio's opponents.

Corporal William Burtchaell, Battery "D," 718th AAA Gun Battalion, will be shouldering the load alongside Karls in the right side of the offensive line this year.

Burtchaell, a 210 pound dynamo from New Orleans, Louisiana, is familiar with football in every form.

After completing four years of high school grid duty with Holy Cross, he went on to cap a year with the Texas A & M frosh team in 1950.

In this, his first year of Army ball, Burtchaell will be a key figure on the Presidio eleven.

Over on the left side of the offensive line, Private First Class Leonard Hoaglund, Detachment "A," 6002 ASU, holds down the tackle position.

A Hurculean 225-pound Rocky Mountain product from Minturn, Colorado, Hoaglund is no newcomer to Army football. He played half of the 1950 season with Fort Ord's powerhouse.

Hoaglund played three years for Minturn and one year for Grand

Scott Engineers Survive 1st Round Softball Play

As the Star Presidian goes to press, last minute results from first round play at the Southern Division Softball Tourney, Fort Ord, were made available.

At the end of first day competition:

Company "A," 95th Heavy Tank Battalion, Camp Roberts, defeated Fort Baker, 15-2.

Camp Stoneman defeated United States Disciplinary Barracks, Lompoc, 5-3.

Fort Scott's 21st Engineers defeated 51st Field Artillery Battalion, Fort Ord, (score unknown).

Camp Cooke's 44th Infantry defeated 837th Signal, San Luis Obispo, 2-1.

Medical Detachment, Camp Cooke, defeated 15th Signal, San Luis Obispo, 13-3.

Fort Ord's 20th Infantry defeated Fort Huachuca, 5-1.

Since 1940, USC has won the Pacific Coast Football Conference four times, UCLA, Stanford and California twice each and Oregon and Oregon State once each.

Junction High School before going on to a season of college play with University of Utah.

With plenty of pigskin experience behind, Hoaglund is ripe for an outstanding season with the local Red and White.

TWO MORE Raider toughies are (l. to r.), Billy Burtchall, right guard, and Leonard Hoagland, left tackle. Both men are expected to be Raider mainstays in the rugged schedule ahead. Alameda's vaunted Hellcats are first on the list and could prove a major obstacle.

Tournament Plans!

Special Services Outlines Plans For Sixth Army Baseball Play

Schedules for the Sixth Army Baseball Tournaments have been set with Southern and Northern Division qualification finals running from 7-13 September.

Teams representing installations from Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana will meet for Northern Division play at Madigan Army Hospital, Tacoma, Washington.

Southern Division teams representing California, Arizona, Utah and Nevada will participate at Camp Stoneman, Pittsburg, California, on dates indicated.

Winning and runner-up teams in the two tourneys will compete in the All Sixth Army Tournament to be held at Camp Stoneman, 23-27 September.

As outlined in a recent Sixth Army memorandum, "teams will not be strengthened through personnel transfers." Team rosters must be certified by appropriate commanders to the effect that teams entered in preliminary and championship play have not been reinforced by selection of individuals from other than the parent organization.

Teams are limited to sixteen members including coach and/or manager.

Both preliminary and championship events will be conducted as double elimination tournaments.

All play will be governed by official 1952 National League Baseball rules.

Sixth Army's Welfare Fund will provide suitable trophies and individual awards for presentation at the championship tournament.

21st Soltechs Win Scott Intra-mural Basketball Title

Sporting a 6-0 won-lost record, the 21st Soltechs easily grabbed championship honors in the Fort Scott Round-Robin Basketball Tournament after trouncing the 21st Deuces in the final night of play.

Since the first round of hard-court play the 21st Soltechs moved into first place and made it apparent that they intended to stay there. The 99th 99'ers without a victory to that date, can rightfully say that they gave the champions their stiffest competition. Fighting bitterly the 99'ers lost one contest to the Soltechs 40-35 after matching them basket for basket throughout the game. Again a week later it looked as though Headquarters Lakers might upset the powerful 21st quintet. But a third quarter rally staved off the revenge-bound Lakers still reeling from their 55-22 defeat by the Soltechs.

This is how the teams lined up after the final game of the tournament Wednesday night:

21st Soltechs	6	0	1.000
Hqtrs. Lakers	3	3	.500
21st Deuces	2	4	.333
99th 99'ers	1	5	.166

The Fort Scott tournament has served as an excellent pre-season warm up for the topo teams. When the Presidio Post League gets underway in the near future, the Engineer squads should be playing smooth basketball. With six games behind their backs, each squad has developed team coordination, sharpened their offense and defense and are hitting the net consistently.

Hartman Gooseggs Ord As Scottmen Climb Softball Rung

Les Hartman twirled a shutout this week for the 21st Engineers of Fort Winfield Scott to put his team in the second round of the Southern Division of the Sixth Army Softball Tournament at Fort Ord.

For six and two-thirds innings Hartman had a no-hitter going at the expense of the 51st Field Artillery Battalion team of Fort Ord. But in the sixth frame his rival moundsman, Eddie Jackson, rapped a single to left for the only bingle by the Fort Ord nine.

In the second round the Engineers meet the Heavy Tank Battalion softballers from Camp Roberts. Each game is vital in this 17 team tournament as it is played on a sudden-death basis. One defeat throws a team out of tournament play.

BATTLE RAGES in the Sonoran Desert near Olgy, Calif., as mock war is staged by the Army Quartermaster Corps Desert Test Team to study the effect of dry-hot climate on troops. A group of 19 officers and men are making tests of new equipment, uniforms and weapons while engaging in typical military activities during raging wind and dust storms with temperatures often soaring to 123 degrees. Six of the soldiers were test subjects in the Far North last winter and their reactions to the dry-hot environment will be combined with data covering reactions to the winter tests.

Desert Warfare!

Sonoran Desert Is Test Site For New Army Equipment

Mock warfare has been staged on the sand dunes of the Sonoran Desert in southeastern California by a group of officers and men of the Army Quartermaster Corps to test new equipment, uniforms and weapons during typical military activities in desert weather conditions.

NEW UNIFORM designed for use in a dry-hot climate is worn by Capt. Ronald A. Milton at the Yuma Test Station, Arizona, where extensive tests are being made in the open desert. The hot weather uniform includes a new type shoe and bandana type kerchief. Comparison will be made of the reactions of men wearing standard uniforms with those wearing the new-type experimental ones.

With temperatures sometimes as high as 123 degrees, members of the QM's desert test team turned the wastelands into a battleground and carried out their attacks to assimilate war conditions as nearly as possible.

Features of the uniforms being tested for hot weather conditions include new type shoes and bandana type kerchiefs. Reactions of men wearing the proposed uniforms are compared with those of the men wearing standard uniforms.

The team is also testing the effect on the men of wearing the newly developed nylon body armor, which has been used successfully in Korea. Reaction of the men wearing this armor in the intense heat is being carefully studied.

Six members of the test team participated in cold weather tests conducted last winter in the Far North. Their reactions to the dry-hot environment will be combined with the results obtained under the dry-cold conditions.

The team is stationed at the Yuma Test Station and have been making their tests on the desert near Olgy, California.

Columbia Picture Stars Army Aviation

Columbia Pictures will send camera crews to Korea this week to film background scenes for their forthcoming film "Flying Jeeps," a semi-documentary of Army Aviation's role in the current struggle to halt Communist aggression.

One of Sixth Army's veteran helicopter pilots, Capt. T. F. Hopkins, will act as the picture's technical advisor when the studio phases of the picture come under the cameras. Now assigned to the 30th Engineers Base Topographic Battalion, Capt. Hopkins has flown the versatile eggbeaters in both Alaska and Korea. He is also a veteran of WWII.

Starring roles in the picture have not been announced to date, and there is some talk that the current title may not be satisfactory. Originally the film was slated for earlier production but first rushes failed to live up to expectations.

Sixth Army Bands Aid Fair Festivities

Concerts by the Sixth Army Band and the Bagpipe Band are on the agenda of the California State Fair in Sacramento.

Members of the Sixth Army Band left today and will entertain daily at the Fair until 3 September, at which time they will return home.

Upon their return the Bagpipe Band hops a bus for Sacramento and does not return to the Presidio until 7 September.

"Tiger" Div. Reunion

To mark its anniversary, the 10th Armored Division will hold its first national reunion on 30 August and 1 September at the Park Sheraton Hotel, New York City.

The "Tiger" Division was activated at Fort Benning, Georgia, in 1942, and found in the European Theater during World War II.

New Servicewomen Join In Operation Partnership Drive

Thirty-five young women from the San Francisco Recruiting Main Station Area who enlisted in the Army and Air Force during the recently concluded enlistment drive were honored in San Francisco on Thursday, 28 August. This enlistment drive, termed "Operation Partnership," got its name from the arrangements made whereby recruits from this area will travel to their first station and go through basic training as a unit rather than individually.

The future servicewomen were presented with corsages and sworn into the service at the USA & USAF Recruiting Main Station, 30 Van Ness Ave., by Lt. Colonel Beryl Simpson, WAC/WAF Recruiting Officer for Sixth Army. Following the swearing-in ceremonies, the enlistees were saluted by Lionel Hampton's orchestra at the Paramount Theater, where they were guests of the theater.

In the evening the girls had their first Army "chow." They were present at a dinner prepared by the Sixth Army Food Service School and at that time were presented with various gifts from merchants in San Francisco. Immediately following the dinner the "Operation Partnership" enlistees attended the stage-show Jollyanna.

Today found the new enlistees in the Women's Army Corps leaving by plane for Fort Lee, Virginia and the future WAFs on their way to Lackland Air Force Base, Texas, by plane.

"There Is Something About A Soldier!"

The Army's 3007th Station Complement, Organized Reserve Corps, of Birmingham, Ala., boasts three very salty soldiers—all ex-Navy chief petty officers.

The beached sailors, who swapped their swabs for stripes, are M/Sgt. James E. Powell, of 6918 Grassellie Rd.; M/Sgt. Carl C. Tidmore, of 604 8th Ave. W.; and M/Sgt. William J. Lee, of 6914 Grassellie Rd., all of Birmingham.

Powell said he switched to the Army out of curiosity—"to see how the other half lives."

So far, agree the three new landlubbers, everything is ship-shape in the Army.

20th Infantry Announces Plans For First Organization Day

All former members of the 20th Infantry Regiment of the Sixth Division have been invited to participate in the Regiment's first Organization Day to be held 21 September at Fort Ord. An open invitation has also been extended to the friends and relatives of the 3,000 soldiers of the 20th now stationed at Fort Ord.

"We hope this Organization Day will serve to acquaint our visitors with the historic traditions of one of the nation's oldest combat regiments," states Lt. Col. Maurice C. Holden, commanding officer of the 20th Infantry.

Activities of the day will begin with church services in the morning followed by a tour of the area. Weapons and equipment will be displayed.

The regiment will parade for the guests just before noon. During this ceremony presentations will be made of many awards, some of which date back several years. Individual companies will be hosts of a chicken barbecue to be held in the picnic area following the parade.

In the afternoon Lt. Col. Holden will officially welcome the visitors at Ord Stadium. His address will be followed by a program that will include demonstrations in drill and physical training proficiency.

History of the 20th goes back to the 2nd Battalion of the 11th Infantry, organized by direction of President Lincoln in 1861 and redesignated as the 20th Infantry Regiment on 28 July 1866. As the 11th the unit became part of General Sykes Division of regulars and participated in many famous actions of the Civil War.

The regiment took an active part in the development of the West. It afforded protection to the settlers and homesteaders and formed part of General Custer's expedition into the Black Hills in 1874.

After participating in the Spanish American War, the 20th went to the Philippines three times from 1899 to 1912. While not actually serving as a unit in Europe during World War I, the 20th provided cadres for many units. When the Armistice was signed, an advance party of the 20th had sailed for Europe and the rest of the regiment was to have left shortly.

From the end of WWI to the reactivation of the 6th Infantry Division in 1939, men of the 20th saw duty at posts all over the states. During the Mexican Revolution of 1929 the regiment was sent to the border as a security force.

During World War II, the 20th gained distinction and honor on the far flung battlefronts of the Pacific.

PRESIDIO OF SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA

Under-evaluation of the disciplinary policies of the American soldiers by the communist prisoners of war was one of the greatest difficulties encountered in restoring order to the prisoner-of-war camp on Koje Island, Major General Haydon L. Boatner stated when he visited the Presidio of San Francisco this week.

General Boatner stopped here briefly enroute from the Far East Command to San Antonio, Tex., and his new assignment as Deputy Commander of the Fourth Army with Headquarters at Fort Sam Houston. In May he took over command of the Koje camp and later was commander of all United Nations prisoner-of-war camps in Korea.

"The Oriental soldier especially goes in for more spit and polish than do American troops, even to the extent of the old-fashioned goosestepping," he explained. "This results in their mistaking the informality of our soldier and their seeming lax type of discipline for weakness."

Trained in the "spit and polish" school, this informality of American troops inspires them to challenge our authority, the general said. This is shown in the prisoners "harassing" our men in an attempt to see just how far they can go.

"To overcome this," stated Boatner, "we've had to have special drills for escorting honey bucket details, escorting prisoners on motor convoys and that type of work." He also said it was necessary to impress upon the guards the importance of the prisoners' reaction to their appearance and discipline.

"Organized mutiny of communist prisoners of war on Koje Island was broken when United States troops went into Compound 76 on 10 June," declared Boatner. "While the initial riots were definitely organized, the incidents since then have not been."

To break up this organization, the Koje camp was divided into eight compounds holding 500 prisoners each. At one time as many as 6,000 prisoners had been in the single enclosure. All the compounds are separated from the others by double wire fences and the entire enclosure is double fenced.

"With these smaller, separate compounds it is possible to break up any disturbance," said the general. "If any trouble occurs, we can redistribute the prisoners to different compounds and keep shifting them if necessary."

He said he didn't want to comment too favorably on the present prisoner-of-war situation on Koje and elsewhere, "in deference to my successor (Colonel C. V. Caldwell, former Provost Marshal of the Sixth Army here)."

General Boatner arrived from FECOM at midafternoon Tuesday at Travis Air Force Base where he was greeted by Air Force officials and Lt. L. R. Stanley, representing the Sixth Army Commander, Lieutenant General Joseph M. Swing.

Flown to Hamilton Air Force Base, the general was driven to the Presidio where he visited until leaving by commercial airliner for San Antonio shortly after midnight.

In San Antonio he will be met by his wife and daughter. Their son, Lt. James G. Boatner, is now in combat in Korea with the 2nd Division.

General Boatner was accompanied by his aide, Warrant Officer Robert B. Mills, who served with the general in Korea with the 2nd Division and at Koje.

DOD Urges Servicemen To Utilize Voting Card

Washington — The Defense Department has issued an announcement urging all servicemen and women overseas to utilize their Federal voting postcard, if they are eligible to vote in their state.

They received the postcard 15 August. It is to be used to apply for absentee ballots for voting in the 4 November elections. It cannot be used, however, for applying for ballots in the states of Florida, Indiana, Montana and Utah.

Voting officers in all Services are available to answer further inquiries. Personnel in the ZI will receive their postcard on or about 15 September.

Sage Advice!

Old China Hand Has Some Sharp Tips For Today's Soldier

Returning to the United States from Korea, Major General Haydon L. Boatner declared upon his arrival at Travis Air Force Base Tuesday that of the eleven years he has spent in the Orient, "the first ten were the hardest."

While the general may have termed his first ten the most difficult, his eleventh year was far from uneventful for during the past year General Boatner served with the 2d Division in the "Heartbreak Ridge" area, successfully quelled the riots at the prisoner-of-war camp on Koje Island and was Commander of all United Nations POW camps in Korea.

A graduate of West Point in the class of 1924, Boatner first went to the Orient in 1929 and the following year became a language student at the California College of Chinese Studies at Tientsin, where he received his M.A. degree in Chinese in 1934.

In command of a mounted patrol when the Japanese, having invaded Manchuria in 1931, moved into north China, he led his men into the thick of the trouble, trying to protect American citizens and American lives. He was sent on missions into the interior, to search out the sources of illegal opium and report on the operations of Chinese bandits.

He returned to the United States in 1934 for duty with the 30th Infantry at the Presidio of San Francisco. When the United States entered World War II, Boatner was an assistant in the Chinese Unit of the Defense Aid Section of the War Department General Staff.

He returned to Asia in February, 1942, to become, under General Stillwell, the Chief of Staff of the Chinese Training Project at Ramgarh, India, and in 1943 was made Chief of Staff of the Chinese Army in India.

Meanwhile, operating from what has been described as "a fantastic headquarters hidden away in a bamboo forest," he converted 60,000 "demoralized" Chinese troops into an efficient combat force. In November, 1943, Boatner-trained Chinese drove the Japanese from the upper Hukwang Valley in northern Burma and from the vicinity of the Ledo road in fighting which Boatner compared to Indian warfare of early American history.

During the final weeks of the war General Boatner was the deputy commander of the Chinese Combat Command and was seated with General Hsiao Yu-shu in the August, 1945, conference to arrange for the surrender of Japanese troops in China.

Returning to the United States in 1946, he remained here until going to the Far East Command in August, 1951.

Based on his ten years throughout the Orient and his past year in Korea, General Boatner had a warning and some advice for American soldiers which he expressed during his brief visit to the Presidio.

His warning was: "It is a fatal mistake to underestimate the communist troops."

His advice was: "The most important thing a soldier has to learn is the use of cover and concealment and proficiency with his weapons."

"While it is true that fighting in Korea is greatly decreased, our companies and battalions still become heavily engaged," he said. "In these incidents, the dispersion of our troops and use of cover reduce the casualties, especially from mortar fire, which accounts for much more than 50 per cent of our casualties."

"The only foxhole that is safe is the one that is dug midway between Korea and Brooklyn."

He termed the morale of the troops in Korea as splendid and that the closer to the front, the better it was. "It is an inspiration for old soldiers like myself," he stated. "There's nothing wrong with the younger generation that I can see."

He also had high praise for the food and clothing being supplied our troops in Korea.

Stating that the rotation system is really working, he said: "You have an example here. My driver today is Cpl. Floyd C. Johnson, who formerly served in Company 'E' of my old division, the 23rd Infantry. He got hit on Heartbreak Ridge. He did his duty, but is happy to be in California."

"No one pretends to like Korea," the general commented in conclusion, "but many, many thousands are doing their duty willingly."

Former 6th Army Provost Marshal New POW Chief

Colonel Carol V. Caldwell, who has been named commander of the United Nations prisoner-of-war camps in Korea upon the reassignment of Major General Haydon L. Boatner, was Provost Marshal of the Sixth Army Headquarters at the Presidio from September, 1947, until his departure for the Far East Command in July, 1951.

His assignment to the Sixth Army Headquarters was his second tour of duty in this army area. From August 1941 to April 1942 he served as Provost Marshal and headquarters commandant of the III Corps at the Presidio of Monterey under General Joseph W. Stilwell.

A native of Spokane, Wash., he entered the service in 1917 and during World War I he was first sergeant of the Military Police with the AEF in France. He was first commissioned a second lieutenant with the Cavalry Reserve in 1919.

During World War II he was overseas three years, starting as Provost Marshal of the Eighth Army from its operations in New Guinea and continuing in this duty through the Philippine campaigns and the Japanese occupation.

He flew into Japan with the advance echelon to prepare the way for the occupation troops even before Japan's formal surrender.

From Japan, he was assigned to the Sixth Army in September, 1947.

Army, Navy Plan Amphib Exercise Tag 'Sea Scape'

Washington — Exercise "Sea Scape," a joint Army and Navy amphibious training maneuver, will be held in the Little Creek, Va., area Nov. 1-14, Gen. John R. Hodge, Chief of Army Field Forces, has announced.

The exercise will involve the 278th Regimental Combat Team plus support units from the Army and U. S. Atlantic Fleet. The Navy will transport the 278th by sea from Boston to the maneuver area and back.

A tactical amphibious assault landing will climax a period of amphibious school courses and unit training ashore and afloat. The final maneuver phase will simulate actual combat conditions as closely as possible, with soldiers storming ashore from landing craft to seize a beach-head.

The 278th RCT is a former Tennessee National Guard Infantry unit now stationed at Ft. Devens, Mass. It participated in Exercise Snow Fall at Camp Drum, N. Y., last February.

The training program will be VADM Frank C. Fahrion, USN, Commander, Amphibious Forces, under the over-all supervision of U. S. Atlantic Fleet. The exercise is one of a continuing series of maneuvers planned by the Department of Defense to achieve the degree of armed readiness necessary to the demands of national security.

Army T. I. C. Topic

Take away from military activities those included in the terms strategy and tactics, and what is left is logistics, which—under the title of "How Does It Get To You?"—will be the topic to be discussed during the Troop Information Conferences of the Presidio during the coming week.

Logistics comprises all of the administrative or noncombat part of warfare. In modern war it has become exceedingly complex, including everything from world-wide delivery of mail to the operation of a world-wide military air transport service. It is concerned in general with the movement, quartering, and supply of military personnel.

The diversified activities included in logistics revolve around men, material and transport. These involve providing trained military units and specialists in the right numbers and proportions, procuring military equipment and supplies, and transporting men and material where and when needed.

How these activities are planned and carried out will be described by the conference leaders. Emphasis will be given the importance of the science of logistics as the result of the global nature of modern warfare and the complexity of modern equipment.

As stated in the Armed Forces Talk on which the conference will be based: "The strength of our military defense against communist aggression does not lie in matching communist manpower man for man, but in superior logistics."

CONGRATULATIONS—The Very Reverend A. A. Lemieux, S. J., president of Seattle University, is shown congratulating Major Fred J. Hays of the United States Army Signal Corps for completing college requirements for a Bachelor of Arts degree in his leisure Army hours. The major, who hails from Oskaloosa, Iowa, entered the Army 17 years ago as a private. He began his college career at the end of the Second World War.

Never Too Late!

Army Major Earns BA In I&E Sponsored Spare Time Study

Another triumph for the Army's Troop Information and Education Section was marked up recently at Fort Lawton, Washington, when Major Fred J. Hays of the Seattle Port of Embarkation received his degree from the university in that city.

Working in close cooperation with the Army Education Program the industrious Major was able to earn a bachelor of arts degree in social science from the university's summer school.

Starting shortly after the close of World War II, with only spare time in which to do the bulk of his work, the Major received his "sheepskin" last month. It is hoped that his accomplishment will serve as an inspiration to others interested in pursuing higher education.

Major Hays entered the Army 17 years ago as a Private and worked his way up to his present rank during recent months. He is a member of the Signal Corps and has recently been re-assigned from the Zone of Interior to Germany.

Shift Army Air From Ordnance To Transportation

Washington—Logistical support functions for Army aircraft have been shifted from the Ordnance Corps to the Transportation Corps, the Army announces.

The move will shift responsibility for procurement, supply and maintenance of the Army's 1,700 fixed-wing and helicopter aircraft which are now assigned to various combat and service support units.

All Army Ordnance aircraft maintenance and repair units will be transferred, together with their personnel, and re-designated as Transportation Corps units. No immediate change in the physical location of units involved is contemplated.

Promotion

John S. Sabine, 6018 ASU, Fort Huachuca, Arizona, was promoted to Colonel with rank from 27 August 1952. This was the only officer promotion in the Sixth Army Area this week.

The Heisman Memorial Trophy, awarded annually to the nation's outstanding football player, was awarded to Princeton's Richard W. Kazmaier in 1951.

Don't Be An Idiot!

The word idiot is derived from the Classical Greek idiotes, which meant, "those citizens who did not take part in public voting." In ancient Greece it was because they could not; in the U.S. today it is because they do not—and the word idiot is still appropriate!

Army Cautions On Use of Flamethrowers

The flamethrower — a potent Army combat weapon—definitely is not for backyard use by civilians.

This warning is given by the Army Chemical Corps to civilians who seek to use flamethrowers in clearing land of underbrush or woods.

The Army cautions that the amount of good a flamethrower can do in such work does not justify the extreme hazards to which a civilian operator would expose himself.

The flamethrower was developed by the Army Chemical Corps for use on the battlefield, and even in combat the only men who operate the weapon are soldiers thoroughly trained in its use.

New Portugal Film In Distribution Mill

Initial distribution of a new motion picture film "AFIF 29 Portugal," has been announced by the Pictorial Division, Signal Section.

This film points out Portugal's strategic importance to its powerful allies in NATO and reviews its great seafaring past. It describes the limited agricultural and industrial resources in Portugal and also the conservative habit of its strictly Catholic people and pays tribute to Lisbon, the sparkling capital.

The conclusion of the film sums up the country's two main problems: its chronic poverty and the lack of freedom under its totalitarian government.

V-O-T-E Spells Freedom!

Rivers of blood have been shed that you might exercise your God-given right to vote! Many of those who have never known this right would and are giving up their lives to plant the seed of freedom in enslaved hearts. Whether you have ever physically, spiritually or mentally earned this right is not under consideration, what must be considered is your inherent obligation to exercise this right.

Can you truthfully say, "I am an American!" until you have tasted the full fruit of your heritage? To our forefathers freedom was the moon, the stars, a cloud of fulfillment! To more than fifty percent of us it seems to have become a burden. A burden that entails an hour wasted on a trip to the registrar's office. Spare time thrown away examining candidates' records, procedure and protective rules. Time wasted standing in line on election day. Of course, most of us would stand in line all day for a free show or tickets to a dance. We even pay to stand in line for movies, fights and other entertainment.

You say you don't like either of the candidates? Your man didn't make it, so you're not interested! The country is going to the dogs anyway, and what possible difference can your one little vote make! I tell you the man that can, and doesn't vote is as much a traitor to his country as any communist saboteur!

Let us show the world that we know and love what we have. Let us show them the unified front that we have called upon them to show us. You owe it to yourself, your children and your nation to vote and help get others to vote.

Let's get out the vote so that our future can be spelled: V—Victory for freemen. O—Opportunity for the oppressed! T—Treasured heritage. E—Equality for all. V-O-T-E!

Army to Start Work On Heliport in '53

Construction of a "heliport"—an airport designed exclusively for use of helicopters, is expected to get underway at Ft. Eustis, Va., next year.

The proposed heliport would consist of a 34,000 square acre landing area and include such features as a control tower, administration building, hangar, warehouse, night lighting system and fuel storage facilities.

The heliport would be used to instruct Transportation Corps personnel in the military application of the helicopter.

Defense Details Plans For Sixth Army's Construction Programs

A Defense Department announcement revealed this week that the Army Corps of Engineers will shortly undertake projects totaling $4,375,000 in California.

Expansion and improvement of the Benicia Arsenal and the Alameda Medical Depot are key Bay Area installations affected.

Funds of $712,000 will be used to construct a railroad yard, shop and office building at the Alameda Medical Depot.

Camp Cooke will build a maintenance shop at the estimated cost of $150,000.

Other California projects include:

AAG receiving station, Middletown, family quarters, $227,000; AAG transmitting station, Sacramento Valley, family quarters, $227,000; California Institute of Technology, laboratory and storage buildings, $897,000.

This is only a small portion of the $500,000,000 Army building program currently in full swing.

A DISHIN' DISH DISHES up chow for men of the 718th AAA Gun Battalion in their new self-styled and scrap-constructed mess hall. Doing the fancy dishing is Miss Mildred Mersich better known as Miss San Home Front Ingenuity!

Invention's Mother Spurs AAA Battery To Build Own Mess Hall

Ingenuity and the desire to make life a little easier has always typified the American soldier.

There aren't many times when these qualities can be exhibited in the States but when you're an "ack-ack" battery "on-site" in a Z I defense area, the sky's the limit. Such was the case with Battery "D," 718th AAA Gun Battalion.

Service Club Fete For Mr. Presidio

"Atlantic City Boardwalk," featuring pink lemonade, popcorn, balloons, candied apples, beach umbrellas and bathing beauties, is the theme for the Presidio Service Club Dance to-night honoring the State of New Jersey.

Booths featuring dart throwing and a fortune teller, plus dancing "by the sea" will give the atmosphere that good old "Atlantic City" touch.

The bathing beauty contest will be a little different than the Miss America contest—this contest will feature five handsome, husky Presidio soldiers modeling bathing suits that grandfather wore. The judges haven't been chosen as yet to select Presidio's Mr. America.

Class "A" Uniform is not required for this affair—"come as you are."

Did You Know?

According to a widespread superstition, the spilling of salt is considered an unlucky omen. In Da Vinci's "Last Supper," Judas Iscariot is pictured with an overturned salt cellar beside his right arm.

Living in tents "on-site," the men decided to start their own construction program. Off to the city scrap dumps they went, gathering lumber, tar paper and any other material that could be used in building. It wasn't long before the sound of hammers and the singing of busy saws filled the air around the battery position.

Day by day, week by week, the results began to show against the sky-line. A guard shack, sleeping quarters, a radar shack and then the crowning glory—a new mess hall.

Most men would stop there but the men from Battery "D" just took a deep breath and started holding meetings to plan a grand opening for their mess hall.

Invitations were printed by the battery draftsman and mailed to the antiaircraft commanders in the area. Top civilians were invited, and among them, Miss Mildred Mersich, Miss San Francisco of 1952.

The big day arrived and amid the strains of a dance band acquired for the occasion, Miss Mersich cut the red ribbon placed across the mess hall door. With cake and coffee the new mess hall was officially christened.

They still talk about that ceremony around Battery "D" and there are some who claim that no matter what's on the menu it tastes fine inside that building. Right or wrong there probably hasn't been a mess hall opened with such fanfare in many a year.

If you snarl, misfortune may grin at you; grin, and perhaps your misfortunes will unsnarl.

"Once For All!"

Firm Plans For Launching Presidio's United Crusade

A concerted drive in support of the United Crusade will be held at the Presidio starting 15 September 1952.

Under the guiding hand of Lt. Col. Webster Mills, Chairman of the fund-drive committee, seven major health and welfare agencies of San Francisco have combined their efforts and will appeal for funds to be expended during 1953. Purpose of the grouping is to eliminate the added expense of conducting each drive separately.

Present plans call for a "kick-off" meeting of the committee on 11 September at the Post Theatre. A talk by Mr. R. McNab of the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco will outline both the importance of a successful campaign and the procedures to be followed. McNab is chairman of the Public Employees Division of the United Crusade in San Francisco. A movie titled "Once and For All" will be shown. The movie will also be shown at the Presidio Theatre on 15-20 September when the campaign opens and again 15-20 October, the last days of the drive.

Personnel of the Presidio are urged to cooperate to assure the success of the program.

The first United Crusade in this area will raise funds for the following 78 organizations which have so far affiliated with the San Francisco Federated Fund: the 72 agencies of the Community Chest, the United Defense Fund, the American Red Cross, American Cancer Society, Arthritis and Rheumatism Foundation, San Francisco Heart Association and United Cerebral Palsy Association.

Vice Chairman for the committee is Major Ella A. Wilton, Post Funds Custodian.

Quotable Quip

Moscow radio claims that a Russian invented the world's first automobile about 200 years ago. However, the inventor seems to be unknown, as he is identified merely as a Russian serf. He's probably the same chap that invented the "surf-board," although the Russians haven't claimed that yet.

Banks On The Future!

Letterman Sgt. Shining Example Of Army's Give-Shed Spirit

The demand for whole blood and blood for plasma is constant. The drain made by the Armed Forces on blood banks set up by the American Red Cross is ever increasing. At no time have these banks had "too much" blood on hand.

Seriously wounded service men oftentimes require many pints of this life sustaining fluid to restore them to good health. Rarely will one pint do the job. Sergeant Hank Heissner of the Public Information Office, Letterman Army Hospital, will vouch for that. During his Army career he has been given sixty-three pints of blood to assist him in recovering from wounds received in combat as the result of enemy action.

While serving with the 3rd Infantry Division (The Rock of the Marne) in Europe during World War II, the sergeant received the Purple Heart Medal with three clusters. These wounds were healed with the help of twenty-six pints of blood administered during his period of hospitalization.

The Korean conflict has proven to the LAH sergeant that even though lightning may not strike twice in the same place, enemy bullets will. In fact Heissner received three more clusters to his Purple Heart award while he was fighting with the 9th Infantry Regiment during recent months on the Korean battlefield. These most recent trips to the hospital brought thirty-seven more pints of human blood into the sergeant's veins, in order to restore him to good health.

The Sixth Army sergeant is

now in the process of paying back all the blood that was given so gladly to him when he needed it. "It will take fifteen years to do the job, but I know better than most people the importance of maintaining adequate supplies of blood for use in hospitals," stated Heissner.

Those who would like to join the sergeant in his constant visits to the Red Cross blood bank are encouraged to visit building 562 between 0800 and 1200 hours on 8 September 1952. You can make the trip once every twelve weeks and earn the gratitude of some wounded soldier for helping him to live.

STICK TO THE SCRIPT BOYS!—The bevy of long-stemmed beauties that surround Sgt. Charles Caserta and Pvt. are (l. to r.) Iris Buschman and Vera Tamilina, while limbering up in the background are (l. to r.) Oxana Rudenko and Janice Painchaud. A well rounded program of semi-classical music and ballet will be presented.

"But Daddy is swimming."

PLAYER PIANO by Kurt Vonnegut, Jr. A fascinating novel about America in the future age of Electronics . . . when machines spew forth the requisite number of prefabricated homes, books, and even correct answers to governmental questions.

THE LIFE AND DEATH OF STALIN by Louis Fischer. An intimate portrait of Stalin the man, written by a man who acquired this knowledge during his fourteen years' residence in Soviet Russia, and through a recent unearthing of hitherto suppressed Stalin materials.

THE SINNER OF SAINT AMBROSE by Robert Raynolds. The splendor and decadence of the dying Roman Empire.

THE TRAITORS by Alan Moorehead. A book about the Canadian atomic spy ring, containing an appraisal of the three principals in the ring—written in the form of a character analysis.

Raiders Edge Tough Obispo; Mortinsen Has a Field Day

It was touch and go all the way in a diamond tilt between Presidio and Camp San Luis Obispo last week, with the local nine coming out on the long end of a tight 4-3 count.

In the first inning with the bases loaded, Presidio's Mortinsen rapped the ball from shoe lace height into deep center field, bringing in two runs and an early lead.

Another run in the second gave the Raiders a 3-0 lead, but San Luis bounced back in the third with two and in the seventh with one to tie it up.

Going into the bottom of the ninth, Presidio's Sherrill singled and had Kindrick run the bases for him. Holohan sacrificed. Mortinsen slammed back into the lime-light with a single to bring in Kindrick, the winning run and the game.

Holohan pitched a nice game, giving up only six hits. Lemon continued to wield his dreaded bat getting four hits for four times up and Viviani hit in his 25th straight game.

Presidio will meet San Luis Obispo in the Southern Division Tourney at Camp Stoneman, 7-13 September.

Scott Kasba Play Moves Into Second Round

The Fort Winfield Scott basketball fives took a short breather last week after their round-robin tourney but began firing for the hoop again Tuesday night as Headquarters Lakers scrimmaged with Detachment A, 6002 ASU squad.

Detachment A took control of the scrimmage from the opening minutes as they hit a high percentage of their attempts from the floor. The Lakers could not cope with the snappy brand of basketball displayed by Detachment A. The Headquarters Company version of the Minnesota pro team have a long way to go before they can give their Presidio rivals any serious trouble. Both teams plan on entering the Presidio Post League this fall.

This was the first of a series of games the Engineer teams will play as a warmup for the all-post fracas. The rangy 21st Soltechs, undefeated to date, and the 99th 99'ers will begin testing the strength of the various post teams next week.

Over in Melbourne, Australia, book-makers were laying 5-1 that Alex Wickham wouldn't go through with a certain high dive, and 10-1 that he would be killed if he did try. Without hesitation, Wickham mounted the board and dove with perfect form. Half way down he lost consciousness and his bathing suit ripped off when he hit the water. When he swam ashore, Wickham was 205 feet, 9 inches below his admirers, the height of a 15 story building.

PRIORITY—High echelons have priority.

FISHING TACKLE — Tackle is available on all boats. Personnel will furnish their own bait, but will be reimbursed for any bait purchased by the man in charge of the craft.

Where's Shea? For five days I've been reading every bay area paper, but the racing form, in hopes of keeping up with the latest results of the National Amateur Tennis Championships at Forrest Hills, New York. Every day I see match results of such top seeded names as Seixas, Sedgman and Larsen, but no Shea. We have cause to be concerned as Presidio's ace racket star, Private First Class Gilbert I. Shea is a participant. More important still, is the fact that the Sixth Army net king won his first round over Atsushi Miyagi of Japan, 6-4, 6-3 and 7-5. However, since the first day, our "news bearing carrier pigeon" must have run out of gas. Shea could be the dark horse and we hope to have some hot copy for you next week.

Presidio's Raiders staged an intra-squad football game last week and between two evenly divided teams, some very nice groundwork was displayed. All of the lineplay was good and though some of the linemen bear grid reputations "longer than a boarding house reach," all turned in equally nice performances.

In the backfield some individual standouts are worthy of mention: Lieutenant Roland Daigle, left half, turned on some versatile heat as he ran through the middle, around end and played on defense. Sergeant Nick Kirby worked at his usual slot, fullback, and looks like a very safe bet to pick up four or five yards when needed. Corporals Will McGee and Lewis Brown at quarterback, have both made astonishing progress since the season's start and are fast becoming "smooth T operators."

Passing was the only real weakness, but up to that point, work in the aerial department had not been stressed until the ground machine proved out.

Fort Ord, California's entry in the National Baseball Congress, Wichita, Kansas, went a long way in the big amateur event only to be tured back in the semi-finals by the Washington Colonials, 6-5.

Contrary to previous predictions, Lieutenant Les Richter will play army ball this fall. The All American linebacker is player-coach at Camp Cooke and will lead his gridmen back to home territory, California Stadium, for a 20 September tilt with U. of C. Ramblers.

A look around the nation tells us that: Fifty football hopefuls reported to Coach Earl Blaik for Army's opening grid practice. Twenty-two are returning lettermen. . . . Army Captain Murvale O. Belson outshot Marine Lieutenant Stanley G. Millar to win the U. S. Congress sponsored National Individual Trophy rifle match at Fort Benning, Georgia, this week. Capt. Belson scored 244 out of a possible 250. Army's team tallied 943 out of 1000 for the team trophy. . . . Meet The Presidio Football Eleven; Second Profile Series On Our Team

In this, the second in a series of football profiles, the remainder of Presidio's first string offensive line is presented. Profiles will run every week until the majority of team standouts have been presented.

Private First Class DeLane Pankratz, Battery "B," 718th AAA Gun Battalion, at 190 pounds weighs heavily in the success of our much needed aerial attack this year.

Pfc. Pankratz played in a tough high school football circuit in Oregon. His four years with Newpar High was topped with one year on Oregon State's team in 1950.

In his first year of army ball, Pankratz will be playing in the left guard slot.

Cpl. Bates' versatility comes from high school experience at several positions. For F. W. Cross High School, Victoria, Texas, he played two years at tackle, one year at guard and one year as a fullback.

Playing as a flanker in his first year on the army gridiron, this 195 pounder should provide more than enough of the strength required an end.

Over on the right end of the offensive line, a big 195-pound lad from Missouri River country, Council Bluffs, Iowa, is rapidly proving his ability as a pass receiver.

As witnessed in the recent intra-squad game, Corporal Gerold Peterson, Company "A," 505 MP Battalion, doesn't miss if there is any possible chance of snagging the pigskin.

A three-year veteran on an army team is rare, but worth his weight in footballs and Cpl. Peterson is just that.

Peterson's three years at the Presidio have all been played at the end position, a factor that will weigh heavily in the success of our much needed aerial attack this year.

Corporal Bob Rhoades, Company "A," 505 MP Battalion, played four years of ball with one of the toughest small school teams in the middlewest, Casper, Wyoming.

Cpl. Rhoades played defensive center and linebacker throughout high school and for Presidio last year.

Backing up the line is just about the roughest duty on the field and it will be interesting to watch this 205-pound husky dish out the type of rough football the boys from the "oil field towns" are so capable of doing.

The Edward J. Neil Memorial Trophy, which is presented yearly to "the one who has done the most for boxing during the preceding year" was awarded to the 4,019 boxers of the Armed Forces in 1943.

Florence Chadwick of the United States was the first woman to swim the English Channel both ways. The distance of 19 miles from Cape Griz Nez, France to Dover, England, was covered by the woman champion in 1950 and 1951.

The 1951 Roller Derby World Series was won by the New York Chiefs who defeated the Chicago Westerners 26-25 in the championship finals on 2 June at Madison Square Garden, New York.

Every inning of the Pirates-Phillies game on 10 July, 1929, was enlivened with one home run—no more, no less.

Will Fight This Fall!

World Games Welterweight Now Stationed At Presidio

Corporal Louis Gage, just back from the Olympic leather slinging competition, has been assigned to Presidio and is now working with Post Special Services Athletic Section.

Cpl. Gage, a 24-year-old San Francisco boy, was decided in his second Olympic fight by the 1948 defending games champion welterweight, a Czechoslovakian. Gage won a decision in his first World match over France's welter champ.

In two and one half years and some 60 fights, the 147 pound amateur has copped more titles than most boxers do in a lifetime.

Shortly after he entered the ring in 1949, Gage took the welterweight title (147 pounds) in the California Golden Gloves bouts at San Francisco.

Gage made a strong bid in the 1950 AAU finals and was decided, but bounced back into the limelight by a repeat victory in the 1950 Golden Gloves, this time in the light middleweight (156 pounds) class.

In 1951, Gage won the welterweight elimination bout at Santa Cruz, California, and represented California in the Pan American Games tryouts at Kansas City, Missouri. Another clean sweep at the tryouts sent him to the Pan Am Games in Argentina where he was decided in the semi-finals.

Duty with Uncle Sam did not seem to hinder Gage's ring career as an amateur. In January, 1952, he won Okinawa's welter title and a berth to the Far East Command bouts at Tokyo in April. Fighting in the light-middleweight division again in Tokyo, he copped the FEC title.

Returning stateside, Cpl. Gage again fought light middleweight in the All Army bouts at Fort Monmouth, New Jersey in May and was decided in the semi-finals.

Following this was an early June bout at the Midwestern Regionals, Omaha, Nebraska, where he again nailed the welter crown. Immediately following the Midwestern bouts, Gage entered the Olympic tryouts, Kansas City, where he won his berth to the Games.

LOUIS GAGE, welterweight veteran of several international bouts.

In all of his fights, Gage has lost only four, all by decision and all were suffered through participation in large events such as the Olympics and Pan American Games, where you fight the world's best and have to win four or five fights in succession.

Cpl. Gage will continue his fighting here at the Presidio and currently is eyeing the next Golden Gloves event.

Baseball's rookie gold rush is on once more. In early June the Red Sox signed up four teenage high school players. For one autograph they paid $86,000. Another brought $125,000. White Sox general manager Frank Lane paid a Wisconsin collegian $55,000 to sign with the Chicagoans while admitting no profit has been shown on a half million dollars expenditure for bonus players during the past three years. ... At the upcoming Philadelphia league meetings the poorer prospectors will be screaming long and loud against the gold-lined clubs of the major leagues. Bill Veeck, leader of the St. Louis Browns, and Hank Greenberg of the Cleveland Indians will be the noisiest. They want the bonus rule, rescinded in 1950 after a short and stormy life, reinstated to protect poorer clubs against the richer ones in the hectic give-away chase for young talent.

The bonus rule obligated clubs to hold onto their bonus players or ask waivers on them. Its weaknesses: 1) Under-the-table deals resulted; 2) Bonus players were forced into the majors before they were ready. Veeck and Greenberg think fantastic bonuses undermine the morale of experienced veteran players. Hank proposes a pool of bonus boys from which all the clubs can draw, or a trial period for the youngsters before they're eligible for bonus contracts. Veeck wants the high school rule (it prevents clubs from contacting schoolboys until they graduate) eliminated. The poorer clubs may then be able to beat the money-feeders to the eligibles, he thinks.

Scouting is no longer necessary. The kids advertise themselves. Greenberg was interested in a young Atlanta shortstop. He invited the boy to Cleveland to show his stuff. The boy's father sent word that if Hank was interested, he'd better be in Atlanta on a certain day and stand in line. And if he didn't come, Daddy didn't mind. ... Dick Wakefield was the first bonus baby and the first bust. Paul Pettit was a $100,000 loss for Pittsburgh's gamblers. Several others were called into Service before they could develop. Still others never even fainted at greatness. But the rush is on again for the bonus babies—who usually turn out to be a brief flash in the prospector's pan.

SPORT SHORTS —

Leo Schlick ran wild the day his St. Viator team played Lane College in Chicago in 1916. He crossed the goal line 12 times and kicked 28 extra points in 29 tries for a total score of 100 points, a record for individual scoring in a single game. Total score for the game: St. Viator, 205; Lane, 0.

Sergeant Charles Malchaski

Turn about's fair play in the eyes of Sergeant Charles Malchaski, ace Camp Roberts golfer, and rightfully proven by his Sixth Army golf victory over Corporals Tom Williams, Camp Roberts, and Bill Rowe, Presidio.

Sgt. Malchaski's four-round total, 290, over the Fort Lewis links was three strokes better than Cpl. Williams' and seven over Cpl. Rowe.

All three were individual low medalists here at Presidio in the Southern Division finals last month with Rowe, first; Malchaski, second and Williams, third.

Par for the Fort Lewis course is 72 or 288 for four-round tourney play. All three had at least one one-under-par day, but Williams and Rowe were unable to maintain the consistency displayed by the cool Malchaski.

In team competition, Camp Roberts turned in "one for the record," an aggregate score of 1495 which was a devastating 138 strokes over Madigan Army Hospital, Northern Division finalists.

Colonels Augustus J. Regnier and George Horsfall, both of Camp Roberts, finished one-two again in Senior Division play with Col. Regnier taking a 30-stroke edge for a total tally of 310. Regnier had a one-over-par day, 73, something seldom done by the elder golfers.

Statistics for the individual low medalists and winning team for the four rounds are:

- Malchaski—290
- Williams—293
- Rowe—297
- Regnier—310
- Horsfall—310
- Camp Roberts—1495

Governing Rules for Army's Pro Athletes

Army regulations permit professional athletes to play for money in their field of sports if it does not interfere with their military duties.

Rules concerning participation were cited in explanation of why Willie Mays of the Giants has been permitted to play in occasional semi-pro games.

It was further explained that the regulations would prevent a professional ball player from playing on a regular schedule, except with his service team and no other, unless he gets a liberty pass and is temporarily free from his Army duties.

In any case, the permission of his commanding officer is necessary, and it is specifically stated that any professional taking part in a civilian-sponsored game does so as an individual and not as a representative of the Army.

Six Softball Teams Set For Tourney Here

With the Northern and Southern Division softball finals completed, all diamond attention will be focused on Presidio's park where the All Sixth Army Tourney will be played, 8-13 September.

Winners and runners-up from both divisions will vie for the top honors along with a WAC team from each sector.

Headquarters Company, 5th Group, Camp Hanford, Washington, defeated Headquarters Company, 231st Engineers, Fort Lewis, Washington, 4-3, in a hot 13-inning contest for the northern title.

For the southern crown, Medical Detachment, Camp Cooke, California, edged Special Troops, Camp Roberts, California, by a 3-2 tally.

Feminine competition will see Presidio's power laden WACs pit their softball prowess against an equally tough group of gals from Fort Lawton, Washington.

Preliminary tournaments for the WACs were cancelled just prior to divisional play due to lack of entries, but the two teams are league leaders and considered the strongest in their respective areas.

CBS Television To Cover Major Army Games

Service football is scheduled to get wide television coverage this fall.

CBS Television, at present working out a schedule, plans to carry championship games played by teams from all armed services.

Opening date for telecasts is set for 20 September, to run every week until 29 November, covering 11 games.

Army has submitted a list of games scheduled this season and the network will choose the ones it wants.

An expansion of video service coverage comes as a result of the "surprising amount of public interest" shown in the East last year when a few service games were televised.

Under consideration for the telecasts are Fort Benning and Fort Bragg Army's big posts; Marines' Camp Lejeune and Quantico; Air Force teams in California and Bolling Field, D. C.; Navy squads from Bainbridge and Great Lakes.

Army ball will be on a higher level this year due to an influx of so many former college and pro stars.

"I Am An American Day!"

Sixth Army Will Play Major Role In Patriotic Festival

Armed Forces preparedness will be dramatically demonstrated on 14 September 1952, here in San Francisco and throughout the nation, when "I Am an American Day" is celebrated.

Units of the Army, Air Force, Marine Corps, Navy and Coast Guard will demonstrate to the public the latest weapons and techniques now employed against the enemy in the fight for freedom. The City of San Francisco and agencies of the state of California are massing all their facilities to cooperate in this gigantic venture. The entire Civic Center has been made available for use by the Armed Forces.

The Sixth Army participation will include the Equipment Demonstration Unit currently being shown at the State Fair at Sacramento. This unit includes various types of Army equipment representing many branches of the service. An Army headquarters spokesman stated that there will be a showing of the latest types of anti-aircraft weapons, a demonstration of field communication equipment, ordnance demonstration of weapons and ammunition and dozens of other presentations to be announced later.

The famous Sixth Army Band, as well as Presidio's unique Pipe Band, will take part in retreat ceremonies, to be held at 1700 hours on 14 September. And more than 500 Sixth Army troops will parade in honor of the occasion.

One of the displays which promises to be of great interest is a Mobile Baking Unit which will be making bread exactly as similar units are doing today in Korea. The field bakery, valued at a quarter of a million dollars, will be set up in a circus-type tent 40 x 140 feet and a platoon of workers including one officer and thirty-eight enlisted men will operate the equipment.

Air Force participation in the show will include jet and conventional engine displays, air rescue squadron displays and many other exhibits and demonstrations which are sure to be of interest to the crowd. An air salute to the occasion will be made as jet planes fly over the Civic Center throughout the entire day.

Not to be outdone, the United States Navy is planning many displays of both sea and air equipment. The feature of the Navy's part in the program will be a demonstration of underwater demolition by "frogmen."

The Marine Corps will unveil its million dollar reserve show which includes a showing of all types of the Corps equipment, from a giant amphibious tractor to cold weather clothing of the type worn by troops in Korea.

"I Am An American Day" is celebrated each year to welcome new citizens to this country and to re-emphasize devotion to the principles which have made this country great.

Lt. Col. Charles E. Diehl of the Sixth Army Public Information Section has been selected to coordinate Army participation in the show.

Lady-soldiers from the 6002D WAC Detachment will take part in a parade to be held prior to retreat ceremonies. Other Presidio units chosen to take part in the program are the 505th Military Police Battalion, Headquarters Sixth Army and the 6002D, Detachment One, Station Complement.

City participation in the program will include a performance of a new ballet titled "American Scene," by the San Francisco Ballet at 1400 hours and in the evening the War Memorial Opera House will be the scene of an hour of music by American composers. No charge will be made for attendance at either of the special musical events.

"I Am an American Day" is sponsored in the Bay Area by the San Francisco Examiner.

Army Finance School Teaches Dollar Value

The Army's Finance School at Ft. Benjamin Harrison, Ind., teaches Army financial management to officers, enlisted personnel and certain qualified civilians.

The school graduated 850 students before World War II and about 14,000 during the war.

More than 2,700 expect to graduate from the school this year.

Master Sergeant Completes 30 Years of Stateside Service

Master Sergeant Willie Simpson, Infantry, completed a career of 30 years in the United States Army last week, when he retired at Sixth Army Headquarters, Presidio of San Francisco, California. Sergeant Simpson, a native of Riverdale, Georgia, and now a resident of Modesto, Calif., terminated a tour of military service which began on his eighteenth birthday in 1922.

Enlisting at Fort Benning, Georgia, on April 12, 1922, he continued to reenlist for three-year terms on the anniversary of his birthday. This procedure continued until the outbreak of World War II, when the formalities of three-year enlistments passed by the boards.

For the first 21 years, Sergeant Simpson was assigned to Company G, 29th Infantry Division at Fort Benning. While serving as First Sergeant of this training unit for Infantry replacements and officers, he recalls his company officers included such names as Albert C. Wedemeyer, George Marshall, Omar Bradley and James Van Fleet.

During World War II, he was assigned as a paratroop instructor at Fort Benning and in 1946 was sent to the 40th Infantry Division as a unit instructor. Serving with them until they were ordered to active federal service in 1950, Sergeant Simpson then was transferred to the 6513 Area Service Unit, Instructor Group of the California National Guard in Modesto, Calif., where he terminated his 30 years of military service.

During his service in Southern California he was cited twice for meritorious service as he completed detailed work for the organization and federal recognition of the 1st Battalion, 224th Infantry of the California National Guard in San Bernardino, Calif.

Revise Regs. On Army Scientific Personnel

For the fourth time since the beginning of the program, the Army has revised SR 615-25-11, dealing with the identification, classification, assignment and utilization of scientific and professional enlisted personnel.

The new regulation contains most of the refinements recently instituted in the program and outlines in more detail many of the procedures. It establishes authority for separating those identified as scientific and professional into Types A and B.

Type A denotes those personnel who have been given assignments in their specialty by the Department of the Army. Type B denotes those not assigned by the Department of the Army in their particular field because of limited vacancies. Nevertheless, the names of these men are kept on file with the Department of the Army for future use.

One important subject broached in the regulation is proper orientation of such personnel. In explaining the Type A and Type B classification, the regulation points out that an assignment in their particular field does not make them exempt from other responsibilities.

Personnel designated as scientific and professional are given eight weeks' basic training before being reassigned.

New Loading Twist Saves Army Dollars For Better Use

Army Transportation Corps' vessels are "coming about" into a windfall of savings for the taxpayer.

On the assumption that it usually is cheaper to bring the vessel to the cargo rather than vice versa, the corps already has saved $23,000 by changing its tack in loading shipments for two vessels.

Many more thousands are expected to be saved as the program gets into full swing.

Ships scheduled to carry cargo to the Far East now load at the port where delivery to dockside can be made the cheapest.

The previous method alternated loading of such vessels between Seattle and San Francisco Ports of Embarkation.

Services To Test New Ram-Jet Helicopters

Washington—The Army, Navy and Marine Corps have ordered five new-type ram-jet helicopters for evaluation tests.

Powered by a small ram-jet engine mounted on the tip of each of two 23-foot rotor blades, the new helicopters, named "Hornets," will be built by Hiller Helicopters of Palo Alto, Calif. The Army and Navy have ordered two, the Marine Corps, one.

Designated the HJ-1, the Hornet has only two hand controls and no foot controls. It lacks the usual complicated engine and transmission mechanisms found in most rotary wing aircraft.

Weighing approximately 360 pounds empty, it can carry a useful load of 600 pounds and has a maximum forward speed of 80 mph. Its twin jet engines weigh only 12 pounds and disassembly of the engines from the rotor blades may be accomplished in a few moments with only a screwdriver.

Each engine develops approximately 35 horsepower and is comparable in size to a large watermelon. The engines burn almost any type of low-cost fuel, including lower grades of gasoline, kerosene, or diesel fuel oil.

Delivery is scheduled before June, 1953.

"Feet Hurt?
"Pack Sore?
"Maintain Vehicles—
"Ride More."

A series of small signs bearing crisp little jingles like the above appeared at strategic points along Camp Roberts, Calif., roadsides this week.

Calling attention to the post-wide cost consciousness program, each series consists of four small signs placed a short distance apart, with one line of the jingle appearing on each, similar to another well-known advertisement.

First Lieutenant Robert L. Williams of the Post Comptroller's office, who originated the idea, wrote the first set of jingles, which appeared at Camp Roberts roadsides Wednesday and Thursday. Jingles will be changed periodically for impact.

DA Exhibit Slated For Pomona Showing

Activities of all the technical branches and services in the Army are aptly portrayed in the U. S. Army Exhibit Unit No. 8578 AAU which is being conveyed to the Los Angeles County Fair in Pomona from the Ohio State Fair.

This is the third time this outstanding Department of the Army Exhibit has been displayed to the public. The first time was in Boston, Mass., and the second at the Ohio State Fair. Accompanying the exhibit are three officers and thirty enlisted men.

At this time the itinerary of this Exhibit is not complete; however, it is known that it will be in the Sixth Army Area for approximately sixty days.

Four-Man Tables May Become Standardized

Sixth Army Headquarters was advised this week that it is anticipated that formal standardization will be completed on the 40" x 40", four-man mess table and the complementary chair within the next thirty days. Announcement was made by the Quartermaster General.

Integration and issue will be on the basis of normal replacement of the present 10-man mess tables when they become unfit for further use.

Secretary Pace's Tour!

Army Chief's Visit Highlighted By Major Civic, Military Events

The Honorable Frank Pace, Jr., Secretary of the Army, will arrive at the Presidio of San Francisco Tuesday night on a tour of Sixth Army installations which he will begin in the Los Angeles area Monday.

Secretary Pace will be given honors and officially greeted by Lieutenant General Joseph M. Swing, Sixth Army Commander, at 0800 Wednesday morning at Sixth Army Headquarters. Later he will go to Fort Baker to inspect gunsites of the Western Army Anti-Aircraft Command and will also visit Angel Island.

FRANK PACE, JR.

One of the major addresses of his tour will be given Wednesday afternoon when the secretary will speak before the American Bar Association at Commerce High School auditorium. That evening he will attend an informal dinner at the Pacific Union Club as guest of the Civilian Aides and the Chairman and Deputy Chairman of the San Francisco Army Advisory committee.

Thursday morning Secretary Pace will visit Letterman Army Hospital, the San Francisco Port of Embarkation and the Sixth Army Equipment Demonstration Unit on the Presidio. That afternoon he will be at Camp Stoneman.

On Friday he will be flown to Modesto to visit the 105mm Shell Plant at Riverbank and before returning to the Presidio he will stop at San Jose to see the Food Machinery and Chemical Company plant. In the evening he will be guest at the Press and Union Club in San Francisco.

The Secretary will be accompanied by his wife and his aides, including: Mr. John Kane, Special Assistant; Lt. Col. John Norton, GSC, Executive, and Lt. Col. Tom Cleary, GSC, Military Assistant.

While in southern California, Secretary Pace will attend the first public demonstration of a jet helicopter H 26, by the American Helicopter Company.

Prior to coming to the Presidio, he will visit Fort MacArthur, Camp Irwin, Camp Roberts and Camp Cooke.

MOP Claims Lag; Vets Urged to File Right Away

The Army Finance Corps is operating in high gear to service mustering-out pay claims of veterans. But the receipt of claims in the past few weeks has fallen from 13,000 a week to less than 9,000.

The mass production assembly line process now being used by the Army can turn out 10,000 claims a day if the veterans keep their claims coming in rapidly. It takes volume, though, to keep an organization of this type running.

Therefore, all veterans are urged to take full advantage of the MOP and submit their forms as fast as possible. At present, the Army has only enough to keep the mass production at full rate for about two weeks.

The percentage of incomplete forms which had to be returned to the claimant fell from 33 percent to 20 percent in one week, which marks an improvement that may help keep the machinery going full pace.

A total of 55,000 checks has been mailed to veterans out of 235,000 claims received. More checks are being sent out at the rate of approximately 10,000 a day as applications complete their four-to-six week period in the assembly line.

Latest Promotion Quota

Sixth Army's allocation of enlisted promotions for the month of September is 56, all of which are in the top three grades. This quota includes seven promotions to master sergeant, 17 to sergeant first class and 32 to sergeant.

Extensive strengths in the grades of corporal and private first class have necessitated limiting promotions to those grades to personnel assigned to combat units in Korea.

This month's allocation is the second received under the new promotion system inaugurated last month by the Department of the Army. Promotions were suspended in March because of strength limitations.

Army Offers Tips On Safe Driving For Car Owners

Washington—The operator of the largest motor vehicle fleet in the world—the U.S. Army—recently offered a few safety tips to drivers.

Eliot V. Parker, the Army's civilian safety director, said that the adoption of some simple safety measures was responsible for the sharp drop in military highway accidents over the past six years. In 1946 the Army averaged 2.6 accidents per 100,000 miles. Today the rate is 1.7 per 100,000 miles, compared with 2.5 for civilians.

To offset fatigue and drowsiness while driving, Mr. Parker suggests:

1. Keep windows of vehicle open, breathe deeply;
2. Drink coffee or other stimulating beverages every two hours;
3. Stop vehicle, get out and exercise;
4. Where possible, change drivers every two hours;
5. Pull off the road and rest if tired or drowsy.

PRESIDIO OF SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA

THE DISTINGUISHED SERVICE CROSS is pinned on First Lieutenant Ross E. Sitler by Lieutenant General Joseph M. Lieutenant Ross E. Sitler was rolled out in his wheel chair by two military police to the parade ground in front of Sixth Army Headquarters Tuesday afternoon to receive this Nation's second highest award for extraordinary heroism in Korea.

As an honor guard of Presidio troops stood at attention, Lieutenant General Joseph M. Swing, Sixth Army Commander, leaned over to pin the Distinguished Service Cross on Lieutenant Sitler, who was paralyzed as a result of wounds received during his heroic action.

After presentation of the award, General Swing and Lieutenant Sitler then reviewed the Sixth Army band and troops parading in the lieutenant's honor.

When he performed the action for which he was honored, the 25-year-old officer, formerly of Company B, 15th Infantry Regiment Third Infantry Division, was serving as a platoon leader in the vicinity of Koyangdae, Korea, on 4 February, 1952, on his 32nd day in combat.

The citation for Lieutenant Sitler's action describes his heroism as follows:

"Lieutenant Sitler led his men in an assault against a heavily fortified, enemy-held hill. As the friendly troops charged up the slope, they were subject to a heavy volume of small-arms and automatic weapons fire, but they hung tenaciously to the slope and continued to inch their way forward.

"Finally, an artillery barrage made the hill so untenable that a withdrawal was the only possible maneuver that would save the friendly troops from annihilation.

"When the platoon was safely ensconced at the base of the hill, Lieutenant Sitler observed that two of his men had been unable to fall back and were still on the fire-swept slope. Without regard for his personal safety, he made two trips through intense enemy fire and carried the wounded men to cover.

"Lieutenant Sitler had barely completed his courageous rescue action when he was advised that another of his men, who had moved across the slope in an effort to divert the enemy fire, had been wounded. With utter fearlessness, he again raced through the concentrated fire of the enemy toward the stricken soldier.

"Pot O' Gold!"

Army's Salvage Program Pays Off In Low-Grade Ore

Not all gold is buried in the vaults of Ft. Knox—the Army has found a "pot of gold" of its own in its scrap heaps and garbage cans. It already has paid off to the tune of more than $1,200,000.

Garbage, scrap metal, waste paper, rags, and other items may not sound quite so colorful as glittering gold, but the million-dollar return already made to the United States Treasury from the seven-state Third Army area alone provided the "hard cash" that could buy for the Army some 201 two-and-one-half-ton cargo trucks, or 134 big guns, 28 light tanks, or enough rations to feed 200,000 soldiers for five days.

Scrap metal has been found to be the most profitable source of income and by far the largest item in the Third Army salvage program. More than 12,100 tons of scrap metal has been sold to civilian buyers.

Edible waste from Army garbage cans within the Third Army area sold under contract to civilian stock-raisers has netted approximately $200,000.

The Army salvage program—which has been gathering momentum for quite a few years—finds a ready market for its scrap products on the commercial market. Items designated scrap or surplus are put up for bid by civilian buyers with sales being made to the highest bidder on a competitive bidding basis.

The idea of eliminating every possible bit of waste while promoting the utmost in economy is not exactly new. Conservation and maximum utilization of scarce items was practiced widely both by military and civilians during World War II days. Salvage operations in today's Army have taken on major proportions as economy-minded military men intensify their efforts on behalf of added savings in time, money and manpower.

As a result, the taxpayer gets added mileage from his military tax dollar, the Army is relieved of tons of no longer useful material, and industry has another source from which to obtain salvageable material.

Army T. I. C. Topic

Educational opportunities available through military education will be considered under the coming week's topic, "Army School System," for the Troop Information Conferences of the Presidio.

Today's highly technical Army must train individuals not only as combat soldiers but in many extremely specialized occupations as well. To accomplish this training the Army has established extensive, well-equipped and expertly staffed training facilities, including schools.

Military education may be defined as individual instruction provided by schools and extension courses, given without regard to an individual's job assignment or membership in a particular unit. Various types and courses have been established to provide this education.

Detailed information will be given during the conferences on the Officer Candidate Schools, Army extension courses, Army area schools, branch and technical service schools, the Army Language School, and Ranger training.

This discussion will provide all military personnel with a background of knowledge, not only of Army Schools, but also of their main mission, so that the individual soldier may know what educational opportunities are open to him.

Two irreconcilable political faiths, one based on the natural brotherhood of men, the other on the exploitation of men, are locked in a gigantic struggle for survival in Korea. By their sacrifices in the face of enormous hardships, the men of our Army, Navy and Air Force are keeping faith with the ragged patriots of Valley Forge. Hand in hand with other free men, the heroes of Pusan, Inchon, and Wonju have been withstanding a ruthless conspiracy that would make exploitation a way of life. Their very bravery is a tribute to the system that produced them.—The Honorable Frank Pace, Jr., Secretary of the Army.

"He continued forward until, wounded in the legs, chest and arms, he could go no further. Although Lieutenant Sitler was unable to move, he continued to direct his men who completed the withdrawal without further casualties.

"The extraordinary heroism and completely selfless devotion to his men and his duty displayed by Lieutenant Sitler reflect the greatest credit on himself and are in keeping with the most esteemed traditions of the military service."

A veteran of four year's Army service, Lieutenant Sitler served as an enlisted man in the Philippines and Japan. He was accepted as an Officer Candidate while overseas and returned to the United States to attend Officers Candidate School at the Infantry School, Fort Benning, Ga., where he received his commission in May, 1949.

He is a graduate of Hoover High School, Glendale, Calif., and also attended Oregon State College for a short time prior to entering the Army.

The Honor Guard for the ceremony was composed of units of the 505th MP Battalion, Headquarters Company Sixth Army, the WAC Detachment 6002 ASU, 30th Engineers, and Station Complement, Det. 1, 6002 ASU with Captain R. E. Levan as Acting Battalion Commander.

Army QMC Orders 25,000 Armor Suits From Marine Corps

Washington—Army troops in Korea will soon be wearing the Navy-developed body armor that has proven a "life saver" for front-line Marines.

The Army Quartermaster Corps has arranged with the Marine Corps to secure 25,000 suits for immediate delivery to the Far East.

The Marine Corps body armor was procured because of its immediate availability from industry on a quantity basis. However, the Army will continue limited procurement of its own 12-layer flexible body armor to support field tests and develop volume production techniques.

Ranking WAC Officer Inspects Sixth Army Detachments

WAC Units in the Sixth Army Area were inspected this week by Lieutenant Colonel Bernice G. Hughes, WAC, Office of the Director, Women's Army Corps, Department of the Army.

Lieutenant Colonel Hughes arrived in Los Angeles on 31 August and inspected WAC Units at Fort MacArthur, Camp Cooke, Camp Roberts, Fort Ord and Camp Stoneman, accompanied by Major Harriet N. Moses, WAC, Sixth Army WAC Staff Advisor, and her assistant, Lieutenant Margaret J. Gregory, WAC.

She visited the Presidio on 8 September and inspected the WAC Units at Presidio and Letterman Army Hospital, and made on the job visits to many of the offices to see the WACs at their work.

Sworn into the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps on 19 Dec., 1942, Lt. Col. Hughes was commissioned a 2nd Lt. in May, 1943. She received a regular army commission in the grade of Major in May of 1948 and was promoted to permanent Lieutenant Colonel on 23 July, 1952. At present she is the highest ranking Negro officer of all the Women's Military Services.

She served as Detachment or Company Commander of WAC units at Fort Dix, New Jersey; Halloran General Hospital, Staten Island, New York; Camp Beale and Fort Ord, California; and at the WAC Training Center, Fort Lee, Virginia, for the first six and one half years of her military career. In 1945 and 1946 she served with the 6888 Central Postal Directory Battalion in England and France.

Prior to her entry into the service Lt. Col. Hughes was a teacher in the Dunbar High School, Dayton, Ohio. She received her Bachelor of Arts degree in Romance Languages from Ohio University and her Master of Arts degree in French from Ohio State University.

The Lt. Colonel and Lt. Gregory left the Presidio for Seattle on 9 September and returned to San Francisco today to attend a luncheon at the Presidio Officer's Mess before departing for Washington. Lt. Colonel Hughes represented Colonel Mary A. Hallaren, Director, WAC, on this inspection of the WAC Units in the Sixth Army Area.

Major Wilbur D. Rudy, Radar Officer, Western Army Antiaircraft Command, presented graduation certificates to 45 radar repair specialists who successfully completed the course.

Classwork consisted of 80 hours of instruction in repair and maintenance of the new AN/TRS-1D radar, new long-range surveillance equipment being integrated into Army antiaircraft units throughout the nation.

Classes were composed of officers and enlisted men of the Western Army Antiaircraft Command and civilian technical representatives of the Philco Corporation.

Instruction was provided by an eight-man team, headed by 2nd Lt. Glenn C. Randa, from the Signal Corps Engineering Laboratories and Development Detachment, Fort Monmouth, New Jersey.

Eleventh Anniversary! 505th MP Battalion Plans Organization Day Celebration

Eleventh anniversary of the organization of the Military Police Corps will be observed by the 505th MP Battalion with an extensive program of demonstrations, open house, sports events and a Battalion party on Friday, 26 September.

All of the types of military police vehicles in use on this Post and other equipment will be demonstrated in front of Building 104 on the Main Post. On the parade ground in front of the building will be an M-20 armored car, radio jeeps, a command radio trailer and field generator.

Various military police uniforms, weapons and equipment such as blinker lights, traffic baton, flashlights and field equipment may be viewed on the lawn immediately in front of the building.

Signs showing the nomenclature, use, cost and other information will accompany the equipment. In addition, guides will be available to answer all questions.

Model barracks, supply rooms and dining rooms will be open for public inspection inside Building 104. Here, also, will be a display board showing the achievements of the 505th in a series of photographs.

Members of the battalion will be allowed to bring guests for lunch in the company dining room.

Sports events are slated from 1300 to 1630. These will feature competitive pistol matches, as well as softball and volleyball games between companies.

Climaxing the day's activities will be a Battalion party from 1830 to 2400 at the Presidio NCO club. Speaking in honor of the occasion will be Col. Peter J. Lloyd, Deputy Post Commander; Col. Joseph L. Driskell, Sixth Army Provost Marshal, and Lt. Col. Keene Saxon, Battalion Commander.

The dinner will be followed by a dance, all of which will be paid by unit funds.

"We feel that these activities," states Lt. Col Saxon, "will not only serve to celebrate Military Police Corps Day, but will also provide both military and civilian personnel with a better understanding of the military police, their duties, their equipment and their place in today's Army."

Monday's 125 Pints Brings August Total To 231 Pints

One hundred and twenty-five military and civilian personnel of the Presidio contributed to the Presidio's blood donating program on Monday, as a final clean-up day was held to complete the August quotas.

Previously 106 pints had been received, bringing the total for the past month to 231. Of the blood taken on Monday, 97 pints went to Letterman Army Hospital and 28 to the Armed Forces supply at Irwin Memorial Blood Bank.

Lt. Col. S. O. Rousseau states the Post's blood program is still short of the desired goal of a 350-pint reserve. At present the reserves have been averaging between 175 and 200 pints a month.

The next day designated for donating blood will be the first Monday in October, which will be the 6th. All who possibly can are urged to donate at that time. Donors will report to Building 562 between 0800 and 1200 hours on that date.

9th Corps Vet Now Commanding 505th MP Battalion

Lieutenant Colonel Keene Saxon is the Commanding Officer of the 505th Military Police Battalion, which will observe the eleventh anniversary of the organization of the Military Police Corps on Friday, 26 September.

LT. COL. SAXON

Lt. Col. Saxon was assigned to the Presidio battalion following two years as Provost Marshal of the 9th Corps in Korea. He replaced Lt. Col. Eugene J. Carson, who is now attending the Provost Marshal General School at Camp Gordon, Georgia.

Entering the Army as a Reserve Officer in 1924, Colonel Saxon has been in continuous active duty since 1942. He served in Europe with the Seventh Army for over two years. Returning to the United States, he was Assistant Senior Army Instructor for South Dakota for three years.

He was named Provost Marshal of the 9th Corps when the organization was activated at Ft. Sheridan, Ill., in August, 1950. The following month the corps was sent to Korea.

Lt. Col. Saxon has attended the Provost Marshal General School, Camp Gordon, Ga., and the Command and General Staff School, Fort Leavenworth, Kansas.

His wife and son, Keene, Jr., and daughter, Cynthia, have joined him on the Presidio.

Top Blood Donors!

Recording a monthly high since June, members of the 30th Engineers donated 60 pints of blood to the Armed Forces Blood Donor Program during September with more emergency calls expected during the month.

The 60-pint total includes donations to the Armed Forces Blood Bank and to Letterman Army Hospital. The 21st Engineers topped the Topo donors with 35 pints given in September.

Since 1 December, 1951, the 30th Engineers have donated 775 pints of blood.

UCLA Theatre Group Presents Trio of Originals at Presidio

Three one act plays will be presented by the University Playwrights' Company from the University of California at Los Angeles, at the Presidio Service Club on Wednesday, 17 September. The two comedies, "The Whale's Perfume," "A Night in Samoli" and the drama "Sam Luba" have all enjoyed successful runs in the Los Angeles Area.

All of the directors and actors in the company have had experience in their fields on the Los Angeles campus of the University of California, on the professional stage, in radio and television.

"The Whale's Perfume" is written by Ed Hunter and directed by Joel Climenhaga. It is a farce about two young school teachers and how each in her own way tries to capture the only available bachelor in town. The two teachers, Ethel and Lucy, are respectfully prim and vampish and each works her own particular charms on Tony, the fisherman. The climax comes when Tony has to make up his mind whether to choose Ethel or Lucy or stay a bachelor.

Second on the evening's program is a tragedy, "Sam Luba," written by Bob Greene and directed by Joanne Mock. It is the story of a man who worked himself up from nothing, and after he had achieved all he has wanted in life, prepared to turn everything over to his son. Sam and his son never got along, and unknown to Sam, his son had been killed in an accident. Climax of this skit comes when Sam found that his son left a note saying that the only thing his father ever taught him was to hate and fear and that there was never any love or goodness in him. Sam then becomes a testament to the indomitable spirit of Man overcoming his own blunders and the other things he can never understand by the sheer triumph of his will to go on.

"A Night in Samoli" completes the trio, and is a rousing comedy involving two middle-aged vacationers with younger native counterparts. In the ageless theory that a youthful love can bring spring back to autumn's heart, they pursue and win their native romances and in the process throw off the yoke of age. It was written by Dick Driggers and directed by Dick DeNuit.

The entire production is under the supervision of Bob Greene with Gaeton Laurie as Stage Manager. Actors Walter Bucher, Dick DeNuit, Eleanor Eby, Gail Kobe, Eva Rubinstein, Emily Ruhberg, Sid Schachter and Rick Welsh complete the troupe.

Princeton Offers General Course In Military History

A new military history course will be offered this fall to ROTC students and history majors at Princeton University.

Aimed at preparing students for civil-military relations, the course will stress political and administrative problems in both domestic and foreign affairs. Previous military courses have stressed tactics and strategy.

Called "A History of Military Affairs in Western Society Since the Eighteenth Century," the course covers relationship of the military to society, the role of the armed forces in formulation of foreign policy, and proper use of manpower in modern war.

The course also will teach the technique of combined service operations, the various types of warfare, and the evolution of strategy, tactics, weapons and logistical practice in modern times.

Professor Joseph R. Strayer, chairman of Princeton's history department, said the course would make the student a better-informed citizen as well as a more capable administrator.

"In this new history course," he said, "we are trying to familiarize the students with the scope of political and administrative problems incident to civil-military relations."

Strayer pointed out that Secretary of the Army Frank Pace, Jr., and Archibald S. Alexander, former Under-Secretary of the Army, both Princeton graduates, had achieved prominence in the civil-military administrative field.

The course will be required of all ROTC students in their junior year, and will be elective for upper classmen who are history majors. Almost half the Princeton student body currently is enrolled in either Army, Navy or Air Force ROTC programs.

Members of the Princeton University History Department who will teach the course include Professor Gordon Craig, who has just completed a year at the Institute for Advanced Study at Princeton, N. J.; Professor Wesley Frank Craven, co-editor of "U. S. Air Force in World War II"; Professor Jeter A. Isely, one of the authors of "U. S. Marines and Amphibious War"; and Professor Gordon Turner, research assistant on "U. S. Marines and Amphibious War."

The Army's training program for prospective reserve officers at Princeton teaches artillery tactics and techniques.

Under the direction of Colonel E. A. Routheau, Professor of Military Science and Tactics, ROTC students are required to take 150 hours of Army training during each of their four years.

This exceeds minimum requirements for the Army's training program which calls for 90 hours each year during the student's freshman and sophomore years, and 150 hours each of his last two years.

THE BOOK CORNER

NARCOTICS: AMERICA'S PERIL by Will Oursler and Laurence Dwight Smith. The factual story of America's most vicious criminals—the underworld of dope—from the files of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics. The only recent book of this type, which fills a real gap in information on the subject.

THEIR TOWN by Wilbur Daniel Steele. One man changes the destiny of what threatened to be a ghost town in Colorado. Although its doom was sealed when the projected railroad decided to bypass the town, the vision of one man refused to accept the ultimate fate.

THE BUTCHER by John Sack. The name may have referred to the shape of Mt. Yerupaja (the highest unclimbed peak in the New World), which was like that of a butcher's cleaver, four miles edge-up. Five college boys, far from supermen, live to tell one of the most breath-taking adventure stories of recent times.

THE DAVIDIAN REPORT by Dorothy B. Hughes. This popular writer of suspense and espionage (The Fallen Sparrow and Ride a Pink Horse) gives us some fast footwork in the cloak and dagger department when the Communists, the FBI and the CIC go after the same report—smuggled out of Berlin by the wily Davidian and for sale to the highest bidder.

WARWHOP by MacKinlay Kantor. Two short novels which represent the most exciting of this capable writer's frontier tales. In the first, a few companies of sun-parched militia are distributed at forts along the wagon trail, charged with the task of guarding emigrant travel. The second has as its setting the sparse little towns and settlements of the Missouri River during the period immediately after the war of 1812—complete with the beautiful girl kidnapped by an Indian who turns out to be a white man raised by Indians.

Fall Fire Cleaning Should Be An All-Year-Round Measure

Plans are now being prepared for the observance of National Fire Prevention Week during the second week of October at the Presidio and sub-stations.

All personnel, military and civilian, are urged to be fire conscious, and participate in a Clean Up Campaign, to make this Post spick and span, and to eliminate fire hazards wherever they are found. Fire Department inspectors will shortly intensify inspections of all buildings to determine their fire safety.

"Everyone is urged to get rid of all rubbish or unnecessary stored combustible material," warns Fire Chief George Geller. "By keeping attics, closets, basements and concealed spaces clear of all accumulations of trash, you are eliminating one of the principle causes of fires. Be fire conscious. Start now. By maintaining orderliness and good housekeeping you will not only increase your safety but the safety of others."

Eight safety rules are recommended by the Presidio Fire Chief:

(1) Don't permit rubbish to accumulate. Safe disposal of all combustible material should be made as often as necessary. Keep attics, basements, closets and space under buildings and porches clear of all burnable or unnecessary material.

(2) Don't tamper with electric wiring or try to repair defective electric devices. Call a qualified electrician or you may have to call a fireman. You may cross your wires and be short one home.

(3) If your heating system is defective, report it. Don't permit excessive accumulations of dust or lint where heat may ignite them.

(4) Always have a metal screen in front of a fireplace. One tiny spark can endanger your life and the lives of others.

(5) Keep matches out of reach of children and away from ranges. Careless handling of matches is responsible for the tragic loss of life and property.

(6) Never use gasoline or other flammable liquids for dry cleaning at home or in the shop. Use only cleaning fluids that have been approved as non-inflammable.

(7) Use only electric appliances that bear the mark of the Underwriters' Laboratories, Inc. to prove they have been tested for fire safety. It's cheaper to play safe.

(8) Last, but not least, end careless smoking practices. Matches and carelessly discarded smoking material remain the single worse cause of fire in the home. Don't smoke in bed and don't smoke in restricted areas in shops or warehouses. See that there are plenty of safety type ash trays in each room and never dispose of smoking material in waste baskets. Check each room or building when leaving it unoccupied to determine that there is no smoldering cigarette left forgotten.

A Northern California City, State and Federal Employee Golf Tournament will be held again for the first time in 10 years.

Harding Park, San Francisco, will be the site and entrants will have from 28 September to 12 October to take a pencil test and the 18 hole qualifying round. It is mandatory that two qualifiers play together.

Match play will start Sunday, 19 October and will continue until 36 hole finals have been completed on Friday, 14 November.

Low 32 qualifiers will make up the championship flight. Other flights will be of 16 men with all play at scratch.

Entry fee for the San Francisco News sponsored event is $1.00. Presidio personnel may contact Captain Bagley at Post Special Service Athletic Section for further details and entry blanks.

WACs Run Wild!

Wide Scoring Margins Mark Sixth Army Softball Openers

Presidio WACs, Fort Lewis, and Camp Hanford lead the field after the first four games of softball play for the Sixth Army championship here at the Presidio this week.

On Tuesday, the opener between Presidio's gals and the Fort Lawton WACs went to Presidio by a 10-1 count. Lynch held down the mound for the locals going the distance and giving up only three hits. Searcy hurled for the losers. The hitting was below par for both clubs and most of the runs were scored on bases on balls.

Fort Lewis squeezed out a victory over Camp Cooke by a scant 1-0 margin. Rhode hurled for Lewis, yielding one run. Miller, the losing pitcher hurled a no-hitter, but gave up several bases on balls.

First day's play was climaxed by a 4-0 Hanford victory over Camp Roberts. Hanford rapped six hits to Robert's four. Feenstra was on the hill for the winners and Mooney for the losers.

Presidio WACs opened up the second day with a hitting barrage that netted 18 runs in five innings to six for Fort Ord, a late entry in the tourney. Play was called after the fifth due to the decisive lead. A big rally in the second, gave the locals 9 runs. Presidio's ace pitcher Lynch, showing no effects from the grueling first game, hurled a no-hitter. Blakeway was credited with the loss.

Under the double elimination setup, Lawton will play Ord and the winner will again meet Presidio's WACs for the Woman's championship.

Lewis will play Hanford, and Cooke takes on Roberts, the loser of which will be eliminated.

Championship play will be on Saturday, 13 September.

Umpires for the tourney are Frank Syce behind the plate and Frank McIntyre on the bases, both members of the Northern California Umpires Association.

Camp Hanford and Camp Cooke will represent the Army at the Inter-Service Softball Tourney, 17-20 September at Fort Ord. Top Air Force and Navy teams will be represented.

USO Annie Oakleys To Over 13,800 Bay Area Troops

It was recently announced by Renolds J. Barbieri, chairman of the San Francisco USO Committee that more than 13,800 bay area servicemen and women received free admission tickets to theatrical, sports and other entertainment events during the past six months.

These "comps," valued at more than $28,800, were secured through the efforts of the USO Admissions committee, headed by Mrs. Dean Maddox, and the cooperation of local citizens in the entertainment field.

Tickets to such events as ballet, recitals, baseball, plays, musical comedies, livestock shows, movies, ice skating, swimming, basketball, boxing, ice follies, and the circus were distributed from San Francisco's four USO clubs and through Special Service officers at more than a dozen bay area military installations.

Modern Soldier Learns Parry an' Thrust From Local Cyrano

The parry and thrust of yesteryear may have given away to the trigger squeeze and the proximity fuse of today's warfare, but Private First Class Cornelius D. Banks, of St. Louis, Mo., is reviving the venerable art of fencing at Camp Chaffee, Ark.

Banks, an expert swordsman, hopes to make fencing a popular off-duty recreation at Chaffee service clubs. The modern Cyrano drills soldier students of the ancient science in techniques he developed through years of work with the sabres and foils.

Once a member of St. Louis University's fencing team, Banks polished his style as a private student of Dr. Karl Gueitz, a Munich fencing master, while serving an Army hitch in Germany.

NOT WITHOUT ITS IRON MEN, Presidio's backfield is bolstered with a couple of hard-hitting linebackers, Corporal Dallas Lamb (left), 190 pound halfback, and

Sergeant Nick Kirby, 185 pounder at the fullback slot. (Army photos by Weiss)

Presidio Red Raiders to Go Against Tough Fleet Team at Alameda Today

Along with seven offensive linemen previously presented in football profiles, these four key offensive Raider backs will be carrying a big load today when they attempt to turn back Alameda Naval Air Hellcats, 12th Naval District champions, on their home field.

Highly touted and laden six deep with returning veterans, All-Navy stars and the fleet's best, Alameda's Hellcats will meet a tougher team than they expect, if Presidio's past practice performances are indicative of what will be shown today.

In hopes of establishing a quick beachhead, Coaches Bob Ottoson and Gaspar Perricone will probably start:

Corporal Will McGee, Battery D, 459th AAA Gun Battalion, a husky 185 pound quarterback from Gallatin, Tennessee.

Cpl. McGee has come along fast since opening practice and although in his first year of Army football, should prove to be a reliable "T" master.

McGee played two years at fullback and two as field general for Gallatin High, where he earned a football scholarship to Tennessee Tech.

Sergeant Nick Kirby, 99th Engineers, opens his second year as a Raider fullback.

This 185 pound linebacker from Newton, Mississippi, is well aware of what it will take to rock the sailors, having been a victim of last year's defeat.

Sgt. Kirby is a product of four years of single wing, power football, playing at the full and tailback spot for Newton High.

If and when Presidio's forward machine bogs down, Kirby will do the punting.

Corporal Dallas Lamb, Headquarters Battery, 459th AAA Gun Battalion, at left halfback in last weeks' intra-squad scrimmage, looked like a ball carrier from the "old school," ripping off tackle for big yardage every time he carried.

Cpl. Lamb, a 190 pound lad from Wauseon, Ohio, relies on sheer force to fight and bull his way through the line.

Another four year high school veteran, Lamb will be playing in his first army contest today.

Corporal George Nakano, Special Services, Letterman Hospital, the team's little scatback, will be hard to see among the giants.

With a mere 145 pounds on a five foot three inch frame, Cpl. Nakano has proven he can withstand the rigors of football along with the big boys.

Nakano is a "Choo Choo Justice" type broken field runner and is very effective on quick openers.

In this, his first year on the army gridiron, Nakano will be demonstrating a brand of football acquired at Oceanside, California, High School and Junior College, respectively, where he played one year at each school on the first string.

Robert Peters, a stalwart on Princeton's 1939 team, found himself on his own 16-yard line unable to penetrate a rough Navy line. In sheer desperation, Peters wound up like an 8-day clock and threw. Stanley, Princeton end, soared down field as though each leg housed a motor and caught up with the pigskin on the 15-yard line, gathered it in and made a touchdown. Peter's toss covered 69 yards, a record.

WITH THAT EIGHT DAY CLOCK WINDUP, Corporal Will McGee, 185 pound quarterback, demonstrates jump pass form used on a short pitch across the line to fleet halfback, George Nakano (right), who completes the deadly combination with his speed and lightning fast ability to change pace and direction. (Army photos by Weiss)

"A black cat wouldn't hold a candle to a photographer when it comes to axing a superstitious softball club." Yup, dat's what da man told us. It took Ken Yimm, the camera eye, and myself six hours and five ball teams to learn that bit of omen advice over at the Sixth Army softball championships this week.

"Ah, we've got them all in a group now. Just line them up, take their life history for picture captions and squeeze the shutt—" swish-presto-finis—"where dat ball club go?"

Quickly Yimm and I examine each other for the first symptoms of malaria, leprosy, or maybe we've got hemophiliaspinalminwhatsthe matterwiththoseguysanyway?

You know what? They suddenly decided that it was bad luck to photograph a ball club before a game. "And what's more," says the jovial little team coach, "I don't care if it's 110 in the shade and no shade, I have to wear this full dress uniform (pinks and greens) every minute they play. If I alter it or take it off, the roof falls in on my team."

Wowee! We thought we had troubles.

Gil Shea from Monterey, the Sixth Army net champ stationed here at the Presidio, was defeated in the second round of the National Amateur Tennis Matches by an Australian racket ace.

The Army-Navy football game on 29 November at Philadelphia will be televised coast to coast by NBC.

Since we are not serviced by AP wire service, we sometimes have to rely on the second most accurate source—grapevine. And from that media we find that—12 major league $cout$ are viewing the Southern Division baseball finals at Camp Stoneman this week.

"THE LIP"

Can't tell yet, whether they are looking for new blood or just checking on their already acquired properties. There is plenty of both represented in the tourney.

Fort Ord's Warriors received the team sportsmanship award at the National Baseball Congress in Wichita last week. A nice showing considering the circumstances. Vic Morasco of Ord was cited for individual sportsmanship and the Warrior's Bill Wilson was acclaimed the leading right fielder.

So You Think You Know Baseball!

By Harry Simmons

The difference between right and wrong in baseball is sometimes a fine, hairline distinction. Take this hypothetical situation in a major-league setting:

Say Cincinnati has New York 1-0, as the Giants come to bat in the fifth at Crosley Field. Lockman lashes a single to left, advances to second on Chuck Diering's sacrifice, and moves to third when Don Mueller taps one to the Reds' second baseman. Wes Westrum is purposely passed.

Manager Durocher now orders a steal home. As the Reds' pitcher goes into his stretch, Lockman breaks for the plate. The pitcher promptly backs completely off the rubber, so as to avoid any question of a balk, and throws the ball home.

It is apparent that Lockman will be out, but the batter, sizing up the situation fast, slashes at the ball and drives a single into right field.

Immediately the Reds claim the batter interfered with the play at the plate, while the Giants argue that he had every right to hit at the pitcher's delivery.

If you were the umpire, how would you rule?

ANSWER

The batter is out for interference. Under the circumstances, the man on the mound is not a pitcher, but an infielder. (See Section 8.01e: "If the pitcher removes his pivot foot from contact with the pitcher's plate by stepping backward with that foot, he thereby becomes an infielder. . .") Had there been fewer than two out, Lockman, not the batter, would have been declared out for the latter's interference under Section 7.08g: "Any base runner is out when he attempts to score on a play in which the batter interferes with the play at home base with less than two out. . ."

Catcher's Mask Fails!

Ord and Roberts Lead in Southern Division Tourney

At press time, Fort Ord and Camp Roberts lead the field of eight entries in the Southern Division baseball finals this week at Camp Stoneman.

Ord with 2 wins is the only undefeated team in the double elimination tourney. Fort Hauchuca and MacArthur victims of two straight losses are out of the running.

In the first day's play, Camp Cooke defeated MacArthur by a decisive 15-3 tally and Camp Roberts racked Stoneman, 3-0. In the seventh inning of the Roberts-Stoneman game, a pitched ball went through the catcher's mask. Three stitches were required to treat the catcher's lacerated lip.

Going into the second day, Ord edged San Luis Obispo, 2-1, Presidio scored a 2-1 victory over Hauchuca and Stoneman dealt MacArthur their second and final defeat with a 16-5 tally.

On Tuesday, the third day of play, Obispo waxed Hauchuca, 16-1, putting them out of the competition, Ord rapped Presidio with a big 9-0 count and Camp Roberts defeated Camp Cooke 6-0.

As of the fourth day, six teams—Cooke, Roberts, Ord, Presidio, Obispo and Stoneman—are still in the running.

Tournament play will wind up Saturday, 13 September. The winners and runner-up will vie for the Sixth Army championships, 23-27 September at Stoneman. Northern Division playoffs are being held this week at Madigan Army Hospital, Tacoma, Washington.

Basketball Play to Be Discussed Monday

Formation of an Intra-mural Basketball League will be discussed at a meeting on Monday morning, 15 September, at 0900 hours in Post Special Services, Building 122.

All Presidio units desiring to put a team in the league this fall must have a representative at this meeting.

League play will get into swing the latter part of this month.

Military District Cops National Semi-Pro Title

For the first time since 1945, a service team holds the National semi-professional baseball title.

Military District of Washington Colonials turned an eighth inning rally into a 5-4 decision over the Fort Leonard Wood Hilltoppers at Wichita, Kansas, last week.

A clean sweep with seven wins netted the Colonials $10,000 as first prize and a $50,000 all expense trip to Tokyo to play in the second annual Inter-Hemispheric series, which starts today.

MDW went into the finals after defeating Fort Ord, 6-5, in a hotly contested 12 inning fracas that saw Ord outwit the Colonials, 16-6.

Failure to recover a long line drive which hit the flag pole two feet outside the right field foul line, called fair by the umpires and giving the Colonials two runs, cost the Warriors the game.

Former St. Louis Cardinal hurler, Tom Poholsky, went the distance for MDW.

Local Nine Dies Fighting For Softball Honors

The 21st returned to Fort Scott last Friday night without the softball championship. In vying for the two qualifying places open in the southern section of the Sixth Army tournament, they found that the teams entered were picked from larger "companies" than is possible in the 30th Engineer Battalion. The nine played in and won their division of Class C ball, but the Class A competitors in the play-off presented an insurmountable barrier. The two victories achieved before elimination were a tribute to fight and alert play which the team has exhibited all season long.

Traveling to Fort Ord with the 21st were the Letterman Army Hospital nine, the 102d MRU team and the AAA Battery of Fort Baker. The withering competition took the other area representatives unawares and all three dropped two consecutive games in the double elimination competition. The Fort Scott club managed to defeat two formidable foes before bowing out. In the first game pitcher Les Hartman came within one out of a no-hit game against the Fort Ord champs. With two out in the last of the seventh, the opposing pitcher bounced a ball over third base to spoil a perfect game, but the Engineers' 1-0 victory was an impressive one.

A let-down followed and the Heavy Tank Company of Camp Roberts slammed out a 7-1 victory over a shaky group that did not even faintly resemble the team of the day before. Four errors marred the Engineers' efforts and a cluster of four of their five hits in the fifth frame made the Camp Roberts nine an easier conqueror.

The 21st then reversed the "lucky opening day" opinions of many by turning in a sparkling performance and a victory very similar to the first day's play. Sgt. Harold D'Entremont scored the winning run as had Cpl. Larry Haug in the previous win, and the team play and pitching of Sfc. Les Hartman were the same type of championship caliber.

Elimination came with the same decisiveness as the first loss when only two hits gave the 44th Infantry Company of Camp Cooke six runs. Two errors and the four walks given up by Sgt. Oldham gave the Cooke nine a lead that was never challenged by the Fort Scott representatives.

Although the team had no gold medals upon arrival in San Francisco, they had the respect of everyone at Fort Ord for their aggressiveness and determination when the chips were down.

Fort Shafter Diamond Nine to Play 6th Army Teams in Exhibition Games

The Fort Shafter Commandos, champions of the Hawaii Armed Forces Baseball League, arrived in San Francisco this week for a six-game exhibition tour with teams of the Sixth Army area.

The Commandos open their schedule Sunday afternoon against the Camp Stoneman Travelers at Stoneman and on Tuesday they will face the Camp Roberts nine at Camp Roberts.

The remaining games on the schedule will find the Hawaiian team at Camp Cooke on September 17, at San Luis Obispo on September 18, Fort Ord on September 19 and Presidio on September 20.

Included on the Ft. Shafter roster are four former Class A ball players. Don Larsen, the Hawaii League's leading earned run pitcher with a mark of 0.6 and top home run man of the circuit with 15, is property of the St. Louis Browns. He played with Wichita of the Western League in 1950.

Frankie Malzone, shortstop, is the property of the Boston Red Sox. He was with Scranton of the Eastern League last year and was due to move up to Louisville of the American Association this year but the draft interrupted his career. Malzone led the Hawaii League in runs batted in with 59 and ranked second in batting with a .360 average.

Charley Kaiser's pro contract is owned by the Philadelphia Athletics. The sharp fielding second baseman played with Savannah, Georgia, of the Sally League in 1950 and last year was with Camp Gordon in Army ball.

Johnnie McKeown, who is owned by the Pittsburgh Pirates, is the right fielder of the Commando team. The only left-handed batter on the squad, he ranks as one of the longest ball hitters in the Hawaii League.

The Shafter team batted .269 as a unit and led the Hawaii circuit in home runs with 42. The team won 37 and lost nine in the league season, defeated the Navy all-stars in a post-season series, two games to one, and bowed before the Red Sox, top civilian team of the Islands, in the first annual Hawaii World Series, four games to three, losing the finale, 5-4 in 10 innings. The Red Sox last Sunday gained an 8-5 victory over the Washington Colonials, champions of the National Baseball Congress.

Hoop Time Again!

Casaba Planners Meet; Discuss Post Basketball League Plans

The first hardcourt contests of the Presidio Post Basketball League are slated for Monday, 22 September, according to Captain Duane W. Bagley, Special Services Athletic Officer.

This decision was reached by a meeting of team representatives this week. Although only 9 teams were represented at the meeting, Capt. Bagley expressed the hope that by the time final plans are made at another confab Monday, 15 September, at least 16 teams will be ready for championship honors.

Any unit desiring to enter a team in the league is urged to attend the conference at the Special Services building on Monday, 15 September, at 0900. Tentative plans call for an American and a National League composed of eight teams each. Each squad will play 14 games within the league with the two champions locking horns in a best-of-three series.

The teams already entered in the league are:

1. Detachment A, 6002 ASU.
2. 115th CIC.
3. Company A, 505th MP's.
4. 21st Engineer Base Photomapping Company.
5. Headquarters Company, Sixth Army.
6. Hq. Co., 30th Engineer Base

- Topographic Bn.
7. 99th Engineer Base Reproduction Company.
 8. Headquarters Company, 505th MP Bn.
 9. "B" Company, 505th MP Battalion.

Two teams that will be in the thick of league play gave fans a glimpse of what to expect in the coming weeks. The Headquarters Lakers (30th Engineers) drubbed the spit-and-polish boys of the Detachment A honor guard in a scrimmage practice. The honor guard quintette tried every trick in the book to stop the high-scoring Lakers, but the Topo men hit a hot streak and refused to cool off. Johnson and Tate tallied two-pointers consistently throughout the practice. The win gave the Headquarters Lakers an even split with the honor guard team in pre-season play.

Sunday Is A Big Day!

"I Am An American" Fete To Show Armed Forces Might

Hundreds of Sixth Army troops will participate with units of the Air Force, Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard in a massive demonstration of Armed Forces strength at San Francisco's Civic Center this Sunday in observance of "I Am an American Day."

Crowds of over 100,000 are expected to visit the five-block area in downtown San Francisco to view the latest types of military equipment and weapons. All demonstrations will be under way at 1000 Sunday and will continue until formal Retreat ceremonies at 1630 in the main Plaza.

One of the largest areas in the Civic Center will be taken over by the Sixth Army for demonstrations of a wide variety of Army activities, including the newest anti-aircraft and automatic weapons, operation of a Mobile Baking unit by the Sixth Army Food Service School, field communication equipment, four M-20 armored vehicles and the 505th MP Battalion, and many others.

The Equipment Demonstration Unit, which was shown to capacity crowds at the California State Fair in Sacramento earlier this month, will be moved to the Civic Center for the event. This huge unit represents many branches of the service.

One of the unique demonstrations will be that of the Military Amateur Radio Stations unit which will transmit messages to Armed Forces personnel in the Far East Command. The MARS unit will accept messages from friends or relatives of service men and women with a FECOM APO number only.

Among the seven military bands to be playing throughout the morning and afternoon will be the Sixth Army Band and the Sixth Army Pipe Band.

Climax of the day will be the formal Retreat Parade at 1630. In addition to the Sixth Army Band, units from the Presidio which will participate in this ceremony will be from the 505th MP Battalion, WAC Detachment 6002 ASU, Headquarters Sixth Army, 30th Engineers and Station Complement, Det Nr. 1, 6002 ASU.

A simulated mass raid of the Civic Center will be staged by an armada of planes from Air Force bases in the area while men of the 47th AAA Brigade track the planes on ground guns. Air Force will also have demonstrations of jet and conventional engines, air rescue squadrons and other activities.

The Marine Corps will present the American premiere of its Million Dollar Reserve Show—a presentation displaying more than a million dollars worth of Marine Corps equipment of the type now being used in Korea.

Navy "Frogmen" will give continuous exhibitions in one of the Civic Center pools specially fitted for the occasion. The Navy will also show both sea and air equipment.

These demonstrations by the Armed Forces are in honor of the new citizens of this country who are feted annually with "I Am an American Day," sponsored by the San Francisco Examiner, in cooperation with the Armed Forces and the Citizens' Committee.

The occasion will be noted at Sigmund Stern Grove at 1400 Sunday afternoon when the San Francisco Ballet will present the premiere of "American Scene," a ballet choreographed by Lew Christensen.

New citizens will be welcomed

Army Commander's Message

The Sixth Army welcomes the opportunity to participate in the observance of "I Am An American Day."

On this day all Americans may pause to reflect upon the democratic principles which have welded men and women of widely varied faiths and national origins into a great nation—one whose citizens have won a spiritual and material stature unprecedented in the history of mankind.

The Army has been privileged to serve in the defense of our way of life since 1775. It is particularly mindful of the importance of the traditions we honor.

May citizen and soldier join to make "I Am An American Day" a great patriotic occasion.

Army Placing Former Soldier Scientists In Key Industry

The Army has invited industry to meet its bright young college-trained technicians to insure that their combined civil and military technical experience will be put to good use after they trade their olive drab for mufti.

With industry faced with a growing need for young scientists, representatives of leading chemical and industrial companies eagerly accepted the invitation to meet the men who soon will be seeking permanent positions in industry.

The invitation to industry was extended by the Army Chemical Center Placement Committee at Edgewood, Maryland. The purpose of the committee—a joint effort by the Army Chemical Corps and the inductees—is to assist in every way possible the return of inductees to civilian life.

Of the 220 college-trained enlisted specialists at the Center who are due for release during the remainder of 1952, more than 180 have been interviewed by prospective employers.

A similar program has been undertaken at the Army's Dugway Proving Ground, Tooele, Utah, where the first group of scientists who were drafted for military service late in 1950 will be released from active duty starting in September.

Of the first 100 men to be released at the Proving Ground, 85 are chemists and chemical engineers.

Commendations to New Members of 30th Engineers

The Commendation Ribbon with Medal Pendant was awarded Tuesday to Captain Howard J. McCracken and Pfc. John L. Johnson by Colonel Robert R. Robertson, Commanding Officer of the 30th Engineer Base Topographic Battalion. Colonel Robertson personally congratulated the men on their outstanding achievements.

As a member of the United States Military Advisory Group to the Republic of Korea, Captain McCracken was cited "for meritorious service in Korea during the period 15 May 1951 to 10 March 1952."

"Serving as an Advisor to the Republic of Korea Army Map Service and responsible for rendering advice on all matters pertaining to the precise and expeditious preparation and reproduction of vitally necessary maps, Captain McCracken carried out his exacting assignment with the utmost efficiency."

Captain McCracken is presently assigned as commanding officer of the 99th Engineer Base Reproduction Company at Fort Scott.

Pfc. Johnson, as a member of the 2d Infantry Division, distinguished himself by meritorious service from 12 June 1951 to 18 February 1952.

His citation read in part as follows: "During that period, Private Johnson served as a clerk in charge of operations, performing his duties in a commendable manner. In that capacity, Private Johnson displayed outstanding leadership and ability to cope with all situations, and performed the duties normally held by men of higher rank."

Pfc. Johnson is presently assigned as a mimeograph operator for the Battalion message center.

Top Brass Check, OK Northern Defenses

Washington — General of the Army Omar N. Bradley, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and Gen. Nathan F. Twining, Vice Chief of Staff of the Air Force, consider our northern defenses very satisfactory after completing an inspection of the entire northern defense perimeter of the U.S.

The two generals reported that the whole northern approach to the U.S. now lies under the protective screen of radar, though some sections of the screen will not be in operation for a few months.

American air and ground forces in the Alaskan area; they said, are now strong enough to give a good account of themselves in the event of enemy attack. The two officers also found the Strategic Air Command's preparations and training "impressive."

OUR LADY'S CHAPEL, the oldest seat of military worship in San Francisco, will be the scene of colorful anniversary ceremonies this Sunday. The first Mass since the historic little chapel's rehabilitation will be said and will commemorate over a century and three-quarters of spiritual service. His Excellency, the Most Reverend John J. Mitty, Archbishop of San Francisco, will preside.

176th Year!

Oldest Catholic Military Chapel Celebrates Historical Founding

"And I say to thee: That thou art Peter; and upon this rock I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." St. Matt. 16:18

A colorful procession and High Mass, presided over by His Excellency, the Most Reverend John J. Mitty, Archbishop of San Francisco, will mark the 176th anniversary and celebrate the rehabilitation of Our Lady's Chapel, the oldest military chapel in San Francisco, this Sunday. Service will start at 0930 hours.

Chaplain (Colonel) Patrick J. Ryan, the Army's Deputy Chief of Chaplains, will celebrate the Mass. Until recently Father Ryan was Chief of Chaplains for the Sixth Army, and during his four year assignment at Presidio worked diligently to restore the historical chapel.

He will be assisted by Chaplain (Major) Charles E. Ross, Sixth Army Chaplain, and the Rt. Reverend John B. McGloin, S. J., of the University of San Francisco.

Father McGloin will give a short summary of the Chapel's historical significance following the Mass.

It was on 17 September, 1776, the feast of the Stigmata of St. Francis, that Father Francisco Palou, famous Franciscan padre, dedicated and celebrated the first Mass in the chapel then known as St. Sebastian's. Hence the current celebration takes place only three days less than 176 years since Father Palou's Mass.

Several other chapels eventually replaced the 1776 structure and the history of spiritual ministrations at the Presidio is closely connected with the ebb and flow of life at this military post. Periods of neglect followed under the Spanish Governors and their Mexican successors and both Presidio and the Chapel fell into disuse. During these periods the military worshipped at Mission Dolores.

Though none of the original structure is incorporated in the present building, there is a great deal of historical significance in this landmark that will stand as unbroken testimony to the mores and faith that sustain this stronghold of freedom under God.

Secretary Pace Completes Sixth Army Tour; Addresses Press Club Tonight

The Honorable Frank Pace, Jr., Secretary of the Army, today will conclude a week's visit to California during which he visited the major Sixth Army installations in the state and appeared at several major civic functions in San Francisco and Los Angeles.

His final day's schedule will take him to Riverbank and San Jose where he will inspect plants engaged in defense work. Tonight he will be honored guest at a dinner of the Press and Union Club of San Francisco.

One of the principal addresses of his tour was given at a meeting of the American Bar Association on Wednesday afternoon at Commerce High School in San Francisco. Complete text of his address to this group is on Page 2.

When Secretary Pace arrived at the Presidio Wednesday morning he was given a 19-gun salute. He and Lieutenant General Joseph M. Swing, Sixth Army Commander, then reviewed an Honor Guard of several hundred Presidio troops.

Captain Earl J. Martin, 505th MP Battalion was Commander of Troops and the Honor Guard was composed of two companies from Headquarters Company Sixth Army and Detachment Nr 1, 6002 ASU Station Complement and one company from the 30th Engineers, the WAC Detachment and the 505th MP Battalion.

Following a staff briefing at Sixth Army Headquarters, Secretary Pace visited Fort Baker and Angel Island, Wednesday prior to giving his address to the bar association.

Yesterday, the Secretary paid visits to Letterman Army Hospital, the San Francisco Port of Embarkation and Camp Stoneman.

During his stay in the San Francisco area, he met with several civic groups including the Civilian Aides and Chairman of the San Francisco Army Advisory Committee.

Accompanying Secretary Pace were his wife and aides. The party will leave for Washington Saturday morning.

VA Warns Vet Extra Discharge Copies Needed

Washington—The Veterans Administration has advised all veterans to have photostatic or certified copies made of their original discharge or separation papers for use in applying for veterans' benefits.

Korean veterans will avoid delay in receiving their education and training benefits if they have their separation papers copied before the original is sent to the Armed Services for mustering-out payments. Both sides of the document must be submitted in photostatic copies.

The VA will accept photostats or certified copies of separation papers for most benefits. However, one exception is the VA-guaranteed loans. To apply for these the veteran must present his original discharge or separation papers.

Veterans who have been released from the Reserve since June 27, 1950 should submit their reports of separation or certificates of service, since they do not get discharge papers.

Veterans who intend to start school are also reminded to apply for VA Certificates of Eligibility in order to receive payments.

Army Wins Patent On Napalm Work After Long Delay

Washington—After nearly 10 years use of napalm in combat, a patent covering the early major work in its development has been obtained by the Army Chemical Corps.

Dr. Louis F. Fieser, a professor of organic chemistry at Harvard University, and a group of colleagues began the search for a gasoline-thickening agent for use as flamethrower fuel shortly before Pearl Harbor. Their interest at that time was in the possible use of rubber mixed with gasoline.

With the Japanese aggression the rubber supplies were cut off and the scientists had to seek some other thickening agent.

As a result, their research led to the present napalm, made basically of the aluminum soaps of coconut fatty acids, aluminum naphthenate and unsaturated fatty acids.

The application for the patent was filed in 1943, but, due to national security implications, issuance of the patent was held up until early last month.

Dr. Fieser, to whom the patent was issued, has assigned it to the U.S. Government for use by the Army. The patent covers the thickening composition as well as the jellied fuel.

Army JAG Here!

Major General Brannon Will Inspect Local Legal Activities

Major General E. M. Brannon, The Judge Advocate General, United States Army, arrived on the Presidio this week and has been making an inspection of Judge Advocate activities at Sixth Army headquarters. He is also a delegate to the American Bar Association which is convening in San Francisco this week.

Accompanied by Col. George W. Gardes, Sixth Army Staff Judge Advocate, General Brannon will leave Monday for inspections of Sixth Army installations in southern California and Arizona.

To carry out its legal work for the Army and to serve as legal advisors to the Commanding General and his staff, the Judge Advocate General's Section is divided into four divisions—Military Affairs, Claims, Military Justice and Administration.

Legal aspects of personal problems, such as allotments, promotions, pay and leave, are handled by the Military Affairs Division, providing such matters are not claims nor involve military justice. This division also reviews proceedings of MOS, survey, line-of-duty, elimination-from-service and similar boards.

The Military Justice Division has court martial jurisdiction over the largest geographical area and the largest number of troops in eight western states. In addition all summary and special court martials are reviewed for legal sufficiency.

The Military Justice Division also conducts examinations and makes recommendations on general court martials. When general court martials are necessary, the division provides the trial and defense counsels.

Primary purpose of the Claims Division is to handle all claims for and against the Army in the Sixth Army area and serves as the reviewing and approving office for the Army area.

For military personnel of the post and their dependents, the Presidio maintains a legal assistance office to give legal advice and aid concerning personal problems. This office, located on the second floor of Building 122, has a civilian attorney admitted to practice of law in California.

Questions brought most frequently to the legal assistance officer involve divorces, taxes, leases, wills and child custody cases. Also much information is given on the provisions of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Relief Act, which gives servicemen protection against foreclosure by creditors on obligations incurred prior to entrance into service. The act also provides some measure of protection in cases occurring after entry into service, such as default judgments.

To further assist military personnel and their dependents, the office maintains a list of civilian attorneys who have indicated their interest in aiding servicemen and women. In cases of extreme hardship, personnel are referred to the Legal Aid Society.

With its responsibilities for Sixth Army supervision and its own jurisdiction, the Judge Advocate General's Section has a dual role unique in Army organization.

Sec. Lovett Reports Defense Production Tops WWII Figures

Washington—Secretary of Defense Robert A. Lovett has reported a "significant and gratifying" acceleration of defense production during the fiscal year ending June 30.

Since the beginning of Korean hostilities, the production of planes, ships, tanks, and other weapons has increased 6.6 times, Mr. Lovett told a press conference here recently. He added that the rate of acceleration had surpassed the highest such rate achieved during WWII.

The Defense Department leader also reported that the 1954 budget will provide for leveling off many defense items to a "sustaining rate" as the build-up of U.S. forces and their allies is completed.

SIXTH ARMY LEGAL MATTERS are discussed by Col. George W. Gardes (left), Sixth Army Staff Judge Advocate, and Major General E. M. Brannon, The Judge Advocate General, United States Army. In addition to his inspection of Judge Advocate activities, General Brannon was also a delegate to the meeting of the American Bar Association in San Francisco this week. New Plan Will Speed Release Of Army Reserve Officers

Several thousand Army Reserve Officers who were involuntarily ordered to active duty from the Inactive or Volunteer Reserve will get an early release from active duty.

This is made possible because the Army is getting an increasing number of newly commissioned officers from OCS and ROTC and a large number of officers have elected to extend their periods of service.

Not all groups of recalled officers are included in this program, however. Certain procurement, research and development, and other technical specialists, such as engineers, will not be granted early release. Professional personnel of the Army Medical Service must also remain until they have served their required time in accordance with present laws.

With the foregoing exceptions, Inactive and Volunteer Reserve officers will be relieved from active duty in accordance with the following schedule. Those to be released must be serving involuntarily and must desire early release.

1. Those who served at least one year between Dec. 7, 1941 and Sept. 2, 1945, and who are serving overseas will be returned for separation as soon as they can be replaced in the overseas commands. In any event, they will be en route to the U. S. by Nov. 30, 1952.

2. Those who served at least one year between Dec. 7, 1941 and Sept. 2, 1945, and who are serving in the U. S., will be released no later than Nov. 30, 1952.

3. Those who served less than one year between the dates indicated above will be released not later than March 31, 1953, whether or not they have completed 19 months' service by that date.

Previously, officers of the first two groups were eligible for release after 15 to 17 months' service and those in the third group after 19 to 24 months.

This schedule does not change the normal release date of any officer who is due for release prior to the dates indicated, unless he can be replaced earlier than now planned.

Other officers ordered to active duty for 24 months, such as members of the Army Reserve and National Guard units, will continue to be released during the last five months of their period of active service as replacements for them become available.

Summer Games Test Western Europe Defenses

(By Armed Forces Press Service)

The climax of a year's military training is currently under way throughout Western Europe with approximately 400,000 soldiers and airmen and 2,000 aircraft of the Atlantic pact powers participating in various land maneuvers.

Coinciding with these maneuvers is a simulated war at sea, dubbed Exercise Mainbrace. It includes more than 80 men-of-war of the U.S. fleet.

The U.S. Seventh Army, which is the largest land force in West Germany, is cooperating with a French division in Exercise Rosebush. Another Allied maneuver, including British, Belgium, Dutch, and Canadian land and air forces is titled Exercise Holdfast.

These operations are being coordinated with smaller exercises throughout the U.S., British and French zones of Germany. Results of the maneuvers will give Supreme Allied Headquarters firsthand evidence of the strengths and weaknesses of liaison and co-ordination in a force speaking three languages.

Exercise Mainbrace involves simulated battles in northern Norway and an amphibious assault by U.S. Marines in Denmark. The exercise is testing the complicated command relationships at sea of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Naval forces are situated across the North Sea and from the Arctic Circle to the Firth of Forth in Scotland. Norwegian, Danish, and British sea forces have begun mock battles in the eastern approaches to the Jutland Peninsula in the Baltic.

Mainbrace is also testing the ability of carrier-based planes to carry atomic weapons and provide close support for ground armies.

Army Secretary's Address To The American Bar Association

The following is the complete text of Secretary of the Army Frank Pace Jr.'s speech to the American Bar Association.

I have been given the assignment of talking to my fellow lawyers about where we stand in terms of our National Defense effort. That is a problem that rests very heavily on every citizen's mind today. Unfortunately in this field, statistics are never compelling and men's judgments tend to vary and therefore there is always substantial doubt as to exactly what progress is being made.

I think I should start out by saying to you that the program laid down for the National Defense effort is a sound one. It is likewise a vast one and one which is enormously difficult to coordinate. There is not now and never will be a program that is carried out without obvious discrepancies, obvious failures of human judgment and some dereliction. These factors must be sought out, routed out, and eliminated. But in a program as vast as this one aimed against an indefinite goal, it is impossible ever to achieve perfection or anything approaching it. I repeat, however, that I think with the problems that face us the program is a sound one and is being carried forward intelligently towards a desired goal.

In speaking to you about the military role in National Defense, it is only natural that I will emphasize the branch of the Service which I head, the Army. I am more familiar with Army matters. And what is common to the Army generally is common to the other members of the Defense establishment.

If we are to prevent a global war, or achieve victory in either global or local war, we must create and are creating in the United States a new Army—one which will rely on highly skilled soldiers, greater firepower, and better mobility than any other Army in history. If we lack superiority in any of these three elements, we would face the threat of prohibitive losses or even defeat in any fight with a communist enemy who is clearly our superior in numbers.

In terms of numbers, the Army has grown in two years from less than 600,000 to more than 1,550,000; from 10 divisions, 9 of which were badly understrength, to 20 divisions plus other strong units such as separate infantry regimental combat teams and antiaircraft battalions all of which are at a reasonable degree of combat strength.

By way of contrast—and here you begin to see why there is little ground for complacency today—the Soviet Union has about 175 divisions which, based on our division strength, would be equal in manpower to about 78 U.S. divisions. When the forces of our Allies and those of the Russian satellites are considered, numbers are even more in the favor of the Kremlin.

I do not suggest that the United States should try to match the Soviet Union man for man, gun for gun. But these figures serve as a standard to measure the problem that America faces in its defense.

I do say however, that we must concentrate on the field of ideas so that we can make the most out of the inherent skills of our soldiers. Better ways of doing Army business must always be our goal.

It is from the field of ideas—one that we must win if we are to stay ahead of the communists—that we produce an atomic cannon; a guided missile; improved ammunition, mines, and conventional weapons; new forms of transport such as the convertiplane which will rise like helicopters and fly like a normal fixed-wing plane; and bullet-proof vests for our soldiers.

Trained soldiers, advanced weapons, better transport, supplies, and equipment, improved management procedures—these mark the tangible progress of the Army today.

There also have been intangible gains which, in the long run, may mean almost as much to the Nation as the security the Army is giving it now. While our first responsibility is to produce an efficient soldier, we have an additional responsibility to insure that whether a man or woman remains in the Army or returns to civilian life he will be better able physically, mentally, morally, and spiritually, to take a place in our society. He will have the capacity—and I hope the desire—to make a contribution to this democracy which will provide the leadership that will permit America to retain its place in world affairs, not for one, two, or five years, but forever. This second responsibility, I can assure you, is getting the same personnel, command attention as the primary mission of producing a soldier.

Is this program sound? Is our build up today necessary and is it on solid footing?

I think one must understand exactly what we are trying to accomplish today to answer these questions. And these are questions which every taxpayer has the right to ask and which deserve answers.

For the first time in our peacetime history, the United States has set out on a deliberate realistic plan to stave off possible impending global war. Today's partial mobilization of military forces is being matched by material support from the Nation's industry, and the added military and economic strength of the rest of the free world. In my judgment, we have made the only reasonable decision open to us. In trying to prevent all out war we are building the strength to take care of emergencies and are laying a firm base in men and material for immediate expansion if war comes.

I like to think of this build-up as buying insurance for peace. This vital insurance program must stand critical scrutiny. Are the premiums reasonable? Are we getting our money's worth? In short, is it good business?

Money alone can never measure the cost of war. But let's compare what we are spending today on our defense preparations with what we spent on defense during other troubled times and what it cost us in the long run.

In the first place our build-up today is costly. It represents the greatest mobilization in this country's history, short of total mobilization.

Our present defense obligatory authority of 47 billion dollars is about 60 per cent of the budget for fiscal year 1953. We have about 3½ million men and women in uniform. By way of comparison with the war year of 1944 our military budget then was 87 billion, or about 87 per cent of the total budget. During World War II there were some 15 million men and women in the Service.

In the 10 years before World War I, we spent only two to three hundred million annually on our defense although the signs of impending war were all around us. The immediate cost of World War I to us was about 33 billion; the ultimate total may reach 100 billion.

During the fateful 30's, with Hitler, Mussolini, and the Japanese war lords embarking on programs of conquest, we spent only about one billion a year for defense. The immediate cost of World War II to us was about 330 billion; no man can figure its ultimate cost. In trying to set an estimate, Paul Hoffman said it might reach more than a trillion dollars.

So, if this expensive build-up can prevent an even costlier war, any reasonable sacrifice—particularly in time, money and inconvenience—is worth it. By preventing war we save money, we save materials, we save resources—and most important of all—we save lives.

It is the opinion of those of us who have the responsibility for carrying out the National Defense that the steps we are taking spell something the men in the Kremlin can understand. No one, we feel, will unleash global war if it means his own destruction. And strength—the military-industrial strength that is America today—seems to be one thing the communists respect.

Our ultimate hope is that a peaceful solution to the world's problems will emerge. The stakes are the highest in our history. And if the war we are trying to prevent does come, the steps we have taken to build our military strength will have added to our defense structure materially.

There is no doubt in my mind that this philosophy is sound; that the premiums costly as they may be—are buying real defense.

We can measure the defense we are buying by examining the size and quality of our troops and the material we are receiving today.

In the terms of an efficient fighting force, I can say with personal knowledge that our Army today is magnificent. I have inspected our troops in virtually every place they are stationed.

Where our troops are engaged in actual fighting the record speaks for itself. I agree wholeheartedly with a veteran observer who termed the Eighth Army in Korea the best field army in our history. In spite of a thorough rotation program, which has brought back about 300,000 soldiers from Korea, combat efficiency remains high. Replacements have quietly stepped in to take the place of battle-seasoned veterans. To me this is proof that our training system is turning out a superior product.

This same business-like proficiency is found in our troops elsewhere. We have more than matched in quality the increases we have made in quantity.

As for material, Secretary of Defense Lovett recently reported that our defense production during the first 12 months of the Korean conflict showed a rate of acceleration of 222 per cent which out-stripped our best achievements of World War II. Military "hardware"—planes, ships, tanks, weapons—has increased 6.6 times since fighting began there. With the Armed Forces currently spending about four billion dollars a month, we have reached a point where we are getting reasonable returns in material for our money.

CLIMAX OF "I AM AN AMERICAN DAY" on Sunday afternoon was the Retreat Parade in which hundreds of Presidio troops, the Sixth Army Band and the Sixth Army Pipe Band participated. New citizens of this country were the honored guests of the occasion, which was sponsored by the San Francisco Examiner in cooperation with the Armed Forces and Citizens' committee. Sixth Army participation included demonstrations of various types of Army equipment representing many branches of the service. Crowds estimated at over 100,000 visited the Civic Center in downtown San Francisco to view the demonstrations of Armed Forces preparedness for which a five-block area was taken over by the Army, Air Force, Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard. Smart Appearance!

Army Commander Lauds Troops For "American Day" Conduct

Sixth Army troops played a competent and highly successful role in last Sunday's "I Am An American Day" festival. Termed the largest celebration of its kind ever held in San Francisco, crowds were estimated at over 125,000. The day-long show was pronounced an outstanding success.

Speaking of the hundreds of soldiers that made up the many units representing the Army, the Sixth Army Commander, Lieutenant General Joseph M. Swing, stated:

"Your conduct and appearance during this patriotic celebration was of the highest calibre. To the thousands of citizens who visited Army demonstration units your technical knowledge and appearance will make a lasting impression, and serve to reassure them of the excellent training and high morale that make today's citizen-soldier the finest in the world."

The Senior Service joined with other branches of the Armed Forces to give the day's honored guest, Mr. New Citizen, an all-out demonstration of equipment and technical skills. Simulated air attacks, retreat parades and the music of seven military bands kept the crowds that jammed the five blocks of the Armed Forces Exposition in a constant state of proud excitement.

Top flight civic events highlighted the balance of the program and included concerts, an original ballet and a mass celebration to welcome new citizens at the War Memorial Opera House.

All in all the day, set aside annually to welcome America's new citizens, was a rousing success. Sponsored by the San Francisco Examiner in cooperation with the Armed Forces and the Citizens Committee, "I Am An American Day" continues to be a yearly reaffirmation of the traditions and beliefs that have made the United States the "last best hope on earth."

New Info Program

An information program to be released by Armed Forces Network stations is now under preparation by the TI&E Division. The program will use the title of the Army Hour, which the Army produced throughout WWII.

New USDB Chief Visits Sixth Army Provost Marshal

Colonel B. B. Albert, recently appointed Commandant of the U. S. Disciplinary Barracks at Lompoc, California was the guest of Colonel Joseph L. Driskell and the officers of the Provost Marshal Section, Headquarters Sixth Army, last week. Col. Albert relieved Colonel Lucian S. Berry at Lompoc in July.

The new commandant of USDB at Lompoc was detailed into the Military Police Corps in 1941 and was a member of the first MPC school conducted in 1942 at Fort Myer, Va., where he was awarded the first diploma.

Colonel Albert gave the oath to his son, 1st Lt. B. B. Albert, Jr., MPC, presently stationed in Tokyo at the Japan stockade, in February 1951.

DPC Launches Crusade Drive At Presidio

The United Crusade drive was officially launched this week by Colonel P. J. Lloyd in a short talk to approximately 100 Presidio United Crusade committee members. Each section and unit has a sub-committee to insure that everyone will be personally contacted for their contributions to the United Crusade.

This fund raising campaign is being conducted to raise money for seven major health and welfare agencies of San Francisco. Participating agencies are the Community Chest, the American Red Cross, the American Cancer Society, the Arthritis and Rheumatism Foundation, the San Francisco Heart Association, the United Cerebral Palsy Association and the USO-United Defense Fund. Personnel are being requested to give at one time, enough for all seven causes, instead of contributing to seven different appeals. The purpose of this grouping is to eliminate the expense of conducting each fund raising drive separately.

If an individual wishes his contribution to favor a particular agency, it is possible to do so, by naming a specific organization at the time his contribution is made.

Personnel of the Presidio are urged to cooperate to assure the success of this campaign.

Ninth AAA Announces Plans For 'O' Day Open House

All service personnel, their families and friends are invited to attend the "Organization Day Open House" of the Ninth AAA Gun Battalion on Sunday, 21 September, from 1300 hours until 1600 hours. Open to the general public will be Battery sites along with demonstrations of equipment.

Signs on the Great Highway near the Olympic Club will have directions to the position nearest the Presidio. Free bus service will leave the City Halls in South San Francisco and in San Rafael at 1300, 1400 and 1500 hours for the convenience of persons in those areas.

The Open House celebrates the re-activation of the battalion in September 1950 at Fort Bliss, Texas. However, the Unit's history goes back to 1924 when the battalion, then coast artillery, was stationed near Boston as part of the East Coast Defense. As reflected in the motto, Prima Libertatus Acio, the men are ever watchful against possible enemy invasion of the western coastline as were their predecessors on the eastern shores. Having kept pace with the rapid advancement and improvement in military weapons, the Ninth prides itself on its ability to engage, with effective 120-mm fire, air, ground, and water borne targets at a moment's notice.

Since arriving in San Francisco, the Ninth, under the command of Lt. Col. Harold O. Johnson, has been engaged in many activities, in addition to its defense role, such as giving assistance to civil components and demonstrating equipment for dignitaries when requested.

Saturday Work or Train!

Announces Sixth Army Policy On 5½-Day Work Week

Military personnel assigned in the Sixth Army Area who are not engaged in the Army Field Forces 48-hour-a-week training program, will work a 44 hour, 5½ day work week or more, depending on the decision of local commanders.

Mondays through Fridays will be devoted to productive work by military personnel and Headquarters activities on Saturday mornings will be staffed with a minimum of personnel. Those military personnel not utilized for Saturday morning work will engage in such military activities as training, inspections, boards and courts, TI&E, Officer's Call, POR qualifications, athletics, etc., thus eliminating the necessity for those personnel to participate in such activities during the week.

Personnel who have Saturday morning duty will accomplish their required training during the Monday to Friday period.

This policy does not in any way affect the local commander's prerogative concerning the issuing of passes and the granting of leaves of absence to military personnel as provided in regulations.

Civilian personnel will continue to work their normal work week of forty hours, and will be employed on an overtime basis on Saturday only when deemed essential for minimum support of operations, except when specific approval has been granted by Headquarters Sixth Army for an extended work week.

In cases where the application of the 44 hour week, due to local conditions, would work undue hardships or would result in less efficient or less economical operations, commanders may apply to Headquarters Sixth Army for deviation from this policy. These requests will be accompanied by complete justification.

Angel Island Fete Will Host Public For Second Time

Tickets for the mammoth celebration of Angel Island Day on Sunday, 21 September are on sale at the Presidio Service Club. Round trip fares to the Island are children, 75c and adults $1.50. Boats will operate on an hourly schedule out of Fisherman's Wharf, Berkeley Yacht Harbor, Sausalito City Float and Tiburon.

This is the second time in 100 years that this famous island in San Francisco Bay has been open for public inspection. A full day of entertainment has been planned such as yacht races and boat pageants, folk dancing and picnicking, and a championship bicycle race of 100 riders. Tours of the Island by elephant trains will be a main attraction in addition to the coronation of Miss Angel Island.

Approximately 15,000 people are expected to attend this gigantic Bay Area picnic.

Impressive Ceremony!

Archbishop Mitty Officiates As 'Chapel of Our Lady' Dedicated

Presidio's newly rehabilitated Catholic Chapel of Our Lady was dedicated last week by the Most Rev. John J. Mitty, Archbishop of San Francisco. In a simple ceremony Archbishop Mitty sprinkled holy water on the steps of the chapel and then led the procession to the altar.

Chaplain (Colonel) Patrick J. Ryan, former Sixth Army Chaplain, and present Deputy Chief of Chaplains, Department of the Army, celebrated the High Mass.

The services were attended by more than 3,000 persons. A loud-speaker carried the ritual and the sermon by Father John B. McGloin, assistant professor of history, University of San Francisco, to those who had to be seated on the terrace outside of the Chapel.

Father McGloin reviewed the history of the Presidio and of the Chapel, which is built on the site of the Presidio's first Catholic Church. Services have been conducted there since 17 September, 1776, feast day of the Stigmata of St. Francis. He told the congregation, "We are heirs of all that was said, of all that was done that morning. It is the unique distinction of the Presidio that in its 176-year history—under Spanish, Mexican and American rule—its guns have never been fired in conflict." Father McGloin called the chapel "a fortress of God in a Presidio of peace."

Topic

Korea will be the subject of the Presidio Troop Information Conference during the coming week. The historical background of the country will be given and the recent political developments leading to the present situation will be discussed.

Early history of Korea will be covered in reference to its natural resources, climate and early diplomatic relations. Korea has many surprising "firsts," including suspension bridge, ironclad ships, observatory and movable metal type, as well as a workable alphabet.

Factors leading to Korea's poverty to be outlined were the Japanese war of 1592, ravaging of the country, loss of all material wealth, compulsory labor and the Japanese annexation in 1910.

Considerable discussion will be devoted to the condition of Korea as the U. S. Army found it prior to the present police action and events leading to this action.

Top Military, Defense Officials See Jet Helicopter Perform

First public demonstration of the XH-26 one-man, pulse-jet-powered helicopter was held this week at Los Angeles at the manufacturer's plant, the American Helicopter Company. Uses for the XH-26 are expected to be almost unlimited because it is small, rugged and requires few tools to maintain.

The smallest and lightest helicopter ever procured by the Army, it can actually lift a load equal to twice its own weight. It is small enough to be carried aboard larger airplanes and can be dropped by parachute in a container and reassembled in 20 minutes by two men.

An overhaul of the XH-26 can be accomplished in a few minutes since the engine has only one moving part. Its engines require no lubrication and no electrical circuit is needed once started.

Engines of the new 'copter are started by pressing a button on the cyclic control stick which injects air and fuel into the engine, during which time a small spark plug ignites the fuel and air. The spark plug is then turned off. No warm-up is required for the engines.

Any low grade or high grade petroleum fuel such as gasoline, kerosene or diesel fuel oil will burn in its engines and the ship will fly an hour and one-half without refueling.

Development of the new helicopter was termed a "jet-propelled step forward into the air age in which we live" by The Honorable Frank Pace, Jr., Secretary of the Army, who was among the high military and civilian dignitaries attending the demonstration.

FIRST PUBLIC PERFORMANCE of the XH-26 one-man pulse-jet-powered helicopter was given Monday at Los Angeles in a demonstration witnessed by The Honorable Frank Pace, Jr., Secretary of the Army, and other civilian and Army officials. Although the XH-26 has not yet been officially named, the new helicopter has been dubbed the "Jet-Jeep" because its use in the air is quite similar to a jeep on the ground, and because of its rugged simplicity. It can be carried in a jeep trailer, uses jeep fuel and jeep tool kit. The smallest and lightest 'copter ever procured by the Army, it has a top speed of 80 mph and will fly an hour and one-half without refueling.

Report from WASHINGTON

(By Armed Forces Press Service)

One of the most common requests received by the Veterans Administration from ex-service-men and women is information on applying for training under the K-Vet Bill. The VA has issued the following answer: "Veterans can obtain an application form at any VA office. Fill out the first five sections completely—be sure to include your program of training—and send the application, along with a photostatic copy of your discharge, to your VA regional office. If VA approves the application, it will send you a 'Certificate for Education and Training,' which you present at your school when you enroll."

The Department of Defense has requested the Selective Service System to induct 341 physicians and 200 dentists during November, 1952. Of these, 166 physicians and 110 dentists will be assigned to the Army and 175 physicians and 90 dentists to the Air Force. A similar request for October called for 371 physicians and 200 dentists. Five hundred officers of the Army Nurse Corps and 125 officers of the Women's Medical Specialists Corps Reserve will be ordered into active military service in February, March, and April, 1953. Officers will be selected from four groups, with first priority going to volunteers, who may sign for two or three years of active duty.

A total of $585,510,000 has been appropriated for Army military construction during the next fiscal year, the Department of the Army announces. Of this amount, $166,411,500 is for unclassified projects within the continental U. S., and $419,098,500 for projects outside continental U. S., and classified and unprogrammed projects.

Continuing its policy of promoting in small increments, the Army has released a list of officers promoted to captain through colonel. A total of 185 first lieutenants were promoted to captain; 196 captains to major; 103 majors to lieutenant colonel and 49 lieutenant colonels to colonel.

The Army has estimated that it has saved at least $7,860,000 as the result of suggestions submitted by military and civilian personnel during fiscal year 1952. For the suggested improvements the Army paid out $194,611 in cash to civilians under its Efficiency Awards Program. Cash payments to military personnel are not authorized. Instead, their rewards usually take the form of additional leave time, achievement certificates, or special privileges.

Early Season Butterflies!

Slow Start Hampers Presidio; Lose Opener 12-6 At Alameda

Alameda Naval Air launched a quick first quarter beach-head against the Red Raiders from Presidioland by picking up 12 points in the opening minutes last Friday, a lead the local gridders were unable to overcome.

Plagued with opening game nervousness and lack of confidence, the Raiders had their backs to the goalposts throughout the first quarter, but fired up to outgain the Hellcats on the ground in the last three periods.

The Bay Area Armed Forces League defending champions drove 85 yards in five plays to rack up the first tally and minutes later, quarterback Ripa threw a pass to All-Navy end, Lawler, in the end zone for their final TD. At quarter's end, Alameda had gained 136 yards rushing to 42 for the locals.

Sparked by halfback Roland Daigle's brilliant running, the big red machine fired up in the second and third stanzas, gaining 78 yards to the Hellcats 31, but were unable to hit payday.

Alameda's machine bogged down again in the final quarter and a punt combined with a 15-yard clipping penalty saw Presidio in possession of the ball on the Alameda nine yard line. The locals fumbled on the seven, giving the sailors the ball with a first and goal to go.

Daigle broke up the threat by intercepting a pass on the five-yard line and running it out to the 15. Unable to penetrate the stiff Alameda defense for the next three plays, fullback Kirby got off a 70-yard punt. Taking over on the Presidio 15-yard line, Alameda was pushed back to the three, where they fumbled. Presidio recovered and drove it to the one foot line where they returned the fumble and lost the scoring chance.

In the closing minutes, Presidio quarterback, McGee, pitched a 22-yard pass to right end, Peterson on the goal line for the Raiders' only tally.

Defensively, Presidio played outstanding ball, but lacked the timing and coordination needed to dish out that offensive punch.

Bates, Pankratz, Daigle and Preciado all turned in top defensive performances.

Spectators, authorities and well-wishers attending the national singles and doubles competitions the past several weeks all watched play with these unanswered questions in mind: Is the U.S. ready to assume the Davis Cup habit again?—or will it be another vain challenge to the Australian champions?

A glance at the respective rosters of the world's two tennis leaders tells the probable story at once. Top-seeded Americans Vic Seixas, Dick Savitt, Bill Talbert, Herb Flam, Gardner Mulloy and Art Larsen average 29 years of age. Two others, Tony Trabert and Bernie Bartzen, are servicemen. The Aussies? Their number-one player, Frank Sedgman, the world's best, is 24. Ken McGregor and Mervyn Rose, next in line, are 23. Their brightest kids, Ken Rosewall (conqueror of Seixas), and Lewis Head, are 17-year-old youngsters. America's waning prestige will be dealt further blows by these improving teen-agers.

The Australian accent on youth has already begun. U. S. Davis Cup hopes will also ride on youngsters, but they're not so ready as the kids from Down Under. If the Army and Navy can be prevailed upon, Sgt. Bartzen and Seaman Trabert will be available for the Australian jaunt. Ham Richardson, and California's Bob Perry, two 19-year-olds, are the best of the '52 youth crop, but Perry was slammed down in three sets in the Nationals by Herb Flam. The picture is indeed bleak at present. With time, it could be worse. . . . Perhaps the leading questions would be better left unanswered.

SNAP SHORTS

You see sports pictures in the newspapers, in magazines, and in the movies, but how about your snapshot collection? Sports make pictorial material for the most amateur of snapshooters as well as the professionals.

To most of us, sports mean action. But very few of us have cameras fast enough for action shots. Fortunately, it doesn't end there—you can still make good sports shots even with the simple cameras. This is the secret!

If you stop to consider for a minute, you'll realize that the high point of practically every motion is characterized by a moment of stillness—the pitcher winds up and then unwinds to throw his speedball. In that instant, between the winding and the unwinding, action is suspended, yet a picture snapped at that moment tells a story of speed and power.

That's how you picture action with a camera that's made for still subjects—you watch the action until this moment of suspended motion comes up, and then you snap the picture. Familiarity with the sport is helpful, of course, because you need to be right on the ball to be able to snap the picture at just the right time.

So You Think You Know Baseball!

By Harry Simmons

In revising the baseball code three years ago, the experts inadvertently omitted several major rules. The practice since then has been to regard these as still in force. Here, in a hypothetical major-league setting, is what happens when an unusual stratagem meets an "invisible" rule.

Say the Braves have the Giants, 5 to 1, at the start of the seventh inning at Braves Field. The visitors push across three runs in quick order. With two out, they have the tying run on second base.

Bob Chipman, rushed in by the Braves as relief pitcher, works so slowly that with the count one-and-one, the Giant batter steps out of the box for a moment. The umpire signals "Time."

The Giant runner, who has a long lead from second, moves only a little closer to the base. Chipman notes this. So when "Play" is called, he toes the rubber and then steps back and makes a long throw toward second. But the ball carries into center field and the Giant runner, who had started back to second, now races around third and scores easily.

At this point, Chipman calmly calls for the ball, steps on second base and appeals to the umpire to call the runner out for failing to retouch the base after a call of "Time."

If you were the umpire, what would you do?

ANSWER

The umpire should call the runner out. In the absence of a current rule, he may invoke the old one (Rule 49, Section 14) which was unintentionally omitted from the code. It provides that where a base-runner "fails to return to and touch the base he occupied when 'Time' was called" and tags the next base under the circumstances outlined, "the base-runner is out. . . ."

Raiders To Host Treasure Island Pirates Here On Home Field Today

Presidio's Red Raiders play host to Treasure Island's Pirates on the Fort Scott field today.

Treasure Island, paced by a fast, ex-University of Colorado quarterback, Harry Narcisian, will invade Presidio with one victory already under their belt, a 32-13 win over the semi-pro Martinez club last week.

Four key Raider grid men who will assist in stemming the Navy tide, are presented in the fourth football profile series:

Lieutenant Roland Daigle, 6002 ASU, Detachment A, a big 6'1", 200 pound rambler, operates out of the halfback slot and at this time, looks like the key to the Big Red offensive punch.

Lt. Daigle never played ball for his native Port Arthur, Texas, High School, but started cavorting around the Army gridiron at a time when most of his present teammates were kicking around the vacant lots, playing in the runny-nose league.

In 1941, Daigle threw in with the First Cavalry team; in '42 with the 91st Infantry Division squad; in 1947 with the Fourth Army champion Fort Bliss Rockets; in 1948 with First Corps, Far East Command unbeaten, untied champs and in '49 with 21st Infantry Regiment, champions of the 24th Division.

In Daigle, the Raiders have a hard hitting linebucker, a kick return specialist and an all-around defense man.

Corporal Chick Preciado, Battery B, 9th AAA Gun Battalion, at 165 pounds, looms as one of the Raider's best bets in the defensive backfield.

Cpl. Preciado, a Tucson, Arizona, boy, played three years for Nogales High School as an offensive and defensive back.

Playing in his first Army game last week, Preciado turned in a defensive performance unequalled by few of his teammates. He should prove to be the big barrier to any opposing team's aerial attacks.

Corporal Bob Catlett, Special Services, Letterman Hospital, is the type lineman any coach would like to have in his forward wall.

At 225 pounds, Catlett plays right guard and boasts three years of first string play with Modesto, California, High, two years' service ball with Eglin Field, Florida, and one year with the Manteca, California, semi-pro team.

Cpl. Catlett played in the 49er-Bronco game last month and proved himself the man most capable of opening holes in Buck Shaw's giant line.

Corporal Graham Johnston, 6002 ASU, Station Complement, is the only man from Pinehurst, North Carolina, who doesn't play golf. He plays football—and a good brand of football at that.

Cpl. Johnston, a 205 pound tackle, played four years for Choate High School, Wallingford, Connecticut, and one year on the Harvard frosh team.

Going into his first year on the Army gridiron, Johnston states that, "Harvard is one school where studies outweigh athletics and I couldn't play my last three years." Johnston's defensive play doesn't seem to lack experience, however, and he will be a key figure on the field today.

PRIVATE STUFF

Possibly not the best, but the gamest fighter of all was Bob Fitzsimmons, a middleweight who beat Corbett in 1897 for the heavyweight crown. Never weighing more than 170 for an important fight, Fitz fought heavyweights all his life. Jeffries, with a 50 pound weight advantage, whipped him in '99. Even that didn't make him quit. Fitzsimmons took the giants for another 15 years, leaving the ring at the age of 52.

Nimrods In For Good Season

"Fair to good" is the forecast for hunters who will open the Sierra and northwestern deer season Saturday, September 20, according to area reports from more than 40 State Department of Fish and Game wardens.

Shooting hours are from one-half hour before sunrise to one-half hour after sunset and limits are two bucks in the northwestern area and one buck in the Sierra zone.

Wardens' pre-season reports range from "excellent" prospects in Kern County to "poor" in Lassen-Modoc. Wardens' predictions, county-by-county:

AMADOR—Good. No winter loss. Try between 3,000-5,000 feet elevation.

BUTTE—Little posted land. Best should be in Bald Mountain, Philbrook, Chapparral, Coon Hollow, Snag Lake, Cold Springs and Jonesville areas.

CALAVERAS—Normal deer numbers below 5,000 feet. Lots of forked horns higher. Best hunting may be above 6,500 feet.

DEL NORTE—Deer in average numbers and good condition. Best should be in High Plateau, North Fork of Smith River, Sanger Lake and Youngs Valley, Bear Basin, Summit Valley and Bald Mountain areas.

EL DORADO—Poor to fair throughout the Divide. Try Gold Hill, Green Valley, Silver Fork of American River areas.

FRESNO—Normal numbers of bucks in good condition. Best should be in the National Forest on either side of the Kings River.

HUMBOLDT—Generally good, small winter die-off. No fire closures to date. Much posted land, but permission to hunt can usually be obtained by responsible sportsmen. Only sizable public land is in rugged Shelter Cove and Kings Peak areas.

EAST IMPERIAL—Deer fat—but few in East Imperial. No fire hazard.

EASTERN TULARE - SOUTH INYO—Deer in good condition. Best should be Kennedy Meadows, Monache Meadows, Templeton Meadows and upper Cottonwood Creek—all 6,000 feet and up. No fire closures, little posted property. Try Inyo County later in season—in Olancho, Lone Pine and Independence areas.

KERN—Many bucks in excellent shape in Kern River herd. Desert herds generally depleted. Best should be Greenhorn mountains and upper Kern river areas.

TULARE-KINGS—Very few deer seen in Big Meadows area, small kill predicted.

LASSEN—Considerably fewer deer seen this year in desert area.

MADERA—Should be good to excellent in eastern half. Best may be in Central Camp-Whisky Ridge and Clover Meadow-Granite Creek areas. No fire closures.

MARIPOSA—Prospects only fair. Signal Peak and Crane Flat areas look best.

MODOC—Prospects appear poorest in years.

MONO—Looks good in Bridgeport and Coleville areas in the high country. Plenty of water and good forage, low winter die-off. McGee and Laurel mountains, Mammoth Lakes, Parket mountain, Pilot Springs and Tioga Pass areas should be best.

NEVADA—Fewer deer this year. No "choice" hunting spots reported. West county bucks appear bigger this year, in low country.

PLACER—Fair prospects, but bucks well scattered. Try higher elevations.

PLUMAS—Slightly below average prospects. East side die-off was high.

RIVERSIDE—Good prospects near Mt. Center, Garner Valley area east of Highway 74 and Hurley Flats area. Lifting of fire closures would increase the kill.

SAN BERNARDINO—Very few deer seen. They're in high country, and new county firearms ordinance protects them in populated places except Fontana area.

SAN DIEGO—Prospects poor. Best bets may be desert mountains east of Julian and Chihuahua valley north of Julian.

SHASTA—Fair to good opening expected. Fire danger extreme.

SIERRA—Western county fair to poor, except Haskell Peak. Fair to good on eastern slopes. Very few spikes seen.

SISKIYOU—Less deer, but in good shape, on valley floor. They are probably in the higher elevations—at present. McCloud Flats may be best, Bray and Tennant areas next best.

TEHAMA—Average prospects. Should be best near season's end.

TRINITY—Looks fair. Three-quarters of county not posted, but rugged.

TULARE—Few bucks seen and hunters will have to work hard.

TUOLUMNE—Prospects excellent for the usual spots. Roads poor.

YUBA—Resident deer in excellent shape. Much private land where permission to hunt is required.

On a tour of the eight-ton Mars flying boat, prior to the football game at Alameda last Friday, we learned the secret of the Navy's success in athletics. Year-round practice. That's the answer.

Those boys can be making and still fall out for a little football scrimmage. Of course, the flying gridiron isn't regulation size. I'd say it was all of a couple yards short of the required length and spectator capacity is limited to a mere 300 or so, but it will suffice until the Navy can get a bigger one flying.

Had I seen that monster in the test stage, I'd of laid odds she wouldn't float, much less fly.

The Weaker Sex???? Before the WACs turn their softball tournament over to the moths for the winter season, one more comment should be made. Neva Lynch must have a piece of iron hanging from that right shoulder. She pitched every one of Presidio's three games last week in the tourney and yielded only 11 hits along the route—eight in one game, three in another and one no-hitter yet! Lynch hurled at a pace that would burn a good man out. Congrats to the gal from Tucson for a stellar performance.

It looks like a big week end in local sporting circles. Presidio will play Treasure Island today at 1400 on the Fort Scott gridiron. Camp Cooke's gridders, paced by player-coach Les Richter, go against the Cal frosh team tomorrow in a preliminary to the Cal-COP game and the Fort Shafter, Hawaii, baseball nine will invade the Presidio crew at 1400 on the Presidio Athletic Field tomorrow.

"THE LIP"

If the usual sports events seem to lack that sensational punch, try this for size. Bear season opens in northwestern California tomorrow. Season runs through 31 December and this year the hunters have the edge on the bruin. A hunter is allowed two bears per season while the bear is only allotted one hunter per season. Don't trust those big black fellows though, as they've been known to cheat on their bag limit.

Let's all go to Raider Camp today and help kindle the fire: 1400 hours at Scott Field.

Hanford Scores a Tourney Whitewash; Presidio WACs Are Top Femme Team

Presidio's WACs and Camp Hanford's 5th AAA Group are the undisputed Sixth Army Softball Champions as a result of a clean sweep by both teams in last week's tourney here at the Presidio.

Presidio capped the femme title with another high scoring runaway over the gals from Fort Lawton, with the final score standing at 15-2. For the record and the bloodthirsty, the locals opened the tourney with a 10-1 victory over the Lawtonites and then went on to axe the Fort Ord WACs, 18-6, in five innings.

Scorching the plate for Presidio was Lynch, who gave up eight hits to losing pitcher Searcy's 13.

Although they didn't know it at the time, the Camp Cooke Medics lost the championship game in the opening minutes when Hausfield, Hanford's first batter, rapped an inside-the-park homer, for the only score of the ball game.

Camp Cooke had winning pitcher Feenstra's number and nailed four safe hits, but failed to parlay them into the run column.

Hanford whitewashed the whole tourney, allowing no team to score in their three games. They blanked Camp Roberts, 4-0, for the men's tourney opener and then sang a 3-0 tune to Fort Lewis in second day play.

Cooke earned their way into the finals by dumping Roberts, 3-1 and Lewis, 2-1.

Under double elimination rules, a team must lose two games to put them out of the running.

After losing their first game to Lewis, Cooke had to play two in a row and by winning those two over Roberts and Lewis, they eliminated both teams, leaving only themselves and Hanford for the final hassle.

Hanford and Cooke are representing the Army at Ford Ord this week in the Inter-Service Softball Tourney, which features leading Air Force and Navy teams in the competition.

The largest crowd ever assembled to see a world heavyweight boxing championship was 120,757. The fight drawing this record breaking number of witnesses was the Dempsey-Tunney match held at Philadelphia in 1926.

Hawaiian Stars Take Openers On Exhibition Tour

Fort Shafter, Hawaii, the Armed Forces, Pacific, baseball champions, currently making an exhibition tour in the Sixth Army Area, racked up two wins in their first two starts this week.

The Commandos scored a 9-3 victory over Camp Stoneman's Travelers, Sunday and dubbed Camp Roberts, 6-4 on Tuesday.

Frankie Malzone was the big gun in the Shafter-Stoneman game, hitting four for five, including a grand slam homer in the third inning. Shafter got four more runs in the sixth, two of them on Carlton Loo's long triple.

Don Larsen, Howard Bode and Lefty Dean Bushaw divided the mound chore with Bode giving up two runs in the seventh and Bushaw, one in the eighth. Carlton Loo and Shin Yogi each paired hits.

Dean Bushaw went all the way for Shafter in the Roberts game. Bob Ross and relief hurler Lonnie Lee pitched for Roberts. Don Larsen paced the Commando hitters with two home runs, one in the fourth with no one on, and one in the eighth with one mate aboard.

Frankie Malzone hit his second homer of the tour in the fourth with no one on.

Shafter's schedule includes Camp Cooke, 17 September; San Luis Obispo, 18th; Fort Ord, 19th and Presidio, 20th.

A record for the worst defeat ever inflicted on one football team by another: Dickinson, 227; Haverford Graduate School, 0.

In 1949, Paul Berry shot an arrow out of gunshot range to a new record of 719 yards, 2 feet.

One day in 1882, for reasons unknown, J. Saunders of New York started running and didn't stop until he had covered 127 miles, 275 yards. He ran for 22 hours and 49 minutes.

Hoop League Formed; Play Starts Monday

Fifteen teams from Presidio and adjoining installations have been entered for the hard court league. They are:

99th Engineers;
NCO Mess;
Headquarters Company, 30th Engineers;
21st Engineers;
6002 ASU, Detachment A;
518th AAA Operations Detachment;
Headquarters and Headquarters Battery, 47th AAA Brigade;
Headquarters Company, 505th MP Battalion;
Company A, 505th;
Company B, 505th;
102nd MRU;
Navy Harbor Defense;
30th AAA Group;
115th CIC;
Headquarters Company, Sixth Army.

Details and the league schedule are being worked out by Sfc. Cook, Post Special Service Athletic Sections, and the various unit representatives.

Slate Cash Prizes For Top League Bowling Teams

Although it was easy to hear a pin drop it was far from quiet at the Fort Winfield Scott bowling alleys this week as six teams sent pins flying in the opening lines of a handicap bowling league.

The best quintette at the end of league bowling will receive $50 for their timber toppling; second place, $30; third place, $20; fourth place, $15. Each team will bowl three lines a week until the closing of league play on 18 December. Prize money is provided by the bowlers in the league.

Three teams from the 99th Engineers dominated the first week of play as each registered two wins and one defeat. Headquarters Company and two of the 21st Engineer fives had a tougher time in recording "x"s and finished with a 1-2 won-lost record.

The Star Presidian will cover the league games and report individual high scores, team high scores, and the standings.

Fort Ord Wins Southern Division; Worden Tops Northern Competition

Fort Ord's red hot Warriors waxed Camp Roberts, 4-2, last Saturday to put the finishing touches to the Southern Division of Sixth Army softball play.

Thurston worked the mound for Ord, being relieved in the seventh by Carbinero and together they gave up six hits to 13 for losing pitcher Frumph.

Ord's third sacker, Melton, and left fielder, Taylor, were the sparkplugs in battery row. Melton rapped his third homer of the tourney and picked up three hits for four times at bat. Taylor drove in two runs in the fourth and hit two safeties for four trips to the plate.

The Warriors went into the finals unbeaten in tourney play. They defeated San Luis Obispo, 2-1; Presidio, 9-0, and Roberts, 5-4, to earn the championship bid.

Roberts scored wins over Stoneman, 3-0, and Cooke, 6-0. Both of their losses were to Ord.

Fort Worden defeated Camp Hanford, 6-1, to cop the Northern Division title.

Worden, Hanford, Ord and Roberts will meet for All-Sixth Army honors at Camp Stoneman, 23-27 September.

Military Bookings For Army-USC Game

Military Air transportation arrangements are being made on a space available basis for those personnel desiring to attend the Army-USC football game at Los Angeles on 4 October. Presidio personnel interested, are requested to contact Military Air Division, extension 2634, for bookings.

In 1945, William Spaulding, U.C.L.A. athletic director, hauled electronic equipment out to the stadium to time the speed of Bob Waterfield's pass. Bob's bullet pass took 6.10 of a second to cover 20 yards, a speed of 68.18 miles per hour.

In 1921, George Flavin of Georgetown stood at the very limits of his own end zone and punted the ball. The ball traveled 78 yards on the fly and then rolled 32 yards more, stopping inches from the Holy Cross goal. Flavin's punt covered 110 yards, the largest on the books.

Tommy Rogers, a courageous 155 pounder, fought his way into the finals of the Harvard intramural boxing contest. Although taking twice as much as he could dish out, Rogers scored a knockout and won a college championship—with only one arm.

Ned Day, a great kegler from West Allis, Wisconsin, has twice made bowling runs of 33 successive strikes.

If there ever was a worse basketball shellacking, the record books don't show it. Kansas City College scored 234 points in a game in 1923. During the spree, a hotshot on the Rainbow team scored a ringer. Final score: 234-2.

In an operation as large as the Armed Forces, spending as we do the largest part of the Federal budget, it would be impossible for everything to be letter perfect. We are bound to make some poor plans, we are bound to make mistakes in carrying out some good plans. But it is my job, and that of the others who are managing the defense program, to see that expenses are kept to a minimum, that we don't make the same mistakes twice, and to look ahead so that we don't make them at all.

In our military planning, no expert can look at our position in the world today and come up with an exact calculation of what the Armed Forces will need in the next several years. The best we can do is to figure what is likely to happen, try to influence what will happen, and be prepared for a series of eventualities. Naturally some of this is expensive and wasteful. Inherently, war is wasteful, planning for war is wasteful, and planning to prevent war is wasteful. If we knew what was going to happen—or if we could estimate our "military market" with the degree of accuracy that a manufacturer can figure his probable sales—our problems would be much simpler. And our solutions would be less costly.

I wish I could tell you that our entire defense effort is moving at top efficiency, that there is no wasted motion of dollars. You and I know that this would not be true. I do believe, however, that some are inclined to conclude from a specific case of waste and inefficiency that this is general throughout the Military Establishment, or to misinterpret a reasonable operation as wasteful. For full evaluation, incidents must be put into their proper perspective.

Let me give you examples of what I mean.

Near your community, for instance, you may see row after row of jeeps parked in a field. It would be easy to conclude that the military has pulled a boner and has so many jeeps it can't use that it has to store them in open fields. These same jeeps, however, may be sent to Korea or Germany next month. Or they may be part of a mobilization reserve that your sons would be using in the first two months of general war.

Another example can be taken from training requirements.

Modern armies need specialists. It takes a great deal of time to train them—in some cases a year or more. From our conscripted soldiers come some of the men most qualified for specialist training. Although their mandatory service is for only 24 months, we are giving a limited number of these soldiers with outstanding capabilities specialist training, particularly in the field of electronics. No doubt it may be questionable that they are being used most efficiently when half or more of their service is being spent in learning a specialty which they may use for less than a year before being separated. But these men have a total military obligation of 8 years; they will be in the Reserves for 6 years. In case of war, we would have an urgent need for these Reserve specialists. We can better afford the time to train them now than in full war.

Moreover, certain conditions peculiar to the times prohibit our operating at full efficiency. The rapid turnover of personnel in the military service is very costly in time and money. Perhaps billions could be saved simply by a substantial increase in a length of time each man serves.

During this fiscal year the Army will lose about half its strength, or about 750,000 men. Think of it, nearly 750,000 trained men going out and the problem of training the new ones coming in—most of them for a 2-year period. These men must be trained to go immediately into war, if need be. And this is no simple process.

From a strictly military standpoint, we would prefer to have these men for the duration plus—as has been the case during war. Our manpower utilization could be improved 100 per cent by that one factor alone.

A soldier must be trained, assigned, almost all moved overseas, returned and separated. All these steps are part of his service whether he serves 24, 36, or 72 months. Naturally the longer he serves, the smaller percentage of his service is lost in "non-serviceable time."

It is true that as these men leave active service, we are building up a large pool of relatively well trained Reservists. But unfortunately most of these servicemen will have been trained only in the basic skills of fighting. As I mentioned a moment ago, it takes a long time to train some of our enlisted specialists. Other requirements of the Army preclude our making specialists out of many of our 24-month-men even though they have the qualifications.

So under our present limits on required service, neither the active forces nor the Reserves get maximum benefit out of a serviceman's time. We must devise some system whereby we can assure specialized training to a reasonable number of reservists, particularly in the enlisted ranks. We must stockpile trained manpower as well as material.

But I would not advocate a radical change on length of mandatory service under today's conditions. A limit on mandatory service is the only fair way in a partial mobilization. A democracy does not always put money first; I am glad to say that in this country, justice, fairness, and a consideration of the individual comes ahead of cash and unreasonable demands of the government.

In considering what we are getting for our money, I am firmly convinced that the overall job the Army is doing today nets the Nation its greatest dollar-for-dollar defense.

Besides a splendid combat Army, we are laying the foundation for a much larger Army of the future if we need it.

Additionally, the Army has had a major role in helping to train our Allies. I need but point to the Turkish and Greek armies to indicate what a reasonable expenditure in material and training manpower can do to help our friends develop first-class fighting forces. We are doing the same thing now with the Republic of Korea's army.

To me, this is an extra dividend the United States is receiving from its Army. As we help our Allies to rebuild their armies, and as we are participating actively in joint defense arrangements, we are strengthening the Free World and in effect providing the means to reduce our own Army. I am convinced our Allies would rather defend themselves with as little help as possible than depend on us to do the job.

A moment ago I spoke about conditions beyond our control which resulted in a more costly operation than imposed by mere military requirements. I certainly did not mean to give you the impression that we were not waging a militant campaign to cut waste and improve efficiency throughout the Army where we can.

To give you an idea of how we are fighting waste and inefficiency, I would like to cite some measures we are taking in the Army to stretch our resources.

Perhaps the best known is our cost-consciousness indoctrination campaign.

Commenting on this program, the Preparedness Subcommittee of the Senate Committee on Armed Services, headed by Senator Lyndon B. Johnson, had this to say last December:

"The Army, we are pleased to note, has taken some potentially valuable steps to instill 'cost-consciousness' into the attitudes of its personnel. Officers, for example, are being graded upon their ability and interest in economizing. That is good and we commend . . . the Army . . ."

I have taken a particular interest in this program because we are trying to get everyone in the Army from basic recruit to the 20-year veteran, from clerk to scientist, into the savings act. Results cannot be measured entirely in dollars and cents; its importance lies in the cumulative effect against waste that arises when over one and one-half million men and women in our Army, plus some half-million civilians working for the Army, realize that the Government's dollars are their dollars.

I have charged the Inspector General with making cost-consciousness a subject of his periodic inspections and reports, on the basis of which the Department of the Army can direct corrective action and greater effort wherever shown to be necessary. Reports in this series show many items of individual savings, ranging from better control of overtime wages, to salvage collections, to shortening periods when entrance lights may be kept on, to selling old lumber—any one of which may seem insignificant in itself but all of which taken together unquestionably represent real economy progress.

Instilling a real feel for economy and conservation in each soldier will provide the broad base for the campaign against waste. From the top, however, must come the imaginative and far-reaching planning, supervision and guidance which will permit us to channel and focus efforts to obtain maximum efficiency at least cost. Part of the battle to do things better is trying out new ideas which look as if they will increase efficiency.

For instance, operations at our Utah General Depot in Ogden are under a new system of simplified requisition and accounting procedures.

Early this month, Congressman Herbert C. Bonner, Chairman of the House "Watchdog Committee," after visiting the installation made these comments:

"This looks like the real thing, and it looks as if it will go a long way to eliminate waste and cut down cost of activities. If it works out as it seems to be doing here, it will no doubt become the procedure of all military services in requisition and supply of material."

We have adopted techniques to drive home the importance of good comptrollership and economy management at each echelon of command and to protect the procurement dollar against inefficiencies, neglect or fraud in contract management.

We have added more than 100 officers to the staff of the Inspector General, who, working closely in coordination with the other investigative agencies of the government, is providing a continuous check on awarding and administering Army contracts.

We have also established Inspector General's offices in each of the seven Technical Services to assist them in keeping their own houses in order. All of the other investigative agencies of the Army such as the Army Audit Agency, which by nature of their work come into this field, are being coordinated in a single "watch-dog" system under the Inspector General. The purpose is not to catch misfeasance after the damage is done, but to detect and prevent it at the start. The Army, in establishing these tight controls, has drawn heavily on the experience of World War II during which we estimate as much as 5 billion dollars was saved through the Inspector General's review of contract awards and administration.

In our "Operation Red Tape" program we are conducting over one hundred survey projects to see if we can't cut down on the paper work that plagues Army administration. One result has been the simplification of reenlistment procedures with a savings of 680,000 man-hours and $780,000.

A major post-war development is the world-wide Army rebuild program. Inaugurated to rehabilitate the countless tons of equipment and supplies left scattered about the earth after World War II, this program has borne full fruit with the requirements of the Korean conflict and the return of our troops to Europe. Carefully prepared estimates from each Technical Service and from each field command show that their activities under this program through last June have returned about 12 billion, 374 million dollars worth of equipment to the supply line at a cost of about 1 billion, 665 million dollars. This savings of more than 10 billions in terms of new equipment means more than $7 saved for every dollar spent.

The variety of equipment repaired and restored is great indeed, ranging from clothing and tentage, to tanks, trucks, and artillery, to radar, radio and telephone, to dental and X-ray equipment, to boats and bridging.

At the vast ordnance automotive rebuild shops in Japan, sometimes called the "BIG-5," mountains of materiel reclaimed from islands of the Pacific and transported by LSTs have been hammered back into shape at minimum cost. For example, two-and-one-half-ton trucks, costing about $7,000 new, have been taken from the junk heap and rebuilt from the ground up for as little as $1,000. These shops now form a huge reclamation center for Korean equipment casualties. Soldiers passing through Japan on their way to the front are given a tour through the center to impress them with the importance of salvaging even junk for this vital process.

These savings have been translated into a reduction of the cost of the Korean conflict, and a consequent reduction in the price the taxpayer has had to pay.

Conservation of equipment is only half the story. In September of 1950, the Army initiated a second program to save scarce raw materials through substitution and simplification of design. An important part of this substitution process includes replacing some 41,400 tactical vehicles in the Army with commercial ones. Generally, we plan to substitute commercial vehicles for tactical vehicles in all units not subject to combat conditions.

We're also trying to restrict the use of the jeep to tactical purposes and combat training—the reason the Army got it in the first place. Many people think that the jeep is inexpensive, cheaper than the ordinary commercial car. Nothing could be further from the facts. A jeep is built to combat specifications. It must take every sort of stress and shock, requires a four-wheel drive and must not cause radio interference. It costs $2147 dollars as compared with $1256 dollars for a simple light commercial-type vehicle.

So far this vehicle substitution program has saved the Army 230 million dollars when one compares the purchase price of tactical vehicles with the cost of the commercial substitutes. Commercial vehicles also afford considerable savings in gas consumption and maintenance and supply of spare parts.

The Army is also conducting a huge scrap hunt which has paid off in the past year and a half to the tune of 37 million dollars. More important the Army has been able to supply more than three-quarters of its needs for brass and other nonferrous metals needed to make ammunition. Much of this scrap has been recovered from the breakdown of obsolete and deteriorated ammunition, fired cartridge cases and other metal recovered from the Korean battlefield, and from the firing ranges and training camps in this country.

In these programs the Army has great help from my civilian aides, a group of distinguished, patriotic, selfless American leaders, who have given invaluable assistance to me personally and to senior commanders in their areas as well as helping to explain Army matters to the public in their communities. The work of the civilian aides in the Sixth Army area has been particularly outstanding.

I think we can all take pride in the dividends this system of buying insurance for peace has brought in terms of National Defense. Major problems are still ahead, particularly in the immediate future. But in my judgment we are on a solid basis. While this partial mobilization is a hardship on all of us, we can be thankful that it isn't a full mobilization and a full-fledged war.

By staying strong, we hope to make it too unpalatable for any aggressor to start World War III. At the same time we must always try to sustain this strength within the economic capacity of our democracy.

I doubt if it would be possible for any other country in the world to support fighting on the scale of Korea, rebuild a reasonable military strength, develop an expandable mobilization base, provide assistance for our Allies, supply them with initial equipment, help them with their training, and at the same time maintain a level of civilian economy to keep this country healthy.

In doing these things I feel we are strengthening the very system that supports our way of life—a way of life based on a free world and free peoples.

Local MP Battalion Will Celebrate Corps Anniversary With Open House

Organization Day of the Military Police Corps will be celebrated by the 505th MP Battalion today with demonstrations, an open-house, sports events and a battalion party in observation of the eleventh anniversary of the corps.

A great deal of MP combat equipment which the public does not ordinarily have the opportunity to see will be demonstrated in front of Building 104 on the Main Post from 1300 to 1600 today. On the parade ground will be various types of vehicles used by the MPs and on the lawns will be uniforms, weapons and other equipment.

Inside Building 104, visitors may inspect model barracks, supply rooms and dining rooms. A photographic display will show the achievements of the 505th Battalion.

During the afternoon the companies will compete in pistol matches and sports events including softball and volleyball.

A battalion dinner party at the Presidio Enlisted Men's Service Club will follow the day's activities, with Col. Peter J. Lloyd, Infantry, Deputy Post Commander of the Presidio; Col. Joseph L. Driskell, Military Police Corps, Sixth Army Provost Marshall, and Lt. Col. Keene Saxon, Military Police Corps, Battalion Commander, addressing the gathering.

Oakland Police Chief Congratulates MPs

"The Oakland Police Department wishes to congratulate the Military Police Corps on their 11th Anniversary.

"We feel that the Military Police have done an outstanding job since their inception and we have particularly noted the high caliber of men filling their ranks. Many of these men have joined the Oakland Police Department upon their discharge from the military service.

New Army Port

Claremont Terminal, Jersey City, N. J., a processing and shipping point established to handle materials for overseas construction, is scheduled to end operations October 31. Future Army shipping will be handled by the Hampton Roads Port of Embarkation, Norfolk, Va., and other similar ports.

New Combat Film

The Signal Corps has produced a 16-mm film for TI&E showings entitled "Dress Rehearsal." The film features realism in Army combat training and emphasizes the difference between early WWII type training and today's battle indoctrination courses. The movie is available from Signal Corps libraries for theater and TV showings.

Army Commander's Message

To the Military Police Corps:

There is a wealth of tradition and soldierly spirit associated with the Military Police although the Corps is young in years as a separate service in the Army.

Since its establishment in 1941, the Corps has fulfilled its mission in a most commendable manner. Wherever American soldiers are stationed it has earned the respect not only of the members of the Armed Forces but also of the law enforcement agencies with which it works.

In congratulating the men and women of the Sixth Army Military Police Corps on the eleventh anniversary of their organization, I wish to express my hope that they will continue to carry out their exacting assignments in a manner which will continue to reflect credit upon their Corps and on the United States Army.

Army Will Get 47,000 New Troops In November

Washington—The Department of Defense has asked the Selective Service System to deliver to Armed Forces Induction Stations 47,000 men in November for assignment to the Army.

The Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force do not intend to place calls with Selective Service for November.

The number of men requested for November is the same as the number requested for October and is based on maintaining approved strength after allowances have been made for enlistments and re-enlistments.

Once For All

There will no longer be seven campaigns to raise funds for the seven major welfare and health organizations—now give just ONCE to your United Crusade.

Mayor Robinson Salutes MP's Record

"It is with great pleasure that I salute the Military Police on this 11th Anniversary of their founding.

"As Mayor of San Francisco, I am thoroughly aware of their great contribution to the maintenance of law and order in this city and their record and demeanor reflect great credit upon the military establishment and I am confident that with each succeeding anniversary their place and importance in the military establishment will be accorded greater and greater recognition.

"Elmer E. Robinson, Mayor, San Francisco."

460 New Teachers Join U.S. Army's Overseas Schools

The Army is sending more than 460 American teachers to Europe and the Far East where they will join the staffs of instructors for 16,000 children of military personnel and American civilians overseas.

They will teach in 116 elementary and 19 high schools in Germany, Austria, Trieste, Japan and Okinawa.

The teachers—most of whom are single women between 25 and 45 years of age—come from all parts of the U.S. and have had at least three years' teaching experience in this country.

The children—75 per cent of whom are of elementary school age—are mostly widely traveled youngsters accustomed to transferring from one school to another whenever their parents are reassigned.

Since at any time they may transfer back to the U.S., their schools must be on a par with educational institutions in this country. For this reason, the Army picks teachers for American Dependents' Schools who have enthusiasm and ability to develop the best in scholarship and citizenship in young people.

MSTS Ends Free Travel Oct. 1, 1952

Washington—Military personnel and their dependents traveling on a "space available" basis aboard Military Sea Transport Service ships will have to pay for the privilege starting 1 October, 1952.

The new plan does not apply to personnel and their dependents normally entitled to free transportation at government expense when ordered to a permanent change of station.

14 Categories Affected

Charges will be computed on a mileage basis for travel and meals. The pay plan will apply everywhere. It affects all persons—14 passenger categories—previously entitled to free rides.

For example, approximate rates for travel from the East Coast of the U.S. to Europe on the space available policy are:

1. Officers, Defense Department civilians, and their dependents will travel cabin class at a cost of $50 per person.
2. Enlisted personnel will be charged $20 when traveling troop class. Their dependents will be charged $20 each traveling cabin class.
3. Children five years of age or younger will travel free.

Some of the groups affected by the change are certain military and civilian personnel of the Defense Department and their dependents when traveling in an ordinary leave status. Also affected are dependents of military and civilian personnel traveling on temporary duty orders.

Officially, space available is determined as "space unassigned after all space requirements for travel assignments have been made, and which would otherwise sail unused."

Army TIC Topic

Major happenings in the world during the first six months of 1952 will be considered under the subject title of "Report on World Affairs" at the Troop Information Conferences of Presidio units during the coming week. Attention will be called to significant trends and, in many cases, the interrelationship of events.

The conferences will be based on an Armed Forces TALK which is the first in a new series of quarterly reports on world affairs. These reports will supply an important part of the background information needed in order to understand world history while it is being made.

In mid-1952 the war in Korea still demanded more of the world's attention than any other happening. The negotiating, the air strikes, the periodic ground fighting along Parallel 38 in Korea were reflected in reports of other world events.

The conferences will cover these reports of events in Asia, Europe, Near East and Mediterranean and the United States. Accomplishments of the United Nations General Assembly and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization will also be considered.

As summarized in TALK: "From Korea to Western Germany, and at many points north, east, south and west of those two trouble spots, the world struggled with problems posed by poverty and ignorance, by the natural urge of people to achieve independence, by inflation, but most dangerously, by communist aggression."

"THE GOLD DUST TWINS" is the title almost officially bestowed on Lt. L. R. Stanley (left) and Capt. Alex L. Alpers of the Secretary to the General Staff, Operations. The two officers work closely in handling the transportation and accommodations for VIPs (very important people), both civilian and military, who visit the Presidio. Lt. Stanley heads the Visitors Bureau and Capt. Alpers is Chief, Military Aid Division. (Army Photo by Toy)

All That Is Glamour!

Planning Plus Patience Make VIP Bureau Going Concern

Should the diplomatic corps ever need two battle-scarred and fire-tested veterans who have weathered the storms of one of the busiest VIP fronts of the nation, they need look no further.

The men to fill their bill are Lt. L. R. Stanley of the Visitors' Bureau and Capt. Alex L. Alpers, Chief, Military Air Division, both of the Secretary to the General Staff, Operations.

Visits to the Presidio by VIPs (Very Important People) involve very important details handled by the very busy and often very harassed officers and their staffs. Working in the closest cooperation, these two plan connecting and local transportation, food and lodging, escort officers, aides and a hundred and one other details which usually arise.

Complicating this planning is the fact that the visitors often arrive without much advance notice and are following tight schedules which have to be dovetailed with the schedules of local VIPs.

Receptions of top-ranking generals, cabinet members or movie stars also require following rather rigid protocol.

These are ordinary problems compared to some of the minor things to be tended to:

If arrangements have been made for a foreign prince to stay at a downtown hotel, does the hotel have the flag of the prince's country to fly?

A general wants to see the plan of the Coliseum in Los Angeles—where can it be obtained immediately?

A famous movie actress forgets her "Tabu" and just cannot put on a troop show without her favorite perfume—how to get it quickly?

Five generals are arriving on the same day—are they all getting appropriate accommodations?

To get all the various details tended to calls for the ability to cut through red tape and a knowledge of where and how to get things done quickly and efficiently. Lt. Stanley admits that much of his time is spent stepping on everyone's toes and consequently salving feelings possibly wounded in the rush.

Making the VIPs feel as though they were at their own station is one of the primary objectives in the planning. This is done in numerous ways: drivers are selected for their extensive knowledge of the city, aides for personal services are also furnished, or their secretarial work is done by the bureau's secretary, Mrs. Sally Minnear.

In addition to the VIPs themselves, their accompanying aides are given the same care and attention.

Arranging the best itineraries is the task of Capt. Alpers who coordinates schedules with the 1117th Special Air Mission Squadron at Hamilton Air Field, Calif. Competent service is offered by the squadron with six VC-47 aircraft to carry on their mission.

However, planning the itineraries and time schedules is an exacting job. Both military and civilian VIPs are flown anywhere in the United States with approximately 60 per cent of the flights in the Sixth Army area and the other 40 per cent anywhere in the country.

Flights are scheduled on commercial lines as well as on SAM squadron trips. Visitors have but to give their route and in short order they will have their tickets and space confirmations.

In addition to the aircraft, Capt. Alpers also has charge of the Q boats at Fort Baker. These are crash boats which have been converted for courier and inspection trips and are often used by the VIPs.

Presidio's bureau is unusually busy because of the flow of dignitaries to and from the Far East Command. Recent visitors have included: the Honorable Frank Pace, Jr., Secretary of the Army; Major General Haydon L. Boatner, former Commander of all United Nations prisoner-of-war camps in Korea; Ramon Magsaysay, Philippine Secretary of Defense, and Bob Hope and his troupe.

While greeting these people may sound like a glamorous job, the bureau personnel can assure you it entails a lot of plain hard work, too.

AFT 413 Banned

Washington—Armed Forces Talk 413 has been rescinded by the Department of Army Circular 75 and is not to be used in the Troop Information Program. Entitled "Veterans Benefits" and issued July 11, 1952, the Talk contained numerous inaccuracies. Copies on hand are to be salvaged.

UNITED CRUSADE gets a big assist from Presidio servicemen who joined in the giant operation of packing 3,000,000 pieces of campaign literature and supplies for the organization's first campaign which began this week. The supplies were packed for delivery to San Francisco business firms' employee campaign committees and volunteers in outlying districts for use in solicitation in this united fund-raising drive for seven health and welfare causes representing 85 agencies—American Red Cross, United Cerebral Palsy Association, Arthritis and Rheumatism Foundation, Heart Association, Cancer Society, Community Chest and United Defense Fund-U.S.O.

We Point With Pride

Lt. Gen. Joseph M. Swing
Commanding General,
Sixth Army,
Presidio of San Francisco,
California

Dear General Swing:

I am pleased to acknowledge the fine contributions of $1,939.35 to the 1952 joint fund campaign of Army Emergency Relief and Army Relief Society, reported on the Presidio of San Francisco AER Financial Report for August.

This commendable demonstration of support and confidence by members of your headquarters and by all the other Army personnel stationed there is deeply appreciated by the Board of Managers of Army Emergency Relief. It is realized that such gratifying results were made possible because of your personal cooperation and interest in all matters effecting AER. Please cause to be conveyed to all the members of your headquarters and to all the other officers and enlisted men stationed at the Presidio of San Francisco my sincere thanks as Director, and the deep appreciation of our Board of Managers.

Sincerely,

EDWARD F. WITSELL
Major General, USA, Ret.

Why You Fight!

You are fighting to stop armed aggression and maintain peace not only in Korea but in your respective homelands. This renewed battle is for the preservation of life, liberty and the right to the pursuit of happiness of all free men. These are fundamental in the rights of man—the rock upon which our civilization is founded—and they are the first rights which Communism denies its own people.

The time has come when all men of the free and decent world must steel their souls to face the desperate, bitter and uncompromising battle with armed Communist aggression. Our strength rests on the solid foundation of belief in God and the rights of man rather than on the will of dictators, imposed through cruelty and complete disregard of human rights.—Lt. Gen. James A. Van Fleet, Commanding General, Eighth Army.

All-Out Support!

Presidio Pledges Top Effort For United Crusade Campaign

All-out support of military and civilian personnel of the Presidio is being given to the United Crusade in its campaign for financial support to San Francisco social and health agencies which is now underway on the Presidio and throughout the city.

Among the distinguished civic and military leaders who are sponsors of the United Crusade is Lieutenant General Joseph M. Swing, Sixth Army Commander. At meetings formulating plans for the drive, General Swing was represented by Colonel Peter J. Lloyd, Deputy Post Commander.

Even before the campaign was officially launched, Presidio service men had worked at the Crusade offices helping to pack 3,000,000 pieces of campaign literature and supplies for delivery to committees and volunteers.

Object of a United Crusade to support charitable purposes is to raise more funds by bringing order and unity into the single drive. By giving once for all the duplication of time, effort and expense of seven campaigns is eliminated.

The Presidio campaign was started last week when Colonel Lloyd outlined the purposes of the drive to nearly 100 committee members representing various sections and units of the Presidio.

The drive will conclude 15 October.

Notice!

All Commissary Permits must be renewed subsequent to 30 September as after this date permits now in use will not be honored for admission to the Commissary.

Application forms for renewal of permits are available at entrance to the Commissary Store upon request.

COLONEL MIQUEL R. FERNANDEZ, Chief Dental Officer of the Philippine Army, was a recent visitor to Letterman Army Hospital at the Presidio.

The Colonel stopped at Letterman on his way back to the Philippines after attending the 11th International Dental Congress at London, England.

Since leaving Manila in July the Philippine Colonel has nearly circled the globe. Stopping at many of the world's largest hospitals to observe the latest advances in modern dental techniques.

Colonel Fernandez is no stranger to Letterman as he was an observer here for four months in 1946. While here at that time he caught up on the advances made in dentistry while he was a prisoner of war at the infamous Camp O'Donnel in the Philippines.

Speaking of his more recent visit to Letterman the Colonel said, "I would have missed something in my trip had I not been able to again visit Letterman."

Stay Alert to Stay Alive!

Monthly Fire Drills Serve To Prepare You For Real Thing

Cries of "FIRE! Evacuate this building," are heard once a month in most buildings on this Post. Usually, this alarm merely signifies a fire drill, but these words are not to be taken lightly, warns George Geller, Chief, Fire Prevention and Protection, at the Presidio.

"Just as fire drills have an unexpected way of turning up, so do fires. Fires, more often strike without warning," says the Chief. "Your fire drill trains you to be prepared for any emergency."

A fire drill may catch top brass in conference or Army chefs taking part in some delicate culinary task. The next time you hear an alarm, be on the alert, it may be a fire instead of a fire drill.

"Be ready at all times," advises the Fire Chief, "the next time you hear the cry, 'Fire! Evacuate the building,' your life may be saved by fast action. Your fire drill serves a two-fold purpose: 1st, it trains personnel to evacuate a building quickly and in an orderly manner; 2nd, it aims to make more people more fire conscious."

In the course of the past year thousands of evacuation drills have been conducted in hundreds of buildings in the Presidio and sub-stations. "The efficient manner in which these drills are conducted is a tribute to the wholehearted cooperation given by military and civilian personnel on this Post," said Chief Geller.

Fire drills are conducted by Area and Unit Fire Marshals. The Presidio Fire Department, in cooperation with Unit Fire Marshals often call for evacuation of buildings, to test the alertness of personnel. Fire Prevention talks are given by the Post Fire Inspector, Arthur LeDuc who has this to say: "An important function of a fire drill is to avert panic and to make sure no one is left in a building, personnel are detailed to check washrooms, attics, basements and out-of-the-way places. Other details are assigned to remove and salvage valuable property in event of fire."

"It is important to remember in a fire drill as in a fire, all doors should be closed when you evacuate a room. This is for the purpose of preventing the rapid spread of fire. Be familiar with all available means of egress now, before a fire strikes."

"The exit you usually use may be cut off and alternative means of escape may have to be used. The person who is prepared has the advantage over the person who is not prepared. By being fire conscious you not only increase your safety but the safety of others."

DAILY FIRE PREVENTION IS YOUR LIFE EXTENSION.

Veteran Hospital Chaplain Assigned To Letterman

"Chaplain (Captain) Samuel J. Vernon, veteran of WW I, II and the Korean action, has been assigned to duty at Letterman as a Protestant Chaplain."

CAPTAIN VERNON

Chaplain Vernon first entered the Military Service when he joined the British Army in 1914 and was in the Royal Army Service Corps where he rose from the rank of Private to First Lieutenant.

Shortly after the United States entered WW II, the Chaplain, then living in New Hampshire, joined the Chaplains' Corps of the U. S. Army and served overseas for a period of 18 months.

In 1947 the Chaplain was assigned to Japan, and spent a year in Tokyo before being assigned to the 172nd Station Hospital for 20 months. Upon return to the United States he was assigned to the 64th Field Hospital at Fort Bragg, North Carolina.

Immediately after the Korean action broke out the 64th was sent to Japan to augment the hospitals already there. Chaplain Vernon was assigned to the Osaka Army Hospital where he remained until August of this year.

After a short leave the Chaplain has taken up his duties here at Letterman, where he is busy renewing old acquaintances among the many patients who passed through the Osaka Army Hospital.

Philippine Officials Visit Letterman Army Hospital

Top ranking dignitaries from the Philippine Republic were honored guests at Letterman Army Hospital on the Presidio this week.

Among the guests who toured the hospital facilities were the Island Republic's Vice-President, the Honorable Fernando Lopez, his wife and daughter, Philippine Congressmen Ramon Matra and Miss Maria Paz-Rufino.

They were accompanied by Miss Maxine Gonong, Confidential Secretary to the Philippine Consulate General of San Francisco and Mr. Jimmy Jensen, San Francisco businessman.

Upon their arrival at Letterman Army Hospital they were greeted by Lt. Col. James Mackin, who gave a brief history of the hospital. Then they met and talked with hospitalized personnel at Letterman who are natives of the Philippines.

Blow Fourth Quarter Lead!

Raider's Pass Defense Weak; Lose To TI Pirates, 27-19

A 19-6 lead early in the fourth quarter failed to materialize into a victory for the Presidio Red Raiders last Friday, as quarterback Harry Narcisian and his Treasure Island Pirates tallied three last-minute touchdowns to wrap up a 27-19 win here on the home field.

Narcisian, a former University of Colorado star, passed to the half-back, Purser, for a TD midway in the final period and hit paydirt twice himself, on the same play, a fake hand-off bootleg around left end, from within the 10-yard marker, in the waning minutes of the game.

TI received the opening kickoff and a first quarter seesaw battle finally ended with Presidio's fullback, Kirby, plunging over from the 1-yard line. Try for extra point failed.

hit Bowder, Pirate halfback, on the 50 and he carried it home for the score.

Early in the final stanza, the Raiders moved the ball across the mid-field stripe and Daigle, on a pitch-out from Bell, ram-bled 35 yards for a touchdown. Daigle also scored the conversion on a linebuck.

With seven minutes to go, Narcisian uncorked a pass to Purser for six points and then within two minutes of the final gun, he ran the

A second quarter passing duel failed to put either team within striking distance until Raider quarterback, Bell, flipped a short aerial to Daigle, left halfback, who lateraled to fleet scatback, Nakano, who in turn scampered 25 yards to score. Unable to make the conversion, the half-time score stood at 12-0.

Gordon, Raider defense back, intercepted two passes and knocked several down, to stand out in that department.

Presidio, unable to move the ball in the opening minutes of the second half, punted out and Treasure Island took over on their own 30. Narcisian took to the air again, throwing two long aeri-als that fell incomplete, but a third one two bootleg TD's, both of them being set up by Presidio fumbles.

Presidio's lineplay looked outstanding again, with Pankratz, Seafelt, Hoagland and Catlett sparking the forward wall.

Both teams lost heavily on fumbles and penalizations. TI lost 85 yards to 65 for Presidio on penalty's.

Presidio completed 8 out of 13 passes for 104 yards and gained 124½ yards rushing. Treasure Island hit 3 completions out of 13 attempts for 105 yards and also netted 124½ yards rushing.

The visitors racked up 11 first downs to 8 for the locals.

Report from WASHINGTON

(By Armed Forces Press Service)

Smaller down payment requirements by veterans purchasing new homes have been announced by the Veterans Administration. The reductions came about with government suspension of Regulation X, which had imposed emergency restrictions on down payments and years-to-pay for new private housing. Under the new ruling veterans will not have to pay any down payment on homes costing $7,000 or less; only $500 for homes in the $10,000 class. Biggest cutbacks occurred in the $15-20,000 category. Down payments in this class have been sliced between $1,800 and $4,380.

The U.S. will try to detonate "an explosion greater than has ever been set off before" at Eniwetok this fall, the Joint Congressional Atomic Energy Committee announces. Only official observers of the U.S. government and members of Task Force 132 will be present at the tests.

Applications for the combat pay bonus are now available for eligible ex-servicemen at local post offices.

Construction will begin early next year on a permanent building for the Adjutant General School and Finance School, Ft. Benjamin Harrison, Ind. Congress approved a $5,000,000 appropriation for the two schools which will graduate approximately 12,750 yearly. Both schools have moved eight times since their inception.

Operational control of Navy and Air Force facilities at White Sands Proving Grounds, Las Cruces, N. M., has been placed under the Department of the Army. Concentration of this activity is expected to result in closer coordination among the military services in guided missile research and testing projects.

The Korean Service Medal will not be available for issue until after the cessation of hostilities in Korea because of the current metal conservation program. Eligible personnel will be advised when the medal will be available for issue.

Yom Kipper Eve

Information regarding arrangements may be secured by contacting the San Francisco Jewish Community Center at 3200 California St., or by calling the center's number—UNDERhill 3-0622.

Break-the-fast and Yom Kipper Dance will be held by the NJWB-USO at the center on Monday, 29 September.

Plan Basic Training For Reserve Units

Washington—In a move designed to train inductees efficiently and at the same time more economically, the Army has assigned basic training to five General Reserve divisions and several non-division units.

Selective Service calls for 77,000 men in the next two months encouraged the move. The General Reserve includes stateside Army troops whose mission is to be trained, equipped and ready for immediate duty. These units will provide 16 weeks of basic training to men who would have been sent to replacement training centers or training divisions.

Post-basic assignments for these trainees will be made in the same manner as if they had gone to a training center.

September's inductees training with General Reserve units are being sent to Camp Atterbury, Ind., and Camp Rucker, Ala., with the 31st and 47th Infantry Divisions. In October, the 11th Airborne, the 1st Armored and the 37th Infantry divisions will train recruits. Those units will continue to function as part of the General Reserve force despite their added missions.

Did You Know

Locusts look like grasshoppers but are bigger and more destructive. They migrate in swarms covering as much as 250 square miles. After some 30 swarms have crossed a country, billions of their eggs start hatching.

Lovelier Than Legs?

Now it's bare shoulders! The era of the plunging neckline, the bare midriff and the exposed calf is ending. A Hollywood actress today has to have BSA—(Bare Shoulder Appeal). The trend began a year ago when movie producers decided to make bigger and better historical adventure "epics." "Our studio research experts," explained one producer, "spent days finding out just what kind of clothes Arabian princesses, pirate's daughters, and pioneer girls wore. They found it was always bare shoulders. And a shapely shoulder beats a plunging neckline any day!" A good example of BSA is displayed by Arlene Dahl in "Desert Song" and "Caribbean." "A woman should never forget that her shoulders have wonderful possibilities," says Miss Dahl.

And Away We Go—

A stepped-up celebrity program has begun in the Armed Forces Entertainment Branch. Current tours have Audrey Totter, William Holden and Marie Windsor in Korea. Frances Langford and hubby Jon Hall are set to leave for FECOM Sept. 10, followed by Mickey Rooney Sept. 25, and Bill Bendix a few days later.

Top Tunes—

Top talent and tunes on records as polled via leading U.S. disc jockeys in order of popularity are: Eddie Fisher's "Wish You Were Here," Vera Lynn's "Auf Wiederseh'n, Sweetheart," Rosemary Clooney's "Half As Much," Jo Stafford's "You Belong to Me," Clooney's "Botch-a-Me," Nat (King) Cole's "Somewhere Along the Way," Hugo Winterhalter's "Vanessa," Johnnie Ray's "Walkin' My Baby Back Home," Al Martino's "Here in My Heart," and Frankie Laine's "High Noon."

We hear that Diogenes, the gent who used to go around looking for an honest man, is back. He's trying to find a man in Service who'll admit he made less than $50 a week in civilian life.

Plan Four New USO Centers For EuCom Troops

Four new USO centers will be opened in London, Paris, Naples, and Casablanca.

The new units are part of a major expansion program which will broaden USO's services to members of the Armed Forces stationed in Europe and North Africa, according to Edwin E. Bond, USO Executive Director.

The new centers will be staffed by personnel assigned by the member agencies of the USO, which include the Young Men's Christian Association, the National Catholic Community Service, the National Jewish Welfare Board, the Young Women's Christian Association, The Salvation Army, the National Travelers Aid Association, and Camp Shows, Inc.

The current USO overseas program embraces clubs in Fairbanks, Kodiak, and Anchorage, Alaska; Rome, Italy; Frankfurt and Heidelberg, Germany; Honolulu, Guam, Okinawa, the Canal Zone and Istanbul, Turkey. The USO's "Operation Leapfrog," with headquarters in Nice, France, establishes temporary headquarters wherever members of the U. S. Sixth Fleet go ashore along the Mediterranean.

In addition, USO Camp Shows will continue to send entertainment units on regular schedules to all parts of the world where U. S. troops are stationed, developing its schedules in conjunction with the Department of Defense.

THE BOOK CORNER

In conjunction with the Fourth Interservice Photography Contest, the Presidio Libraries have books on photography, pictures and information on the rules of the contest on display.

The excellent collection of books on photography have been enriched by the addition of new editions of the following: PHOTO LAB INDEX in two volumes; THE NEW LEICA MANUAL by Morgan & Lester; THE GRAPHIC GRAPHLEX PHOTOGRAPHY also by Morgan & Lester; and PHOTOGRAPHY by Neblette.

Experts and authorities on the subject are represented by Andreas Feininger and his ADVANCED PHOTOGRAPHY and PHOTOGRAPHY, Fritz Henle in his book FRITZ HENLE'S ROLLEI, and Ansel Adams in the 3 volumes of his Basic Photo Series: CAMERA & LENS, THE NEGATIVE, and THE PRINT.

The "How-to-do-it" book is especially popular, such as: LIGHTING by Nibbelink; ENLARGING by Gurrie, and CHILD PHOTOGRAPHY by Schneider.

—M. J. Bustruck, Librarian.

LATEST BOOKS ON PHOTOGRAPHY are prominently displayed at the Presidio Main Library in connection with the Fourth Inter-Service Photography contest now in its initial stages. Miss Mary Jane Bustruck, Chief Librarian, Presidio Libraries, is shown above discussing the books and the contest with Cpl. V. Moorehouse of the 505th MP Bn. Entries for the Presidio contest must be submitted to the Post Special Service office, Building 122, not later than 15 October. Contest rules and entry blanks may be secured at the Presidio Camera Club at Fort Baker, the Post Special Service office and service club, as well as at the Post Libraries. The Sixth Army contest will be held later in the year with entries to be judged between 15 November and 15 December. (Army Photo by Lee)

Raiders Tackle Brothers-In-Law Tonight!

Redwood City Will Be Scene Of the Crime

You can't play the ponies and win! Presidio's big Red Raider machine will be out to turn that age old bit of advice into a falsehood when they attempt to corral the San Francisco Broncos tonight, in Sequoia High School Stadium, Redwood City, at 2015 hours.

Nate Howard will turn his semi-professional hosses out to graze against a well-fed bunch of boys who won't be nosing around the grassy turf any more than possible.

Ridin' herd on '01 Nate's Buckers will be about the biggest test on the Raiders' tough rodeo circuit this year.

Last Sunday, the Broncos ran roughshod over an Oakland club and before they would even think of going back to the corral, they scored 93 points.

Sam DeVito, a fiery little quarterback and former San Francisco Stater will be giving the locals much cause to sharpen their pass defense.

Gaspar Perricone and Bob Ottoson, Raider mentors, have been stressing physical training this week as a result of the Treasure Island game. Presidio played good ball for three quarters, but ran out of gas fifteen minute ahead of time.

All service personnel in uniform will be admitted free to this and every game between the Broncos and a service team.

SPORT SHORTS —

On 18 June, 1942, Eric Nessler of France had his glider towed aloft. On 20 June, he landed back where he started. Nessler had kept his motorless plane in the ozone for more than 38 hours.

On 2 August, 1934, M. Pauliquen of Paris, remained under water 6 minutes, 29½ seconds, a record for holding the breath.

Captain Barclay Allardye of Ury, Scotland, on a $500 bet, walked 1,000 miles in 1,000 hours. Through rain and heat, Allardye walked a mile an hour for approximately six weeks. He had $100,000 bet on himself and altogether $500,000 had been wagered against him finishing the grinding walk.

Miss Dorcas Lehman of York, Pennsylvania, once broke an iron chain by expanding her chest. She carried two men and a 200-pound bar on her shoulders and then when spectators were completely dumbfounded, Dorcas lifted 1,000 pounds with her feet.

To cap this horrifying demonstration, Miss Lehman lifted 375 pounds of dead weight off the floor an arm's length into the air—a world's record for women.

In 1832, Menzen Ernst, a great Norwegian athlete, ran from Constantinople to Calcutta and back. He covered this distance of 5,625 miles over mountains, deserts and rivers in 59 days, an average speed of 95 miles a day or about 4 miles an hour.

Between 15 September, 1945 and 18 May, 1947, Warren Rosar caught 147 games for the Athletics without miffing a ball, or making a poor throw, or missing in any way. That's a record.

99th's T-Fivers Lead Fort Scott Bowling League

The 99th Engineer's T-5's bowled their way into first place in the Fort Scott bowling league this week. A three-game winning streak put them ahead of the pack with a 5-1 won-lost record.

If the T-5's can stay in front until 18 December, they can walk off with the $50 first prize money.

Sfc. John Aranza topped the 99th keglers with a sizzling 205 for the high individual score of the week. Consistent scoring by Sgt. Charles Hatch boosted the pin total of the T-5's as he bowled a 160 average over six lines of play.

Two victories out of three tries by the 21st Alibis Thursday night was good enough for the second slot in the league. One reason for the Alibis showing — a 170-pin average by Sfc. Les Hartman, the highest individual average in the league.

Three teams are deadlocked in third with 3-3 records.

Games may be cancelled only if military reasons prevail and the opposing team is notified 24 hours in advance.

Trophies will be awarded to the winning and runner-up teams by Special Services.

Here's A Teapot Made To Order For A Tempest

Oh Tempest! Where is thy fugit? When the Presidio Red Raiders clash with the San Francisco Broncos, a local semi-pro team that might well turn into a farm club for professional football, they will present backers of both teams with a unique set of questions?

Can the Raider's coaches, who are first-string stars on the Broncos, profitably diagnose defensive and offensive plays that will give the Raiders a chance to upset their play-for-pay alma mater?

Will the loss of Corporals Perricone and Ottoson, the first a bone-crushing fullback who has been the Bronco's leading ground gainer in its lopsided wins over every foe this year, and the second a line-splintering guard who has been opening opposing lines with the ease of a rotary buzz-saw, even things for the outclassed Raiders? Both have indicated they will coach the Raiders and not play with the Broncos tonight.

Raider fans have repeatedly asked, rightly or wrongly, if these two outstanding offensive stars might not have spelled the difference in the team's first two narrow losses. Both coaches have stated that their presence in the line-up would only add confusion to their coaching duties and that they would be glad to suit-up if a suitable full time coach was available. However, they add that since the season is now underway this would be unfair to the men that they would replace, since it would knock them out of starting assignments that they had worked long and hard for.

Of course, no matter how fairly questions are asked, and honestly answered, Joe Fan is a tough cookie to please, and can be counted on to draw his own conclusions. In this case it might be a bitter, "You can't serve two masters!" Or he might find his answer in the one given a stand full of heckling sailors at Alameda during the Raiders' first game. The Salts had been giving a civilian suited quarterback, who was loudly past-posting every play, a skin full of verbal needles, finally suggesting that if he felt so strongly about the mistakes being made by his team he had better suit-up. His answer was, "I ain't getting paid for it!" (KSE)

In December, 1946, the Chicago Bears and the New York Giants met for the championship of the National Football League. More than 58,000 fans watched the Bears whip the Giants, 24-14. When the same two teams met for professional honors back in 1921, an audience of 80 watched the game. Most of them were relatives and friends of the players.

Olympic Champs Share Tribute With Army Sick

After receiving one of the greatest receptions ever rendered by the city of San Francisco last week, nine Olympic stars made it a special effort to share their joy with some of their less fortunate fans by paying a visit to Letterman Army Hospital.

Bob Mathias, Sim Iness, Corporal Louis Gage, Charles Adkins, Johnnie McCormack, Ann Curtis Cuneo, Sharon Geary, Delia Maulenkamp, Paula Meyers and Barbara Stark spent a full hour of their action-packed day visiting the patients, chatting and answering the many questions they were asked.

The warm enthusiasm generated by the visiting greats, reaffirmed, in the eyes of the Lettermanites, the fact that the U.S. participants were not only the greatest athletes, but typical ambassadors of sportsmanship in its highest form, as they were so tabbed by Olympic officials.

The visit came after some one hundred and fifty thousand San Franciscans accorded the champs a welcome unrivaled in the city's history.

Many of the patients will get the opportunity to see the athletes in action again. They will probably be rooting for two-time decathlon champion, Bob Mathias, as he modifies his athletic prowess to conform to gridiron standards and totes the pigskin for the Stanford Indians this fall. Corporal Louis Gage, the welterweight boxer, is stationed here at the Presidio and will be active in the ring this winter.

George Dixon, a canvas-back if there ever was one, was KO'd a record total of 22 times.

In July, 1940, John Sigmund started swimming from St. Louis and came out of the water 89 hours, 42 minutes later at a point just north of Memphis, for a total distance of 292 miles.

How far can a man run in an hour? Depends on the man. Viljo Heino of Finland galloped 12 miles and 29 yards in a 1945 test. Better than a mile every five minutes.

He traveled the country over but never bought a ticket. The 60-year-old A. L. Monteverde walked from New York to San Francisco in 79 days 10 hours and 10 minutes, a stroll which ended 6 May, 1926.

Europe's first international baseball game last month resulted in a 7-3 win for Spain over Italy and a poor spectator reaction. After seven innings of play marked by 23 errors, one umpire-player hassle, seven bases on balls and two hit batsmen, most of the crowd left the stadium, complaining that three and one-half hours was too long for one game.

Here in the birthplace of the game, the same feeling has cropped up. The shortest game in major league history took 51 minutes in 1919. But who now can remember seeing a game that took less than one hour? Today's games average two hours and 11 minutes in length. Twenty-five years ago a nine-inning contest was completed in 1:58 hours, on the average. The longest game in the books—26 innings—took three hours and 51 minutes to complete in 1920. The Giants outlasted the Dodgers recently in nine innings and three hours and 38 minutes. Why are games so long?

Pitchers work fewer complete games today than they did 25 years ago—and it takes a long time to walk in from an outfield bullpen. With each new pitcher and each new crisis, the manager must talk it over at the mound. That takes time. Some critics call it show-boating—they claim the conferees never turn their backs to the plate—they're putting on a show for the television audience. . . . But there's more to it.

Pitchers are afraid of the home run ball with smaller parks. They work more deliberately, hence, more slowly. Night baseball and day-night doubleheaders upset eating and sleeping schedules. The players are tired—the 25-year baseball career of Eddie Collins looks unapproachable today. Night baseball limits a veteran to 15 years in the big time.

What's the answer? Casey Stengel wants a pitcher removed after two conferences with his manager. He wants to speed up their delivery and stop batters from stepping out of the box. And he wants the umpires to make the players move. . . . The fan wants a speed-up, too. Tactics are slowly choking America's favorite game.

Stanley Ketchel, the Michigan assassin, didn't know how to box, but he could slam his fists so hard that very few heavyweights could stand up to him. The flailing middleweight, although 40 pounds lighter, one-punched the mighty Jack Johnson to the canvas. Ketchel knocked out 35 men in 39 fights.

Hanford Drops Inter-Service Clash

Camp Hanford, Sixth Army softball champs, were edged out of the Inter-Service Tournament Championship by the San Diego Navy Sky Raiders, by a 3-2 score, at Fort Ord last Saturday.

Hanford went into the finals after dumping Moffet Field, 2-1.

Camp Cooke, the only other Army team in the tourney, was defeated in the first round by Hanford.

Top Air Force and Navy teams were entered in the competition.

Hawaiian Baseball Stars Depart For Warmer Territory

Fort Shafter's Commandos, the Hawaiian Armed Forces Baseball Champions, rounded out the last half of their Sixth Army exhibition tour with one win and two losses last week.

After registering wins over Stoneman, Roberts and Cooke earlier in the week, the highly touted nine was put on ice at San Luis Obispo by a 5-3 tally. Not accustomed to cold weather, the Shafterites were forced to call it quits after seven innings of play.

Power-laden Fort Ord kept the Hawaiians in the deep freeze the following day with a 7-2 win. Tom Morgan, New York Yankee properly, worked the mound for Ord. Don Larsen, St. Louis Browns, was the loser.

On Saturdays, the visitors warmed up to a 2-0 victory over Presidio. Lefty Bushaw, the winning pitcher, yielded six hits while Presidio's fireball, Dan Stupor, Brooklyn Dodger property, gave up one hit and two bases-on-balls.

This marked the end of the tour and the club left shortly after for balmy Hawaii.

Come down to the camporee at Nate's Livery Barn tonight. The boys from Raider Camp are going to make a try at unsaddling a "steak and eggs ball club." A "play-for-pay team" is usually a little harder to dump than the run-of-the-mill alma-mater eleven, as when they win, they eat steaks—when they lose, well, usually it's eggs.

The Broncos, however, like to make things interesting. They have to win to eat eggs and when they lose, well, it's back to the pasture for the pikers.

Sure would like to see the locals take the bread right out of those poor fellows' mouths tonight.

With baseball season on the wing now, one last remark should be made before the boys hang up their spikes. Other than the fact that Presidio diamond crew had a good year, my only remarks pertain to an individual. "Watch Dan Stupor next year!"

"Dangerous Dan" will be out of the Army next spring and will report to Dodger Training Camp down in Florida.

His teammates are willing to bet that he won't have to farm out and is good enough to go right to work with the Brooklyn team next year.

He's been acclaimed by many as "the best pitcher in the Bay Area" and all I have to do to agree with them is to think of the game in August when the Dodger bonus boy fanned 22 batters in a single game, sixteen of them in succession.

Jerome Biffle, Army's first gold medal winner in the Olympics, stopped in at Sixth Army Special Services the other day, where arrangements were being made to send him to the Japan tour with Dan Ferris, Secretary-Treasurer of the National AAU.

Word was slow in coming; however, and the broad jump champ started back to his installation, Fort Bliss. It was only a few hours after his departure that approval came through, so Biffle will be back up this way sometime next month. He is the only Army athlete, known at this time, to make the exhibition jaunt.

Biffle jumped 24 feet, 10 inches for the Olympic win.

Word from a reliable Letterman source has it that: "Sammy Lee, the Olympic diving champ, is under strong consideration for the nationally coveted Sullivan Award."

Some of the service football teams will be well loaded this year. To name only a few: Vic Janowicz and several of his Ohio State teammates are at Camp Polk, Louisiana; Larry Coutre, Notre Dame and Green Bay Packer star, is back for his second season at Camp Breckinridge, Kentucky, and Les Richter, California's All-American, has his Camp Cooke eleven off to a clean start with a 28-7 win over the Cal Ramblers last Saturday.

If you're going to the Army-USC game at the Los Angeles Coliseum next Saturday, go armed with the proper information. Watch for the Star Presidian and check the sports pages.

Bronco Nagurski was selected for two positions on the 1929 All-America. Playing for Minnesota, the Bronco played tackle on defense and fullback on offense. When the Associated Press selectors met to pick the all-star team, they had a problem. Nagurski was the greatest tackle in football and the greatest fullback of the year. They awarded the giant Minnesotan two separate positions on the All-America team, the first and only time this has happened in football history.

UC, Stanford, Give GIs Cheap Grid Rates

University of California and Stanford University have made available reduced-rate tickets to Bay Area servicemen for this season's home football games, according to an announcement by Renolds J. Barbieri, San Francisco USO Committee chairman.

GI guys and gals may obtain tickets at a special rate of $1 at the box office for all California and Stanford games (except Stanford vs Michigan, 4 October, and Stanford vs California, 22 November). Service personnel must attend the game in uniform if they wish to take advantage of the low priced ducats.

Sports Roundup

Ft. Benning, Ga.—Lt. Col. Tom Sharpe, an artilleryman from Ft. Sill, Okla., has performed an "iron man" stunt in marksmanship. Less than two weeks after capturing a pistol-shooting title with a world's record, he bested the field here in rifle competition.

Fifth-ranking pistol shot in the nation, Lt. Col. Sharpe edged Lt. Remes de LaHunt, USMC; Lt. Col. Walter Walsh, USMC, and Capt. Richard Hanson, USA, among others in the Benning rifle competition. At Jacksonville, Fla., he won the .45-caliber timed-fire pistol shot with a perfect score of 200, plus 10 extra bullseyes for a new global record.

Columbus, Ohio—Service swimming champions continued their domination of national titles in the national Amateur Athletic Union tower competition here.

Jack Calhoun, USN; Milton Davis, USN; Winston Allen, USAF; and Dave Enochs, USAF, took five of the first seven places in the three-day meet.

Ft. Custer, Mich.—The Fifth Army baseball championship pennant hangs from the Ft. Custer flagpole for the second straight year. The 1952 title was clinched when the defending champions defeated Ft. Sheridan, Ill., 8-2.

Lefthander Steve Kralej allowed three scratch hits and struck out 15 men in winning the game. Outfielder Art Cybulski and third baseman Mike Krsnich each hit two-run homers for Custer.

Toronto, Canada—Jim Gathers, USAF, didn't slow down when his participation in the Olympic Games at Helsinki, Finland, ended. He's still the fastest-moving sprinter in the Western Hemisphere.

Performing before record-breaking crowds at the Canadian National Exhibition, Gathers won the 100- and 220-yard dashes. He won the shorter distance in 09.8 seconds and completed the 220 in 22 seconds flat.

One summer day in 1941, Portsmouth, Virginia was in a turmoil. Chandler Harper had just come in off the golf links with a card of 14 threes and 4 fours. His score of 58 was the lowest round of golf ever played by mortal man.

More Americans watch basketball than any other sport. In 1949, 105,000,000 hoop fans paid to watch the game and nobody knows how many kids sneaked in.

Folk Singing Sergeant To Record For Library Of Congress Series

Two folk songs sung by a Fort Huachuca soldier are to be included in a series of albums that will be recorded by the Music Division of the Library of Congress to help in the preservation and use of America's traditional folk music.

The soldier is M. Sgt. Warde H. Ford and the folk songs are his versions of "Battle of Antietam Creek" and "Custer's Last Stand." He originally recorded the songs at the request of a folk song collector who submitted them to the Library of Congress.

Although he has had no vocal training, Sgt. Ford inherited his interest in this type of music. His parents, grandparents and other relatives entertained themselves singing songs which had been handed down from generation to generation.

Many of these songs have not been copyrighted, but were committed to memory and never forgotten by his relatives. Ford learned "Battle of Antietam Creek" from his mother and the music and words to "Custer's Last Stand" were taught him by two uncles.

"I never had a very high opinion of my singing, but always enjoyed trying," says Warde. "I was very much surprised to hear that my versions of the songs had gotten to the Library of Congress—proud, too."

The songs were recorded in 1937. Now in his twelfth year in the Army, Sgt. Warde states: "I'd probably be a great disappointment as a singer now. After all, several years as a drill sergeant shouting commands to hundreds of troops has done little for the vocal cords. But that is part of my present profession, not crooning."

The sergeant has served in the Infantry, the Military Police and is now with Troop Information and Education after graduating from the Armed Forces Information School, Fort Slocum, N. Y., last December.

Related MOS's Merged After Newest Study

After extensive study, the Army has eliminated certain enlisted MOS's by merging supervisory and "journeyman" MOS's. Also merged into one were two or more related MOS's with overlapping duties and responsibilities.

According to Circular 72, which announces the changes, the new MOS's will go into effect Nov. 1. In many cases merger of MOS's has resulted in modification and elimination of previously authorized MOS titles. The appendix to Circular 72 is the amendment to SR 615-25-20.

Under the new system the first digit of each MOS will indicate the highest pay grade and supervisory level attainable within the particular specialty. The pay grade authorized for any duty position and the pay grade held by an enlisted man will indicate the degree of skill and responsibility of the duty position or of the individual.

The Army School catalogue DA Pamphlet 20-21 will continue to be used, pending changes, reflecting the new MOS conversions. No changes in the table of organization are expected to be published for some time.

It is often harder to unlearn wrong than it is to learn right.

Overseas Mail For Christmas Must Go Soon

Washington—Christmas parcels for members of the Armed Forces overseas should be mailed between Oct. 15 and Nov. 15, the Department of Defense advises.

Boxes headed overseas must be of double-faced corrugated cardboard, strong wood, metal, or fiberboard. Each box should be securely tied with strong cord, and loose flaps should be sealed with gummed tape. Unless completely packed and tightly filled, boxes may be crushed.

Air parcel post packages up to two pounds in weight should be mailed not later than 25 November. The Department of Defense says that no assurance can be given that air parcel post mailed after that date can be air-lifted to overseas areas or that delivery prior to Christmas will be made.

Matches and lighter fluid are banned from all parcels in addition to articles normally prohibited in the mails.

New Film Release Stars Signal Service Under Extreme Cold

Initial distribution of a new motion picture film "TF 11-1776, Operation and Maintenance of Communication Equipment in Extreme Cold," has been announced by the Pictorial Division, Signal Section. This film is not cleared for any type of public exhibition, but to be shown to personnel of the Regular Army and civilian components undergoing training in the operation and maintenance of communication equipment under subzero conditions.

This film shows the intensive research the Army has done to develop standard procedures and techniques for the care and operation of equipment under subzero conditions. In this training film, accent is placed on communications equipment and the methods of winterizing the various types are graphically illustrated in detail.

Treatment illustrates the effects of extreme cold on materials in equipment, outlines preventive measures for proper maintenance, demonstrates changes in operating techniques to forestall damage or destruction due to frost, snow and excessive cold. With the proper "know-how" an Army can operate effectively under the most adverse weather conditions.

ORC Officers On Active Duty Win Indefinite Status

Washington—Indefinite appointments in the Army Reserve will be offered immediately to reserve officers and warrant officers now serving on active duty, the Department of Defense announces.

Indefinite appointments to Air Force officers and Army Reserve officers not on active duty will also be offered prior to July 1, 1953. Navy Reserve, Marine Corps Reserve, National Guard and Air National Guard officers' appointments are already on an indefinite term basis.

Appointment will be in the individual's permanent Reserve grade. Those serving in higher or lower temporary grades will continue to serve on active duty in those grades.

To expedite the program, no physical examinations will be required and only the individual's acceptance in writing and execution of an oath of office are necessary.

Current five-year appointments of Reserve officers, which have already been extended by law, are due to expire Oct. 28, 1952. Should another similar extension be made, these appointments would expire April 1, 1953.

Individuals whose current appointment will continue for several years under the five-year term also are included in the program. Letters of eligibility will be forwarded to Army personnel who are affected.

Those who decline to accept a new indefinite term appointment will continue to serve under their current appointment as extended by law or until its normal date of expiration, whichever is later, unless sooner released from active duty.

Time Change

Effective 0200 hours Pacific Daylight Saving Time, 28 September 1952, Headquarters Sixth Army, Presidio of San Francisco, California, will revert to Pacific Standard Time.

Each Class I and II installations and activity in the Sixth Army Area will conform with the time used in its particular locality.

Letterman Hosts Regional Confab On Social Work

The first Regional Conference of Military Social Work will be held at Letterman Army Hospital, San Francisco, from October 29th through the 31st.

Representatives from the eight western states which comprise the 6th Army area are invited to attend. Arrangements for attendance should be made through the individual's section chief, or commanding officer.

The purpose of the conference is to discuss and evaluate the professional growth and development of both medical and psychiatric services; exchange of ideas to further improve and develop these services and a round-table discussion of mutual experiences and problems.

Letterman, the Army's second largest training hospital, has been selected as the training center for Military Social Welfare.

11th Airborne Private Boasts Battalion's Top Jump Record

Looking at him behind his pharmacy cage or hovering over a typewriter pounding out medical reports, you'd never suspect that this lanky dispensary technician is just about as rugged an individual as there is. But his combat and "jump" records prove otherwise.

The person whom we're writing about is Private Raymond L. Swift of the 76th Tank Battalion, 11th Airborne Division from Fort Campbell, Ky. The 76th is presently engaged in eight weeks' intensified armored training at The Armored Combat Training Center, Camp Irwin, Calif.

Pvt. Swift, with the amazing total of 476 parachute jumps to his credit, tops in the 11th, has the incongruous task of being assigned to the 76th Dispensary—where he undoubtedly suffers from claustrophobia and has trouble finding room to stretch his legs.

Included among Pvt. Swift's jumps are four he made in combat—Sicily, Italy, Normandy and Holland—while serving as a machine-gunner with the 82nd Airborne Division during World War II. He returned to stateside duty shortly after V-E day and was assigned as a jump instructor at The Infantry School, Fort Benning, Ga. It was while at Fort Benning that the majority of Swift's jumps were made.

Swift was separated from the Army early in 1947, but in July 1948 he re-enlisted and returned to the airborne troops, this time with the 11th Airborne at Fort Campbell. He remained with the 11th until 1950 when he again returned to civilian life. During that period, until March of this year, he was employed by a Veteran's Administration hospital in Los Angeles.

PVT. RAY SMITH

Last March Swift again re-enlisted in the 11th. Since that time, because of an automobile accident several months ago, he has made no further jumps. However, he expects to get back into old form shortly, as soon as the 11th returns to Fort Campbell.

In addition to the silver Parachutists' Badge, Pvt. Swift is entitled to wear the Silver Star Medal, the Bronze Star Medal, World War II Victory Medal, the ETO Ribbon with seven campaign stars, American Defense Medal and the Purple Heart, of which he has earned two.

Swift, who reached his 30th birthday September 19, is the son of Mrs. Grace Swift, 716 Findley St., Portsmouth, Ohio.

Soldier Count!

Former Wehrmacht Officer Is Now Happy Army NCO

Drafted unwillingly into one army and captured by two others, Cpl. Carl R. von Rosenberg-Rosemont, of Eastport, Long Island, N. Y., still has a taste for army life—U. S. style.

An officer in the German Wehrmacht during World War II, the Army corporal, now in the Military Police Corps at Fort Sheridan, Ill., really "found a home in the Army"—but he had to take the long way home.

The son of a former German count who was a naturalized American citizen, von Rosenberg-Rosemont was born in New York City in January, 1926. Two years later his father died.

The family moved to Switzerland, and soon afterwards he went with his grand-parents to Germany and began attending German schools. Thereafter, his American citizenship was regarded lightly by the authorities and, when he was 17 years old, von Rosenberg-Rosemont found himself shanghaied into the German Army.

He fought in a tank on the Russian front. During the retreat of the German Army from the Russians, a shell hit his tank, killing his companions. Von Rosenberg-Rosemont was captured and interned in a Soviet prison camp.

The camp held him only three days. On the third night, he slithered under the barbed wire enclosure and crawled for five hours to reach the German lines—just in time to be captured by the British.

Six months after the war ended, he was released from prison camp. Then began three years of trying to reestablish his American citizenship.

Finally, he obtained a birth certificate from New York, along with proof that he entered the Wehrmacht unwillingly. Washington confirmed his citizenship and he set sail for the United States.

But it had been a long time. He had only a frail knowledge of English and had a hard time finding work. A policeman suggested he join the Army. It was good advice.

In the Army, the corporal gained a fluent command of his long-neglected native tongue. He fought in Korea before being rotated to Fort Sheridan.

Enlisted Censors to Serve In War

Washington—Army enlisted men will censor troops' mail in event of another war.

The plan to use enlisted men, down through the rank of private first class, as censors was disclosed in a new Army special regulation. The regulation added the job of censorship examiner to the duties of enlisted "intelligence specialists."

During WWII, troops' mail sent to the U.S. from overseas was censored by officers.

Camp Roberts Leads Army Blood Program

Camp Roberts	13,087
Camp Stoneman	12,245
Fort Lewis (incl MAH)	11,919

Army Sets New Overseas Limits At Nine Months

Washington (AFPS) — Army personnel being transferred to overseas commands after Feb. 1, 1953, must have at least nine months of service remaining in their active duty tours, the Department of the Army announces.

Present policy on overseas assignments requires a minimum of six months remaining to serve. Improvement in the Army personnel situation, however, will permit a rotation program based on nine month remaining service.

Exceptions to the policy will be made for officers and enlisted men approaching retirement eligibility. Officers having less than 12 months to serve before attaining statutory retirement age and enlisted personnel with less than 12 months remaining before completion of 30 years' service will not be assigned overseas.

LT. COL. LOVE

COLONEL DASHIELL

Dashiell served in Germany, Panama and at various installations throughout the United States, including four years at Letterman Army Hospital, prior to World War II. During the war he was in the South West Pacific Area from March 1942 to October 1944.

This is Colonel Dashiell's second retirement. He was retired at his own request in October 1945 and was a Ship's Surgeon for the United States Lines until he was recalled to active duty in July of 1950.

Lt. Col. Earl G. Kennedy, former Administrative Officer of the Sixth Army Recruiting Service, is retiring after more than 30 years of service. Enlisting as a private in 1921, he was commissioned as a first lieutenant in September 1942.

Prior to being assigned to Sixth Army Headquarters in August of 1950, Lt. Col. Kennedy spent three years as Recruiting Officer for the Eighth Army. During this period 73 per cent of all men eligible for re-enlistment were re-enlisted to give Eighth Army the honor of being world-wide high in their recruiting program. For this accomplishment, he was commended by Major General Kenneth B. Bush, the present Assistant Adjutant General, Department of the Army, and also by the late Lt. General Walton H. Walker, the Eighth Army Commander. He was also commended by Lt. General Robert L. Eichelberger for his part in deactivating portions of Sixth Army after World War II.

Post Surgeon of the Presidio of San Francisco since June of 1950, Lt. Col. William E. R. Basch served as a first lieutenant in the Medical Corps during World War I. Following the war he practiced medicine in Boston until 1942 when he re-entered service and established a hospital at Niantic, Conn.

From July 1943 to December 1946, Lt. Col. Basch was assigned to Surgical Service of the 16th General Hospital, which operated in England, then landed on Utah Beach and was in France and Belgium. He later took command of the Prisoner of War Hospital at Namur, Belgium and of the 9th Field Hospital, also in Belgium, and the 78th Field Hospital in France.

Following the war, Lt. Col. Basch was Post Surgeon at Fort Mason until he was reassigned overseas as Surgeon, Marbo Command, Guam, in June 1948. The following May he became Commanding Officer, Lt. Col. Henry L. Love has been assigned to the Inspector General's Section, Headquarters Sixth Army, since September 1950. He entered the Army as a second lieutenant in the Field Artillery in 1921 and was graduated from the Artillery School, Camp Knox, Ky., the following year.

Lt. Col. Love served overseas in the Philippines from 1925 to 1928 and in Panama from 1941 to 1944. He was graduated from the Company Officers' Communication Course, the Signal School Fort Monmouth, N. J., in 1932 and was student at Purdue University taking a post graduate course in electrical engineering in 1932 and 1933.

He was detailed in the Inspector General's Department from 15 February 1941 to the date of his retirement.

Lt. Col. Reuben L. Tatum was Port Embarkation, San Francisco Port of Embarkation, at the time of his retirement. During World War I, he served as an enlisted man, entering commissioned service as a second lieutenant with the Corps of Engineers in 1929.

Called to active duty in 1940, Lt. Col. Tatum was assigned to camp construction for the QMG and Army Engineers, mostly in the New Orleans area. In 1944 he worked on the Alaskan highway as Assistant District Engineer, Port Commanding Officer, Skagway, Alaska. In June 1945 he became Liaison Officer, Sur-

ROTC Chiefs Set Dates for Harmon Armory Meetings

"What is the future status of the Jr. ROTC program?" "Why can't I get more officers for instructors at my university?" "What is the Branch General Program?"

These and many other questions pertaining to the functioning of the Army's Reserve Officers Training Corps will be asked and discussed at the Harmon Armory on the 9th and 10th of October when the ROTC Conference 1952 convenes.

This conference is the result of a growing need for a dynamic ROTC program based on the needs of the service and the problems that face the various institutions. The conference was directed by D/A as a preliminary to the D/A conference in Washington on 28-29 October.

Coming from Montana, Idaho, Arizona, Utah, Nevada, Washington, Oregon and California will be the Professors of Military Science and Tactics from the 52 educational institutions in the Sixth Army Area having ROTC units. They will be joined by the Chiefs of the military districts or their representatives and many representatives of the Sixth Army Staff.

Planning for the conference has been the responsibility of the G-3, ROTC Branch, Sixth Army.

Soldier-Diplomats!

Occupation Troops Put USA's Best Foot Forward In Reich

U.S. soldiers in Germany are winning new friends for the United States.

As soldier-diplomats, they are building better German-American relations by aiding the needy, participating in German sports events, sponsoring youth programs and presenting excellent musical programs.

Seventh Army soldiers donated more than $100,000 during a single six-week period for relief of 50,000 German children and 1,000 needy adults.

In addition, many U.S. Seventh Army units are sponsoring year-round up-keep of orphanages, donating playground equipment, paying for under-privileged children's attendance at summer camps and redecorating classrooms and sleeping quarters for orphans.

American soldiers are joining German youths to make track and field meets in Western Germany among the largest athletic events in the country.

In many areas, German-American sports councils are helping sponsor athletic events between soldiers and Germans.

The U.S. 24th Constabulary Squadron and the city of Hersfeld are co-sponsors of annual track and field meets in Hersfeld. In these events champions from all over the state of Hessen compete against Seventh Army teams.

Earlier this year, 30 Americans joined 400 Germans in a track meet in Esslingen, and the U.S. 28th Infantry Division entered a track and field team in a German-sponsored meet at Ulm.

Three hundred fifty community centers throughout the American Zone of Germany are providing food, education and recreation for children ranging from one to 19 years of age.

These centers are part of the German Youth Activities program which has rescued thousands of destitute children from hoodlum gangs and lives of thievery, begging, and feeding on refuse from garbage cans.

The Seventh Army Symphony Orchestra—now winding up a summer tour of the American Zone—was well received by German audiences and won high praise from music critics.

Germans expressed surprise that the United States Army had so many excellent musicians who could give superior performances.

All these activities add up to a highly successful program in which the soldier doubles as a diplomat to promote sound German-American relations.

Topic

Reasons behind the current drive for economy in the Army and how the drive is being conducted will be reviewed at the Troop Information Conferences of the Presidio next week under the topic title of "The Army Fights Waste."

Three reasons account for the hard work being done towards economizing: to building the kind of defensive force that will effectively minimize the threat of the Red Army; to make the shrunken dollars buy enough defense for cover; and, finally, so personal tax money will serve a useful purpose.

Troops are participating energetically and effectively in the following programs to fight waste at their level: cost consciousness, efficiency awards, salvage, equipment rebuilding, and food conservation.

On its highest level, the Army is moving vigorously for economy through such far-reaching programs as its recurring managements and manpower surveys, anti-paper-work campaign "Operations Red Tape," T/O&E reduction program, commercial vehicle program, and its critical materials replacement program.

As long as world conditions continue to threaten, pressure will be on to save in every way—not only to do as instructed in the way of operating economically, but to look for ways to save individually.

Outstanding Service!

Citizen-Soldiers Play Top Role In America's Past and Future

More than 85,000 of the 100,000 Army National Guardsmen ordered to active duty to meet the emergency created by the Korean conflict have returned to civilian life.

Organized and trained as an integral part of the United States Armed Forces with an "M-Day" (Mobilization Day) mission of immediate service in event of aggression, the National Guard almost doubled the number of regular divisions in service prior to the Korean conflict.

Answering the call in Korea were many Army units, including two complete infantry divisions that un-gloved their iron fists to aid United Nations forces fighting in Korea. Besides the two infantry divisions, a wide range of other types of units joined America's armed strength in the Far East and Europe, while four National Guard infantry divisions were called for state-side duty.

The Guard's contribution was not limited to trained fighting men. It supplied the Army with more than $193,000,000 worth of equipment in addition to that taken into active service by the units themselves. Air equipment and facilities furnished by the Guard totalled more than $500,000,000.

This is not the first time the National Guard has proven its value to the security of our nation. Guardsmen met the call at Lexington and Concord where the American tradition of the Minuteman was born.

In World War I, two-fifths of the divisions of the AEF were National Guard divisions. Men of the 11 Guard divisions which saw action pierced the Hindenburg Line, helped crush the St. Mihiel salient, and smashed to victory through the Meuse-Argonne. Of eight United States divisions rated by the German high command as superior or excellent, six were National Guard divisions.

In World War II, the National Guard took to the field with 18 infantry divisions. Nine crossed the Atlantic to Europe and Africa and nine went to the far reaches of the Pacific.

In praising the National Guard units, Robert P. Patterson, then Secretary of War, said:

"They made a brilliant record on every fighting front. They proved once more the value of the trained citizen-soldier."

The backbone of today's Army National Guard is its 25 infantry divisions and two armored divisions. There also is a wide range of other types of units, including 20 regimental combat teams and 43 anti-aircraft artillery groups.

Maj. Gen. Raymond H. Fleming, Chief of the National Guard Bureau, said:

"The National Guard stands firm with all military forces of our nation to challenge a growing threat to the safety of our homes, the peace of our land, and the existence of the democratic nations of the world."

Army Air Boasts High Flexibility

Army aviation—an integral part of combat and service support units rather than a separate branch of "Air Corps"—is used by field commanders to increase the logistic support and add flexibility to the tactical disposition of his units. The Army expects to use aircraft in increasing numbers to keep abreast of modern developments in the transportation and communications fields.

Comptroller ExO Wins September Promotion

Colonel C. C. Coyne, Executive Officer of the Comptroller Section, Headquarters Sixth Army, has been promoted from lieutenant colonel to full colonel with date of rank effective 24 September.

COLONEL C. C. COYNE

Graduating from the United States Military Academy at West Point, N. Y. in 1938, Colonel Coyne held artillery staff and command positions with the 3rd Infantry Division from 1939 through 1945. His overseas combat duty from 1942 to 1945 took him to North Africa, Italy, France, Germany and Austria.

Following his return to the United States, he was with the Plans and Operations Division, General Staff, at the Pentagon from 1946 through 1948. He then took the master's course at Harvard Business School, receiving his MA degree in 1950.

He has been with the Sixth Army Comptroller Section since September 1950 and has been Comptroller Executive since July 1951.

Colonel Coyne and his wife and two sons live on the post.

Anna Restates Stand On Military Pay Increase

Washington (AFPS) — The Defense Department will seek an increase in Service pay and allowances early in the next session of Congress.

Mrs. Anna M. Rosenberg, Assistant Secretary of Defense for Manpower and Personnel, said the new adjustment will reflect the cost-of-living rise since 1949 that was not covered in last May's increase and the three per cent hike in living costs that has occurred since May.

Last year the Defense Department requested a 10 per cent across-the-board increase in pay and allowances for all servicemen and women, Mrs. Rosenberg said, but Congress granted an increase which averaged less than six per cent per person. Since 1949 the cost of living has risen 12 per cent. The Defense Department is expected to recommend a six per cent boost.

Mrs. Rosenberg said last May's pay boost by Congress was "a step in the right direction, but the increase was insufficient to give the Armed Forces comparable treatment with that accorded civilian employees."

"The men and women in uniform give sacrifices which can never be compensated for in dollars-and-cents terms. This new raise will not only boost their morale, but will enable them to make more adequate provision for the health and comfort of their families and loved ones."

Army's Versatile H-13 Proves Tops in Korean Air Lifts

Speed and maneuverability make the Army's H-13 helicopter an efficient "flying ambulance" for wounded soldiers in Korea.

The H-13 can take off from a medical clearing station air strip on the Korea shore and five minutes later land on the deck of a hospital ship 16 miles away.

In a recent evacuation mission, the USS Consolation was equipped with a 60 by 60-foot landing platform for the H-13. Eighteen Navy men, including signal men, medics, and firefighters, handled the landing operation.

WAC Plays Successful Role In Apprehending Car Thieves

The private eye sometimes is a sergeant.

So learned two Frankfurt, Germany, car thieves who were foiled by a group of determined WACs.

Sergeant First Class Dorothy Sheaf of 493 Edgewood Place, Rutherford, N. J., while out for an evening stroll, spotted the car that had been stolen from her commanding officer a few days before.

She ran to the WAC billets and recruited several volunteers to help her with the manhunt.

The car was parked in front of a theater. The skirted shames questioned storekeepers in the neighborhood and obtained descriptions of the two men who had driven up in the car.

Awaiting the arrival of military police, the female "fingermen" kept a sharp-eyed watch for the alleged crooks.

Before the MPs could get to the scene, two men answering the descriptions left the theater. Evidently sensing danger, the wary culprits ignored the car and hurriedly walked away.

The watchful women shadowed the two men to a cafe about a mile away in a residential district.

Word went back along the line and the WACs directed the MPs to the cafe. There the women put the finger on the offenders and the MPs made the arrest.

A shopkeeper subsequently identified the men as the ones he saw leaving the stolen car at the theater.

Your Red Cross aids the men and women in the armed forces and their families, the war casualties in hospitals, the civilians stricken by disaster or preparing for civil defense. Give once to the United Crusade which finances the Red Cross along with six other major charity and welfare organizations.

Give Once For All!

United Crusades Offers Army Best Means of Contributing

Seven of the San Francisco Bay Area's most vital health and welfare organizations are joined together in the United Crusade, the single fund-raising campaign now being conducted for the first time at the Presidio and throughout the area.

Instead of seven separate drives and seven solicitations, military and civilian personnel of the Presidio will give only once a year to support the following important community causes and their more than 75 other important member agencies:

Community Chests in San Francisco and the East Bay give direct health and welfare service through its 74 member agencies. These include: hospitals, clinics, day nurseries, foster homes, character building organizations (Scouts, Boys' and Girls' clubs), neighborhood centers, family counseling services, homes for the aged and homes for unwed mothers.

Red Cross services are directed toward three basic areas of need: to men and women in the armed forces and their families, to war casualties in hospitals, and to civilian populations stricken by natural disaster or preparing for civil defense.

Through its programs of research, education and service, the American Cancer Society saves countless lives which might otherwise be lost through this dread disease. On its research work alone, the Society is spending $106,797 at the University of California Medical Center, the Stanford University Medical School, and the Mt. Zion Hospital.

United Defense Fund has a two-fold program of services to the armed forces and aid to defense-impact communities. USO clubs, canteens and camp shows overseas and in hospitals are part of this program.

Arthritis and Rheumatism Foundation wages a continuous battle against these widespread cripples to free thousands each year from pain. A direct service of this organization is a mobile physical therapy unit, operated by a trained therapist under medical supervision, to give home treatments.

The major part of the funds of the San Francisco Heart Association goes into research to save and prolong lives of "blue babies" and rheumatic heart disease patients. At present there are nine grants divided between Stanford University Hospital, University of California Medical Center, and Mt. Zion Hospital.

United Cerebral Palsy Association uses donated dollars to help boys and girls learn to walk, talk, and play—giving the youngsters a chance for a normal life. The association's community program includes personal counseling, pre-nursery school program, recreation program and adult vocational training.

These seven major charitable and welfare organizations are combined in the United Crusade campaign with one single fund raising campaign of "Give Once for All."

Latest Promotions

Officers in the Sixth Army Area promoted in the past week are as follows:

Letterman IG Promoted To Full Colonel

The eagles of a full colonel were pinned on the shoulders of Letterman's Inspector General, William L. Beswick at an informal ceremony in the Commanding General's office this last Monday afternoon. Colonel Beswick entered the Army as a private in the Medical Corps in August 1913 and has had continuous service since that date.

The Colonel's first duty station was at the Cadet Hospital, West Point, New York. He well remembers a cadet by the name of Omar M. Bradley, who today is a General of the Army and Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. He states that General Bradley was a very good ball player.

In 1926 Colonel Beswick was a Master Sergeant and was sent from West Point to Hawaii where he remained until his first tour of duty at Letterman in 1936. In 1942 he was called to active duty as a Captain and sent overseas. He received his Majority in December of that year. He was promoted to Lieutenant Colonel in July of 1944 and the effective date of his promotion to Colonel was 24 September 1952.

When the Colonel first came in service, back in 1913, the pay of a private in the Medical Corps was $16.00 a month, and other branches of the service received $15.00 a month!

Colonel Beswick's second tour of duty at Letterman started in 1945, upon his return from three and one-half years in the Southwest Pacific area.

Honor Fire Inspector For Work With Local Boy Scouts

Arthur LeDuc, Post Fire Inspector, has been named Merit Badge Counsellor in Public Service, by the Boy Scouts of America. He will instruct Scouts in Safety and Firemanship.

In a letter of appreciation from Dr. Charles J. Parshall, Chairman, Advancement Committee of the San Francisco Area Council, LeDuc was praised for his "voluntary services in the past year in the interest of helping our Scouts and Explorers realize a fuller and richer scouting experience and ultimately a fuller and richer life by way of the Merit Badge program."

The presentation was made at the Presidio Headquarters of Scout Troop 77, by Lt. Colonel Roger L. Bilewicz, Sixth Army Representative of Institutional George Geller, Chief, Fire Prevention and Protection Division, attended the ceremony.

Cpl. Robert Pratt, Boy Scout Master, also expressed his thanks on behalf of Troop 77, for the help LeDuc rendered in training Scouts on this Post to win Merit Badges in Safety and Firemanship.

LeDuc praised the Boy Scouts on this Post, "for the vital part they play in our fire prevention program." He said:

"Training our future citizens to be fire conscious will produce gratifying results because it will contribute to the elimination of hazardous conditions and limit resultant losses to life and property in future years. Fire consciousness instilled in the young mind is more apt to stick. Not only will an understanding of safety and fire prevention practices increase the safety of the Scout but it will increase the safety of others. In these critical times so much depends on our youth. The boy scout plays a major role in the development of our nation, of which safety and fire prevention are vital parts. Serving them is a patriotic duty."

Should fire strike, keep yourself safe from harm, by promptly turning in a fire alarm.

Engineers Swell Savings at Local Blood Bank

Emergency calls by Letterman Army Hospital swelled the September blood donations by the 30th Engineers to 80 pints.

This represents a high mark in contributions since June 1 and gives the 30th a total of 775 pints donated since December 1, 1951.

A sharp rise in donations is expected in October according to Warrant Officer Howard Y. Uno, Battalion Blood Donation Officer.

Warrant Officer Uno explained that the forward echelon of the 30th will return from Alaskan operations early this month and undoubtedly many of the men will donate in October. They have been unable to donate blood since the early part of June as they have been surveying in isolated areas of Alaska.

Thrift Shop Closes

The Post Thrift Shop will be closed for inventory on Monday and Tuesday, 6 and 7 October.

Presidio Troops Win Role In Documentary Film

Presidio troops became movie actors Saturday during the filming of a documentary picture starring Marshall Thompson, Hollywood actor, in Richmond by the Voice of America.

This film deals with the small town's problem of taking care of an influx of people during war time, both service men and war workers.

Also participating with the seventy-five enlisted men from Station Complement, Presidio were ten WACs, six Military Police, and three officers from the Presidio. The Navy was also represented.

At 1500 hours the new Civic Center in Richmond was dedicated within the Marine Band from the Department of the Pacific taking part in the ceremonies.

This documentary film will be released in Germany in December of this year.

TEN SECONDS TO LIVE

He pushed his sleeve back, held his wrist close to the lighted speedometer, and squinted to read the time. A little after nine. Five, ten minutes after. Ought to be home in half an hour.

IF HE'D KNOWN HE HAD ONLY TEN SECONDS TO LIVE, HE MIGHT HAVE CHECKED THE TIME MORE CLOSELY. HE MIGHT HAVE DONE SEVERAL THINGS DIFFERENTLY.

Ten seconds to live. He massaged his eyes with thumb and middle finger, trying to rub out some of the sand.

NINE SECONDS TO LIVE. HE'D DRIVEN ALMOST EIGHT HOURS SINCE LUNCH, AND WAS BEGINNING TO FEEL IT.

Eight seconds to live. Lousy driving in the rain. Light from your headlights just seems to soak in along with the water.

SEVEN SECONDS TO LIVE. PROBABLY NEED A NEW WINDSHIELD WIPER BLADE. OLD ONE JUST SPREADS THE WATER AROUND INSTEAD OF WIPING CLEAN. GET ONE TOMORROW, OR NEXT TIME IT RAINS.

Six seconds to live. Somebody threw a cigaret out of an oncoming car. The red glow dissolved almost before it hit the pavement.

FIVE SECONDS TO LIVE. AT 60 MILES AN HOUR, A CAR COVERS 88 FEET OF PAVEMENT EVERY SECOND. FOUR SECONDS, 352 FEET.

Three seconds to live. Something looked wrong, through the blurry windshield. A tentative dab at the brake stiffened into desperate pressure as he made out an unlighted, slow-moving truck ahead.

TWO SECONDS TO LIVE. PANIC MOVED IN. TURN TO THE LEFT. NO, CAR COMING. HEADLIGHTS TOO CLOSE. CAN'T MAKE IT. TURN TO THE RIGHT.

One second to live. Horror numbed everything into slow motion. He was floating right into the rear corner of the truck bed. He opened his mouth to scream.

ZERO SECONDS TO LIVE. KILLED INSTANTLY.

Three important ways for veterans to avoid unnecessary delays in applying for education and training under the new K-Vet Bill have been announced by the Veterans Administration. (1) Veterans should send their completed applications for training to the nearest regional office. Under no conditions should the application be sent to the VA Central Office, Washington, D. C. (2) Veterans should include photostatic or certified copies of both sides of their separation papers, along with their applications for training. Information contained on both sides is necessary to process applications. (3) All five sections of the application form must be filled out. They are: (a) identification of the veteran; (b) program of education and training applied for; (c) education and training received while on active duty; (d) civilian education, and (e) employment experience.

Indefinite appointments will soon be offered to 250,000 Army Reserve officers and warrant officers not on active duty. A similar plan was announced last month for those on active duty.

Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of Selective Service, announced that changes must be made in Service regulations next year if the Armed Forces are to get the men they need. He said that probably the best way to get additional manpower is to "fight and fight hard to get them out of the 4-F." On August 1 this year there were 1,484,051 4-fs. General Hershey indicated that he thinks men who could be used are being rejected on physical grounds.

"Movie Night" Slated

Movie night is a new form of entertainment at the Fort Cronkhite Service Club. Every Saturday night beginning this Saturday, movie shorts donated to the Club by Standard Oil of California will be shown. These movies will consist of mostly sport shorts and run in a series of three each Saturday night.

Airmen Will Provide "Room Service" for Local Entertainment

"Room Service," a farce comedy about Broadway, will be presented Monday night, 6 October, at the Presidio YMCA auditorium by the Travis Drama Guild with a cast composed entirely of military personnel stationed at Travis Air Force Base.

The play tells the story of a theatrical producer and three actors living on extended credit who find a good script and $15,000 with which to produce it. The comedy situations result from the ways the producer manages to outwit his many creditors.

The performance will begin at 2000 and will be open to all personnel of the Presidio, both military and civilian.

Special Program!

Presidio To Celebrate Fire Prevention Week Oct. 11

The Presidio of San Francisco is observing National Fire Prevention Week with a special program of evacuation drills, fire prevention talks, demonstrations of fire equipment, exhibition of fire hazards and other activities. The piece de resistance, perhaps, is a coveted ride on big shiny red fire engines for several hundred children on this post.

On Saturday morning, 11 Oct., children are invited to the Presidio Fire Station, where they will pledge themselves not to play with fire and to report all fires promptly. Then, souvenir firemen's helmets and badges will be issued to them and they will pile on the fire apparatus for a ride through the Presidio. Last year over five hundred children enjoyed rides. Candy will be distributed and it is all free!

A display of fire equipment and typical fire hazards found on this post are part of an exhibit mounted on a float, which will serve as a warning to careless persons to become fire conscious. "Fire consciousness should not be confined merely to Fire Prevention Week," observes Fire Chief Geller, "but should be extended to include every week in the year. Fire prevention is a matter of individual responsibility. Everyone should contribute his fire prevention efforts to continue the fine fire record established at this post. We are proud to announce that during the past year there has been no losses in government property and no fatalities as a result of fire. By being careful you not only increase your safety but the safety of others. The thanks of the Presidio Fire Department for the splendid cooperation of all personnel in keeping fire losses to a minimum."

New Napalm Mixer

The Army Chemical Corps has an improved mechanical mixer for mixing Napalm thickening material with gasoline before filling fire bombs, flame throwers, land mines and other incendiaries.

The new mixer is lighter than previous models, is simpler to operate and produces a more uniform type of thickened fuel.

Fort Ord Warriors Sweep Sixth Army Baseball Championship

A powerhouse from Fort Ord put the finishing touches to Sixth Army baseball last week, with a clean sweep in the finals at Camp Stoneman.

The Warriors, loaded with Major and Minor League talent, wound up a great season with a 5-2 championship victory over Camp Roberts.

It was a bad day for the hurlers. Ord rapped 12 hits off Lee, Harold and Ulrich respectively, while their own pitcher, Lathrope, had to be relieved in the ninth by Thurston, after yielding 10 hits.

In the first tourney game, Ord edged Roberts, 6-5, with both teams getting nine hits. Carbanaro pitched for Ord. Ross was the loser.

Ord's pitcher, Cox, hurled a no-hit, no-run ballgame against Fort Worden, Northern Division finalist, in the second game, coping a 6-0 win.

Olson slammed a homer in the fourth bringing in three runs and teammate Wilson repeated the feat in the fifth with one man on.

Roberts caught Worden on the rebound in the third game and sent them reeling into the cellar with a big 19-5 tally.

Awards and trophies were presented Friday evening at a sumptuous banquet. Colonel Thomas S. Gunby, Post Commander, Camp Stoneman, made the presentations.

Ord's ace hurler, Cox, was chosen the outstanding player and received an award donated by Mr. Bennie Wagner, Commissioner of Recreation, Pittsburg, California.

Another Ord man, Melton, made a strong bid for the player award by turning in a .666 batting average for the entire tourney.

Raiders Tackle Cal Ramblers This Afternoon

Presidio's Red Raiders will get an even chance to get out of the loss column today, when they play host to the Cal Ramblers on the Fort Scott Field at 1400 hours.

After a two-week lull, due to a cancellation last week, the Raiders will go into their third game with many of their former weaknesses patched up.

Stress has been placed on pass defense and physical conditioning this past week.

The Ramblers go into the game with as many defeats as the locals, their latest at Alameda where they were downed by the Hell Cats by a 33-14 margin.

Post Casaba Tourney Draws Good Crowds

Playing before some 150 spectators nightly during the first week of league play, the Post Intra-mural basketball hoopsters poured it on hot and heavy in an effort to grab that important early lead, last week.

Wide scoring margins and decisive victories were indicated in the first 16 games played from Monday, 22 September, to Monday, 29 September.

As of the latter date five teams have demonstrated plenty of hoop power by remaining undefeated.

In the American Division, NCO Mess and 30th AAA Group with three wins apiece, are setting the pace. Should they remain in the unbeaten column this week, the game on 8 October between the two will be a thriller.

Detachment A, 6002 ASU and 518th AAA Operations with two wins apiece and Navy Harbor Defense with one win and one bye, loom as the big guns in the National Division.

T-5's Keglers Retain Fort Scott League Leadership

Sergeant First Class John Aranza led his teammates with an alley-clearing 205 score as the T-5's strengthened their hold on first place in the Fort Scott bowling league this week.

The Alibis with four victories against two defeats leveled enough timber to remain in second place. The Sure Things and 8-Balls are tied for third with five wins and four losses each.

SFC Aranza copped high individual scoring honors for the league with his 205-pin total. SFC Les Hartman, Alibis, and Pfc Al Mendillo, Sure Things, have sparked their quintettes this season as they currently lead the league with 169-pin individual averages.

Digging into more statistics, it looks as though the front-running T-5's may be in for some trouble before the league closes from the Alibis and the Sure Things.

The average number of pins recorded by each team per line shows the Alibis leading the top four quintettes as follows:

T-5's	746 pins per game
Alibis	812 pins per game
Sure Things	723 pins per game
8-Balls	602 pins per game

In team standings, however, the T-5's are in front and the Alibis, Sure Things, 8-Balls and any dark horses must scatter a lot of pins to grab first place in the league.

Here it is! A big spread on the Army football team, past and present—statistics, records, facts, this year's outlook and sketches of some of the past greats—over 60 years of West Point football all wrapped up in some 160 inches of space.

If we are going to continue to be Army's top fans, best we know more about the team—we are rooting for.

Tomorrow, in the Los Angeles Coliseum, many of us will be on hand to witness Army's third invasion of the West Coast.

The Trojans from USC are a strong single wing power, while our team is considerably inexperienced and not quite ready to make the long trek back to national prominence.

It's no Blanchard and Davis crew, but we will see a better team than most of us expect. Reason: Coach Earl "Red" Blaik. He has the uncanny ability to do more with less than any coach in modern football history.

South Carolina was scheduled to send the cadets paddling back up the Hudson without a canoe last Saturday and look wot hoppen!

Working for a newspaper has its drawbacks. I can't enter the Examiner Football Contest. Last week, my grid pick amounted to 20 correct games.

This week there are several good upset possibilities, but if you are in the mood to turn a fast buck, perhaps I can give you a hand.

Here we go—right down the Examiner list—Michigan over Stanford, Cal over Minnesota, UCLA tops Washington, Washington State over Baylor (watch that one), Santa Clara over Tulane (and that one too), COP over Texas Tech (another roughie), Illinois over Wisconsin (a toss up), Indiana over Iowa, Ohio State over Purdue, Navy over Cornell, Penn over Dartmouth, Wake Forrest over Boston College (another toss up), Holy Cross over Fordham, Georgia Tech tops SMU, Texas over Notre Dame, Villanova over Detroit, Rice over LSU, Tennessee over Duke (too close, pick your favorite), Georgia over North Carolina and the Lions, over the Rams.

Now, you are allowed more than one ballot (found in the Examiner sports section), so make out a couple more and juggle it to favor the close ones, namely: Stanford, Baylor, Tulane, Wisconsin, Boston College and the Rams. One point either way can mean the difference in those games.

I can hear it all now—"So, sneering contemptuously, I took the 500 fish (prize money) and bought chairs for the standing Army," (famous words of some lucky GI this week, mebbe).

ARMY'S LEADING GROUND GAINER, with a net rushing yardage of 328 yards, Tommy Bell (left) is a principal figure in the attacking backfield. He may also see action on defense. Freddie Meyers (right) is rated the finest all-around athlete at the Point. To better utilize his running ability, he was switched from quarterback to left half in spring practice. A broken leg, suffered near the end of off-season practice, is not expected to hamper him. (Army Photo by A. A. Kepler)

"Black Knights" Tangle with Strong Trojan Eleven At Coliseum Tomorrow

"Displaying sporadic flashes of explosive power reminiscent of its famed predecessors, the supposedly enfeebled Army football team surged to a convincing 28-7 victory over a slightly favored South Carolina eleven today."

The above opening lead from the Associated Press sports wires last weekend denotes a possibility that after a year of necessarily curtailed football, Army may be on the move again.

Expecting the worst from a team still in the process of reconstruction, many Sixth Army football fans will get an eye-witness account of what may well be another great Cadet grid team when the "Black Knights" roll into the Los Angeles Coliseum to take on the University of Southern California Trojans tomorrow.

In the second half of a home-and-home series, the men from the Hudson will make their initial appearance in Los Angeles. The trip to the coast is the third in Army's football history. Previously the Cadets played Stanford at Palo Alto in 1929 and 1950.

Last year Jess Hill's Trojans journeyed to Michie Stadium at West Point to hand Earl Blaik's team a 28-6 reminder of what to expect from the Pacific Coast.

Army, predominantly a sophomore-junior squad, is rated the underdog as they were in the South Carolina tilt, but are upset-minded and fully capable of humiliating Southern Cal, a top PCC power.

Ticket sale throughout the Sixth Army Area was heavy and Army is assured a sizable rooting section.

Approximately 150 fans and the Sixth Army band will be going down from the Presidio, via military air.

When the 1945 national champion Army team really needed a first down, they had a choice between speed merchant Glenn Davis or the human catapult, Doc Blanchard. Blanchard was always a good bet to get the necessary yardage, but Davis was actually better than even money! On his 84 trips with the leather, Davis gained 944 yards—an average of 11¼ yards per carry.

Mascot Inflation Army Now Has Pair of Mules

For more than fifty years the mule has been identified as the mascot of Army football. Selected by the Corps of Cadets near the turn of the century, the mule was picked probably because it was the best known animal to be identified with the U.S. Army.

Sturdy and dependable, the mule was used to haul guns and supplies in many of our Nation's battles. In the bush country of the Philippines, the rice fields of China and mud of France, the mule proved a faithful friend to the foot soldier.

In keeping with the tempo of the times, Army now has two mules, one for each platoon. One is a full-sized Missouri mule named Hannibal. The other is a tiny burro called Pancho. The latter was presented to the Corps of Cadets in 1939 by former Ambassador Colon Alfaro of Ecuador. Mean and vicious when she arrived in New York, Pancho required two soldiers to escort her off the ship. A comparative new-comer, Hannibal succeeded Mr. Jackson, who was retired in 1949 after "long and faithful service."

In addition to romping in tailor made, Black, Gold and Grey blankets at Michie Stadium, both mules are transported to all Army football games in New York and Philadelphia. For other out-of-town games, however, any mule at the nearest Army post is pressed into service.

Tough Year Ahead!

Cadet's Grid Schedule May Prove Toughest in Years

An over-powering schedule plus a dearth of experienced players in several positions makes Army's task a difficult one this year.

Of the twenty-two lettermen returned from the '51 squad that won 2 and lost 7, three were guards, five tackles, three ends, six offensive and five defensive backs.

The team lacks experienced personnel at left end, left guard, right tackle and left and right halfbacks on defense. On offense the picture is a little brighter with lettermen back at every position with the exception of center and right guard.

To help alleviate the situation, Coach Earl (Red) Blaik switched Ronald Lincoln and Lowell Sisson, defensive ends, to tackle and halfback, respectively, on defense. Godwin Ordway, another end, was transferred to center on offense.

Predominantly a sophomore-junior squad, the actual breakdown is 8 seniors, 29 juniors and 17 sophs. Plebes are not eligible. Only one of the present squad has had more than one year of college football. He is Ed Weaver, end. All the rest either have had no varsity experience or played last year for the first time.

The Big Team!

NICKNAME: "Army," "Cadets," "Black Knights"
MASCOT: Mules. "Hannibal" and "Pancho"

The attacking backfield appears to be the strongest part of the squad. Principal hold-overs are Tommy Bell, John Wing, Freddie Attaya and Freddie Meyers.

Meyers is undoubtedly the outstanding back. He was a T-quarterback last fall, but was shifted to left half during spring practice to utilize his running and receiving ability. He broke his leg in the late stages of the spring drills, but he is being counted on for full-time duty.

Pete Vann, a yearling, who saw only limited service behind Meyers and Dick Boyle, looks like the logical choice as Meyers' successor in view of progress in passing department.

Two linemen stand out above the others; namely, Leroy Lunn, a guard from Spring Valley, Illinois, and Bob Guidera, a tackle from Westbury, N. Y. Lunn is a brother of Bob, who also played guard on Army's 1948 and '49 squads. Guidera did not play in the spring due to a knee operation. Nevertheless, he is still regarded as a fine tackle prospect in view of his performance a year ago.

A major change in the coaching staff is noted. Carney Laslie, highly regarded line coach, succeeded Murray Warmath. Laslie formerly coached at Kentucky under Paul Bryant. In addition to Laslie, Coach Blaik has recalled former pupils Joe Steffy, Bobby Dobbs and Art Gerometta, all regular Army officers who will be on detached service for the duration of football season.

Sixth Army Staff Boasts Former Grid Greats

This tribute to the Army football team would in no way be complete without a touch of nostalgia. The Star-Presidian obtained this through interviews with three former Army gridiron greats, now stationed at Presidio.

Colonel Sanford J. Goodman, Executive Officer, G-4, Headquarters Sixth Army, played varsity tackle at the Point from 1920 to 1924.

COLONEL EDWIN L. JOHNSON as he looked during his football heyday at West Point.

A 230 pound line stalwart, Colonel Goodman was an All-Eastern tackle in '22 and '23 and gained a Walter Camp's All-American mention in 1924.

He could run the 100 yard dash in 10½ seconds with football togs on and credits that speed to the terrific stress placed on running, by the coaches. "The line was actually faster than the backfield," states Colonel Goodman.

In hashing over his roughest opponents, the 1920 Notre Dame squad seemed to be one of the greatest. "George Gipp played fullback for the Irish and he had the longest stride of any man I've ever seen. I was taken out on a line play at times, Gipp would make one complete stride over me, lengthwise."

Buck Shaw, San Francisco 49er coach, played across the line from Goodman in that game.

In 1922, the Colonel played against Notre Dame's famed four horsemen—"The horsemen were all light, only weighing about 158 to 165 pounds, but the chief reason for their greatness was excellent co-ordination and timing."

While stationed here in 1925, Colonel Goodman organized the West Coast Army football team. It was a shoestring affair and he had a hard time getting equipment. An athletic concern in San Francisco staked the team for the first year.

One of their games against West Coast Navy was insured for $10,000 by Lloyds of London, against rain. "It rained and the money we collected brought us out of hock."

Evans Field here at the Presidio is named after Bill Evans, a tackle on Colonel Goodman's team.

From 1935 to 1937, the Colonel, on ROTC duty at the University of California, coached the Cal Ramblers.

In between his various playing and coaching years, he officiated football games.

Colonel Edwin L. Johnson, Deputy Chief of Staff, Headquarters Sixth Army, played four years as varsity quarterback from 1921 to 1925 and was Colonel Goodman's teammate.

Weighing only 150 pounds, Colonel Johnson played behind another great quarterback, George Smythe, and can best be evaluated by the words of Colonel Goodman—"Johnson played an awfully rough game of ball. When he came into the game, the line would have to work twice as hard. He would run the heck out of us, a talent that made him stand out as a brilliant quarterback."

In 1926, '27 and '29, Colonel Johnson returned to the Academy and coached the backfield. He tutored another all-time great, Chris Cagle, All-American halfback, three years running.

Under head coach Captain Lawrence "Biff" Jones, the Colonel accompanied the 1929 club on their first trip to the West Coast when they played Glenn S. "Pop" Warner's Stanford Indians.

Band at Game

The Sixth Army Band will play at the Army vs University of Southern California football game in Memorial Coliseum at Los Angeles tomorrow, Saturday, 4 October. The band has been in the Los Angeles area for the past two weeks playing at the Los Angeles County Fair.

Colonel Johnson served as assistant coach to General Bob Neyland at the University of Tennessee in 1930 and then coached the Schofield Barracks, Hawaii, team and the Sixth Division squad at Fort Leonard Wood, Missouri, respectively. Both were championship teams.

He has officiated collegiate football in New York, North Carolina, Indiana and Hawaii.

Colonel John T. Malloy, Executive Officer, G-3, Headquarters Sixth Army, played on the 1929 team with Chris Cagle and under Colonel Johnson, as an end.

Colonel Malloy played varsity end in 1928, '29 and '30 and was an All-American selection by the American Board of Football. The board was composed of the big four football coaches, Rockne, Warner, Jones and Walsh.

Concerning the 1929 game at Palo Alto, Colonel Malloy states, "We won the first 15 minutes, but after playing in the cold and snow in the east, we couldn't take the California heat."

Upon graduation, the Colonel received the coveted Army Athletic Association saber as the outstanding athlete in the class of '31.

He and another Academy great, Elmer Oliphant, were and still are, the only men in West Point's athletic history to receive letters in all four of the major sports.

Colonel Malloy played on the West Coast Army team in 1931 and coached the Presidio team in 1931, '32 and '33. As was the tradition, he too returned to the Point and coached for a short tenure. Earl Blaik was an assistant coach at the time.

In 1938, Robert McKenzie drove his Hudson Terraplane from New York to Los Angeles in just over two days. McKenzie covered the 3,192 miles in 51 hours, 58 minutes.

The world's record for the 100-yard dash frontwards is 9.3 seconds. A. Forrester of Toronto, Canada, ran the dash in 14 seconds—backwards—only 4.7 seconds slower than the normal way of running it.

Pitching for the Philadelphia Athletics on 11 September, 1936, Horace Lisenbee in a spirit of unparalleled generosity, allowed the opposing batters 26 hits—more safeties than any big-time pitcher has ever allowed in a nine-inning game.

In 1906, Frank Acker of St. Louis University kicked 64 extra points out of 67 attempts.

IT'S A SMALL WORLD seems to be the sentiment expressed by Sergeant Bill Gustafson (left) as he shakes hands with former schoolmate and good friend Corporal Don Cottey. The two El Reno, Oklahoma, soldiers, though both wounded veterans of the action in Korea, hadn't seen each other since school days until they were reunited through a news story in the "Star-Presidian." Sgt. Gustafson is a patient at Letterman Army Hospital and Cpl. Cottey is assigned to the Sixth Army Recruiting office.

On What Distant Shore?

Newspaper Story Reunites Pair Of Wounded Combat Veterans

Letterman Army Hospital was the scene of a happy reunion between two wounded combat veterans of Korea, Master Sergeant William G. Gustafson, presently a patient at Letterman, and Corporal Donald G. Cottey, 6400 ASU, Sixth Army Recruiting Service, Presidio of San Francisco.

The Sergeant and Corporal are from El Reno, Oklahoma, where they were in high school and Company "B," 179th Infantry Regiment, 45th Infantry Division, National Guard, together.

Corporal Cottey decided to enlist in the Army after he finished high school, while Sergeant Gustafson stayed in El Reno and was married.

When the 45th Division was called to Federal duty, Sergeant Gustafson was also called to active duty. He was sent, to Fort Benning, Georgia, to attend the Infantry School and in the meantime his buddy, Corporal Cottey, was assigned to Company "B," 35th Infantry Regiment, 25th Division in Korea. By the time that Sergeant Gustafson had finished his school course his unit had been sent to Japan.

However, he was sent to Japan after his graduation and ended up by going back to the same company and platoon. Later, the 45th Division was sent to Korea and while there Sergeant Gustafson was wounded and evacuated to the United States.

Corporal Cottey was also wounded and evacuated to the United States and both were sent to the Presidio, Cottey to Recruiting and Gustafson to Letterman as a patient. It was here one day that Corporal Cottey picked up a copy of the Star-Presidian and saw a picture and story about Gustafson being invited to his home town (El Reno) to be a guest of honor at a celebration in honor of the 45th Infantry Division.

Since their reunion, Donald has been introduced to Sgt. Gustafson's baby daughter and now has a chance to taste some good old Oklahoma home cooking by the Sergeant's wife.

Coal Yard Treadmill Saves Army Many Dollars Yearly

Army workers at Fort Dix, N. J., have put an "escalator" in their coal yard. Money, not steps, is saved.

By an ingenious series of endless belts, coal is snatched from railroad cars, and heaped in piles 100 yards away. The old system was to pile coal by bulldozers, which crushed and ground into the dirt approximately 10 per cent of the anthracite buckwheat coal shipped to the yard.

This added up to a loss of 5,000 tons per year, or $60,000 worth of coal. The cost of operating the bulldozers was $5,616.

Charles de Base, coal yard superintendent, worked out the big treadmill conveyor idea, and the system was set up in March 1951. For this saving to the Army of some $65,000 a year, De Base was awarded a Department of the Army certificate for meritorious civilian service.

Complete Info Needed For College Program

Necessity for undergraduate Regular Army Officers and Warrant Officers submitting more complete information of their participation in the special college program for the records of the Office of the Chief of Information has been stressed by Headquarters Sixth Army.

Some officers who have registered for the program have failed to submit information on courses and tests completed, while others are taking college courses, but have not submitted registration letters, as required.

Participation in the program is one of the pertinent items to be covered in the periodical presentations to the Office of the Chief of Staff on the execution of the Troop Information and Education segments of the Command, Management, Services, and Training programs.

Word to the Wise!

"Many ex-servicemen and women will want to find new jobs upon leaving active military service. Look around—investigate new opportunities. But if such a job is not forthcoming, don't toss away your re-employment rights. The law gives you exactly 90 days to re-apply for your former job and the seniority and benefits that go with it. That's like money in the bank! Don't chuck it away unless you're sure you've got something better."

Army Seeking EM For Guided Missile Training Program

Washington (AFPS)—The Army has issued a call for volunteers from the enlisted ranks to enter the guided missile program. A new regulation relaxes the age requirements in this field by one year, but toughens academic requirements of possible candidates for this training.

The call for volunteers for training and assignment in the guided missile field is not specifically limited to regular Army personnel. However, time-in-service requirements for these assignments are such that only men with two years of service remaining can qualify.

Because of the length of training and the "remaining service" clause, inductees would have to agree to re-enlist or extend their service to become eligible.

19 Skilled Trades!

Army Has Wide Variety of Jobs Available to Separatee

Civilian employment opportunities in 19 skilled trades for which the Department of the Army has a continuing need have been compiled into a list by Headquarters Sixth Army for distribution throughout the area. The listing also contains the names and addresses of the Army installations where job requirements exist.

To assist personnel being separated from active military service, the listing gives the Wage Board codes of the trades with their related enlisted MOS counterparts. In many instances, those being separated possess the same skilled trades in which there are employment opportunities by virtue of military training.

An application for employment to any of the installations listed by personnel being separated will be made by submitting Standard Form 57, "Application for Federal Employment." The separated applicant will be responsible for the completion and mailing his own Standard Form 57. Assistance in completing the form will be given by the post civilian personnel office.

The names of the installations listed were taken from the most current skills shortage reports of the Office of Civilian Personnel. Since vacancies may be filled after being reported, the listing of an installation does not guarantee that the job will be available. Applicants are urged to submit an application to each installation in which he desires to be employed for the trade in which he is qualified.

Trades listed are as follows: telephone installing and repairing, electronic equipment repairing, radio installing and repairing, electrical installation and repairing, electrical line working, model making metal, machinist, tool die guage making, welding acetylene and electric, sheet metal working, pipe-fitting, plumbing, steamfitting, carpentry, refrigeration and air-conditioning equipment repairing, heating equipment inspection and repairing, millwright, automotive equipment repairing general, and artillery repairing.

Installations where these opportunities exist are located in 28 states and Washington, D. C. The states are: Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, California, Colorado, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Nebraska, North Carolina, New Jersey, New Mexico, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Virginia and Washington.

T.I.&E. Ingenuity!

Revamped Rail Car Serves As Schoolhouse In Korea

Conversion to a greasy-spoon diner isn't the only prospect for an old railroad car—the Army in Korea has revamped two into prospering schoolhouses.

Eighth Army Troop Information and Education officials converted a retired coach into a traveling schoolhouse able to roll right up to the front lines to help in the soldier's off-duty studies.

For dusty scholars who want to wash before they tackle the books, the unusual schoolhouse has shower baths built into one end of the railcar. Soldiers can sign up for United States Armed Forces Institute courses, or just relax with a good book in the mobile unit's library.

The other railcar-study room in Korea belongs to the Second Logistical Command's 765th Transportation Railway Shop Battalion at Pusan.

Private First Class John M. Flaherty, of 5359 North Ludlam Avenue, Chicago, Ill., the unit's T.I.&E. non-commissioned officer, got the idea.

With an enthusiastic go-ahead from his commanding officer, Flaherty located an old wooden coach with more mileage than a science fiction hero.

A switch-engine shunted it to a "dead-head" siding.

The men went to work. The inside was painted, a steam heating system installed, new light went in, curtains and pictures went up, desks were hauled in, and an office-library was installed.

In a three-month period, there were 500 enrollments in regular courses—which offer everything from English literature to chicken farming—and the car averaged more than 150 students each day.

Curious Bullet!

Korea—This is the story of a bullet—with a mind of its own. The bullet was fired from a .32-caliber Chinese burp gun and aimed at PFC Herbert Little of Manchester, Conn.

It ripped a path between Little's steel helmet and the lining, following the outline of the young soldier's head.

It then zoomed out of the helmet, pierced the neck of Little's armored vest and scraped a path down his back before shooting out of the bottom of the nylon vest.

The bullet made a half-inch hole in the helmet.

Little said: "I did not know how close to death I was at the time. But I felt awfully funny afterwards."

Sixth Army Signal Chief Retires After 42 Years

Colonel Lloyd C. Parsons, former Signal Officer of Sixth Army, retired at the end of last month following 42 years of service. He had been assigned to Headquarters Sixth Army since August 1947.

COLONEL PARSONS

Colonel Parsons came to the Presidio from Korea where he had been Director, Bureau Communications, Military Government of Korea, for the 18 months before his reassignment here. Previously he had been Headquarters Commandant, Kobe Base, Japan, from September 1945 to March 1946.

A veteran of both World Wars, he commanded the 3d Battalion, 54th Infantry, 6th Division in action during World War I. In World War II, he was Signal Officer, North Africa Theater of Operations, U. S. Army, and Signal Officer, Mediterranean Allied Air Force. From November 1944 to September 1945, he was Commanding Officer, Specialists Training Camps, Camp Crowder, Mo.

Born 18 September 1892 at Menominee, Michigan, he was graduated from the University of Arkansas, receiving a BEE degree in Electrical Engineering. He served with the 2nd Infantry, Arkansas National Guard from April 1910 to August 1917.

Colonel Parsons is a graduate of the following Army schools: Company Officers' Course, Signal School, 1925-26; Command and General Staff School, 1931-1933; Advanced Course, Signal School, Fort Monmouth, N. J., 1933-1934.

Army Plans Retention Of 597 Colonels

Washington—The Army will retain 597 colonels on active duty who will be due to retire between July 31, 1953 and July 31, 1954, Secretary of the Army Frank Pace Jr. has announced. They will be retained in accordance with the provisions of Executive Order 10379.

The Officer Personnel Act of 1947 prescribes mandatory retirement for permanent colonels who complete 30 years' service and five years in grade. It also provides, however, that in time of emergency this provision may be suspended.

The Executive Order suspended the mandatory retirement to provide for retention of a maximum of 60 percent of the officers affected.

Fort Lewis Tops Sixth Army's Economy Program

Reports on the recent "Cost Consciousness" test conducted by the Department of the Army gave the Sixth Army an average of 55.4 per cent which compares exceptionally well with the Army-wide overall average of 49.8 per cent.

Top individual rating in the Sixth Army area went to Fort Lewis, Washington, with a 63.8 per cent average. Camp Roberts, California, was second with a high average of 55.4 per cent.

Both installations rated in the top five of the 21 continental installations tested.

Scoring the importance of the Army's all-out attack on waste through the use of the weapon of "Cost Consciousness," Secretary of the Army Frank Pace Jr. said in a recent address.

"Instilling a real feel for economy and conservation in each soldier will provide the broad base for the campaign against waste. From the top, however, must come the imaginative and far-reaching planning, supervision and guidance which will permit us to channel and focus efforts to obtain maximum efficiency at the least cost. Part of the battle to do things better is trying out new ideas which look as if they will increase efficiency."

Slate Physicals For All Officers From 1 Oct.-31 Dec.

The only exceptions will be those officers who, during the calendar year 1952 underwent a physical examination for promotion in the Regular Army, appointment in the Regular Army, those who were recalled to extended active duty or officers who appeared before a medical board while undergoing hospitalization.

Appropriate reports and/or certificates will be prepared and forwarded in accordance with AR 40-100, paragraph 10 as amended. These reports and/or certificates will include a physical profile on each individual, and will be signed by the medical examining official.

Sixteen military decorations, 14 going to veterans of the fighting in Korea, were awarded at a colorful retreat parade in front of Sixth Army Headquarters on Wednesday afternoon of this week.

In one of the largest award ceremonies in recent years, Major General Milton B. Halsey, Deputy Commanding General of Sixth Army, pinned some of the Nation's highest awards to the blouses of the Infantry heroes.

Colonel Morris H. Marcus read the citations that won decorations for:

Capt. John D. Porter, Infantry, 7004 Chappel Ave., Chicago, Ill., now assigned to the G-3 Section (Plans, Training and Operations) of Sixth Army Headquarters, received the Distinguished Flying Cross and Commendation Ribbon.

According to the citation for the Distinguished Flying Cross, "On 22 January, 1951, Capt. John D. Porter distinguished himself by extraordinary achievement while participating in aerial flight. As an observer in a T-6 type aircraft, Captain Porter volunteered to fly in the Wonju-Hoengsong sector. The central front was of vital concern at this particular time and friendly forces were engaged in a major effort to recapture and secure Wonju. After arriving in the area Captain Porter detected enemy camouflage on the rugged and commanding terrain to the northeast of Wonju. Closer observation after repeated low passes in the face of intense enemy fire revealed concentrations of enemy well concealed and dug-in on the ridge which controlled the entire valley. Fighter type aircraft were contacted and upon Captain Porter's suggestion were directed to strike the reverse slope and crests of the high ground. Captain Porter's knowledge of ground tactics, keen observation, and intense devotion to duty assisted the pilot in great measure. Observed results of the air strikes, in addition to assisting materially in the withdrawal of the enemy, disclosed two mortars destroyed, two automatic weapons destroyed, approximately two hundred enemy troops killed or wounded, and the greater portion of four villages known to contain enemy troops demolished. Captain Porter's courage and determination reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army."

The citation accompanying the award of the Commendation Ribbon for Captain Porter describes his meritorious service from May 17 to July 30, 1951, as the Ground Liaison Officer with the 452nd Bombardment Group of the Fifth Air Force.

Other recipients of awards were: First Lieutenant Roland A. Merullo, Signal Corps, 2547 46th Ave., San Francisco, Calif., now with the Signal Service Detachment, Presidio of San Francisco, the Bronze Star Medal for meritorious service with the 24th Infantry Division in Korea from April 8, 1951, through February 9, 1952.

Scouritis, Military Police Corps, 37 Rockaway Street, Lynn, Mass., now with the 505th Military Police Battalion at the Presidio of San Francisco, the First Oak Leaf Cluster to the Bronze Star Medal for meritorious service with the First Corps in Korea from July 5, 1950, to January 20, 1952.

Master Sergeant Henry F. Dowling, now assigned to Quartermaster Section, Headquarters Sixth Army, Presidio of San Francisco, Calif., the Commendation Ribbon for meritorious service with the Civil Assistance Section, Eighth Army in Korea from 28 October, 1950, to 15 June, 1951.

President Affirms 5-Year Reserve Officer Extension

Washington—President Truman has signed an executive order extending current five-year commissions of Army and Air Force reserve officers from Oct. 28, 1952 to April 1, 1953.

The extension will give the Army and Air Force time to complete the job of offering reserve officers new indefinite commissions. It will also give individual officers more time to reach a decision.

Officers on inactive duty will also be offered the same deal. The indefinite commission plan was authorized by the recently enacted Armed Forces Reserve Act.

Navy, Marine, National Guard and Air National Guard commissions are already on an indefinite basis.

Army Releases Data On New Atomic Artillery Weapon

Washington (AFPS)—After months under tight security wraps, the Army has unveiled an artillery piece capable of firing an atomic shell.

An amazing feat of engineering know-how, the new 281 mm. gun is the Army's largest-caliber artillery piece having complete mobility. It can fire conventional as well as atomic shells.

Having a range of about 20 miles, it weighs approximately 85 tons and, including transporters, is 84 feet two inches in length. Carried suspended between two engine cabs, front and rear, it can cruise along the highways at about 35 miles per hour.

Four times more accurate than any artillery piece used in WWII, it can be emplaced and put into action with greater speed than heavy artillery pieces now in use.

The entire unit consists of the gun (T131), the carriage (T72) and the transporter (T10). The projectile and powder charge are loaded into the weapon's breach by means of a hydraulic power rammer. A telephonic communications system connects the front and rear driver while on the move.

Although not much larger than the heaviest artillery piece now in use it is so balanced that it can be leveled on uneven terrain. The unit moves forward, backward and sideways with one transporter pulling while the other pushes.

Nearly 2200 separate blueprints were required for the gun assembly alone. The project was begun in 1944, modified for atomic use in 1949, and ready for field testing in 1951.

The gun can give accurate and devastating close support to ground troops never before available to them in the history of warfare.

Latest Promotions

Sixth Army's allocation of enlisted promotions total 158 for the month of October.

This quota consists of seven promotions to Master Sergeant, eight to Sergeant First Class, 15 to Sergeant, 25 to Corporal and 103 to Private First Class.

This is the third allocation of enlisted promotions received in the Sixth Army Area since the new promotion system was inaugurated in August by the Department of the Army.

More than 16,700,000 (M) tons of cargo were out-loaded under supervision by the Army Transportation Corps during the past year. This is a 43 per cent increase over tonnage loaded the previous year. During this same period, 1,212,000 (M) tons of cargo were received from overseas areas representing an increase of 81 per cent.

Topic

"Your Personal Affairs" will be the topic of the Troop Information Conferences of Presidio units next week. Suggestions will be given of specific ways of getting personal affairs—largely financial—in order, so that relatives and dependents may be spared unnecessary hardship or uncertainty in a time of emergency.

The discussions will deal with such matters as preparing a will, executing a power of attorney, and establishing a joint account. These are among the personal affairs that should be put in order without waiting until overseas orders are received.

Advisability of preparing and maintaining a personal affairs record will be stressed. A simple method of writing the information on a personal affairs record form will be shown. This is not an official form that can be requisitioned, but copies can be made.

Attention will be directed to specific military and nonmilitary agencies whose services are available to give assistance in personal affairs. Included among these are the personnel officer, the legal assistance officer, the Red Cross representative, and the chaplain.

The conferences will point out that the sooner careful plans for the financial and legal protection of service personnel and their dependents are made, the less money and complications it is likely to cost them and their dependents later.

Plug-Ugly Pinup

PHILADELPHIA—There's a mighty puzzled ape in the Philadelphia Zoo these days. Eameeo, who has been celebrating his 26th birthday, is pondering his selection by members of the 187th RCT in Korea as "the boy we would most like to have with us on combat patrol."

The men decided no movie or stage beauty could be as comforting as the photograph of a beast noted for its ugly features and disposition. Accordingly, they wrote the zoo here for a snapshot of Eameeo. Completely overwhelmed by the request, Eameeo was happy to comply. But now?

If Winter Comes....!

Army Well Prepared For Third Winter In Korea

The Army is getting ready for another winter in Korea.

Winter clothing by the truck-load is moving to front-line soldiers. Cold weather teams already are making the rounds of combat units to show fighting men how to wear and care for their clothing and equipment.

Army Quartermaster plants in Japan worked all summer to put last year's winter clothing back into "like new" condition. Now it is ready for re-issue.

"We're ready," said Colonel Kenneth Kuster, of Salt Lake City, Eighth Army Quartermaster Supply Officer. "We are issuing winter clothing two weeks earlier this year than we did last year. We're making sure no early chill catches the men. We have excellent winter clothing and equipment—and plenty of it."

Korea's winter usually runs from mid-October through March. It is marked by northerly winds, light snow falls, and a cutting, wet cold. Temperatures often reach 22 degrees below zero. Cold air "drainage" from the high, rugged hills into valleys at night creates a cold night-warm day cycle that causes the cold-wet conditions. This presents the Army with its biggest weather problem.

Colonel L. Holmes Ginn, of Berryville, Va., Eighth Army Surgeon, explained:

"A man's body heat, held in by his clothes, is what protects him against cold. Under most conditions, that body heat is sufficient. But get those clothes wet and they are just about useless. Water is a good conductor of heat—so good that it conducts virtually all the body heat away from the soldier's body."

To combat this cold-wet factor, Army Quartermaster researchers have come up with such items as insulated rubber combat boots, usually referred to by soldiers as "thermos jugs." First used last year, they have proved to be the answer to one of the soldier's biggest winter worries—trench-foot. This year every soldier will have a pair.

Besides "thermos jugs," other winter clothing is being moved to the front. It includes parkas with pile liners, mittens, mountain sleeping bags, mufflers, pile caps—and even long underwear which science has yet to replace.

Winter clothing being issued by the Army is designed on the "layer" principle. The theory is that the many clothing layers form an equal number of air layers and the air, warmed by body heat, serves as insulation.

To ensure that the soldiers know how to wear and care for the winter clothing, roving teams not only are giving instructions but also are distributing a 37-page booklet—"Cold Facts For Keeping Warm"—which is chock full of tips that pay off in comfort. Once instruction ends, the teams remain with the divisions as investigators. Complete case histories will be made of cold injuries and will be used by Army planners in their efforts to devise new and better winter clothing.

The only new item of clothing to be issued initially this year is a pair of heavier type trousers. The Army is working on a new "vacuum" type suit, made of plastic, but it still is in the test stage and is not ready for field use.

A good loser knows that he can always try again.

New Rule Allows Soldiers to Ship Sporting Guns

Washington—Soldiers may now ship non-military guns home instead of carrying them in their personal luggage when returning to the States. In addition, they no longer have to register such guns before returning.

The words "non-military firearms" have been dropped in Change 1 to SR 550-25-1, which removes sporting guns from the control placed on war trophy firearms.

Any civilian-made gun designed for civilian use, providing it was not "liberated" during a period of fighting, can be classified as non-military.

The Army explained that civilians are buying fancy hand-tooled shotguns and hunting rifles in Europe and mailing them home. Since American civilians have that privilege, soldiers should too.

This order in no way relaxes the soldier's liability to U.S. laws affecting firearms. Pistols, for instance, still cannot be sent through the mails. Postal regulations state: "Pistols, revolvers, and other firearms capable of being concealed on the person are non-mailable and shall not be deposited in or carried by the mails."

Former Claims Officer Now Bureau Chief

Captain G. W. Rice has been assigned as Assistant Secretary to the General Staff, Officer-in-Charge of the Visitors' Bureau. He previously was Courts and Claims Officer of the Presidio.

As Officer-in-Charge of the Visitors' Bureau, Captain Rice replaces Lt. L. R. Stanley, a reserve officer who completes 17 months of active duty on Monday. Lt. Stanley will continue in the active reserves as Air Ground Liaison Officer with the Sixth Army Mobile Group with the rank of captain.

Welcome Home!

First Units Of 30th Engineers Return From Alaska Survey

Over 600 officers and enlisted men, the forward echelon of the 30th Engineer Base Topographic Battalion, returned to Fort Winfield Scott Saturday after completing a record-breaking season in accomplishing the Battalion's 1952 survey mission in Alaska.

According to Lt. Col. James W. Free, Forward Echelon Commander, the 30th smashed all records this season for the amount of ground survey accomplished and left a mark that will stand for a good many years. It was the 30th's third year of survey work on the Army Map Service project, and the men "roughed it" for five months in carrying out this year's assignment.

A large portion of this year's work was done in the sub-arctic areas of the Territory characterized by vast tundra plains and thousands of square miles of lakes and swamps. Transportation was possible only through the use of amphibious "Weasels" and pontoon-equipped helicopters, a large number of which were used in this season's operations.

Except for the rugged surveyors themselves, it was the 'copters that played the most important role in 1952's record-breaking work. They not only enabled survey parties to reach otherwise inaccessible areas in a matter of minutes but proved valuable in the actual surveying. Classification of ground information was but one of the phases of work accomplished mainly by the use of 'copters.

The Battalion is now preparing for survey operations in Southern California during the winter months.

30th Back In Swing

The 30th Engineers Base Topographic Battalion returns from Alaska this week and will get right back into the swing of things by donating a pint of blood to the National Blood Bank.

Nicknamed the 100 per center for their willingness to aid a worthy cause to the last man, they have been one of the leading contributors to Presidio drives of all types. Lieutenant Colonel Samuel O. Rousseau, chairman of Presidio's blood procurement program, has set up a special day for the Engineers, this Tuesday from 0800 to 1200 hours at building 562. They are expected to retain their 100 per center title.

Establish New Agency For West Coast Property Deliveries

Washington—The Army has established the West Coast Personal Property Agency at the San Francisco Port of Embarkation.

This agency is set up to provide quick delivery of unaccompanied personal property, with a minimum of red tape.

It will receive all applications for shipment of personal property through West Coast ports. All authorized shipments from Pacific overseas commands (except Alaska) to continental U.S. will come through this agency.

All unaccompanied personal property shipped from the continental U.S. for overseas destinations through the San Francisco Port of Embarkation will also be handled by the new establishment.

Demonstrations And Parades!

Local Army Installations All Out On Fire Prevention Week

This is National Fire Prevention Week and for the military and civilian personnel of the Presidio and the San Francisco Port of Embarkation there has been no possibility of missing the observance. Fire-fighting demonstrations, parades, lectures and other special events have been offered daily in all sections of the Presidio, Oakland Army Base and Fort Mason.

Presidio's Fire Department features a display for fire equipment and typical fire hazards found on this post mounted on a float, which has toured the main post, Fort Scott and the other sub-posts. This demonstration has taken the fire prevention message into every office and to all the military and civilian personnel on the post.

Children of the Presidio will have a field day tomorrow when they are all invited to visit the fire station. After they pledge themselves not to play with fire and to report all fires promptly, they will be given rides on the fire engines. They will also be given souvenir firemen's helmets and badges, as well as candy.

The Oakland Army Base has held noontime parades with San Francisco's 103-year-old fire engine, the Base's modern apparatus, several floats pointing up fire hazards and Miss Oakland Army Base of 1952, selected in a beauty contest to reign over the week's events. Displays at the base include a gigantic wheel of fortune set up to answer questions about fire hazards and costs and a replica of the incident in the O'Leary stable in Chicago, which according to tradition started the great Chicago fire.

At Fort Mason, the demonstrations are climaxed with a miniature three-alarm fire scene using a scale model burning building and tiny apparatus made by Assistant Chief Peter Bruhn. This exhibition shows tiny hose lines pouring water on the flaming building, firemen climbing ladders, and a pumper and two aerial ladder trucks in action.

The three trucks of this demonstration are scale models of San Francisco Fire Department apparatus and took Bruhn years to construct. Everything common to fire-fighting, including hydrants, pumps, valves, scaling ladders, aerial ladders, helmets, axes and life nets, are included in miniature.

In another special feature at Fort Mason, Army fire boats operated by Terminal Operations Division gave demonstrations in the Bay off Fort Mason.

The week's events represent the most extensive Fire Prevention Week program ever presented by the Army installations.

Army Cubmen Learn "Blackout" Flying

Army aviators are taking to blacked-out cockpits to increase their flying proficiency in adverse weather conditions.

Army pilots enrolled in the Instrument Flying Course at the Spartan School of Aeronautics, Tulsa, Okla., spend 40 hours "under the hood" and 25 hours with training aid cockpits to qualify for an instrument rating.

The remainder of the course is spent in classroom instruction on courses in navigation, meteorology, civil air regulations and communications. (ANF)

Ft. Mason Offers New Classes For Presidio Personnel

The following on-post classes begin this Month at Fort Mason and are open to all Presidio, Letterman and other military and civilian personnel without charge.

A beginner's class in Short Wave Radio Operation will meet every Tuesday from 1800 to 2000 hours in the Training Room of Building 207 at Fort Mason. This twelve week class will consist of a course in basic electronics and code which will lead to the granting of a FCC HAM license. Major Donald Dickinson, Port Signal Officer and Mr. William Butz of the Sixth Army Radio Control Center will be instructors for this radio class.

Every Thursday from 1800 to 2000 hours those who have their HAM license, or are otherwise experienced, can receive instruction in high frequency radio or advanced code sending. This course is in conjunction with the new Fort Mason W6WAS MARS unit, scheduled to go into operation this fall. Classes will also be held in Building 207 at Fort Mason.

Beginning Monday, 13 October, a public speaking class will be held every Monday thereafter from 1800 to 2000 hours in the Post Theater at Fort Mason. This short intensive course in speaking and group leadership is approximately ten weeks long and is under the direction of Mrs. Julia Dempster, instructor from Lux College, San Francisco.

Further information concerning these classes may be obtained from the Post TI&E Office, Fort Mason, extension 3228.

Finance Chief Says Cards Will Replace FC's Paper Checks

Washington—The Army Finance Corps' paper checks will soon be replaced by card checks, Maj. Gen. Bickford E. Sawyer, Chief of Finance, has announced.

The move, designed to streamline operation and economize, will take nine months. Plans call for the installation of mechanical accounting equipment at 31 finance disbursing offices which issue 15,000 or more checks a month.

The Army expects to save $27 per thousand checks written. The conversion will affect 2,800,000 checks per month.

Other benefits from the new system will be increased proficiency in accounting for, and reconciliation of, checks by Treasury and General Accounting Offices and a substantial saving in manpower.

The Army began to use electric accounting machines in WWII. Up until the announced change it had been sending out 1,500,000 card checks a month, mostly to dependents and retired personnel.

Presidio Progress Charted!

Sixth Army Band Concert To Aid Crusade Fund Campaign

Progress of Presidio's participation in San Francisco's United Crusade campaign for financial support to San Francisco social and health agencies will be charted on a large signboard near the Presidio Fire Station on the main post.

Charting of the initial stand- ings of the various units of the Presidio was delayed by failure of committee members to submit reports of contributions to Major Ella A. Wilton, Post Funds Custodian and Vice Chairman of the Presidio's Crusade campaign.

Of the first reports, the largest contributions were recorded for Letterman Army Hospital. However, Presidio units are expected to equal the donations of the hospital as later reports are received.

Further support of the city's Crusade will be given today by the Sixth Army Band playing for the daily noon show in Union Square. These Union Square rallies are staged on a forty-foot platform with a Crusade torch symbol and scoreboard as backdrops. They are being held every noon except Saturday and Sunday during the campaign.

In addition to today's concert by the Sixth Army Band, many of the shows are featuring demonstrations by other military units. They include the Marines' Women's Chorus and the Twelfth Naval District Treasure Island Chorus. Marine Reserves will give a judo demonstration. Military bands also will perform at each of the five report shows.

During the current campaign, the United Crusade will raise 1953 funds for seven major health and welfare organizations in a single campaign. Purpose of the Crusade is to introduce order and unity into the raising of funds for worthy causes and to eliminate waste of time, effort and money caused by repeated solicitations.

ONCE FOR ALL!
Homeless babies, sick people, teenagers in need of decent recreation, old people no longer able to care for themselves, families with problems threatening to split them apart—these are only some of the people served by the 85 agencies affiliated with the United Crusade. If you tried to give to all of these services, separately, ONE AT A TIME, every day, including Sunday, beginning October 1, you wouldn't see the last one until the day before Christmas. To save your time and make it possible for you to help ALL these agencies, the FEDERATED FUND unites all these appeals. Now you can give once a year to help 85 health and welfare agencies.

The United Crusade saves money, time and duplication of effort by letting you give once for all seven of the major charity and welfare causes.

Port Makes Good Use of Physically Handicapped

San Francisco Port of Embarkation is making good use of physically handicapped persons, an "Employ the Physically Handicapped Week" survey showed today.

Port divisions list approximately 65 persons with major physical handicaps performing various jobs, chiefly clerical. Five are deaf mutes, a number have lost limbs, and several are spastics but all are "ready, willing and able."

Outstanding among them is Miss Ethel Peterson, clerk-typist in Civilian Personnel Division. Born with only one sound limb, an arm, she has overcome this great handicap with persistence and courage and has made herself a most useful employee.

In addition to providing employment opportunities for physically handicapped, the Port also has listed on its rolls a large number of disabled veterans.

(By Armed Forces Press Service)

More than 31,000 veterans with post-Korean service applied for education and training under the new K-Vet Bill during the first ten days of the program. The Veterans Administration pointed out that although the new law was signed July 16, its education and training provisions did not take effect until Aug. 20. The figure represents enrollment as of the end of August. The new K-Vet Bill allows a veteran 1½ days of training for each day in Service after the outbreak of Korean fighting, June 27, 1950. Veterans in training receive an education and training allowance each month from the government to meet part of their expenses and living costs.

Christmas parcels for members of the Armed Forces overseas should be mailed between Oct. 15 and Nov. 15. Air parcel post packages up to two pounds in weight should be mailed not later than Nov. 25. The Department of Defense said that no assurance can be given that air parcel post mailed after Nov. 25 can be airlifted to overseas areas or that delivery prior to Christmas will be made.

A cut in the quota of Army candidates for officer candidate school has been made for the remaining months of 1952. The reduction is due to the increasing number of Reserve officers electing to remain in active service, and the number of officers entering the Army from the ROTC program. Operation of all nine officer candidate schools will be continued on a reduced scale. Beside lowering quotas, standards for selecting candidates will be raised.

Armed Forces installations have been urged by the Defense Department to support and collect contributions for the 1953 Community Chest campaign. The USO, USO Camp Shows, and several other organizations for entertaining servicemen and women are financed through this fund.

Silver Star On Letterman Sgt; 11 Others Win Decorations

Awards to twelve men and one woman of Letterman Army Hospital in acknowledgment of their outstanding services were presented Tuesday afternoon in hospital patio. Those receiving the awards represented duty, student and patient personnel of the hospital.

Sergeant Morito Takanishi, MSC, currently assigned to the hospital's Receiving Office, stood first in line to receive the Silver Star for his courageous action in Korea in October 1951. The citation accompanying the award told the story of his heroic devotion to duty as a medical aid man with the 24th Infantry Division. He constantly exposed himself to intense enemy fire while skillfully caring for the wounded.

Four men received the Bronze Star* for meritorious achievement in connection with military operations against an armed enemy. They were Captain Leroy Gates, Air Force, of Santa Rosa, Calif.; Captain Joseph L. Hannon, MC, currently assigned to Out-patient Service; Cpl. James Bagatelos, San Francisco and Sergeant Frederick E. Bolden, MSC, student operating room technician. Award of the Commendation Ribbon with Medal Pendant was made to Captain Joseph M. Kilmer, MSC, now Administrative Asst. Surgical Service; CWO Robert W. Hartwell, USA, Los Angeles, Calif., and Capt. Dorothy Childers, WAC, Monrovia, Calif.

For wounds received in action against an armed enemy in Korea, the Purple Heart was awarded to the following—SFC Calvin Bolt, Seattle, Wash.; Sgt. Robt. D. Oberg, Hettinger, No. Dakota; Pfc. Alex Gonzales, Los Angeles; Pfc. Noel T. Hilliard, Marion, Ill.; Pvt. Johnny L. Pittman, Ceres, Calif.

The awards were presented by Major General Leonard D. Heaton, Commanding General; Colonel Robt. B. Skinner, Deputy Commander, and Lt. Col. James H. Mackin, Executive Officer. Orders and citations were read by Captain Oliver M. Rajala.

M/Sgt. Fritz Kern and his 3rd Hospital Band supplied the music.

Lighter Compressor Will Aid Front Line Use of Flame Throwers

The Army Chemical Corps has adopted a new lightweight compressor for supplying pressure to flame throwers.

Unlike its 850-pound predecessor, the M-1, the new 60-pound compressor can be carried on a man's back and operated near the battlefield on rough terrain without danger of its turning over.

The new compressor lacks the capacity of the old one, but it will pressurize three portable flame throwers at a time, taking about four minutes per tank. The M-1 can handle six flame throwers at the rate of two minutes per tank.

Busy Beauty!—

What happens to a girl who wins the Miss America contest? Yolande Betbeze, who took the title two years ago, recently gave a statistical rundown on her activities after she was crowned. During her reign she amassed approximately $50,000; traveled 62,000 miles; received the keys to 73 American cities; dedicated 11 supermarkets, eight furniture stores, a housing development, and a perfume called "Yolande Mist." She became the mascot of the Cleveland Indians and sweetheart of the 200th Infantry Regt.; received and rejected 163 proposals of marriage; lunched with 156 mayors; was kissed by the Vice-President of the U. S. on the mouth; bussed on the cheek by seven senators, 11 representatives, and two justices of the peace. She was displayed in 51 parades, had 28 babies named after her, got an audience with the Pope, and an offer to play Tarzan's mate in a movie.

LUGGING THE PRESIDIO MAIL is Corporal Chick Preciado (left), B Battery, 9th AAA Gun Battalion, from Tucson, Arizona, and Corporal Kenneth Gordon (right), 6002 ASU Station Complement, from Los Angeles. Both are key spokes in the Raider defensive wheel, but, as demonstrated here, are capable of handling offensive roles, as has been their past experience. (Army Photos by Matsuo)

Add Profiles Of Four More Raider Stalwarts To Your Scrap Books

Getting back to football profiles after a temporary squeeze for material a little more timely, four more cogs in the Presidio Red Raider football machine are presented:

Corporal Louis Brown, 99th Engineers, from Baden, Pennsylvania, received his first starting role in the Rambler-Raider game last Friday and from all indications, the 170-pound half-back will be in there from here on in.

Cpl. Brown, although lacking in collegiate experience, is an old salt when it comes to Army ball. This marks his third season with the Raiders. His past two years included a considerable amount of work at the half and fullback slots.

Brown put in three years on the high school gridiron back in PA, playing in the line, at quarterback, half and full, experience that now singles him out for possible work as a utility man, a rarity in football.

Corporal Kenneth Gordon, 6002 ASU, Station Complement, looms as one of the key figures in Presidio's defensive backfield.

Playing continuously on defense in the Raider's first three games, Cpl. Gordon has proved a major difference in that department.

Gordon goes into this, his first year of army ball, a veteran of three years high school grid duty with Washington High, Los Angeles.

Corporal William Albrecht, C Battery, 459th AAA, a 6 foot 2 inch, 190-pounder from Paterson, New Jersey, plays offensive right end for the Raiders.

Cpl. Albrecht, a veteran of high school, semi-pro and army ball, serves to provide much of the necessary depth needed at the flanker positions.

Albrecht pounded Paterson's East Side High turf for three years, followed by two years with a Paterson semi-pro club and one year at Camp Edwards, Massachusetts.

This is his first year on the Presidio gridiron.

Corporal Chick Preciado, another top defensive back, was previously presented, minus picture, in football profiles.

Red Raiders To Play Moffett Here Today

Presidio's Red Raiders will meet the Moffett Field Raiders here on the Fort Scott Football Field at 1400 hours today.

Going into their fourth game with two defeats and one tie, the locals will be looking for their first win.

Moffet lost to Treasure Island last week by a 20-0 score.

On hand to provide musical entertainment will be the Sixth Army band.

GI Likes Joe Perry

Airing his views concerning pro and college football, in Army Times last week, Private Fred Wallner, Replacement Training Center, Aberdeen, Maryland, ex-Notre Dame and Chicago Cardinal lineman, makes a comment that is of interest to grid fans out in this territory.

Pvt. Wallner states that the best enemy back he's faced in the pro loop is Joe Perry, San Francisco 49er ace fullback.

Many people have asked me how I liked the Army-USC game last Saturday, at Los Angeles. Well—to tell you the truth, I sluffed off and went to another game. Boy, was it a doozy. Ten people were on hand to witness the annual classic between “Ye Auld Pots and Pans” and “The Lip” down at the Mess Hall. I lost. ♦

My spirit was damaged, my morale, at its lowest ebb, was floundering around in the sink and I just couldn't cut the ice against the iron men from Pottsville.

They scored three meals against me before I could soap up.

Heck—I know we only have to play that weekend KP game once every 35 or 40 weeks, so I'll tell ya what I'm gonna do. . . . I'm gonna tell you how to bring it on fast so you can get it over with. Plan a big excursion. That's all. Simple, no?

In this racket—(easy Paul—business—business) it's bad policy to write about yourself, but once in awhile, after you've scraped the bottom out of the barrel and come up with nothing, you decide to write about yourself, which is still nothing, so you throw away your old nickel pencil and pick up the one marked “egotism” and write away.

I'd like to answer a question that I'm asked quite often. “How did you get into this type of work and what college did you go to?”

Here's the answer: I hopped bells in an Oregon hotel, worked as a lumberjack in the Black Hills of South Dakota, shot pictures of babies for a portrait photographer in North Carolina and I ain't never been to college. Tha's how I got into this rack—business. Sounds far-fetched, but it sure am true.

This column was saved from complete slapstick at the last minute before deadline when “Ma Bell” rang and on the other end was Captain Davies, assistant to the Special Services Officer at Camp Stoneman. on Cap'n. . . . “Anyway, we gained 293 yards rushing to 19 for the Lions.”

You find that hard to believe! I don't because I know Captain Davies to be about the most progressive officer I've ever met. Found that out when we went up to shoot pictures of the Southern Division baseball finals.

It's like pulling teeth to get baseball players to take a break for a pose, but not when Captain Davies is around. He hustled those Fort Ord pro's around like they were privates. Well, mebbe they were all privates, but the pernt is—he gets the job done quick like.

Red Devils Boast Outstanding Eleven

Indiantown Gap, Pa.—The Fifth Infantry Red Devils loom as one of the most powerful stateside Service football teams of the season with one victory already taken.

The team, which won eight out of eleven starts in 1951, romped over the Chambersburg Cardinals, 46-6, in the season's opener. Nine games remain on the schedule.

Football fans this fall will see several rule changes in the game, for the whistle-tooters as well as the players must keep up with changing play patterns. . . . Spread formations, on the rise in the past few years, will hit their peak in 1952. Coaches have learned to cope with the tight T-formation offensives by setting up stronger defenses through the middle of the line. Split T-formations and spread-out offenses have resulted.

Officiating changed, too, to meet the new demands of wide-ranging football. The spread formations combine the good points of tight and split T-football; the referees, umpires (football has them, too), and field judges shifted their positions to combine old and new methods of keeping the game clean. The field judge and the referee this year have shifted positions. The judge now stands astride the scrimmage line. The referee, to get better sight of clipping, pushing and other illegalities, takes his place behind the opposing linemen. All four officials are required to use whistles.

Specific rules have been altered or changed completely. Clipping is now treated as it was a few years ago: “There shall be no blocking of an opponent other than the runner from behind, outside of the three-yard by four-yard scrimmage zone area.” . . . The penalty for the defensive holding of offensive blockers has been raised from five to fifteen yards. . . . An illegal shift violation in 1952 costs 15 yards; last year it was a five-yard loss. . . . Disqualification or suspension has been added to the 15-yard penalty for striking an opponent's head or face with the forearms. . . . Faking the fair catch rule (it allows the fair catcher to take no more than two steps in completing a catch without being tackled) will cost the culprit's team 15 yards. . . . Time will be ticking off when a substitute enters the game after the ready-to-play signal. Not only will a five-yard penalty be charged, but a time out will be charged. Last year there was only the five-yard penalty; the coach could substitute after the ready-to-play signal without forfeiting one of his five two-minute rest periods.

AAA Gun Battalion, from Paterson, New Jersey, Presidio right end, is enough to worry any opposition. (Army Photos by Matsuo)

RAMBLER WOLVES CATCH A LAMB—The Raiders' right halfback, Dallas Lamb, managed to find a small hole in the Ramblers' stonewall defense and scooted for the six precious yards that resulted in the Raiders' only touchdown on the next play. The rousing game played on the turf of Scott Field ended in a 6-6 deadlock with fog hampering both teams' offensives. The locals now have a record of two losses and one tie but seem to be on the upgrade after a slow start. (Army Photo by Nunez)

Presidio Eleven Holds Tough Rambler Squad To Touchdown Deadlock

A fog bound football game between Presidio's Red Raiders and the University of California Ramblers ended in a 6-6 tie here on the home field last Friday.

The Raiders, an improved team showing progress in every department, outgained the Cal Frosh 181 to 167 in yards rushing, despite the fact several varsity players who were unable to make the Minnesota trip, were on hand to add spice and zest to the Ramblers' cause.

Taking the opening kickoff, the locals advanced to the midfield stripe, from which point a see-saw fracas occurred throughout most of the first quarter.

In the waning minutes of the period, with Bell at the helm in the quarterback slot, Raider backs, Kirby, Daigle, Brown and Lamb penetrated the stiff defense for several short gains and advanced the pigskin to the one-yard line. Daigle, the big rambling left halfback, slid off-tackle for the T. D. Try for conversion failed and the Raiders were out in front 6-0.

The second and third stanzas failed to produce anything more spectacular than a 25-yard broken-field run by Daigle and several short dashes by Hinton, swivel-hipped Rambler left half.

Daigle's run took the local machine to the 5-yard line, but from there the red-shirted backs met a rejuvenated line and were unable to hit paydirt.

Early in the fourth quarter, Hinton and Babros, Rambler fullback, combined several short gains with a 20-yard pass to put the frosh on the 7 from where Hinton packed the mail home for the score. Try for the extra point failed.

Presidio was in possession of the ball at midfield when the final gun sounded.

The boys from Raiderland gained 13 first downs to 12 for the more studious future soldiers.

The ten attempted aials served to make up Presidio's passing attack. Three were completed for 34 yards, five fell incomplete and two were intercepted.

Cal resorted to the air nine times, completing two for 35 yards and losing two via interceptions.

In the penalty department, the frosh copped all honors by losing 95 yards to 30 for the locals.

Brown, new starter in the Raider backfield, Daigle and Kirby sparked the offensive, while Preciado and Gordon continued their effective vigilance in the defensive roles.

The line play, as usual, was outstanding.

Trout Go Commie; Like Color Red, Say Fish Experts

Biologists at the State's Mt. Shasta fish hatchery here are confirming what many anglers may have suspected—hungry trout go for red-colored food in a big way.

Faced with the problems of "dressing up" a new-type pellet fish food for trout "eye appeal," the hatchery staff experimented with various colored corks, and took movies of the results.

Blue, yellow, green and white corks were tossed in succession into the trout ponds. The trout were completely apathetic

"Then we tossed in a red cork," reported biologists Hal Wolf and Joe Wales, who devised the experiment. "The trout went crazy. They chased the cork up onto the bank!"

Continued experiments showed such consistent results that Wales took color movies of them as proof to convince skeptics—if any.

Although the final results of the experiment aren't all in yet, Wolf suggests that trout anglers might try switching color of lure, if their luck needs changing.

"Perhaps our hatchery trout have a 'conditioned reflex' to red," he added. "Anyway, the experiments seemed to show that trout can differentiate between colors, and the hatchery fish choose red. Try it yourself, and let us know the results!"

HOW ABOUT IT ALLIE?

In the first World Series, back in 1903, Pirate Hurler Charles Phillippe pitched five complete games! In that initial classic, Phillippe hurled and won three out of the first four games, but Pittsburgh was beaten by the Red Sox who swept the last four games. Each team carried three pitchers.

Cadets Downed By Troy; Game But Outmanned

A spirited but outmanned Army team held Southern California to a 2-point halftime margin, but surrendered before a crushing ground attack and miscues in the final stages to give the Trojans a 22-0 victory in the Los Angeles Coliseum last Saturday.

A blocked kick that bounded out of the end zone gave USC an automatic safety, and an Army fumble on its own seven donated the Trojans a touchdown—more than enough for the mighty warhorse to subdue the stubborn West Point mule.

Marching to their third straight win of the season and Number 2 in a row over Army, the heavily gunned Trojans managed to travel 45 yards in 11 plays for their second touchdown. The final score came through the air.

A crowd of 48,433 saw the Army team in its first appearance in Los Angeles. The Cadets, still handicapped by the loss of personnel from the cribbing scandal, were never able to dent the tough Trojan defense for a score.

Army had a chance the first time USC got the ball. Tackle Frank Wilkerson recovered a fumble by Trojan Rudy Bukich on the SC 41 but an illegal shift and the charging Troy line threw the "Black Knights" back past the midfield stripe to stifle the hope.

Army's Pete Vann, Freddie Attaya, Paul Schweikert and Jack Wing never stopped hammering away but the best they could do was accumulate seven first downs to 18 for USC.

Hoopsters Fire Up!

A Hot Race For Contention Exists In Post Casaba Play

At the end of two weeks of play in the Post Intra-Mural Basketball League, several teams have singled themselves out as leading contenders for the hoop crown.

In the American Division, 30th AAA Group with four wins, no losses, holds a slight edge over NCO Mess and Headquarters Company, Sixth Army, who have four wins and one loss each.

The 518th AAA Operations club, with four wins and no losses, are the pacemakers in the National Division, as of Monday night, 6 October.

As of that same date, inclusive, 36 games had been played in the American loop and the Nationals' have gone through 24 contests.

Attendance for last week averaged approximately 80 spectators a night.

Wide scoring margins, which were the big factor in the first week, have slimmed down considerably, but decisive victories are still being turned in.

Alibis Gain Ground In Fort Scott Bowling League

The 21st Engineer Alibis, led by a blistering 210 score turned in by Cpl. Shaffer, took three straight games from the 99th Engineer Eight-Balls to cut the league-leading T-5's lead to two games in the Fort Scott bowling league last week. The T-5's maintained their dwindling lead by taking two out of three from the Ball-Bearings.

The Sure Things tightened their hold on third place by taking two out of three from the 21st's Number 2 team and are now a dangerous contender for first place.

Much of the credit for the Sure Thing's victory goes to Pfc. Fabian who sparked his team with a 572 series, high for the week and the highest series turned in to date in league competition. He raised his individual average to 169, eight points over last week, and is now only one point behind Shaffer of the Alibis who leads the league with a 170 average. Shaffer's 210 was the week's high game and is also tops in the league so far.

Service Needs Discussed!

Regional Religious Conference Successful; Over 200 Attend

More than 200 top ranking military and civilian clergymen attended the Regional Conference for Religious Leaders held on the Presidio Tuesday at the Post Theatre. Religious problems of today's servicemen were the primary topics of the day-long conference.

Armed Forces Exempt State, Local Taxes

Washington (AFPS) — Armed Forces personnel are not required to pay state and local taxes on personal property in areas other than their states of permanent residence.

The Soldiers' and Sailors' Relief Act of 1940 provides immunity from taxes on personal property such as automobiles and household furnishings for servicemen and women away from home. Exemption from automobile taxes is granted when they have been paid in home states. Personnel are also protected from taxes on intangibles, solvent credits and bank deposits.

The law applies only to Service personnel. Personal property owned solely by a wife or dependent, or jointly owned, is subject to taxation.

Two Bits a Hit!

Korea—Lt. Col. Robert C. Ingalls of Urbana, Ill., has been swapping quarters for direct hits on communist military targets.

Col. Ingalls, CO of the 999th Field Artillery Bn., picks known targets and bets 25 cents with each gun observer that his crew cannot land within 200 yards of them in the first round. "Their accuracy," the near empty-pocketed colonel reports, "has amazed me."

Army Notes Increase At Religious Services

Washington—Attendance at religious services in Army chapels in the U.S. and overseas reached a total of 18,949,060 for the 12 months ending June 30, Secretary of the Army Frank Pace Jr. announces.

During the same period in 1950 and 1951, chapel attendance totalled 12,682,664. The Army points out, however, that during that period there were approximately 1,200 chaplains on duty, while at the present time there are about 1,400 in the service.

The figures on chapel attendance represent Service personnel and their dependents who went to services conducted by both Army chaplains and visiting civilian clergymen.

Hot Dog Celebrates Century Since Origin

The institution known as the hot dog celebrates its 100th birthday this year.

It is believed that a butcher in Frankfurt, Germany, in 1852 concocted the odd-shaped delicacy in honor of his dog—a dachshund.

Today the hot dog has won its place in America, some six and one third billion being consumed annually. That's more than 548,000 miles of torrid canines.

Communism offers the security of slavery as long as you live, if you live long.

The four major addresses of the conference were given by officials from Washington, D. C. The military leaders in attendance included Chaplains from the Army, Air Force and Navy installations in Northern California.

First speaker of the meeting was Brigadier General A. Robert Ginsburgh, USAF, Staff of the Secretary of Defense, who gave an up-to-date report on military activities in all parts of the world. He praised as a "remarkable accomplishment" the restoring to duty of 73,000 of the total 119,000 casualties in Korea.

Depicting the program of the military chaplaincy as an active civilian parish transplanted on a military reservation, Chaplain (Colonel) Constantine E. Zielinski, USAF, Office of the Chief of Air Force Chaplains, discussed the broad objectives of the chaplains' programs of the Army, Navy and Air Force.

The morning meeting was presided over by Chaplain (Colonel) E. A. Rein, USAF, Fourth Air Force, and was opened with an Invocation by Chaplain (Major) William Z. Dalin, USAR.

Welcoming remarks were extended the leaders at a noon luncheon at the Presidio Officers' Club by Major General Milton B. Halsey, representing Lieutenant General Joseph M. Swing, Sixth Army Commander, and by Rear Admiral J. H. Carsons, representing Vice Admiral John L. Hall, Jr., Commander Western Sea Frontier.

Captain R. R. Marken, USN, District Chaplain, Twelfth Naval District, and Staff Chaplain, Commander Western Sea Frontier, was the Presiding Officer at the luncheon, which was preceded with an Invocation by Chaplain (Lieutenant Colonel) Henry C. Pennington, USAF, Western Air Defense Force.

"The Role of the Armed Forces Chaplains Board" was discussed at the afternoon session by Rear Admiral Stanton W. Salisbury, Chief of Navy Chaplains, representing the Board. He told the leaders that during its short period of existence, the Board, organized in 1949, has succeeded in establishing a single policy for the Army, Navy and Air Force as pertains to procurement professional standards, requirements, assignment and training of military Chaplains, including civilian components.

Speaking on the subject "Military Installations and Civilian Communities," Dr. Sherwood Gates, Chief, Office of Community Service, USAF, stated: "The armed services offer and seek that full partnership with the churches and synagogues of America which will secure the highest welfare of military personnel and their dependents through their closest possible identification with and participation in the best of our American life."

Closing remarks and the Benediction were given by Chaplain (Colonel) Edward T. Donahue, Sixth Army Chaplain, Presidio of San Francisco. Chaplain Donahue was also the Presiding Officer of the afternoon session, Invocation for which was pronounced by Chaplain (Major) William P. McMullen, USAF.

RANKING VISITORS TO THE REGIONAL LEADERS CONFERENCES were (l. to r.): Rear Admiral J. H. Carsons, Deputy Commander 12th Naval District; Brigadier General A. Robert Ginsburgh, Staff of the Secretary of Defense; Dr. Sherwood Gates, Chief of

Quotable Quip!

A Russian who had escaped through the Iron Curtain was questioned about a bottle of pills found on his person. "Oh, that's my cure for headaches," he replied. "And this?" the inspector asked as he pointed to a picture of Stalin in the Russian's baggage. "That," the Russian exclaimed, "is my cure for homesickness."

Reserve, National Guards Complete Conference; Elect New ORC Chairman

Administration, training and supply phases of the Reserve Components and National Guard programs were the major considerations of top ranking military and civilian leaders who conferred at Headquarters Sixth Army, meeting at Harmon Armory on Monday and Tuesday of this week.

As an advisory group to the Sixth Army Commander, they made recommendations on various matters pertaining to these phases. The recommendations will be given further study by Headquarters Sixth Army and then forwarded to the Department of the Army, Washington, D. C.

Brig. Gen. J. T. Roberts, Commanding General 63rd Division, USAR, Los Angeles, was named the new chairman of the group to succeed Major General C. D. Sullivan, Commanding General 49th Division Calif. NG, whose term expired at this meeting.

The conference was opened by Major General Milton B. Halsey, Deputy Commanding General Sixth Army.

One of the conference highlights was an informal discussion of recent changes in regulations as affecting Reserve and National Guard personnel by Colonel Harry T. Myers from the Department of the Army, G-1.

Others in attendance were: Brig. Gen. J. W. Cook, CG 112th AAA Brigade Calif. NG; Brig. Gen. Neil McKay, CG 115th AAA Brigade Wash. NG; Brig. Gen. W. F. Weiler, CG XI Corps Arty Utah NG; Brig. Gen. C. I. Fox, CG 91st Division USAR Presidio; Brig. Gen. Lamar Tooze, CG 104th Division USAR Oregon; Brig. Gen. LeRoy Anderson, CG 96th Division USAR Montana; Brig. Gen. B. M. Fitch, Chief Military District Fort Douglas Utah; Brig. Gen. E. C. B. Danforth, Chief, Calif. Mil. Dist., Presidio and Col. J. H. Rodman, Chief, Oregon Military District, Vancouver Barracks, Washington.

The group set the date for their next conference for April 1953.

Calling All Grunts!

A Third Infantry Division sentry in Korea challenged an unusual—and ferocious—intruder while walking his post one night.

Private First Class Marcus Frye, of Mobile, Ala., was startled to hear the bushes rustling near his supposedly deserted post. "Halt," he ordered, but the rustling continued.

Frye slammed a cartridge into the chamber of his rifle as the stranger uttered a series of grunts.

But Frye lowered his rifle when the stranger emerged and disappeared over a ridge. The sentry had routed a disgruntled wild boar.

More Wheels As MRU Units Go Mobile

The Army's latest mobile Machine Record Unit—for keeping records on soldiers in combat—is about the size of a private house trailer when it is "on the road."

When expanded, it is 20 by 20 feet and houses seven basic machines. These are the key punch machines used to punch names into cards by means of holes; two sorters to arrange cards in any desired sequence—alphabetical or by grade; a card interpreter which translates holes into letters and words; a machine for reproducing additional cards, and a tabulator which adds and subtracts and also prints information it receives from the cards into roster form.

Combat Troops Will Have Better Chance For Promotion

Based on the Army promotion control plan in DA Circular 73, dated 21 August, Army combat men "can go high, fast," says Army Times.

Time-in-grade and time-in-position requirements in forward area combat units are much more liberal than those for behind-the-line promotions, says the Times, and releases the following table of comparison for combat and noncombat men:

To Make	Months in Grade	Months in Higher Job
Cpl (combat)	2	2
(noncombat)	6	3
Sgt. (combat)	3	3
(noncombat)	8	4
SFC (combat)	4	3
(noncombat)	10	5
M/Sgt. (combat)	5	3
(noncombat)	12	6

Outside of promotion for exceptionally meritorious cases, and in other unusual circumstances, the above table is the grade criteria for the average enlisted man.

Dead Nosey Red!

Korea—The Communist sniper poked his head above a trench.

Pvt. John C. Keith of Redwood City, Calif., banged away. Down went the head.

A second time the sniper poked his head up and again Pvt. Keith fired. The head disappeared, only to reappear in a few seconds.

This time the Communist stood up and waved. Pvt. Keith fired a third time and the Red crumpled to the ground.

"I wonder," he mused, "if he knew he was waving goodbye?" (AFPS)

ROTC Chiefs End Confab; Seventy In Attendance

Professors of Military Science and Tactics from the Reserve Officer Training Corps units of the 52 educational institutions in the Sixth Army Area met with officers of the Sixth Army staff for a two-day conference on the ROTC program last weekend at Harmon Armory.

The conferees were also welcomed by Major General E. C. B. Danforth, Jr., Chief of the California Military District, as the immediate host, the site of the conference being the Harmon Armory. The following speaker was Colonel Wayland B. Augur, G-3, Headquarters Sixth Army, whose Section planned the conference.

Seventy officers were present for the opening remarks and the joint session of Senior and Junior Unit PMS&T's. The conference then divided into the Senior and Junior Groups to discuss problems peculiar to each.

Evaluated results of the Sixth Army conference will be presented at the Department of the Army ROTC Conference on 28-29 October. Representing the Sixth Army at this conference will be: Colonel J. V. Collier, PMS&T, Stanford University; Lt. Colonel J. H. Short, Chief, G-3, ROTC Branch, Sixth Army; Lt. Colonel J. M. Cochran, PMS&T, California State Polytechnic College; Lt. Colonel W. G. Whall, PMS&T, San Francisco high schools, and Mr. U. H. Reynolds, G-3 ROTC Branch.

Those attending the conference were from schools in Montana, Idaho, Arizona, Utah, Nevada, Washington, Oregon and California. They were joined by Chiefs of the military districts or their representatives and members of the Sixth Army Staff.

Army Divisions Alloted 26 Small Aircraft

Infantry and airborne divisions currently are assigned 13 two-place, fixed-wing aircraft; three multiplace, fixed-wing planes, and 10 utility helicopters. Armored divisions have two additional two-place, fixed-wing planes. The only assignment, as of now, for cargo helicopters is the Army's Transportation Helicopter companies, which have 21 "whirlybirds" each.

Army T.I.C. Topic

New and powerful weapons now being developed will be discussed during the coming week at the Troop Information Conferences of the Presidio. Basis of the discussions will be the Armed Forces TALK entitled "Tools for the Fighting Man: Special Weapons."

These special weapons being perfected today are many and varied, with most of them coming under one of five categories: atomic, guided missiles, biological, chemical and radiological. Late developments in all five categories will be related at the conferences.

The Armed Services—in conjunction with leading scientists, private industry, universities and colleges—are alert to the new developments posed by the coming of the atomic age. The TALK points out that "our weapons probably are the best—the most advanced in the world."

These weapons are developed, perfected and made ready for use in our protection. The TALK goes on to state: "Their very existence may deter an enemy from launching an attack. But if he attacks, we'll need our special new weapons along with the slightly less spectacular weapons—the planes, ships, tanks, big guns and fighting men."

"Special weapons need skilled men to handle them. And fighting men still must be ready and able to destroy an enemy, to take ground from him, to hold ground, and to take enemy prisoners and deserters."

Civilian Skills Lauded

It is a matter of record that with the machines and materials that our factories poured forth in World War II, our Army won its great victories with battle deaths less than 13 per cent those of our enemies. This is a tribute to the great scientific and industrial genius of America, which constitutes one of our greatest strengths. We are profiting by this lesson, and are today placing even more emphasis upon consultation with our leading civilian scientists and engineers in the development of new ideas and new equipment for the Army. —General J. Lawton Collins.

Education Sense!

New Defense Dept. Pamphlet Aimed At Grass Roots Participation in USAFI

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of a series of four articles about the opportunities offered by the United States Armed Forces Institute as prepared for the Armed Forces by Bureau of Naval Personnel. Illustrations are by R. Osborn, famous for his character, "Dilbert," during World War II. "Dilbert" was used by the Navy Department to point up safety in naval aviation.)

PART I

Time was when all you needed for military career was some common sense and the password.

You needed still less for a civilian career because unless you joined some frontier society like the Canyon City Moral Uplift and Marching Club you could skip the password. You could do pretty well just on common sense.

But as you may have heard, there have been some changes since those care-free days. In fact, the best straight-from-the-feed-box dope is:

- (1) Nobody but a joe with a very real education can hope to hold down the top officer and enlisted jobs in today's streamlined Armed Services; and
- (2) You can say that again for top civilian spots.

If at this point you are wondering why anyone feels urged to ding-dong so obvious a fact, the answer is that this fact does not seem too obvious to a lot of gents in the Armed Services.

Further, these gents do not run to the type you'd expect—that is old Joe-hair-in-the-ears, who has never stopped congratulating himself now that he can count on his fingers and read coarse print.

Actually, many of these characters have various degrees, diplomas, and coupons; almost all of them are basically good guys; and practically all of them have a lot of natural savvy about most everything except the need for continuing education.

If they cling to this slant on education, the day will come, of course, when they will be unable to hold down any good civilian job, and there will be no military place for them at all unless the Army, Navy, and Air Force revive Custer's Horse, the Great White Fleet, and the Civil War observation balloons.

It won't be any news to you that the Defense Department is not planning to make itself over for these birds. It will continue to plug away at the job for which it was formed;

Protecting the American people against grab-happy enemies.

To accomplish this the Defense Department has gone all out to develop the best weapons and machines in the world, never losing sight of one changeless fact:

No weapon or machine is any better than the guys who man it.

To help provide the kind of men it needs, the Armed Services have set up a great educational program that many people like to think is peculiarly American; and many old-school foreign military observers will undoubtedly agree—with no little shaking of the head and snorting through the old schnozzola.

These visiting firemen are much impressed by the thousands of highly-trained specialists that the Armed Services schools turn out every year under the program.

To them this is military education.

It makes sense.

They wish they had something like it back in Graustark or Oz or Wicki-Wacki.

But other parts of the program have them completely buffaloed.

For example:

Why all these off-duty courses in purely "cultural" subjects—English, history, psychology, mathematics, and so on? And why is the Defense Department so anxious to give everybody a chance to become a culture vulture that it has put a priceless cultural education on tap for a two-dollar enrollment fee?

AND For Example: Why is a military department so interested that every joe finds the change from uniform to civies a smooth move that it has provided hundreds of off-duty training courses in the main divisions of business, farming, machine industry, and so on and so on, at both high school and college level?

These are the things that puzzle the visiting kibitzer teams. They don't add up in their book.

But they do in the U. S. Defense Department's.

And the chiefs of the Department do not have holes in their heads.

They are not suffering from delayed combat fatigue.

They have not seen too many movies.

They are very hard-headed, practical men, and their educational views are based on facts.

They know that if war comes most of America's fighting men will be former civilians. That's the way we fight our wars. And they know—from actual combat experience—that a top-flight civilian generally makes a top-flight fighting man. For one thing, he knows what he's fighting for.

They also know—again from war-time experience—that a good technical man is a better leader if he has some grounding in what it has become fashionable to call "the humanities"—that is, English, history, psychology, mathematics, and so on.

Nobody knows exactly WHY this is so. It just is. A recent study of some 400 leaders of industry, for example, showed that practically all of them had one trait in common: a large vocabulary and a clear understanding of the exact meaning of words. It seems that in getting an understanding of things cultural a man somehow gets an understanding of leadership that pays off.

Army Signal Will Keep Troops Posted On Election Results

Washington — In an unprecedented move, the Army will open up its signal wires to disseminate election results. This is the first time the Army has attempted to give Army-wide coverage to a news story.

Sponsored jointly by the Troop Information and Education Division and the Signal Corps, the object is to get the results to the troops—those overseas in particular—as fast as possible. The results will be transmitted via Signal Corps facilities from the New York offices of the European edition of Stars and Stripes to all major Army installations.

Election results hot off the AP, UP and INS tickers will feed into the Army Communications Center, Washington, D. C. I&E officers have been informed that there will be no restriction on the use of the material.

It will include presidential results, state trends and congressional results and will be transmitted in messages of 500 words or less. Because other media are available, only summary reports rather than blow by blow results will be sent to the six continental armies.

All available material, however, will be sent to Asmara, Ankara, Heidelberg, Darmstadt, Puerto Rico, Quarry Heights, Honolulu, Eniwetok, Kwajalein, Tokyo, Korea, Okinawa, Manila, Saigon, Ft. Richardson, Big Delta and Port of Whittier. (AFPS)

UNIQUE SIGNBOARD charts progress of the United Crusade Drive at the Presidio. This week as the total contributions neared the $9,000 mark, the Letterman Army Hospital was leading all local contributors with a 65 per cent participation average. (Army Photo by Matsuo.)

Presidio Nears $9,000 Mark In United Crusade Campaign

First reports of the Presidio's campaign for the United Crusade to raise funds for San Francisco's charitable and welfare organizations show a total of $8,817.72 in contributions, as of the beginning of this week. Of this total, cash donations amounted to nearly $8,000 with the remainder in pledges.

These initial reports have been charted on a large signboard near the Presidio Fire Station on the main post showing the percentage of total personnel participation of the major units of the Presidio campaign. Goal of the drive is 100 per cent of all military and civilian personnel in each unit.

Leading organization of the first reports was Letterman Army Hospital with 65 per cent, followed by the AAA units stationed on this side of the Bay with 53 per cent. The AAA outfits at Forts Barry and Cronkhite are contributing to the Marin County drive.

Reports are to be submitted each Friday to Major Ella A. Wilton, vice chairman of the Presidio campaign, at the office of the Post Funds Custodian. The new standings will be charted on the signboard the following Monday.

Not included in any of the organization figures for the present week was a $100 contribution by the Presidio Women's Club.

Monday, 20 October, is the final day of the Crusade campaign and final reports are due the following Friday. The signboard will be kept current until all reports have been submitted.

The Sixth Army Band and the Pipe Band have been playing for the daily noon shows of the Crusade in Union Square. The Pipe Band was a feature of Thursday's rally and the Sixth Army Band will make their second appearance at the shows on Monday. The Monday show will also honor United Nations Week, for which the 505th MP Battalion will furnish a color guard.

30th Still Tops!
In keeping with their excellent record of the past, the 30th Engineer Base Topographic Battalion donated 160 pints of blood to the National Blood Bank this week.
They have just returned to Fort Winfield Scott from a five months tour of duty in Alaska.

Presidio to View U.S. Army Exhibit This Week

Arriving on the Presidio this week for showing is the U.S. Army Exhibit Unit portraying the activities of seven technical and three administrative services.

This Exhibit Unit will not be set up as a complete unit but will be broken down into components and placed at choice spots on the Post.

The Post Theater will have the unit devoted to depicting the mission of the Transportation Corps. The Blood Program will hold forth at the Presidio Service Club and the display in the Presidio Commissioned Officers' Club will be devoted to the Cost Consciousness Program.

These units will be on display until 21 October. Lt. Guy H. McCarey is in charge of the Army Exhibit while it is on the road and has to assist him in presenting the Unit to the public 23 enlisted men. Their home post is Cameron Station, Virginia.

The purpose of this Army Exhibit Unit is to show the public what happens to their tax dollar.

Permanente Health Plan Now Available To Presidio Employees

There are now two health plans available for Presidio civilian employees. These are the Permanente Health Plan and the California Physicians' Service.

Prior to October 1952, the only health plan available to civilian employees in a group policy was California Physicians' Service. Since this date the Permanente Health Plan has been added.

Additional information may be obtained from Mrs. Bette Weinberg, Civilian Personnel Division, Building 86, Presidio of San Francisco, telephone 4481, concerning these two insurance group policies.

Letterman's New JAG Has Colorful, Varied Background

Col. John S. Dwinell, JAGC, who took over as Letterman Judge Advocate last week, brings to this position an unusually colorful background. A New York attorney, he entered service in 1940 as a captain, New York National Guard. During WWII he commanded an AAA Battalion.

In 1947 he became a Regular Army officer in the Judge Advocate General's Corps. His recent stateside assignments include a term as Staff Judge Advocate of the Signal Corps Center, Fort Monmouth, N. J., and Judge Advocate for the Third Corps at Fort McArthur, Calif.

From March, 1946, until April, 1948, Colonel Dwinell was in Dachau, Germany, where he served as Defense Counsel for the German SS troops who committed the infamous Malmedy massacre. His job was to see that they got a fair trial and thus demonstrate to all watching nations the American system of justice and fair play.

He also served as a law member of the Court that sentenced German Ilse Koch of Brechenwald concentration camp to life imprisonment and, in 1949, appeared before the Senate Investigating Committee investigating the reduction of her sentence.

He served as defense counsel in the Kronberg jewel case and prosecuted German General Jurgen Stroup, who under Hitler's orders burned the Warsaw ghetto with a loss of several thousand lives.

Colonel Dwinell served with the Eighth Air Force on Okinawa in 1945 and this past year as Staff Judge Advocate, Second Logistical Command, Pusan, Korea.

Air Force Captain Wins Infantry's Bronze Star Medal

The Bronze Star Medal, Infantry Ground Award, is rarely given to a man in the Air Force but Capt. Leroy Gates was recommended for this decoration by General Roper, Commanding General, Seventh Division Artillery, Korea. The recommendation was approved and Maj. Gen. Leonard F. Heaton, Commanding General, Letterman Army Hospital, where Captain Gates is now a patient, pinned on the award at a recent ceremony.

At the time of the recommendation Captain Gates was Forward Air Controller near Kum-song, area of Hill 1062, and his citation states "he displayed outstanding devotion to duty and superior judgment in controlling friendly aircraft. Captain Gates participated in frequent aerial flights over enemy territory in unarmed aircraft."

After nine months in Korea, Captain Gates was rotated stateside and assigned to Big Springs Air Force Base, Texas, where he was Field Maintenance Officer. It was here, during an epidemic of poliomyelitis, that he was stricken with the disease.

During WWII Captain Gates flew B-25s with the Seventh Air Force in the Solomons, Gilberts and Okinawa. The Distinguished Flying Cross is among his decorations from this period.

Captain Gates, a native of Stanton, Texas, plans to return to the insurance business there after his release from Letterman.

Organization Day! Topo Battalion Open House Display on 13th Anniversary

Often called the "largest, brainiest and flyin'est Battalion in the Army," the 30th Engineer Base Topographic Battalion will show the public how maps are made today as they commemorate the unit's organization 13 years ago.

Through exhibitions and displays the colorful history of the Battalion will be re-created for the visitors. The short 13 years of existence has taken the surveyors half-way around the globe to the African desert, to the marsh tundra and extremely mountainous territory in Alaska, and to a host of Pacific islands during World War II. Wherever they went the topo men surveyed the terrain, compiled data, and turned out maps for Army Map Service and the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey.

Today's activities will begin with an inspection and review of the 30th Engineer personnel at the Fort Scott parade ground as helicopters fly in formation over the area.

Following the parade, the program will shift to Crissy Field, the landing strip on the shores of San Francisco Bay. With the Golden Gate Bridge as a backdrop, the 30th's sea-going soldiers—45th Engineer Boat Company—will maneuver three landing craft onto the beaches of Crissy Field much the same as the Engineers are put ashore in Alaska. Two of the small craft will be open for inspection by the public after the landing. After the boat exhibition, pilots of the "flyin'est" part of the Battalion will maneuver helicopters through aerial antics. Pilots will whirl the copters in 360-degree turns and shuttle them sideways and backwards with ease.

A typical survey problem will be re-enacted with copter-borne surveyors landed on Crissy Field where they set up their survey equipment. Another demonstration will stress the safety factor involved. A helicopter will make a forced landing with its engine knocked out. In Alaska these flying eggbeaters lift the topo men into swamp areas that cannot be reached by any other means of transportation.

Dinner for Battalion personnel and their guests will be held this noon in the Company Mess Halls.

This afternoon, visitors will see how the data received from the field is turned into three-dimensional Army maps at the Photomapping and Reproduction plants. Static displays and guided tours through the plants will complete the picture of how an aerial photograph from 20,000 or 30,000 feet is transformed into a workable map.

At 2:30 a softball game will pit the officers of the Battalion against the enlisted men. An enlisted men's dance and an officers' dance will close the day's program.

Want a Loan?
The six major steps to a government loan are:
1. Find the property or business venture you want to buy.
2. Go to a bank, building and loan association or other legitimate loan institution.
3. Present your plan and your original discharge or separation papers.
4. Property is appraised by VA-approved appraisers.
5. Certificate of reasonable value goes to the lender.
6. If application is approved, you will get the loan.

DONALD LITWIN

Radio Unit in the Adjutant General Section, Headquarters Sixth Army, Presidio of San Francisco.

Donald J. Litwin, 31, 118 Twenty-eighth Avenue, San Francisco, is one of many physically handicapped veterans who are performing outstanding service at the Presidio.

While serving as a battalion adjutant in the rank of Chief Warrant Officer, Litwin was wounded on January 16, 1945, while on a reconnaissance mission to select a site for a new command post near Bastogne. As a result of enemy bombing and strafing he lost his right arm and left leg.

Married in England October, 1944, he returned there for hospitalization for six months prior to being sent to the United States where he was finally discharged from Letterman Army Hospital in August, 1947.

He has held his present post for the past year.

While in active service, Litwin participated in four campaigns in Europe and was awarded the Bronze Star Medal and Purple Heart. He and Mrs. Litwin have one child, Peggy Ann, 13 months old.

Presidio Boasts Two Nurseries, Kindergarten for Post Children

By Dorothy Russell
Star-Presidian Staff Writer

Two nurseries plus a kindergarten are available for children of all military personnel and those civilians employed on the Presidio.

The Nursery School and Kindergarten are directed by Miss Kathryn Long and she has as her assistants, Mrs. Winifred Nevins, Mrs. Rosemary Aubry and Mrs. Winifred Swormstedt. The hourly nursery is under the direction of Mrs. Mildred Cooper, a graduate nurse, and she has four full time assistants and two or three part time assistants.

Kindergarten takes children from 4 years and 9 months to the first grade. School opens at 0730 in the morning and closes at 1700 in the evening. The children engage in "free play" until 0900 when a meal of crackers and milk open the regular session of kindergarten, which lasts until 1130. During this time the children are divided into two groups. One group engages in a constructive work program planned by the teachers, Mrs. Winifred Nevin and Mrs. Winifred Swormstedt, while the other group works at games of their own choice, such as working with clay, easel painting, books, records, or color books. Also included in this group is a work bench with hammer, saw and nails, and a doll corner. These groups alternate every other day. About 45 minutes each morning is spent in outdoor activity.

These children also go on excursions. They visit the rabbits at the Letterman Laboratory, the Zoo, the Post Library, and recently visited Presidio's Toyland.

Children living on the post and spending only one-half day at school are picked up and returned to their homes by a school bus. The "all day" children spend the afternoon napping and playing out of doors.

Main purpose of the Kindergarten is to prepare children mentally, physically, and emotionally for the first grade. They are taught to read and write their own names and to recognize the names of other children. They are also taught to recognize the alphabet and to count.

The Nursery School's program is not nearly as formal as that outlined for the Kindergarten. The School opens at 0730 and closes at 1700 hours. Children ages 2½ to 3 years and 9 months comprise one group and those 3 years and 9 months to 4 years and 9 months make up another. Activities for these children are many and varied. They include blocks, large and small, a doll corner, opportunities to do creative art work, finger painting, crayons, working with clay or scissors and paste, colored chalk, books, puzzles, records and stories. Outside the merry-go-round, jungle jim (a climbing apparatus) sand box, and boxes and boards occupy their busy minds, hands and feet.

Around 0900 in the morning crackers and milk are served and also again in mid-afternoon. A well balanced lunch is provided by the Post Exchange for both the all-day kindergartners and those at the nursery school. The "Sandman" usually arrives around 1230 and stays until 1430.

Youngsters in both the kindergarten and the nursery school have a rhythm band. Instruments comprising these bands are sticks, bells, maracas and drums and are accompanied by both a piano and records.

Charges for attendance at the Nursery School and Kindergarten full day, $37.50 a month plus 35 cents a day for lunch. One-half day at Kindergarten is $15.00 a month and one-half day at nursery school $23.50 a month. For a second child to attend either school its $27.50 a month.

An hourly nursery is provided for mothers who have shopping to do and only want to leave their children for a short time. Age group for this nursery range from six weeks to six years and when school is not in session up to twelve years. It opens at 0730 hours and closes at 1800 hours Mondays through Fridays. Opening time on Saturdays is 1200 and closing time is 0100. The children must bring their own food as it is difficult for Mrs. Cooper, the graduate nurse director, to know how many children will be there at meal times, as they average 40 children a day, all ages.

This nursery is equipped with 21 cribs, 7 bunk beds and 21 small army cots and does not have a mapped program for the entertainment of the children. As this nursery is self-supporting, they always welcome donations of toys. Also children's clothes are always in demand, because of little emergencies that sometimes happen during the day.

Hourly charge for care of one child is 35 cents and 20 cents for each additional child.

The only time reservations are needed is on New Year's Eve.

Conference Room Available

The Headquarters Sixth Army Conference Room has been re-opened in Room 112, Building 38.

Reservations for use of this Conference Room may be made by calling the Secretary General Staff's Office, extension 3241.

BE-BOP OR BACH?—Youngsters at the Post Nursery School are avid noise-makers, but here the talent is organized and turned into a pleasant pastime popu-

SURREALISTIC OR UNREALISTIC, all children like to dabble in paints, and though the end result might not be pleasing to the adult eye, it thrills junior. Under the supervision of Miss Kathryn Long, junior grade masterpieces are created quite easily. (Army Photo by Matsuo.)

Seven major charitable and welfare agencies in San Francisco are putting on a united drive this fall for funds. Please give once for all.

THE BOOK CORNER

PANZER LEADER, by Heinz Guderian. The man responsible for Germany's armored power, the Panzer forces, recapitulates the history of his command during World War II.

FAR COUNTRY, by Nevil Shute. A refugee from the drab monotony of post-war London is captivated and revived by the beauty and vitality of Australia and success in the romance department.

HOW TO GET THE BREAKS AND MAKE THE MOST OF THEM, by Henry FitzWilliam Woods. The author illustrates that opportunity knocks again and again in the form of "breaks," which one must learn to recognize and to actually make these breaks for yourself, when necessary.

PLAYER PIANO, by Kurt Vonnegut. Although the Electronic Age practically eliminated work in an era of vacuum tubes and machines, people were not happy and one man does something about it when he recognizes that the new conveniences had taken away far more than they had given.

THE HUNTED WOMAN, by Martha Albrand. A missing child becomes a pawn in a deadly international intrigue, and gives this able writer an opportunity to highlight the subtle mental differences of Europeans and Americans.

The Presidio Main Post Library and its two branches have just added a group of books on the social and economic history of the United States, with an emphasis on our country's democratic form of government. The best of these types are now represented.

Forty-six Finish Post's Discussion Leaders' School

Certificates of Training were earned by 46 students attending the Forty Hour Discussion Leaders' course conducted last week by the Post Troop Information and Education Section at Harmon Armory. Personnel from the Presidio, Camp Stoneman and Oakland Army Base were enrolled in the course held from Monday through Friday.

First to receive their certificates from Major Frank L. Mann, Post TI&E Officer, at the closing ceremonies Friday afternoon were the six top students: M-Sgt. Harvey Schumacher, Letterman Army Hospital; Pfc. Albert C. Conner, 459th AAA; Pfc. Thomas B. Chapman, 102d MRU; Cpl. Warren Roth, Letterman Army Hospital; SFC Eugene Ruffin, 6300 ASU, and Sgt. Jane M. Fox, Letterman Army Hospital.

Purpose of the course was to familiarize local discussion leaders with the basic concepts of the Troop Information and Education program. The course included techniques of discussion leading, the conference method, visual methods, preparation and use of visual aids and quiz techniques. Presentations were made by the students followed by critiques by the leaders.

Instructors of the course were Major Mann, SFC Patrick Benker, Mr. H. E. Adams, Cpl. Joseph H. Hogrefe, Cpl. Brian Williams, Lt. Ralph L. McElroy of Camp Stoneman, Cpl. Jerry Rose and Cpl. Jack C. Hedge.

Busy Brownies Seek New Members; So Do Girl Scouts

A concentrated effort to interest girls in local Girl Scout and Brownie troops has top priority on the agenda of Mrs. Webster Mills, neighborhood chairman of the Girl Scouts.

To be a Brownie, you must be between the ages of 7 and 14 years or below the fifth grade in school. Brownies meet every Saturday morning at 0845 at the home of their leader, Mrs. William Bachell, 748 Portola, phone number—2281.

Presently this group of 11 girls is not only interested in bringing more girls into their organization, but are badly in need of an assistant leader.

Some of the activities that keep the Brownies busy are swimming, skating, hikes and crafts. Special event of the current season includes practicing Christmas Carols.

Girl Scout's ages range from 10 years old through high school. Troop leader for the Presidio group is Mrs. Earl De Sparr, 2461 1/2 Lombard Street, WA 1-6433. This group meets every Wednesday afternoon at 1615 at the Presidio Post Chapel.

It is hoped that enough girls will join the Girl Scouts so that this troop can be divided into two groups, one for ages 10 to 12 years and the other one for 13-year-olds and up.

Some of the varied activities the girls take part in are swimming, hiking, nature study and skating. They are presently making plans for a trip to the Girl Scout Camp at Camp Merced.

GETTING TO THE ROOT OF THINGS—With feet still flying, nose in the turf and arm resting on the goal line, Corporal Leonard Bates, ace Red Raider end, racked up 20 yards on an aerial to set up Presidio's first touchdown in the Red Raider-Moffett Flyer game last Friday. One play later, Corporal Dallas Lamb, Raider left halfback, smashed off-tackle for the score and a second quarter 6-0 lead, a lead that enabled the locals to get into the win column for the first time this season. Red Raiders in Driver's Seat; Edge Moffett Sailors, 12-7

A bright fire, kindled by the Moffett Field Flyers, burns over in Presidio Red Raider camp as a result of a 12-7 victory over the sailors from down peninsula way, here on the home field last Friday.

Another fog-bound 60 minutes helped change the outlook of the local's grid future. The win now casts a shadow over "two narrow losses plus a tie" record which existed prior to Friday's game.

An effective Jackstadt to Bates and Peterson aerial combination served to offset some brilliant running by hard-driving left halfback Lamb, and Nakano, fleet right half, a quintet the sailors were unable to stop.

Presidio's first TD came midway in the second period when the quarterback, Jackstadt, heaved to Bates for a 20-yard gain to the one-yard line from where Lamb went over on the next play.

Early in the third stanza, Nakano skirted left end for a 25-yard gain to put the Raiders within striking distance. Two plays later, the 145-pound speed merchant carried over from the three. Both conversions failed.

Moffett's tally came when Erstad, the fullback, ran 56 yards from scrimmage to score standing up. Try for extra point was good.

Both teams fumbled repeatedly as a result of the cold "Oregon mist" that settled in for the entire fracas.

Presidio gained 149½ yards net rushing to 131 for the Gobs, yet were out-first-downed, 13 to 10.

Moffett attempted 17 passes, completed six for 71 yards, while the locals completed five out of 10 for 58 yards.

Preciado, Raider defensive back, maintained his usual vigilance in checking the Moffett aerial attack.

Bates, 195-pound left end, carrying out blocking assignments when he wasn't an intended receiver, was the line standout for the day.

IF AT ONCE . . .

In 1919, when Ohio State renewed their traditional rivalry with Wisconsin, not even the referee could stop Chic Hartley, Buckeye halfback. Hartley took a short pass and ran 50 yards for the TD. The ref called it back. On the next play he ran around end to the goal line. The ref called it back, so Hartley changed his tactics. He teed up the pigskin and laid it between the crossbars with a 53-yard field goal.

QUESTIONS

- Three of the following five fighters rate as the top kayo artists of the game. Pick them out: (a) Young Stribling, (b) Joe Louis, (c) Henry Armstrong, (d) Sam Langford, (e) Jack Dempsey.
- True or false? Speed swimmers can swim faster in "dead" water because they're less buoyant.
- Who was Barney Oldfield?
- What baseball player was known as "The Unknown Man"?
- Bill (Bojangles) Robinson, the late, famed tap dancer, held one sports record. Can you name it?

ANSWERS

- (a) Stribling—127, (c) Armstrong—97, (d) Langford—98.
- False. "Dead" water, infrequently changed, reduces buoyancy and slows swimmers. "Soft" water is better; it's clean and fresh.
- Automobile racer whose name for years was synonymous with speed.
- The pitcher who struck out Casey in the baseball poem, "Casey at the Bat."
- Running backwards for 50, 75, and 100 yards.

Olympic Winner Returns for Duty At Letterman

Major Sammy Lee, 1948 and 1952 Olympic Gold medal winner, returned to Letterman this week where he will resume his medical duties after a term of absence that saw him win the world games high diving event and tour service installations throughout Europe.

Major Lee's outstanding Olympic performances, both as a diver and a sportsman, have singled him out by the Pacific Association of the AAU as he is their nominee for the coveted Sullivan award.

The recipient of that annual award, the highest of amateur honors, has contributed the most, in his chosen athletic field and in the way of sportsmanship, to the United States at large.

Aside from his performance as a diver, Major Lee's efforts to help divers of other countries, including his closest competition, will make him a favorite to receive the award at the national meeting of the AAU at Spokane, Washington, 6-9 December.

On July 7, 1950, Jack Walsh of Trenton, N. J., raised 76 50-pound weights plus a 435-pound platform off the ground and into the air. Weighed by the New Jersey Supervisor of Weights and Measures, Jack's burden weighed 4235 pounds, more than the weight of two automobiles and more than any other man in the world has ever lifted!

On 1 May, 1929, John Finn, Brooklyn, N. Y., ran the 100-yard dash in 14 1/5 seconds—with both feet in a sack.

Hot Basketball!

Casaba Court Gets Warmer As Five Quints Vie for Honors

With the fourth and final week of the first half of Post Intra-Mural basketball play underway, the race for hoop prominence has been stepped up to a degree that saw one team in each division advance one notch, as of last Friday.

In the National Division, at the end of three hot weeks, Company B, 505th MPs, moved from third to a first place tie with 518th AAA Operations. Both teams have one game remaining and the outcome may necessitate a play-off.

American Division play is equally hot with 30th AAA Group holding a slim lead over NCO Mess and Company A, 505th, both only one game away from contention.

If necessary, a series of play-offs will be held on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week, with second half play scheduled to start next Monday, 20 October. Games last week:

- 7 Oct.—Company B, 505th, 54—Detachment A, 48; 115th CIC, 43—Headquarters Company, 505th, 28; Navy Harbor Defense, 44—99th Engineers, 20; 518th AAA Operations drew a bye.

T-5's Alibis Still Leading in Scott Bowling Scramble

All top honors in the Fort Scott bowling league are now held by the 21st Alibis after they took two out of three from Headquarters Company and snatched first place in the league from the T-5's.

Since the opening of league play, the Alibis lead all squads, with a 2,540-pin total, top single game score of 890, and individual honors by Cpl. George Shaffer. He won single game laurels with a 216 and also recorded the best individual average, a pin-spinning 176.

Still in the race, the T-5's could muster just one win from the third place Sure Things this week. Their won-lost record now stands at 10-5. Pfc Al Mendillo was red hot for the Sure Things, chalking up a 174-165-188 series.

Every game of the 1905 World Series was a shutout. Philadelphia won only the second game, 3-0. The Giants swept the others, 3-0, 9-0, 1-0 and 2-0. And the big pitcher in the Pitcher's World Series was Christy Mathewson who hurled three of the four Giant shutouts.

For the first time in 38 years, the major leagues had a repeat performance of batting champions. Both Stan Musial, slugging St. Louis Cardinals' outfielder, and Ferris Fain, Philadelphia Athletics' first sacker, retained their 1951 batting laurels by comfortable margins.

For Musial it was the sixth time in his N.L. career that he had copped the senior circuit's batting title. The 31-year-old Donora, Pa., blaster finished the current campaign with a .336 average. Frankie Baumholtz of the Chicago Cubs was runner-up at a .325 clip.

Husky Ferris Fain's sensational August hitting spree carried him to his second A.L. title with a .327 mark, followed by Cleveland's Dale Mitchell at .323. It was the lowest winning average since George Stirnweiss' anemic .309 in 1945, but for the young Californian it was an uncontested answer to critics who openly attacked his 1951 title as beginner's luck.

The unsung heroes of Saturday's football games are once again going about their tasks—armed with tape and bandage. Among gridiron folk, team trainers are considered as valuable to a football club as a good T-formation quarterback.

Known as the game's "combat medics," they must maintain a team's physical as well as mental efficiencies. They dash on the field an average of 15 times a game, give prompt and effective treatment for cuts and sprains—preventing lasting injuries while helping win football games.

Typical trainers are Johnny Johnson and Sid Moret of the New York Giants. Last year they hauled Eddie Price, a star running back, off the field with a painful shoulder injury. In the dressing room, they eased the pain and strapped the shoulder. By the middle of the third quarter Price was feeling fine. He went back into the game and ran all over the opposition. Headlines the next day, however, failed to tell the story of trainers and tape.—(AFPS)

A PLUG FOR THE MIDDLE HOLE, Corporal Joe Marchiano, a 210-pound defensive middle guard, from Miami, Florida, plays a rough-tough brand of football. Marchiano is to defense what ham is to eggs. Army vs. Army Tonight!

Raiders Tangle with Stoneman In First Game Under Lights

Presidio's Red Raiders will be out to even up their win-loss column when they journey to Camp Stoneman to take on the Travelers at 2000 hours tonight.

With one win, one tie and two losses to date, the boys from Raiderland will take on their first Army opponent after four partially successful encounters with the Navy and the Cal Ramblers.

Stoneman ended their first two starts in a 6-6 deadlock with the Marin Lions, a San Rafael semi-pro club, and Chico College, a mediocre power in small college circles, but a threat to service teams.

Another profile series features two more outstanding Raider grid-men, who, as indicated by last week's performance, may hold the key to the upper-bay flood gates.

Corporal Dick Jackstadt, 21st Engineers, from Wenatchee, Washington, started this football season with Fort Richardson, Alaska, where he was on duty with the Engineers who returned recently.

AERIAL POTENT in the form of Coporal Dick Jackstadt, Red Raider quarterback, who has added stimuli to the Presidio passing attack. (Army Photo by Yimm.)

After three games with the Alaskan club, Cpl. Jackstadt wasted no time in proving himself worthy of a starting berth on the Presidio team and as the field general in last Friday's win, performed with a polar bear coolness.

No stranger to the gridiron, Jackstadt played four years with the Klamath Falls Pelicans, one of Oregon's consistently top high school grid powers.

In 1948, the 175-pound tactician made All-Southern Oregon quarterback.

Following graduation, Jackstadt put in two years with Wenatchee Junior College in the Washington State College Conference.

He played behind the present grid mentor, Gaspar Perricone, here for the Raiders' last season, but as the situation now appears, will be playing behind no one, other than a big strong line.

Corporal Joe Marchiano, Headquarters Battery, 728th AAA, from Miami, Florida, spells his name with a one-letter difference from that of the world heavyweight boxing champ, but after that a similarity begins.

Cpl. Marchiano, a swarthy 210 pounder, works like a champion in his defensive middle guard slot.

Another veteran of the pig-skin game, the boy from the Southland played three years for Miami High School and made All-City honors every year. During two of those seasons, his name also appeared on the All-State High School roster.

The University of Miami was graced with his services for another three years.

Now in his first year of Army ball, Marchiano plays with the idea that sheer force and fight is his job, leaving the science and tactics for the offensive machine.

No Soothsayer, But Grid Games Are a Challenge

UCLA over Stanford by 7—It's offense against defense at Los Angeles this week. Stanford's fumblyitis will not be lessened by the Uclan ball tacklers and Paul Cameron is back in the tailback spot, raring to go.

Washington over Oregon by 10—The Huskies will be out to avenge last week's drubbing by Illinois and their wide scoring margin over Idaho, a team that Oregon barely defeated, serve as the basis for this pick.

Ohio State over Washington State by 13—The Cougars are stunned over their first three losing starts and recovery, at the hands of a strong Big Ten contender, doesn't seem likely.

COP over San Jose State by 6—Both are top small college teams, but Bob McCormick and Company, statistically, are one TD better.

Maryland over Navy by 17—The Terrapins are rolling and Navy's undefeated defensive team won't be able to hold Jack Scarbath.

Purdue over Notre Dame by 3—So far the Irish have played "Cinderella ball," but the Boiler-makers, number one in the Big Ten, have their dignity at stake.

Oklahoma over Kansas by 1—Bud Wilkinson's Sooners have an uncanny ability of winning the Big Seven and with the Jay-hawks out of the way, only Nebraska will stand in the path.

SMU over Rice by 7—An impressive win over Missouri after two bad starts, puts SMU on the march. This is the first Southwest Conference game for both.

SF 49ers over Chicago Bears by 13—Eager for their first win over the Chi Bears, the 49ers have defeated better teams this season and do not plan on being dismayed from a championship bid, by the Windy City.

LA Rams over Detroit Lions by 7—The Rams always start slow, but finish fast and by hitting their stride last week, they will be more determined to get out of the humiliation bracket.

Presidio over Stoneman by 6—The Raiders are now aware of the fact they can win and should suffer no more from locker room defeat. Stoneman has a strong line, but have a shortage in the backfield.

Former Fort Mason GI Sets New Weightlifting Marks—a la Sally Rand

Private First Class Tommy Kono, formerly of Fort Mason, the American Olympic weight-lifting champion, set some new world records in Copenhagen recently, but had to pull a striptease to make them official.

Kono lifted 112.9 kilograms (248.4 pounds) topping the old record by 1.9 kilograms. Then he lifted 377.9 kilograms (831.4 pounds) in the Olympic three exercise event, 10.4 kilograms above the world record.

BUT—the rules required that he be weighed on the spot and in the nude and meet officials, not anticipating any records would be broken, failed to bring curtains along.

Not one to be deprived of a record by a mere bit of modesty, Pfc. Kono stripped (surrounded by a screen of humans), was weighed and made the records official, all to the delight of a large crowd.

Once again you are invited to join the poor man's Grantland Rice for a quick trip around Presidio's sporting world.

Names in the News: Found out there will be some more potential diamond greats going to spring training with the big leagues this spring. Here is a trio that shows promise.

Joe Potts, a .365 hitter during Presidio's regular season, and Bob Stix, a .328 slugger, will make the trek to Dodger camp at Vero Beach, Florida, come May-time and Ray Semiante, Raider hurler and Wilmington property in the Class A League, will make his bid for a place and a plate at the Phillies training table.

Just heard one of the boys in the TI&E office say: "The service clubs get complimentary tickets to the race tracks."

We sojers have to play our meager stipends close to our belt, but once in a while we can afford to squander a buck or two on the ponies and should that be the case, lemme give ya a TIP. There's one nag at Bay Meadows strictly out to fool the public. It's a chestnut with a leg of walnut and bears the handle, "Tmafugitivefromagluefactory." Don't bet on the plug. I did in the eighth last Saturday—and she won—the ninth.

Suppose this column carried the title—"Saga of Symphony Sid"—and if so, it would read—"Woody Herman was terrific in concert the other night. They played like a well-fed crew. Greatest band in the biz. Catch him if he comes back this way." But this isn't a music appreciation review and we can't say anything about the finer than sporting arts, so let's get back to sports!

Who is in charge of the Presidio Pistol Team? A challenge from the Moffett swabs has landed on the desk, but the proper authority is not known to the Lip. If you're looking for a match, give me a buzz 5542.

After listing the various jobs and apprenticeships I've served to get into this type of work, in last week's column, someone asked—"What haven't you done?" Well, to be right truthful, there are only three major professional positions left unfilled in my past experience. I haven't picked cotton in Georgia, fruit in California or pockets in New York.

Barrel scraped dry—end of column.

Ex-Lightweight King Now Paratrooper

Ft. Benning, Ga.—A recent graduate of the basic airborne course here was former world's lightweight boxing champion Lew Jenkins, now a master sergeant, USA. Jenkins knocked out Lew Ambers in 1940 for the lightweight title. His last official bout was in 1950 against Beau Jack. He recently returned from Korea where he served with the 38th Infantry.

Roberts Soldier Not In Signal Corps, But Knows His Checkered Flags

A checkered flag is a familiar sight to Sergeant Clem Procter of Camp Roberts and Compton, California.

Sgt. Procter, the outstanding throttle jockey in the Roberts area, has taken first place in the point standings of the hard top race car drivers at the Paso Robles Fairgrounds track.

Driving a highly modified, souped-up 1937 Ford coupe, the Compton ace has never failed to qualify for the main event during the four month meeting of the Paso Robles oval.

Prior to entering the service, Procter helped construct a streamlined racer that was clocked at 148 miles per hour at El Mirage Dry Lake in the Mojave Desert.

Army Grid Team Adopts TD Conscious Policy

Army, on the upsurge after their USC defeat, touched off an explosion in Michie Stadium last Saturday and when the smoke cleared, the "Black Knights" had defeated the "Big Green" from Dartmouth, 37 to 7.

Going on their biggest scoring spree thus far this year, the "Cadets" racked up their second win in three starts this season and the third win against one loss over the "Indians" from Hanover.

Dartmouth held mighty Penn to seven points the previous week, while Army lost to the Trojans, 22 to 0.

Army will play University of Pittsburgh at West Point tomorrow. Pitt scored a 22-19 triumph over Notre Dame last week.

Ord's Little Injuns Like Pintos, Not SF Broncos

Fort Ord's powerful Warriors, top West Coast Army team, ran roughshod over the San Francisco Broncos, top independent Bay Area semi-pro club, with a 22-7 win in Kezar Stadium last Sunday.

A mere 300 spectators watched George "Gabby" Simms, ex-Los Angeles battering Ram, pace the Warriors, scoring two touchdowns himself and contributing several long runs.

As of that game, due to low attendance, the Broncos have disbanded and will cancel their five remaining games.

ARMY CORPSMEN LOAD a portion of the 25 litter patients, that arrived from Korea this week on the hospital ship Haven, for a fast trip to the Letterman Army Hospital. The wounded combat veterans were treated to a chicken dinner, a phone call home, and given fast individual attention on personal needs or problems. Many will be sent to hospitals nearest their homes as soon as practical.

USS Haven Home!

Hospital Ship's Cargo of Combat Wounded Get Speedy Attention

By CAPTAIN JOSEPHINE RAINEY
Letterman Information Officer

The USS Haven came home this week!

Behind this simple statement lies the drama of thousands of lives that would require volumes for the telling; the story of the Haven's nine months in Korean waters; the thousands of patients treated; the tragedy of broken bodies; the endless deeds of heroism; the story of "kids" who so short a time ago were whistling their ways down a thousand "Main Streets, U. S. A." laying down their lives that a buddy might live.

Behind it lies the story of dog-tired doctors, nurses and corpsmen and their selfless devotion to duty; the story of mothers, wives and families who waited back home, listening for the postman's ring but always afraid of it.

As the great white mercy ship nosed her way through the early morning fog of Golden Gate, members of the boarding party soon found themselves caught up in the growing wave of excitement aboard as the faces of injured men brightened as they realized they were "home" at long last. They felt a part of the hurrying and jostling and the wise-cracking that so thinly veiled the tears that fell unashamed an hour later when they saw some loved one waiting for them on the pier.

The debarking at Alameda Naval Base was accomplished with a speed and precision that reflected careful planning to the smallest detail. Ambulances were drawn up for litter cases and a team, largely composed of 3rd Army Hospital Band members, shuttled back and forth until the 25 litter patients for Letterman had been carefully placed in the ambulances. Then the ambulatory patients, 52 of them, filed off the gang plank into busses. There was an occasional short break in the line as some soldier stopped to squeeze a hand thrust out at him from the crowd that lined the way and waited to be reassured that SHE would follow him to the hospital. These little delays brought only smiles of understanding.

With Pfc. John Warden and Cpl. Joseph Ferretto of the Presidio Military Police doing an expert job of guiding it, the convoy reached Letterman in record time. Here, each man received in rapid fire order a number of things known to be near and dear to the heart of the American soldier. First, a chicken dinner, then a phone call home through the courtesy of the Call-Bulletin; a partial payment; machinery at work that would insure his being flown within the next 48 to 72 hours to the hospital nearest his home, contingent only upon the hospital not already being overcrowded, or lacking the specialized equipment and personnel to take care of his particular disability.

To "name names" of Letterman personnel who so richly deserve the Army's highest compliment of a "job well done" is a challenge the Star-Presidian hasn't the space to meet. There were some whose contribution to the success of the project was obvious but behind them passed an almost endless parade of others from those in high places of responsibility to the mechanic who made sure the busses and ambulances would operate without mechanical difficulties; there were the doctors, nurses and corpsmen who made sure their wards were ready; the Red Cross Gray Ladies who stood by to perform a thousand and one services; the dietitians and cooks; the folks who worked under great pressure to get all the necessary paper work done; those who prepared the pay rolls and so on ad infinitum and, so, we must content ourselves with telling you —

The USS Haven came home this week!

Korean Disease Rate Cut by Army Medics

Incidence of major epidemic diseases among South Korean civilians has been drastically reduced in the past year. The Army attributed gains to the joint program of disease control directed by the Army Medical Service and the United Nations Civil Assistance Command, Korea. The AMS has provided enough smallpox, typhoid, and typhus vaccines to give more than 80,000,000 inoculations.

Lovett Praises Armed Forces Blood Centers

Washington—Thirty-four Armed Forces blood donor centers have been congratulated "for a job well done" by the Department of Defense for contributing more than 525,000 pints of whole blood during the 1951-52 program.

Praising the consistency of blood donations at Armed Forces centers, even during the "summer slump," Secretary of Defense Robert A. Lovett extended congratulations to the personnel stationed at military blood centers "who gave so unstintingly of their time and effort to assure the success of the blood program."

"Each of the Armed Forces blood donor centers," Mr. Lovett said, "has contributed immeasurably to the success during the past year of the blood campaign, and each has an important role to play in the new National Blood Program now getting underway."

The Armed Forces blood donor program, recently merged into the National Blood Program, was launched September 10, 1951, and collected almost 3,000,000 pints of whole blood during the 49-week campaign.

The blood was needed to fill immediate needs in Korea and replenish depleted military stocks of plasma and other derivatives. To facilitate contributions by Armed Forces personnel, blood centers were established at 17 Army, 13 Navy and Marine Corp, and four Air Force installations. Many more contributions resulted from visits by bloodmobile units to camps and bases.

The mission of the National Blood Program, with which the Armed Forces program is now integrated, is to obtain quantities of blood to continue to meet the needs of our military, and to build a plasma reserve large enough and mobile enough to see us through any national emergency.—(AFPS)

Ft. Huachuca Soldiers Prove Eager Seekers Of Knowledge

More than 500 Fort Huachuca soldiers are continuing their education program designed to provide educational opportunities through elementary, high school, vocational and college courses.

Enrollments at Fort Huachuca include 244 men for high school correspondence courses, 97 in college self-study efforts and 15 in elementary correspondence courses. At the Fort's Army Education Center, 145 men are engaged in high school courses and 44 in elementary courses.

At the present time the Education Center, under Education Director John M. Houston, offers six group-study courses in such subjects as English, mathematics, Spanish and Russian.

They're Army Aviators

Army aircraft pilots—known as Liaison Pilots during World War II—now are officially designated as Army Aviators.

The fliers' title was changed when Army Aviation expanded to include an increased variety of missions as well as larger and more powerful types of aircraft.

Pilots have been required to receive instrument training for blind flying and instruction in twin-engined, multiplace aircraft since the Army's planes grew out of the "cub" category.

"and ever the twain shall meet!"

Private Returns to Birthplace For Duty 23 Years Later

Fort Huachuca—Private Raymond Wilkins of the 6018th Area Service Unit here returned to his birthplace when he came to Fort Huachuca in March, 1952.

Wilkins was born in the Fort Huachuca Army Hospital on December 15, 1929, while his father was employed as a civilian plumber with the Post Engineer. The Fort was then the home base of the 10th Cavalry Regiment.

The Wilkins family, with three sons and a daughter all born at the Fort, remained here until April 1943, when the father, Pete Wilkins, died. He is buried in the Fort Huachuca cemetery.

The family now lives in Tucson, Ariz., where Wilkins enlisted in the Army in 1948. He was assigned to Fort Huachuca after 17 months of service with the Engineers in Korea. He took his initial Army training at Fort Ord, Calif., and Fort Lewis, Wash.

"The Main Post area still looks the same," Wilkins said. He admitted that he sometimes recognizes buildings he had passed by before.

"I'll never forget this place up here," he said. "In a way I like it here, in a way I don't." But his memories of the Fort are primarily pleasant. "I remember we used to go on steak fries around here," he recalled.

Wilkins, who drives the Post mail truck, said some of his buddies thought it was "funny" that he should return in the Army to his birthplace. He said he was born in the building—formerly the Post Hospital—which now houses Finance, Signal Section, and Civilian Personnel.

"That was a long time ago," he said, "but I guess it is better now than it was before."

Cloud Insurance!

New Chute Reduces Shock; Allows Slower Rate Descent

A new type of life insurance policy is being issued to Army paratroopers.

The policy—in the form of a 30-foot nylon chute—features reduced opening shock, less pendulum swing, and a slower rate of descent. It also permits jumping from aircraft flying at 175 miles per hour.

Greater safety and reliability are provided through use of a novel chute-opening method which unfurls the suspension lines and the 30-foot canopy away from the body of the earth-bound "man of war."

Packed in a canvas bag and fastened snugly to his back, the trooper's insurance policy goes into effect as soon as he steps into space.

When the free-falling trooper reaches the end of his 15-foot static line, the canvas bag containing suspension lines and canopy is jerked off his back. As the trooper continues to fall, the suspension lines make their exit from the bag, followed by the canopy. This action—which takes place above his plummeting body—reduces greatly the possibility of entanglement in the chute as it opens.

This is in sharp contrast to the old method in which the static line pulled off the parachute pack cover, permitting the canopy to extend and subsequently pull out the suspension lines in the close vicinity of his falling body.

This method in the past has been

Warn K. Veterans On Study Changes Under GI Bill

K-vet students are warned: You are allowed to change your course of study or training only once.

Consequently, it is vital that you give careful thought to your choice of training program.

If you want to change courses within two years from the time you're released from service—which is your deadline—you do not need VA approval. However, if your progress was unsatisfactory, you will have to show the VA that it was not because of neglect or misconduct on your part.

If you want to change courses after your deadline—and have never made a change before—you will need VA approval.

The soundest advice is to know your goal before you start—and the training needed to attain it! —(AFPS)

BOOKS! BOOKS! BOOKS!—Shown sorting through some of the thousands of books that pass through the Sixth Army Library Depot yearly are Mrs. Leah Frisby and Mr. Jesse Roberts. Sixth Army's Library Depot Supplies Millions of Military Readers Abroad

By Robert Bussey
Star-Presidian Staff Writer

Of all the services rendered by units of Headquarters Sixth Army, perhaps none has been as world-wide as those of the Library Depot. While essentially the core of the Sixth Army Library service, the Depot has also received books from all parts of the globe, as well as having supplied thousands of volumes to many far off places.

Depot activities come under two main categories, operation of the Sixth Army Reference and Research Library and warehousing and redistribution. It is in the warehousing and redistribution work that the Depot has served in a world-wide capacity.

Since establishment in 1944, the Depot has distributed over a million and a half cloth-bound books and over 600,000 paperback books to various army areas in the United States, the Far East, Europe, Alaska, the Caribbean and other overseas commands. A quarter of a million paperback books were sent to the Japan Logistical Command alone.

Books received by the Depot for warehousing here are principally those which are in excess at individual installations in all army areas and are shipped here for redistribution. These are then used by the Depot to make up basic balanced collections of from 500 to 5,000 volumes to initiate library services when required.

Within the Sixth Army area, the Depot has recently furnished a 2,000 volume collection to Yuma Test Station and a 1,500 volume collection for Sharpe General Depot. Upon its reactivation, Camp San Luis Obispo was sent a 3,000 volume basic library.

Outside this army area, in the past few months the Depot sent libraries to the First Army for their travelling libraries, a 1,000 volume collection for the stockade at Camp Kilmer, N. J., two balanced collections to units in Alaska and 2,400 volumes to the Academy at West Point to start a recreational library. One of the 2,000 volume libraries shipped last year went to SHIAPE.

Paper-bound books are sent to troops on maneuvers or in isolated locations. Like the quarter of million sent to Japan, these are packed in small bundles of approximately 150 books with over 60 titles and can be dropped at batteries or other small units without any need for any sorting after leaving the Presidio.

The Depot also makes redistribution of books by individual titles needed by existing libraries. Lists of the available volumes are compiled and published by the Depot for distribution to libraries of the army area and all other commands.

Containing over 20,000 titles, the Depot's Reference and Research Library is an invaluable source of information for Sixth Army Headquarters staff and libraries of all the installations of the area. In addition to this large collection of titles, the Depot has hundreds of pamphlets, clippings, maps, magazines and other material.

Not only are the resources of the library used by staff members of Headquarters Sixth Army, but by both military and civilian personnel throughout the area to obtain material for speeches, work on academic or military courses and other studies. ORC units without readily available sources use the Reference Library extensively.

While all the Post libraries in the army area have good reference sections, their books are not as numerous or as varied as those of the Sixth Army Library. When requests for information are received by post librarians who do not have the necessary material on hand, the Depot's Reference library is contacted.

These requests are often on unusual or highly technical subjects. Information was recently requested on the religious philosophy as practiced in ancient Tibet, while a Fort Worden soldier wanted a book on how to set up a saw mill. On the technical side have been requests for material on hydroponic (soiless) gardening and cybernetics (the relationship of machines to man.)

Material supplied on these requests for information are loaned by the Reference Library to the local installations and returned after use. On the Presidio considerable information is given by phone, as well.

In selecting books for the Reference and Research Library, Mr. Wendell B. Coon, Sixth Army Librarian, states acquisition is based on the subjects immediately required for research and volumes for which there will be a demand within the command within a reasonable time, but which would not be sufficiently popular or would be too expensive for general post libraries.

Acquisition is particularly heavy in the field of military science, unit histories and reference materials on countries throughout the world. The library also has outstanding technical books on a wide variety of non-military fields.

Some books for the army area post libraries are also purchased by the Depot. With Sixth Army Welfare Fund monies, essential reference materials, biographical dictionaries and military books are obtained for the needs of posts. They also secure for these libraries materials on travel and official documents for which there is no charge.

Activities of the Library Depot are part of Special Services, Headquarters Sixth Army, with overall supervision by Col. John S. Mallory, Special Services Officer. Mr. Coon has been with army libraries for the past ten years and came to the Presidio from Fort Douglas in 1944 to establish the Depot. His assistant is Mrs. Elizabeth Bock.

A Busy Brain Bows!

Solving of Slippery Solutions Is Specialty of ORDVAC

The Army's newest "electronic brain" can multiply 642,824,734,549 (B) times 598,243,739,378 (B) and come up with the right answer—384,565,872,961,263,988,370,522 (S—Sextillion)—in one-thousandth of a second.

Solving such eyebrow-raisers is all in a day's work for ORDVAC—Ordnance Discrete Variable Automatic Computer. This "brain" can solve in a jiffy mathematical problems that would make all but the experts throw up their hands in despair. It is 100,000 times faster than the fastest human arithmetician on the tougher problems, and it can do as much work in a week as the best figures expert equipped with a desk calculator could do in 20 centuries.

ORDVAC is invaluable to the Army, for many improvements in modern warfare can be accepted only on the basis of results evaluated by many elaborate calculations. Located at the Army Ordnance Proving Ground, Aberdeen, Md., much of ORDVAC's time is spent in computing trajectories of missiles, bombing tables, firing charts, and air flow problems.

The "brain" has made it possible to make improvements on a project still on the drawing board, resulting in a big savings for the Army and the taxpayer.

A leading feature of the "brain" is its spacious and accurate memory. The memory—capable of storing 1,024 pieces of information on the face of one tube, or 40,960 pieces of information on all 40 of its tubes—acts as a storage house for all instructions and intermediate results.

When it needs a piece of information, it extracts it from the tubes in 36 millionths of a second. No other computer's "memory" is both so large and so fast.

In solving problems, mathematical information is fed into and taken from the computer on modified teletype units. Their use permits scientific research crews several thousand miles distant from the "brain" at Aberdeen to send mathematical problems and receive the results via commercial teletype. The "brain" can be used conveniently by any group having a teletype outlet at its disposal.

Installed in the Computing Laboratory of Ballistic Research at Aberdeen in February 1952, the small and compact computer took its place alongside other high-speed electronic computers—the ENLAC and EDVAC.

Built for the Army by the University of Illinois, ORDVAC has greatly enhanced the computing facilities at Aberdeen Proving Ground.

Defense Head Lauds American Servicemen

Washington—In a recent press conference Defense Secretary Robert A. Lovett gave a hearty pat on the back to the men in the Armed Forces.

Calling them just plain terrific, he went on to point out that the American youth of today really has what it takes. Mr. Lovett admitted that his was a pretty rugged generation. But, he told reporters, based on his latest observations, the present generation is absolutely tops.

Recently returned from a tour of bases in the U. S., he said that combat training is being supervised by officers and non-coms right out of the battle in Korea. He was proud, he explained, to get out and see how really terrific our servicemen are.

Infantry Personnel Will Absorb Chemical Mortar Battalion

Washington—Infantry personnel will take over chemical mortar battalions to standardize training and facilitate operation in combat.

Infantry officers will replace Chemical Corps officers, who will be transferred to units of their own branch. Enlisted personnel now serving in the chemical mortar battalions will be retained for service in the infantry heavy mortar organizations.

The new units will have the same mission as the chemical mortar battalions, and will use the same equipment. They provide close artillery-type support to combat forces, using high explosive and smoke ammunition in 4.2-inch rifled barrel mortars.

Israel was the nation most recently admitted to the United Nations.

The authorized strength of the Corps of Cadets at West Point is 2,496.

of service. He has been assigned to Sixth Army headquarters, Presidio of San Francisco, since 1950.

Prior to coming to the Presidio, Colonel Wilson served as Troop Information and Education Officer for the Far East Command in Tokyo from 1948 to 1950. Immediately before this assignment he was the Public Information Officer of the Eighth Army in Yokohama.

During World War II he served in Europe with the 15th Army and the Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force.

A native of North Carolina, Colonel Wilson was graduated from the U. S. Military Academy at West Point, N. Y., in 1917 and commissioned in the Regular Army. He served throughout World War I in San Diego and Camp Kearney, California.

From 1921 to 1924, he was Assistant Military Attache in Constantinople. During this period he visited Russia, Bulgaria, Roumania, Egypt and Palestine.

His service between 1924 and 1941 included eight years in the Hawaiian Islands, four years at Denver, Colorado, and shorter periods in other sections of the United States.

Famous Commander Passes!

Career a Bright Thread in the Tapestry of America's History

Major General Lucius R. Holbrook, one of the Army's most distinguished retired generals, died at Letterman Army Hospital this week at the age of 77. He was the commander of the first American artillery regiment to enter France during World War I and launched the Army's Cooks and Bakers school.

A native of Arkansaw, Wis., he was graduated from West Point in 1896 and commissioned a second lieutenant in the cavalry. He served at various western posts until 1899. He graduated from the Infantry-Cavalry School in 1905 and the Army Staff College in 1906.

He took a course at the French School of Supply in Paris and through his efforts the Cooks and Bakers School was established at Fort Riley, Kas., in 1910.

During World War I General Holbrook commanded the 1st and 54th Field Artillery Brigades, and during the second battle of the Marne led a composite Artillery Brigade of American, English and French troops in support of the 15th Scottish Division.

For outstanding service during the battle of Castigny in May, 1917, General Holbrook was decorated by the American, French and Montenegrin governments.

Following World War I he was instructor at the Command and General Staff School, and from 1921 to 1924 served as general staff officer at the Presidio. In 1925 he was promoted to the permanent rank of brigadier general. He became a major general in 1930 and assumed command of the 1st Infantry Division.

General Holbrook is survived by three sons in three different branches of the service: Col. Frank C. Holbrook, U.S. Army, who is with the office of the Quartermaster General in Washington; Capt. John A. Holbrook, USN, assigned to the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Washington, and Lieut. Col. Lucius R. Holbrook, Jr., USAF, stationed in Formosa. He is also survived by his wife and four grandchildren.

Vermont, Michigan Authorize Payment Of K-Vet Bonuses

Washington—Two states, Vermont and Michigan, have authorized next of kin bonuses for veterans of the Korean conflict. Vermont also provides a bonus for veterans.

The state of Michigan is paying a $500 bonus to the next of kin of any deceased Korean veteran. This bonus will continue until the Korean conflict ends.

Honorably discharged veterans from enlisted status, who are residents of the state of Vermont, receive $10 for each month of duty up to a maximum of $120. Next of kin of men killed in action receive $120. Next of kin of veterans who die after discharge will receive the amount earned by his service in Korea.

The American Legion is backing a bill in the State legislature of West Virginia to authorize a Korean bonus to veterans.

664 Doctors, Dentists Face December Induction

Washington—The Department of Defense has requested that the Selective Service System deliver to Armed Forces induction stations 460 physicians and 204 dentists during December.

The Armed Forces will assign 285 physicians and 159 dentists to the Army, and 175 physicians and 45 dentists to the Air Force.

The December request makes a total of 2,964 physicians and 1,254 dentists called since July, 1951.

General Dorn's Visit!

Deputy Chief of Information Restates DA Policies on I&E

Brigadier General Frank Dorn, Deputy Chief of Information for the Department of the Army, said in an interview with the Star-Presidian this week that a new public information policy based on aggressive and factual servicing of local and national news media has been in actual operation for sometime.

Here on a brief visit to advise and check phases of program management, he cited the Army News Feature Service in Washington, and the Hometown News Center in Kansas City, Missouri, as outstanding examples of the new program's progress.

"We work on a somewhat different theory than that of hometown news centers organized by the other Services," said General Dorn. "It is our belief that a news release even though it concerns a local boy must have a twist if it is to be well received by city, county and community editors. If John Doe makes Pfc. it is hardly noteworthy to even Doe himself. But if John Doe makes or wins a new rank under unusual conditions or circumstances, then our writers can often develop a feature story that makes interesting reading for many who never even heard of him before."

General Dorn went on to say that it is the responsibility of public information personnel to aggressively pursue and develop news leads of interest to the general public. That a well grounded news release with the facts substantiated and intact can often prevent misinterpretation and misunderstanding. "Many newswriters are laymen in military matters," the general stated. "And all too frequently a deadline and a hurried telephone conversation can have disastrous results."

Concerning service newspapers the general was emphatic in the belief that they are performing an outstanding service in the Army. "There is no better medium for commanders to express in simple and interesting terms the day to day progress and purpose of all phases of military service. The Army newspaper when properly presented is an invaluable morale factor, an excellent guide to wholesome entertainment, and without equal as a medium for the promotion of command programs."

General Dorn cautioned that over-zealousness in publicizing and selling the Army's Troop Information and Education programs could result in a feeling of resentment at troop level. "The American soldiers' reaction to inundation or anything that smacks of propagandizing is an almost immediate resistance to the product. I and E must be attractively packaged and sold interestingly and sanely."

Following visits to the Sixth Army's Public Information and the Troop Information and Education sections, General Dorn visited with the Army Commander, Lieutenant General Joseph M. Swing, and Brigadier General William T. Sexton, Sixth Army Chief of Staff. He will return to Washington this week.

New Malaria Drug Tests Encouraging

A rapid cure for malaria may be provided by a new drug, primaquine, now being tested extensively by the Army in the field. Tests conducted indicate it may be a far more effective drug for malaria than any other now in use.

It is hoped to prove by means of field tests that it will accelerate the recovery of military personnel returning from Korea who have contracted malaria.

Initial tests were made at the Joliet (Illinois) Penitentiary among prisoner volunteers.

Type O Blood Shortage In Korea Defense Makes Emergency Call

A new emergency appeal for Type O blood was issued this week by the Department of Defense.

Local Red Cross officials said the plea is for an unlimited supply of whole blood for immediate shipment to the warfront—the most urgent call they have had since before the start of the Panmunjom peace talks in mid-1951.

Blood banks throughout the western United States are alerted and ready to receive as many donors as can be recruited.

Travis Air Force Base has planes scheduled to depart each day throughout this emergency, as quickly as their cargoes of whole blood can be supplied.

Sixty hours later the blood will be at the Korean battlefield. Every eligible person is asked to donate as soon as possible.

In San Francisco, donor appointments may be made at Irwin Memorial Blood Bank, 2180 Washington Street, by calling PRospect 6-1500 or JOrdan 7-6400. Irwin is open daily from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m.

The blood bank will arrange free roundtrips by Yellow Cab at the donor's request. Red Cross will provide transportation for groups of four or more.

In other communities, call your Red Cross to arrange your appointment.

QM's Aerial Show!

Army Rush Orders Filled Via Vastly Improved Paradrop

The shortest distance between two points is straight down when the Army's combination grocer-druggist-filling station-hardware dealer—the Quartermaster Aerial Supply Company—fills a rush order for backyard delivery.

Billowing parachutes bursting into bloom mean food, clothing, ammunition, gasoline and medical supplies for many satisfied customers.

If the situation demands, the bottom figuratively drops out of the sky as jeeps, trucks, bulldozers and artillery pieces float earthward suspended in the sky by huge canopies of nylon.

Considerable progress has been made in the development of parachutes and items for delivery via the aerial route. Equipment weighing up to 21,000 pounds has been dropped successfully, using clusters of 100-foot diameter chutes. This is in marked contrast to World War II operations where the heaviest drop weighed between 300 and 400 pounds and used a single 28-foot chute.

To drop a 75-millimeter pack howitzer in those days meant dropping it piece-meal in lumps not exceeding 400 pounds. Today the "king-size" 100-foot nylon cargo chute will lower a 75-millimeter pack howitzer, a jeep, or 3,500 pounds of supplies in one stint.

Clusters of these giant-size chutes now can deliver 105-millimeter howitzers, two-and-a-half-ton trucks, bulldozers, caterpillar graders, or supplies weighing up to 21,000 pounds.

In addition to the sky-blanketing 100-foot chutes, the Army uses two smaller-type cargo chutes for aerial delivery. One of these—a 64-foot nylon chute—is used to lower loads weighing in at less than 3,500 pounds. The other—a muslin canopy chute—sports a 28-foot blossom designed to carry loads weighing up to 500 pounds.

The task of preparing and delivering cargo via parachute is handled by Army Quartermaster Aerial Supply Companies. For an air-drop operation, the trucks, guns, food and supplies are tied down to special air-drop platforms. These platforms are designed to permit rapid ejection of the cargo from the plane in flight and protect against landing shock.

After the cargo has been tied down to the platform, parachutes are rigged carefully and attached to the equipment to be dropped. The cargo then is loaded aboard the aircraft and lashed to the inside of the plane. A roller skate conveyor on the floor of the aircraft permits both easy loading

Meet Suspicious Sam!

A Double Doubter Who Drips Sarcasm for USAFI Program

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second of a series of four articles about the opportunities offered by the United States Armed Forces Institute as prepared for the Armed Forces by Bureau of Naval Personnel. Illustrations are by R. Osborn, famous for his character, "Dilbert," during World War II. "Dilbert" was used by the Navy Department to point up safety in naval aviation.)

During the last war thousands of sergeants and chiefs accepted emergency commissions. Almost all of them knew their business thoroughly—and they continued to know it through-out the war.

But some turned out to be excellent leaders at officer level: and some did not.

In almost every case the man with the broad education was the better leader. Because he understood more he could lead better.

On the sour side of the record, however, is the fact that many a basically good man hurt himself and hindered his Service because he acquired an inferiority complex about the background some men had, and he lacked.

To cover up, this type would often go around with a chip on his shoulder proclaiming that he was a rough diamond but he sure knew his specialty, and that's all he knew or wanted to know. He apparently took over Popeye's motto: "I yam what I yam what I yam."

Needless to say, this attitude does not win friends and influence people. They will never—with the regiment drawn up—present you with a combination pogo stick and ball pen inscribed: "Here's to Cuthbert, he's true blue."

Instead, they go around hating their merry old insides. And the work doesn't get done. And it seems to you—and your superior—that in your outfit there are always more loose ends lying around than in an ox-tail soup factory.

And so you aren't promoted. But those other guys are. And suddenly, one day, you find they're senior to you, and still feeling the same way about your merry old insides.

Obviously this is not good for: (1) the gent who has been passed over;

(2) the Service.

And so one of the major purposes of the Armed Forces Education Program is to make sure that EVERY MAN REPEAT EVERY MAN in uniform gets a chance to make sure this does not happen to him.

RECRUIT PRATT: What's this noise about a high school diploma?

SERGEANT: Well, briefly, if you don't have a diploma, you can probably get one by completing some off-duty courses suggested by your high school principal.

RECRUIT PRATT: How do I know what that old buzzard wants me to study?

SERGEANT: Your Uncle Sam, who loves you dearly, has foreseen your need. He has worked out the thing to help you. It's called the U. S. Mail. It seems that if you write a letter to the principal—

RECRUIT PRATT: Me write a letter!

SERGEANT: Well, you want the diploma. Remember? And if you write him, it makes a much better impression. Also, believe it or not, he'll probably be glad to hear from you.

RECRUIT PRATT: Why? We never ran with the same mob.

SERGEANT: Maybe he realizes now what he missed. In any event, I'll give you odds he'll be glad to hear from you, and to help you. You can put in some line like: "Your attention is invited to the fact that the courses I can take are described in the U. S. Armed Forces Institute Catalog which has been distributed to all schools and colleges."

RECRUIT PRATT: Why do I have to put that in? Don't he know his job?

SERGEANT: He's got a lot on his mind.

RECRUIT PRATT: Stop, stop, you're breaking my heart.

SERGEANT: I have news for you: every Fall a fresh crop of hot rods shows up at your high school. Eventually, we get some: Barnum & Bailey and the local zoo get others. But there are always enough guys around to keep a principal fairly well occupied and free from brooding.

RECRUIT PRATT: Well, here's one guy he won't have to bother about. If I gotta get wound up in all this red tape, it ain't worth it.

That concluding zinger from old Eustis, of course, is open to debate.

Army Sound Truck Has Many Unique Features Plus A Loud Voice

A traveling sound system compactly built into a four-ton truck now is in use by the Army Signal Corps. Designed primarily for use in demonstrations of equipment before large crowds, the mobile sound system is available to the military for use at maneuvers and other training exercises, and to civilian agencies for appropriate functions.

The system is a great deal more than a sound truck—in addition to a powerful speaker system, it includes two magnetic recorder-reproducers, two disc recorder-reproducers, two AM, FM and shortwave radio receivers, and a complete power system.

Radio programs can be originated from the moving sound plant when land line facilities are available to link the truck with the broadcasting station concerned.

The system's voice can cover an area as big as Yankee Stadium, or a circle approximately 1,000 yards in radius.

A FULLBACK'S DREAM may be to have a 6-foot 4-inch, 260-pound dynamo out in front of him paying the way. If Cpl. Jim Griggs (right), Red Raider fullback, from Salt Lake City, Utah, had Cpl. Leonard Saleski (left), Presidio tackle, from Hamtramck, Michigan, running his interference, he would be running in a vacuum of security, more protection than Brinks' can offer. (Army Photo by Hilmer).

A Toughie In The Offing!

Raiders Journey to Chico for Tussle with Varsity Staters

Presidio's up and coming Red Raiders, with a two loss, one tie, two win record, take to the road again today to battle a three loss, one win team, Chico State College at Chico tomorrow night.

From all indications, it will be the local's toughest contest to date, but the team has been showing vast improvements from week to week and along with the "Big Red" stars previously presented, two more personalities are expected to exploit top-notch football talent in an effort to continue the win streak.

Corporal Jim Griggs, Company A, 505th MP Battalion, from Salt Lake City, Utah, gets in plenty of action on the Raider gridiron, both as a reserve offensive full back and a defensive safety man.

Cpl Griggs' hard line plunging and rough-tough grid tactics strongly resemble a single wing blocking back and the 180 pounder was just that, for three years at Salt Lake's Jordan High School. Griggs is playing his second season with the Raiders and thus far, it's been a terrific season for the ground gainer from Utah.

Corporal Leonard Saleski, Battery D, 728th AAA, from Hamtramck, Michigan, personifies Paul Bunyan minus the ox.

Cpl Saleski, 6'4", 260 pound tackle, played his first game with the Red Raiders at Stoneman last Friday night. His weight brought the line average up 10 pounds and the big guy's ability increased the defensive line efficiency a sizable 25 percent.

Saleski pounded the Hamtramck High School turf for three years to start his football career. He was chosen All-City tackle for two of those seasons.

Two years with the Hamtramck All-Stars, a semi-pro club, sent his grid stock soaring to new heights and now, in his first year of Army ball, Presidio is mighty glad to have an option on that stock.

SPORT SHORTS —

Several years ago, Hubert Opperman of Australia took off behind an automobile and pedaled his bicycle for 24 hours. When he dismounted he had covered 860 miles, 367 yards—an average of almost 36 miles per hour.

Willie Mosconi, the world's pocket billiards champion of 1947, and '48, started shooting one day and stroked 309 balls in a row into the pockets.

In 1931 Ernie Schranz bowled a grand match of 60 games with Ben Bernicki for a side bet of one grand. Ben won the boodle by exactly one pin.

Roberts Soldier Swaps GI Shoes for Spurs

Sgt. First Class Leon W. Caster, a Leaders' Course instructor at Camp Roberts, swapped his GI brogans for a pair of spurs recently and won the bareback riding event in a rodeo at Solvang, California.

Sfc Caster takes advantage of his off-duty time to continue a riding career that started at the age of five and one he plans to further continue after release.

Ned Day Material! Alibi Keglers Rule the Roost In Fort Scott Bowling League

At the halfway point in the Fort Scott Bowling League, three teams are knotted in fourth place, two quintettes hold a 5-13 won-lost record for the cellar spot, but the 21st Alibis are still head and shoulders above all competitors with 15-3 mark.

If the $115 prize money were dished out to the teams as they now stand it would be divided as follows:

	Won	Lost	Money
21st Alibis	15	3	$50
T-5's	12	6	30
Sure-Things	11	7	20
Bushwackers	8	10	5
8-Balls	8	10	5
MP's	8	10	5
Ball-Bearings	5	13	0
Headquarters Co.	5	13	0

However, seven more weeks remain in the league and any of the seven teams could upset the applecart and walk off with the $50 prize.

This week, the Alibis smothered the Bushwackers in three consecutive lines. Alibi keggers SFC Hartman and Sgt Standish banged away for a 563 series and 561 series, respectively. Headquarters Company edged the Ball Bearings 2-1; the T-5's rolled over the MP's 2-1; and the Sure Things garnered two wins and one loss from the 8-Balls.

The T-5's will have a chance to tie the league leaders when they match pins with the Alibis this week, but they must win all three. In other games, the MP's meet the third-place Sure Things; Headquarters Company tangles with the Bushwackers; and the 8-Balls bowl the Ball Bearings.

"Big Red" Gets Bigger!

Red Raiders' Big Forward Wall Sparks 13-0 Over Stoneman

A 229-pound defensive line, bigger than Pappy Waldorf's California Bears and one that any college coach would respect, sparked the Presidio Red Raiders to a 13-0 shut-out over the Camp Stoneman Travelers at Stoneman last Friday night.

Presidio's giant line, which bears a slight resemblance to a granite wall, made the Travelers literally eat the pigskin and when the statistics were all that could be salvaged from the rain-chilled gridiron, Stoneman had registered a net rushing yardage of 28.

Daigle, big Raider left half, ran the opening kick-off back 22 yards to start a sustained drive, that despite heavy penalties, netted the locals a first quarter lead. Daigle crossed the goalline from 15 yards out and Jackstadt, smooth Raider quarterback, kicked the conversion.

In the fading minutes of the game, Preciado, Raider defensive star, snared a Traveler pass and raced across untouched for Presidio's final touchdown.

Presidio maintained complete control throughout, marching to within striking distance four times only to receive 15 yard penalties each time inside the 20 and have one TD called back.

Big gains by Raider backs, Kirby, Lamb and Nakano and a Jackstadt to Bates and Daigle aerial combination, behind a 204 pound air-tight offensive line, clicked for 19 first downs to four for the stunned Travelers.

Unable to penetrate against such immovable objects as linemen, Saleski (260), Catlett (215), Marchiano (210), Seafelt (225) and Cooper (210), to name only a few, the Travelers hit one successful passing streak that netted their four first downs, but failed to set up any real scoring threats.

Brilliant punt run-backs and secondary defensive play by Preciado and Gordon served to offset the line play and keep Stoneman in check throughout.

Catlett, defensive linebacker, converted his terrorizing grid prowess to the fullback's duties for the first time in his career and although he missed the holes, plowed for three and four yard gains, all to the delight of the large crowd. Presidio gained 225½ yards on the ground and 44 via the air for a combined net yardage of 269½.

Two-Fisted Soldier Stacks Twin Victories

New York—Joe Miceli, the hard-swinging soldier from Camp Kilmer, N.J., recently added two more victories to his list record. The young Brooklyn fighter won a 10-round decision over Virgil Akins, the nation's third-ranking lightweight. Earlier, he scored a one-round knockout over Teddy Murray for his 36th victory. Miceli is listed ninth among the nation's top welterweights.

Service installations, not yet entered, who wish to take part, are urged to mail their entry to San Francisco Junior Chamber of Commerce, San Francisco, California—before 29 October.

Aside from this, the Presidio Gun Club is open to matches in the large and small bore rifle, pistol, and skeet class, with installations or civilian teams in this area.

A match with the Presidio marksmen can be obtained through the president of the club: Captain John N. Stratten, Presidio Gun Club, 115th CIC Detachment, Presidio of San Francisco, California.

Army's Grid Ranks Are Thinner This Week

Army's already thin football forces grew thinner this week with a loss of tackles Bob Guidera and George Kovacic.

Guidera, previously hampered by a knee injury, suffered a similar injury to the other knee, in the 21-14 loss to Pittsburgh last Saturday.

Kovacic has been temporarily sidelined because of academic deficiencies and will not be picked up until his grades improve.

The Cadets will face Lou Little's Columbia Lions this Saturday.

Good Show Men!

30th Engineers' Organization Day is Usual Smooth Production

By PFC ALLAN VAN SOEST

Keynoting the 30th Engineers' Organization Day held at Fort Winfield Scott last week, Acting Battalion Commander Lieutenant Colonel James W. Free praised the accomplishments of the more than 600 "old timers" who will leave the Battalion within the next few months and expressed the assurance that the newly assigned men will uphold the tradition of the Battalion as the standard by which map making units are judged.

Speaking in behalf of Battalion Commander Colonel Robert R. Robertson, called away on other duties, Colonel Free attributed the "outstanding record for both quality and quantity of work produced" to the "hard work and technical skill" of the "old timers" in the Battalion.

Addressing the new men in the Battalion, Colonel Free said "many outstanding officers and men have recently been assigned to the Battalion. It is in the hands of you new members that the future of our unit lies. I know you can and will keep the 30th in 'The First Place.'"

Following the address and parade, landing craft churned up the San Francisco Bay waters and dropped their ramps to allow "weasels" (tracked vehicles) to roll ashore at Crissy Field. It was this type of operation that enabled the Engineers to chart stretches of Alaska from the Bering Sea to the Yukon Delta area during the last three summers. Much of this area had never been accurately mapped.

Next, the helicopters circled the Golden Gate, flew sidewise, backwards, spun in circles, and then really warmed to their job. Small hoops were attached to a standard about 4 feet from the ground. The Whirly-birds swooped in low, hovered, and by means of a short extension on the front of the 'copter gently lifted the rings from the standard, circled and eased them back into place. All this to demonstrate the amazing maneuverability of the 'copter.

In Alaska, the whirls, turns, spins and hovering ability of the 'copter becomes all-important for it is the job of the helicopter pilot to land the surveyors on remote mountain tops and pick them up when their job is done.

Dinner in the mess halls was provided for Battalion personnel and their guests followed by tours through the photomapping and reproduction plants, a softball game—a one-sided tilt for the enlisted men—and dances for the officers and enlisted men.

Battle of the Bulges!

A woman worries about her figure whether garbed in khaki or civilian dress.

In order to maintain feminine forms the 4005th WAC Detachment at Ft. Hood, Tex., inaugurated a "chicken feed" table.

The table was set aside so dieters could sit together without being tempted by dishes which their more fortunate companions enjoy.

Army rations are not issued with the ideas of losing weight. Except for an occasional special dish prepared for their table, the women must rely on their self-restraint.

The women have been advised not to starve themselves or to make such a rapid reduction in weight that their health is injured. A chart has been prepared to show the number of pounds which can safely be lost over a given period.

The battle of the bulges continues—in or out of Service!

Tax Fiscal Year Tops All Previous

American taxpayers paid a record-breaking $65,009,585,000 into the Federal Treasury last fiscal year, an average of more than $415 for every man, woman, and child in the nation. The Bureau of Internal Revenue reported that receipts for the 1952 fiscal year, which ended June 30, showed an increase of 28.9 per cent over the previous year's income of $50,445,000,000. While tax collections outstripped all previous years, the Treasury still wound up with a deficit of approximately $4,000,000,000.

The total receipts, however, included millions of dollars in social security and unemployment taxes which are not available for general spending purposes.

Fund Raising Raffle Holds Key For Successful Party

Success of the big Halloween Party for children of the Presidio and sub-posts will be dependent in a large measure upon the success of the raffle now under way to raise funds for this annual affair.

Party plans call for numerous prizes to be given to the winners of the costume parade and the many games for children, as well as the bingo game for their parents, to be held throughout the evening. In addition, the children will be served free doughnuts and cider and coca cola.

These prizes and refreshments will be purchased from funds raised through the raffle. "The more raffle tickets sold, the better prizes and other pleasure will be given the children," said Major Ella A. Wilton, chairman of the party committee.

Raffle tickets for $1.00 each went on sale last week and will continue to be available in the staff sections, post units and at the Special Service building until next Friday noon. Sale of tickets will resume at the party until time for the raffle.

Raffle prizes include: first prize, a 21-inch Packard Bell television set retailing at $370; second prize, a Trans-Oceanic radio retailing at $140; third and fourth prizes, a boy's and a girl's bicycle, each retailing for $75. These prizes are on display in the post theatres and post exchanges.

Both military and civilian personnel of the Presidio or any of the sub-posts may purchase tickets.

New Uniform Insignia May Be Available By Next Month

Supplies for initial issue of the new distinctive items of uniform for authorized Infantry personnel are expected to be available at the end of this month. The new items include shoulder cord, scarf insignia, cap disc insignia and collar disc insignia.

The shoulder cord and scarf insignia will be organizational items, while the collar disc insignia will be an individual item. The cap disc insignia is an optional item and may be purchased from unit funds through Quartermaster Clothing Sales outlets at a cost of $.01 each.

Individuals returning from overseas who have not been issued these items of uniform will be issued the new items at the personnel center.

LAH Still Champ!

United Crusade Donations Hit $14,000, Still Going Upward

Contributions to the Presidio's campaign for the United Crusade approached the $14,000 mark Monday as unit reports were tabulated by Major Ella A. Wilton, campaign vice-chairman. Cash donations amounted to $12,034.92 and $1,857.35 in pledges were received.

Letterman Army Hospital continued to lead all other units in the campaign with contributions being made by 85 per cent of all personnel. The hospital's donations included $5,583.47 in cash and $855 in pledges.

Presidio units climbed into second place this week with a total of 64 per cent participation. The combined AAA units stationed on San Francisco side of the Bay were in third position with 55 per cent.

Participation by the other units was as follows: 30th Engineers, 46 per cent; Sixth Army Headquarters, 34 per cent; District Engineers and Corps Engineers, 28 per cent, and California Military District, 10 per cent.

These percentage figures were charted on the Crusade signboard near the Presidio fire station to reflect the changes by the different units over the past week. All units were nearer the goal of 100 per cent participation.

Although the campaign officially closed on Monday, final standings will not be known until sometime next week. All contributions and pledges are to be submitted to Major Wilton at the office of the Post Funds Custodian next Monday, 27 October.

Both military and civilian personnel are participating in the United Crusade, which represents the first time that the city's social and health agencies have combined their campaigns for financial support.

Demand For Language Specialists Increases

Male enlisted personnel volunteering for the Army language training program must further volunteer for any other school training that may be required to qualify him for assignment as a specialist, Headquarters Sixth Army announces. Specialist training will normally be confined to courses of approximately 12 weeks' duration.

Army's language training program embraces a large number of different languages ranging from Albanian to Turkish. Requirements for Korean, Chinese-Mandarin, Russian and Japanese linguists are particularly heavy. Languages in which quotas are available at the Army Language School through next June were announced in August by Headquarters Sixth Army.

Consular Chief Addresses Presidio Discussion Leaders

Hector J. M. Allard, head of Canada's Consular Division, International Affairs, addressed the discussion leaders of the Presidio's Troop Information Conferences Thursday afternoon speaking generally of economic and industrial aspects of Canada, the topic of next week's conferences on the post.

The distinguished Canadian is in San Francisco to take charge of the Canadian Consulate General during the temporary absence of Mr. C. N. Senior. He arrived in San Francisco during a tour of the Consulate Generals in various sections of this country.

Joining Canada's External Affairs in 1932, Mr. Allard served in Washington, D. C., for seven years from 1937 to 1944. He was Charge d'affaires in Mexico from 1944 to 1946 and in Brussels from 1946 to 1949.

In 1949 he returned to Ottawa and was loaned to the International Refugee Organization of the United Nations as Chief of Mission in Canada until that organization concluded its activities early in 1952. Canada ranked fourth in total number of admissions of displaced persons with a total of 83,950 admissions through the International Refugee Organization as of June, 1950.

Mr. Allard returned to External Affairs in March, 1952, and became head of the Consular Division the first of June.

A BLAZING SUCCESS—Fire Prevention Week, observed recently at the Presidio, proved a popular success. Mobile demonstration units, equipment displays and lectures on preventive precautions highlighted the week's activities. Fire Prevention Program! DPC Praises Local Department For Hard Work and Initiative

The Presidio Fire Department received high praise from Colonel P. J. Lloyd, Deputy Post Commander, for their outstanding efforts during the observance of National Fire Prevention Week.

"The mobile display, demonstration of fire-fighting apparatus and fire prevention talks were most informative," said Colonel Lloyd. "The entertainment for the children of the Post was particularly appreciated. On behalf of the personnel of this command, I wish to extend my compliments for the outstanding efforts accomplished by the Presidio Fire Department."

Personnel, military and civilian, now know the essentials of fire prevention and protection, what to do when there is a fire, what to do to eliminate hazardous conditions and how to follow safety practices and avoid carelessness which is responsible for most fires.

The Fire Department played hosts to children of personnel on this Post treating over five hundred would-be firemen to free fire chief's helmets, free fireman's badges, free candy and best of all—free rides on the big shiny red fire trucks! Before each ride, small fry recipients were pledged not to play with fire or matches and to report all fires promptly.

Fire Chief George Geller was gratified at results of Fire Prevention Week, and the commendation from the Deputy Post Commander. "The Presidio Fire Department is here to serve personnel in this Post and to provide adequate fire prevention and protection for everyone. Fire prevention is something to be observed every week in the year, rather than just one week. The effectiveness of our safety program is largely due to the splendid cooperation of everyone on this Post. Being fire conscious increases your safety. Remember that."

MP's Top Mess Test

Company A, 505th MP Battalion, was awarded the Deputy Post Commander's trophy for the best mess for September, 1952. Company A scored a total of 296 points, while the 21st Engineer Base Photomap Company placed second with 295 points. Scoring 294 points each, Det. 6 6002 ASU Sixth Army Food Service School and Headquarters Company Sixth Army, tied for third place position.

Riddle of the Week!

Question: When is an Army captain a first lieutenant?

Answer: When he doesn't know he's been promoted.

This bitter pill was swallowed by Capt. Dalcourte Thompson of Camp Polk, La. After sporting silver bars for many years the good lieutenant was notified he was really a captain—had been since July, 1951.

Capt. Thompson is a multi-decorated veteran of 71 months overseas service during WWII. He's been in the Army since 1936 and has been awarded the Silver Star, Bronze Star, and Purple Heart with cluster.

An investigation of the delayed notification is underway. (AFPS)

"Sally Canteen" Offers Soldier Tour, Dinner In SF Chinatown

Chinatown Special is a new service offered to all military personnel every Monday night by the Salvation Army Canteen featuring a sightseeing tour of famous and out-of-the-way places and a six-course Chinese dinner.

These Monday tours leave the canteen in the Ferry building at 1930 and the guide, assisted by junior canteen hostesses, will lead the trip through the Joss houses to view old Manchu weapons, Ming porcelains and other Chinese art. Real Chinese dinners of unusual dishes will be prepared in advance and served at an Old Chinatown restaurant at 2100.

Total cost of this Chinatown Special is $1.75, including both the tour and the dinner. It is only for men and women in uniform and their accompanying friends. Registrations for the special must be made at the canteen before 1630 on Mondays.

Nylon, Gabardine Added Authorized Dress Fabrics

Several new fabrics are authorized in Change 1 to SR 600-32-1 for dress and semi-dress uniforms of Army personnel. When not in formation, the nylon shirt is authorized. It must be shade 1 and capable of maintaining "a military appearance throughout a normal service life."

Wool gabardine may be used for dress and semi-dress summer coats for both officers and enlisted men. Shade is Army 61. Trousers and cap may also be of wool gabardine. Wearing is optional.

Impressive Array! Trio of DA Exhibits Explain Army in Peace and War

Three units of the Army's newest exhibit was displayed on the Presidio for a week concluding Monday as the U. S. Army Exhibit Unit visited the post on its cross-country tour from Cameron Station at Alexandria, Va., for the first west coast showing of the exhibit.

This exhibit depicts the Army's role in both peace and war and represents the seven technical and three administrative services, the Women's Army Corps, the Light Aviation Branch and other activities. The three units displayed on the post were the Transportation Corps panel, the Cost Consciousness program display and the Blood Donor flasher.

The unit manning the exhibit is composed of 22 enlisted men, many of them Korean veterans, under Lt. Guy M. McCarey. Traveling in a convoy of six trucks, two buses and a jeep, they had driven over 3,500 miles at the time they were here.

Members of the unit (8578 AAU) are selected specialists in the fields necessary to build and maintain the exhibit. These fields include photography, art, electricity, machinery, carpentry, drafting and sign making.

In addition to maintain the exhibit, members of the unit on tour serve as attendants, act as guides and answer questions. At showings, the exhibit is open 12 hours every day with unit members working two six-hour shifts, often seven days a week.

From Alexandria where the exhibit was built, the unit first went to the Ohio State Fair at Columbus in mid-August. It was then taken to the Los Angeles County Fair where an added attraction was the Sixth Army Pipe Band. Prior to coming to the Presidio, the unit was at Fresno for the Fresno District Fair.

From the Presidio, the exhibit was taken to San Diego. Showings will be given later at Phoenix and Tucson on the return east.

Largest unit shown on the Presidio was the Transportation Corps panel on display at the Presidio Service Club. This panel shows the various ways of transporting and delivering vital materials and personnel to the Korean conflict. A dissolving diorama, one of three in the nation, pictures the movement of a tank from a factory to the coast, then overseas, unloading in a combat zone and finally movement to the front line. An accompanying map shows the transportation route from United States to Korea illuminated by small electric lights.

In the lobby of the Presidio Theater, the Blood Donor Flasher-lighted at intervals representing every time the Armed Forces need another pint of blood. Slogan of the flasher was "It Doesn't Hurt to Give It, But It Does Hurt to Lose It."

The magical suspension of a silver dollar in mid-air was the feature of the Cost Consciousness program exhibit at the Presidio Officers' Club. Attempts to take hold of the dollar may be made, but the Army advises that it watches its dollar.

Major Charles E. Plastow is Commanding Officer of the Army Exhibit Unit, which is under the Office of Chief of Information, Department of the Army. Arrangements for the west coast showing of the exhibit were made by Lt. Col. C. E. Diehl of the Sixth Army Information Section.

Foreign nationals attending schools operated by the Army—both in this country and overseas—completed 5,781 formal training courses during the past year.

Report from WASHINGTON

(By Armed Forces Press Service)

A new combat development agency has been established to exploit more fully the potentialities of atomic weapons and guided missiles. The step was taken to give the average soldier a better opportunity to learn their operation in the field. Training of troops in the technique of handling the new weapons has already begun at Ft. Bliss, Tex., guided missile center, and at White Sands, N. M., proving ground.

Women officers of the Reserve and regular Army may now be separated if married. In all cases, the officers must have completed a minimum of 24 months' commissioned service. Officers serving overseas must also complete one year of their overseas tour before being eligible for separation.

It is now possible for company commanders to reduce privates (E-2) to private (E-1) for reasons of inefficiency. Previously this action could not be taken except through court martial. The provision is contained in a change to Army SR 615-25-55.

A new civilian commission on incentive-hazardous duty and special pays recently met for the first time. The commission, established by the Department of Defense, will study such special pays as combat pay, flight pay, submarine pay, overseas allowances, and physician and dentist pay. The study will be submitted to the Senate Armed Services Committee during the first session of the 83rd Congress.

During the past summer, 200,806 national guardsmen from approximately 3,500 Army Guard units throughout the nation completed two weeks of extensive field training, the Army has announced. Training was largely on a platoon and company level and stressed individual and tactical readiness. Korean combat veterans now in the National Guard were among those taking part in the maneuvers.

Dance Parties Will Highlight YWCA-USO Spook Season

Four dances, two of which are also Halloween parties, and a picnic are slated at the USO clubs of San Francisco during the coming week.

The first Halloween Party will be held by the YWCA-USO tomorrow night at the Redding School Auditorium at Pine and Larkin streets. This will be a costume affair with orchestra. The Presidio YMCA is featuring games and refreshments, as well as an orchestra dance, at their Halloween party to be held at 2000 Wednesday.

Boise, Idaho—The manager of the airport here has announced that a charge of $50 a landing will be made for "flying saucers" on non-scheduled flights. For hovering over the airport, a charge of $10 for the first three minutes will be made. According to the manager the fees apply only to non-spinning saucers.

USO Opens Drive To Get $18,680,000 For Service Clubs

The United Service Organization Defense Fund has begun a nationwide campaign to collect $18,680,000 for clubs, camp shows, and recreation centers for Armed Forces personnel stationed throughout the world.

More than $740,000 has been received in advance gifts from corporations and foundations. Similar institutions are being asked to donate 30 percent of their 1945 contributions to the USO. At that time, the size of the Armed Forces was approximately three times larger.

Since the start of the Korean conflict the USO figures its activities attracted more than 4,000,000 men and women in uniform at the rate of 50,000,000 visits a year.

USO overseas programs include clubs in Alaska, Italy, Germany, the Canal Zone, and Turkey. New centers are being established in London, Paris, Naples, and Casablanca. Camp shows are sent to all parts of the world. (AFPS)

Servicemen in uniform will be admitted without charge to the Emanuelites Dance at Guild Hall of Temple Emanuel at Lake and Arguello streets at 2000 tomorrow. This arrangement has been made by the NJWB-USO, which will also hold its regular Sunday Brunch at the San Francisco Jewish Community Center, 3200 California St., at 1030 Sunday featuring dancing, swimming and gym.

Cinderella Ball is the name of the formal dance to be given tomorrow night at the Embarcadero YWCA-USO, 166 Embarcadero. Class A uniform, shirt and tie are required. Every Wednesday night is Family Night at the Embarcadero YWCA-USO's gymnasium with games and swimming.

YWCA-USO will be sponsors of a picnic with box lunches and roller skating at the beach Sunday afternoon. Meeting place will be the Lutheran Center at the King George Hotel at noon.

Pants Pleaser!

Censorship in Hollywood has its comic side. The people who keep the flickers on the straight and narrow path recently reviewed "Thunder Bay," in which Joanne Dru plays a sexy role of a Creole girl on a shrimp boat. The censors took a peek at the blue jeans Miss Dru was wearing and blushed. "Too tight," they said. "Especially in the er-derriere." "I've worn tighter ones before," Miss Dru protested. "In some westerns I wore jeans that looked like ballet tights." The censors thought it over. "You were a lady in those films," they said. "This is a sexist role." The have to be subtle about it." The next day a cryptic note was sent to the wardrobe department on official censorship stationery: "Please let out the seats in all of Joanne Dru's blue jeans."

Words and Music—

Columbia Records asked eight of its top artists to name which of their recordings they liked best for a new disk anthology called "This Is My Best." Here are the results: Doris Day, "It's Magic," Harry James, "You Made Me Love You," Benny Goodman, "Jersey Bounce," Sammy Kaye, "Harbor Lights," Frank Sinatra, "You'll Never Walk Alone," Guy Mitchell, "My Heart Cries For You," Duke Ellington, "I Let a Song Get Out of My Heart," and Arthur Godfrey, "Too Fat Polka."

Officer Then Pilot

The pilots of Army aircraft are officers in their particular branch of service—they are troop commanders and officers first and pilots second. There now are approximately 1,600 aviators on active duty.

THE BOOK CORNER

GAME FOR THREE LOSERS by Edgar Lustgarten. After writing two brilliant volumes of true crime studies ("Verdict in Dispute" and "Defender's Triumph"), this author turns again to fiction—this time to tell a sardonic story of blackmail.

THE TRAITORS by Alan Moorehead. The gripping story of the atomic energy spy ring and the men behind it. These are traitors of a new kind, desiring neither wealth nor personal power. In terms of the disaster they could bring about, their crimes have been the most enormous in human history.

THE WAY TO GLORY by J. D. Scott. A young businessman on a trip to Paris—the loving wife left at home—temptation abroad. Although written with the lightest and most deft of hands, the author is always aware of the central problems of our time.

WHAT CAN A MAN BELIEVE? by Arthur Goodfriend. In the universal language of pictures, Arthur Goodfriend sets forth the desires that East and West have in common—the simple yearnings for food, land, peace and self-rule.

HAMMOND'S NATURE ATLAS. Designed for nature-lovers who are not scientists. Describes the nature world by text and color illustration and gives the range of the particular species in accompanying maps.

The Main Presidio Library is spot-lighting in a display of recently acquired books one way all libraries add to and enrich their book collections—with the help of gifts and donations. Many fine and rare volumes have been added, for example: "House and People of Japan" by Taut—a study of world architecture along with that of an interesting people and their culture.

Hot Play-off Ends First Half Of Intra-Mural Hoop League

A tall 6'6" center, named Bruin, and a guard, with an uncanny ability of finding the hoop, named Silva, sparked their B Company, 505th MP Battalion basketball team to a 41-35 play-off win over the 518th AAA Operations cagers and the National Division title for the first half of Post Intra-Mural League play.

Lukasik and Pertz paced the 518th hoopsters who led the MPs for three quarters, but were unable to maintain the pace through the final period.

A play-off was not necessary in the American Division as 30th AAA Group, with seven wins, no losses, finished first half play with a decisive edge.

One of last week's best contests saw the 30th Group down NCO Mess, 48-45, in a regular league game.

Stupor scored eight field goals and hit six for seven at the free throw line, to spark the NCO team.

Precassik, 30th star, hit four field goals for his first four attempts, to start a brilliant evening for the hot cager.

League play has started from scratch again this week and the

Most of the Series Records Were Broken Or Tied This Year

World Series, 1952, was a record breaker in almost every department.

Forty-four marks were shattered or extended and 16 others were tied.

Among the more notable new records are Casey Stengel's four straight series winners in his four years as the Yankee pilot, the six successive world's championships for American League teams, Duke Snider's 24 total bases, including 16 extra bases on long hits and the average time per game of two hours, 46 minutes.

Financial figures for the seven games were:
Attendance—340,906.
Receipts (net)—$1,622,753.01.
Players' pool (first four games only)—$500,003.38.
Commissioner's share — $243,402.96.
Club's and League's share—$879,336.79.

NATIONAL DIVISION CHAMPS—Company B, 505th MP Battalion, ended the first half of the Post Intra-Mural Basketball League with six wins and one loss. The Baker Company cagers downed 518th AAA Operations, 41-35, in the final play-off. They are l-r (front):

"Program—Program! Get yer program. Ya can't tell the players from the spectators without a program." When we hear that old familiar stadium chant, it only reminds us of one thing—football—and football, in the eyes of a onetime eastern college professor, was, "nothing more than a bunch of players agitating a bag of wind."

That old joker and Eggs Manske, the UC end coach, ought to share the same stall. Eggs "The Ancient," sez: "Football is on its way out. Won't last another 15 years. I'm gettin' out after this year."

Manske has been crying on Pappy's towel too long. Bullfighting was on its way out several hundred years ago—would anyone else care to join the "Antagonistic Society of Pessimists?"

Man—what a sad bunch of peonies those referees were at Stoneman the other night. They need a course in night vision! Best part of it was, they weren't exactly working for one team against the other. They were axing both clubs. Only trouble was, we kept getting the long 15 yarders. Incidentally, that 13-0 score is in no way indicative of the game. Presidio turned Stoneman every way but loose, but somehow, couldn't sneak past those 'striped goal line barriers.'

Bob Catlett, Presidio's ferocious linebacker who sometimes gets so mean and mad he scares himself, witnessed the lineman's dream the other night. 'Battlin Bob' pulled a Nomellini and stepped into the fullback slot for a couple of plays.

"But, darn—coach, they moved the hole on me," was his reply as to why he was plowing through the biggest bunch of Stoneman players instead of hitting the opening. And to a guy that likes to do things the hard way—goes the Star Presidian Sports Award of the Week. Mister Catlett, for services above and beyond the 'hadacol' of duty, you are hereby presented one complimentary ticket to the Debustomp Cotillion at the Mark Hopkins.

Most of the football players are really hepped up over the Chico trip today, more so than prior to any other trip. Why? Well—Chico has really shown a lot of interest and enthusiasm towards us and this game and have gone so far as putting the boys up in a hotel for two nights so they won't suffer from 'long ride kinks.' And then, too, something else seems to brighten the picture. Some of the boys hope to brush up on their coed-ucation after the game.

Have to wind up for now in favor of a little study on 'college etiquette.' Be back next week. In the meantime—keep a liff upper sip!

Like the mighty Casey at bat, Billy Graham has struck out. His years of experience and files of laudatory sports columns did him no good in his second attempt early in October to wrest the welterweight title from Cuba's Kid Gavilan. Mr. Graham, so it seems, laid an ink-stained bomb. No more do the sportswriters beat their chests with righteous indignation and refer to him as the "uncrowned welterweight champion of the world." After 11 years of campaigning, Graham remains like the proverbial old maid—always a challenger but never a champion.

The bout in Cuba was the fourth meeting between Graham and Gavilan. Irish Billy won the first one, but dropped the second. The third was held last year, with Gavilan firmly established as the official world champion. Graham said he won this fight and the sportswriters agreed with him. The only ones not in harmony were the fight officials and Gavilan. It was a close decision, and the sportswriters greeted it as the greatest thing since limburger.

Graham was the second "uncrowned" welter champ in recent years. Sugar Ray Robinson held this title for a long time but it was a little different with him.

The title was in cold storage during the war and the subsequent champion, Marty Servo, viewed Robinson as an occupational hazard he was happy to avoid. Servo finally retired.

Graham, during the "uncrowned" period of his life, did not spend the fretful waiting period by taking on other challengers to the title, as Robinson had done. He wanted Gavilan or nobody in the welter class, and his tuneup bouts with aspiring middleweights did nothing for his prestige. He drew with another good-box, no-hit man, Rocky Castellani, and lost a close decision to Joey Giradello. But he finally got that second shot at the welter title and, though it was a dud as a fight, Graham laid the biggest bomb of his career. There was no doubt this time, no split, debatable decision.

Graham will still keep trying but now he will be on his own, for the bout hasn't even been mentioned by his hometown sports columnists.

QM's Aerial Show!

Army Rush Orders Filled Via Vastly Improved Parachute

The shortest distance between two points is straight down when the Army's combination grocer-druggist-filling station-hardware dealer—the Quartermaster Aerial Supply Company—fills a rush order for backyard delivery.

Billowing parachutes bursting into bloom mean food, clothing, ammunition, gasoline and medical supplies for many satisfied customers.

If the situation demands, the bottom figuratively drops out of the sky as jeeps, trucks, bulldozers and artillery pieces float earthward suspended in the sky by huge canopies of nylon.

Considerable progress has been made in the development of parachutes and items for delivery via the aerial route. Equipment weighing up to 21,000 pounds has been dropped successfully, using clusters of 100-foot diameter chutes. This is in marked contrast to World War II operations where the heaviest drop weighed between 300 and 400 pounds and used a single 28-foot chute.

To drop a 75-millimeter pack howitzer in those days meant dropping it piece-meal in lumps not exceeding 400 pounds. Today the "king-size" 100-foot nylon cargo chute will lower a 75-millimeter pack howitzer, a jeep, or 3,500 pounds of supplies in one stint.

Clusters of these giant-size chutes now can deliver 105-millimeter howitzers, two-and-a-half-ton trucks, bull-dozers, caterpillar graders, or supplies weighing up to 21,000 pounds.

In addition to the sky-blanketing 100-foot chutes, the Army uses two smaller-type cargo chutes for aerial delivery. One of these—a 64-foot nylon chute—is used to lower loads weighing in at less than 3,500 pounds. The other—a muslin canopy chute—sports a 28-foot blossom designed to carry loads weighing up to 500 pounds.

The task of preparing and delivering cargo via parachute is handled by Army Quartermaster Aerial Supply Companies. For an air-drop operation, the trucks, guns, food and supplies are tied down to special air-drop platforms. These platforms are designed to permit rapid ejection of the cargo from the plane in flight and protect against landing shock.

After the cargo has been tied down to the platform, parachutes are rigged carefully and attached to the equipment to be dropped. The cargo then is loaded aboard the aircraft and lashed to the inside of the plane. A roller skate conveyor on the floor of the aircraft permits both easy loading

Meet Suspicious Sam!

A Double Doubter Who Drips Sarcasm for USAFI Program

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second of a series of four articles about the opportunities offered by the United States Armed Forces Institute as prepared for the Armed Forces by Bureau of Naval Personnel. Illustrations are by R. Osborn, famous for his character, "Dilbert," during World War II. "Dilbert" was used by the Navy Department to point up safety in naval aviation.)

PART II

During the last war thousands of sergeants and chiefs accepted emergency commissions. Almost all of them knew their business thoroughly—and they continued to know it throughout the war.

But some turned out to be excellent leaders at officer level: and some did not.

In almost every case the man with the broad education was the better leader. Because he understood more he could lead better.

On the sour side of the record, however, is the fact that many a basically good man hurt himself and hindered his Service because he acquired an inferiority complex about the background some men had, and he lacked.

To cover up, this type would often go around with a chip on his shoulder proclaiming that he was a rough diamond but he sure knew his specialty, and that's all he knew or wanted to know. He apparently took over Popeye's motto: "I yam what I yam what I yam."

Needless to say, this attitude does not win friends and influence people. They will never—with the regiment drawn up—present you with a combination pogo stick and ball pen inscribed: "Here's to Cuthbert, he's true blue."

Instead, they go around hating your merry old insides. And the work doesn't get done. And it seems to you—and your superior—that in your outfit there are always more loose ends lying around than in an ox-tail soup factory.

And so you aren't promoted. But those other guys are. And suddenly, one day, you find they're senior to you, and still feeling the same way about your merry old insides.

Obviously this is not good for:

(1) the gent who has been passed over;

(2) the Service.

And so one of the major purposes of the Armed Forces Education Program is to make sure that EVERY MAN REPEAT EVERY MAN in uniform gets a chance to make sure this does not happen to him.

And, of course, there is no reason why it should.

Because you can start any place in the program—as a man who has just learned to read and write, or as a man already admitted to college—and by easy, graduated steps get the education you want.

As a matter of fact, the program is so complete that there's one type of character—generally known by some such handle as Suspicious Sam—who flatly refuses to believe it.

Holding forth in barracks he sounds like a local yokel who has just been offered a half interest in Brooklyn Bridge. "So you can get a high school diploma and up to two years college—all for a few bucks!" he purrs. "And hundreds of other courses. Everything from locomotive air brakes to poultry raising. And background courses for every Service rate. But what's the book?—why is the Service so interested in little me?"

Sometimes someone timidly tries to explain that Uncle Sam gets back from the program just what he wants:

(1) better job performance;

(2) better educated citizens.

But our chum isn't buying any. "My old man always told me if anybody tried to give me something, to call a cop," one Suspicious Sam recently observed.

To education officers Suspicious Sam gets to be a sort of occupational disease. They spend hours trying to figure his view of the off-duty education program—overlaid on a standard chart—and conclude that it looks like this:

You begin to understand how the Suspicious Sams get the education people on the ropes when you read blow-by-blow interview reports like the one below between a certain sergeant and Recruit Eustis Eggleston Pratt.

The system is a great deal more than a sound truck—in addition to a powerful speaker system, it includes two magnetic recorder-reproducers, two disc recorder-reproducers, two AM, FM and shortwave radio receivers, and a complete power system.

Radio programs can be originated from the roving sound plant when land line facilities are available to link the truck with the broadcasting station concerned.

The system's voice can cover an area as big as Yankee Stadium, or a circle approximately 1,000 yards in radius.

RECRUIT PRATT: What's this noise about a high school diploma?

SERGEANT: Well, briefly, if you don't have a diploma, you can probably get one by completing some off-duty courses suggested by your high school principal.

RECRUIT PRATT: How do I know what that old buzzard wants me to study?

SERGEANT: Your Uncle Sam, who loves you dearly, has foreseen your need. He has worked out the thing to help you. It's called the U. S. Mail. It seems that if you write a letter to the principal—

RECRUIT PRATT: Me write a letter!

SERGEANT: Well, you want the diploma. Remember? And if you write him, it makes a much better impression. Also, believe it or not, he'll probably be glad to hear from you.

RECRUIT PRATT: Why? We never ran with the same mob.

SERGEANT: Maybe he realizes now what he missed. In any event, I'll give you odds he'll be glad to hear from you, and to help you. You can put in some line like: "Your attention is invited to the fact that the courses I can take are described in the U. S. Armed Forces Institute Catalog which has been distributed to all schools and colleges."

RECRUIT PRATT: Why do I have to put that in? Don't he know his job?

SERGEANT: He's got a lot on his mind.

RECRUIT PRATT: Stop, stop, you're breaking my heart.

SERGEANT: I have news for you: every Fall a fresh crop of hot rods shows up at your high school. Eventually, we get some: Barnum & Bailey and the local zoo get others. But there are always enough guys around to keep a principal fairly well occupied and free from brooding.

RECRUIT PRATT: Well, here's one guy he won't have to bother about. If I gotta get wound up in all this red tape, it ain't worth it.

That concluding zinger from old Eustis, of course, is open to debate.

Army Sound Truck Has Many Unique Features Plus A Loud Voice

A traveling sound system compactly built into a four-ton truck now is in use by the Army Signal Corps. Designed primarily for use in demonstrations of equipment before large crowds, the mobile sound system is available to the military for use at maneuvers and other training exercises, and to civilian agencies for appropriate functions.

The system is a great deal more than a sound truck—in addition to a powerful speaker system, it includes two magnetic recorder-reproducers, two disc recorder-reproducers, two AM, FM and shortwave radio receivers, and a complete power system.

Radio programs can be originated from the roving sound plant when land line facilities are available to link the truck with the broadcasting station concerned.

The system's voice can cover an area as big as Yankee Stadium, or a circle approximately 1,000 yards in radius.

A Toughie In The Offing!

Raiders Journey to Chico for Tussle with Varsity Staters

Presidio's up and coming Red Raiders, with a two loss, one tie, two win record, take to the road again today to battle a three loss, one win team, Chico State College at Chico tomorrow night.

From all indications, it will be the local's toughest contest to date, but the team has been showing vast improvements from tweek to week and along with the "Big Red" stars previously presented, two more personalities are expected to exploit top-notch football talent in an effort to continue the win streak.

Corporal Jim Griggs, Company A, 505th MP Battalion, from Salt Lake City, Utah, gets in plenty of action on the Raider gridiron, both as a reserve offensive full back and a defensive safety man.

Cpl Griggs' hard line plunging and rough-tough grid tactics strongly resemble a single wing blocking back and the 180 pounder was just that, for three years at Salt Lake's Jordan High School. Griggs is playing his second season with the Raiders and thus far, it's been a terrific season for the ground gainer from Utah.

Corporal Leonard Saleski, Battery D, 728th AAA, from Hamtramck, Michigan, personifies Paul Bunyan minus the ox.

Cpl Saleski, 6'4", 260 pound tackle, played his first game with the Red Raiders at Stoneman last Friday night. His weight brought the line average up 10 pounds and the big guy's ability increased the defensive line efficiency a sizable 25 percent.

Saleski pounded the Hamtramck High School turf for three years to start his football career. He was chosen All-City tackle for two of those seasons.

Two years with the Hamtramck All-Stars, a semi-pro club, sent his grid stock soaring to new heights and now, in his first year of Army ball, Presidio is mighty glad to have an option on that stock.

SPORT SHORTS —

Several years ago, Hubert Opperman of Australia took off behind an automobile and pedaled his bicycle for 24 hours. When he dismounted he had covered 860 miles, 367 yards—an average of almost 36 miles per hour.

Willie Mosconi, the world's pocket billiards champion of 1947, and '48, started shooting one day and stroked 309 balls in a row into the pockets.

In 1931 Ernie Schranz bowled a grand match of 60 games with Ben Bernicchi for a side bet of one grand. Ben won the huddle by exactly one pin.

A FULLBACK'S DREAM may be to have a 6-foot 4-inch, 260-pound dynamo out in front of him paving the way. If Cpl. Jim Griggs (right), Red Raider fullback, from Salt Lake City, Utah, had Cpl. Leonard Saleski (left), Presidio tackle, from Hamtramck, Michigan, running his interference, he would be running in a vacuum of security, more protection than Brinks' can offer. Roberts Soldier Swaps GI Shoes for Spurs

Sgt. First Class Leon W. Caster, a Leaders' Course instructor at Camp Roberts, swapped his GI brogans for a pair of spurs recently and won the bareback riding event in a rodeo at Solvang, California.

Sfc Caster takes advantage of his off-duty time to continue a riding career that started at the age of five and one he plans to further continue after release.

Alibi Keglers Rule the Roost In Fort Scott Bowling League

At the halfway point in the Fort Scott Bowling League, three teams are knotted in fourth place, two quintettes hold a 5-13 won-lost record for the cellar spot, but the 21st Alibis are still head and shoulders above all competitors with 15-3 mark.

If the $115 prize money were dished out to the teams as they now stand it would be divided as follows:

Team	Won	Lost	Money
21st Alibis	15	3	$50
T-5's	12	6	30
Sure Things	11	7	20
Bushwackers	8	10	5
8-Balls	8	10	5
MP's	8	10	5
Ball-Bearings	5	13	0
Headquarters Co.	5	13	0

However, seven more weeks remain in the league and any of the seven teams could upset the applecart and walk off with the $50 prize.

This week, the Alibis smothered the Bushwackers in three consecutive lines. Alibi keglers SFC Hartman and Sgt Standish banged away for a 563 series and 561 series, respectively. Headquarters Company edged the Ball Bearings 2-1; the T-5's rolled over the MP's 2-1; and the Sure Things garnered two wins and one loss from the 8-Balls.

The T-5's will have a chance to tie the league leaders when they match pins with the Alibis this week, but they must win all three. In other games, the MP's meet the third-place Sure Things; Headquarters Company tangles with the Bushwackers; and the 8-Balls bowl the Ball Bearings.

"Big Red" Gets Bigger!

Red Raiders' Big Forward Wall Sparks 13-0 Over Stoneman

A 229-pound defensive line, bigger than Pappy Waldorf's California Bears and one that any college coach would respect, sparked the Presidio Red Raiders to a 13-0 shut-out over the Camp Stoneman Travelers at Stoneman last Friday night.

Presidio's giant line, which bears a slight resemblance to a granite wall, made the Travelers literally eat the pigskin and when the statistics were all that could be salvaged from the rain-chilled gridiron, Stoneman had registered a net rushing yardage of 28.

Daigle, big Raider left half, ran the opening kick-off back 22 yards to start a sustained drive, that despite heavy penalties, netted the locals a first quarter lead. Daigle crossed the goalline from 15 yards out and Jackstadt, smooth Raider quarterback, kicked the conversion.

In the fading minutes of the game, Preciado, Raider defensive star, snared a Traveler pass and raced across untouched for Presidio's final touchdown.

Presidio maintained complete control throughout, marching to within striking distance four times only to receive 15 yard penalties each time inside the 20 and have one TD called back.

Big gains by Raider backs, Kirby, Lamb and Nakano and a Jackstadt to Bates and Daigle aerial combination, behind a 204 pound air-tight offensive line, clicked for 19 first downs to four for the stunned Travelers.

Unable to penetrate against such immovable objects as linemen, Saleski (260), Catlett (215), Marchiano (210), Seafelt (225) and Cooper (210), to name only a few, the Travelers hit one successful passing streak that netted their four first downs, but failed to set up any real scoring threats.

Brilliant punt run-backs and secondary defensive play by Preciado and Gordon served to offset the line play and keep Stoneman in check throughout.

Catlett, defensive linebacker, converted his terrorizing grid prowess to the fullback's duties for the first time in his career and although he missed the holes, plowed for three and four yard gains, all to the delight of the large crowd.

Presidio gained 225½ yards on the ground and 44 via the air for a combined net yardage of 269½.

Stoneman lost 28 on the ground, but salvaged some of their dignity with a 34 yard passing game that gave them a combined net 6 yards.

All-Service Pistol Match To Be Held Here Next Month

San Francisco's Junior Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring a big Inter-Service Pistol Match at the Crissy Field Range, next month.

Open to all of the Armed Forces, the match will get underway at 0900 hours on 1 November, with the limit set at 20 four-man teams.

Participants will fire the caliber .45 pistol over the National Match Course and the .22 caliber pistol over the Camp Perry Police Course.

Trophies will be awarded to the first and second place winning team along with individual medals to members of the first, second and third place teams.

Service installations, not yet entered, who wish to take part, are urged to mail their entry to San Francisco Junior Chamber of Commerce, San Francisco, California—before 29 October.

Aside from this, the Presidio Gun Club is open to matches in the large and small bore rifle, pistol, and skeet class, with installations or civilian teams in this area.

A match with the Presidio marksmen can be obtained through the president of the club: Captain John N. Stratten, Presidio Gun Club, 115th CIC Detachment, Presidio of San Francisco, California.

Army's Grid Ranks Are Thinner This Week

Army's already thin football forces grew thinner this week with a loss of tackles Bob Guidera and George Kovack.

Guidera, previously hampered by a knee injury, suffered a similar injury to the other knee, in the 21-14 loss to Pittsburgh last Saturday.

Kovack has been temporarily sidelined because of academic deficiencies and will not be picked up until his grades improve.

The Cadets will face Lou Little's Columbia Lions this Saturday.

BOOKS! BOOKS! BOOKS!—Shown sorting through some of the thousands of books that pass through the Sixth Army Library Depot yearly are Mrs. Leah Frisby and Mr. Jesse Roberts. Books sent here for warehousing are usually those in excess at other installations. They are cataloged and then used to establish new libraries or fill individual requests. (Army Photo by Matsuo.)

Sixth Army's Library Depot Supplies Millions of Military Readers Abroad

By Robert Busey
Star-Presidian Staff Writer

Of all the services rendered by units of Headquarters Sixth Army, perhaps none has been as world-wide as those of the Library Depot. While essentially the core of the Sixth Army Library service, the Depot has also received books from all parts of the globe, as well as having supplied thousands of volumes to many far off places.

Depot activities come under two main categories, operation of the Sixth Army Reference and Research Library and warehousing and redistribution. It is in the warehousing and redistribution work that the Depot has served in a world-wide capacity.

Since establishment in 1944, the Depot has distributed over a million and a half cloth-bound books and over 600,000 paperback books to various army areas in the United States, the Far East, Europe, Alaska, the Caribbean and other overseas commands. A quarter of a million paperback books were sent to the Japan Logistical Command alone.

Books received by the Depot for warehousing here are principally those which are in excess at individual installations in all army areas and are shipped here for redistribution. These are then used by the Depot to make up basic balanced collections of from 500 to 5,000 volumes to initiate library services when required.

Within the Sixth Army area, the Depot has recently furnished a 2,000 volume collection to Yuma Test Station and a 1,500 volume collection for Sharpe General Depot. Upon its reactivation, Camp San Luis Obispo was sent a 3,000 volume basic library.

Outside this army area, in the past few months the Depot sent libraries to the First Army for their travelling libraries, a 1,000 volume collection for the stockade at Camp Kilmer, N. J., two balanced collections to units in Alaska and 2,400 volumes to the Academy at West Point to start a recreational library. One of the 2,000 volume libraries shipped last year went to SHAPE.

Paper-bound books are sent to troops on maneuvers or in isolated locations. Like the quarter of million sent to Japan, these are packed in small bundles of approximately 150 books with over 60 titles and can be dropped at batteries or other small units without any need for any sorting after leaving the Presidio.

The Depot also makes redistribution of books by individual titles needed by existing libraries. Lists of the available volumes are compiled and published by the Depot for distribution to libraries of the army area and all other commands.

Containing over 20,000 titles, the Depot's Reference and Research Library is an invaluable source of information for Sixth Army Headquarters staff and libraries of all the installations of the area. In addition to this large collection of titles, the Depot has hundreds of pamphlets, clippings, maps, magazines and other material.

Not only are the resources of the library used by staff members of Headquarters Sixth Army, but by both military and civilian personnel throughout the area to obtain material for speeches, work on academic or military courses and other studies. ORC units without readily available sources use the Reference Library extensively.

While all the Post libraries in the army area have good reference sections, their books are not as numerous or as varied as those of the Sixth Army Library. When requests for information are received by post librarians who do not have the necessary material on hand, the Depot's Reference Library is contacted.

These requests are often on unusual or highly technical subjects. Information was recently

requested on the religious philosophy as practiced in ancient Tibet, while a Fort Worden soldier wanted a book on how to set up a saw mill. On the technical side have been requests for material on hydroponic (soils) gardening and cybernetics (the relationship of machines to man.)

Material supplied on these requests for information are loaned by the Reference Library to the local installations and returned after use. On the Presidio considerable information is given by phone, as well.

In selecting books for the Reference and Research Library, Mr. Wendell B. Coon, Sixth Army Librarian, states acquisition is based on the subjects immediately required for research and volumes for which there will be a demand within the command within a reasonable time, but which would not be sufficiently popular or would be too expensive for general post libraries.

Acquisition is particularly heavy in the field of military science, unit histories and reference materials on countries throughout the world. The library also has outstanding technical books on a wide variety of non-military fields.

Some books for the army area post libraries are also purchased by the Depot. With Sixth Army Welfare Fund monies, essential reference materials, biographical dictionaries and military books are obtained for the needs of posts. They also secure for these libraries materials on travel and official documents for which there is no charge.

Activities of the Library Depot are part of Special Services, Headquarters Sixth Army, with overall supervision by Col. John S. Mallory, Special Services Officer. Mr. Coon has been with army libraries for the past ten years and came to the Presidio from Fort Douglas in 1944 to establish the Depot. His assistant is Mrs. Elizabeth Bock.

A Busy Brain Bows!

Solving of Slippery Solutions Is Specialty of ORDVAC

The Army's newest "electronic brain" can multiply 642,824,734,549 (B) times 598,243,739,378 (B) and come up with the right answer—384,565,872,961,263,988,370,522 (S—Sextillion)—in one-thousandth of a second.

Solving such eyebrow-raisers is all in a day's work for ORDVAC—Ordnance Discrete Variable Automatic Computer. This "brain" can solve in a jiffy mathematical problems that would make all but the experts throw up their hands in despair. It is 100,000 times faster than the fastest human arithmetician on the tougher problems, and it can do as much work in a week as the best figures expert equipped with a desk calculator could do in 20 centuries.

ORDVAC is invaluable to the Army, for many improvements in modern warfare can be accepted only on the basis of results evaluated by many elaborate calculations. Located at the Army Ordnance Proving Ground, Aberdeen, Md., much of ORDVAC's time is spent in computing trajectories of missiles, bombing tables, firing charts, and air flow problems.

The "brain" has made it possible to make improvements on a project still on the drawing board, resulting in a big savings for the Army and the taxpayer.

A leading feature of the "brain" is its spacious and accurate memory. The memory—capable of storing 1,024 pieces of information on the face of one tube, or 40,960 pieces of information on all 40 of its tubes—acts as a storage house for all instructions and intermediate results.

When it needs a piece of information, it extracts it from the tubes in 36 millionths of a second. No other computer's "memory" is both so large and so fast.

In solving problems, mathematical information is fed into and taken from the computer on modified teletype units. Their use permits scientific research crews several thousand miles distant from the "brain" at Aberdeen to send mathematical problems and receive the results via commercial teletype. The "brain" can be used conveniently by any group having a teletype outlet at its disposal.

Installed in the Computing Laboratory of Ballistic Research at Aberdeen in February 1952, the small and compact computer took its place alongside other high-speed electronic computers—the ENLAC and EDVAC.

Built for the Army by the University of Illinois, ORDVAC has greatly enhanced the computing facilities at Aberdeen Proving Ground.

EXAMINING A SPECIAL COLLECTION of books at the Sixth Army Reference Library are Mr. Wendell Coon, Sixth Army Librarian, and Mrs. Elisabeth Bock. Containing over 20,000 titles, the Depot's Reference and Research Library is an invaluable source of information for Sixth Army personnel. (Army Photo by Matsuo.)

Defense Head Lauds American Servicemen

Washington—In a recent press conference Defense Secretary Robert A. Lovett gave a hearty pat on the back to the men in the Armed Forces.

Calling them just plain terrific, he went on to point out that the American youth of today really has what it takes. Mr. Lovett admitted that his was a pretty rugged generation. But, he told reporters, based on his latest observations, the present generation is absolutely tops.

Recently returned from a tour of bases in the U. S., he said that combat training is being supervised by officers and non-coms right out of the battle in Korea. He was proud, he explained, to get out and see how really terrific our servicemen are.

Infantry Personnel Will Absorb Chemical Mortar Battalion

Washington—Infantry personnel will take over chemical mortar battalions to standardize training and facilitate operation in combat.

Infantry officers will replace Chemical Corps officers, who will be transferred to units of their own branch. Enlisted personnel now serving in the chemical mortar battalions will be retained for service in the infantry heavy mortar organizations.

The new units will have the same mission as the chemical mortar battalions, and will use the same equipment. They provide close artillery-type support to combat forces, using high explosive and smoke ammunition in 4.2-inch rifled barrel mortars.

Israel was the nation most recently admitted to the United Nations.

The authorized strength of the Corps of Cadets at West Point is 2,496.

Sixth Army TI&E Chief Completes Service

Colonel Carlisle B. Wilson, Troop Information and Education Officer, Sixth Army, will retire at the end of this month terminating 35 years of service. He has been assigned to Sixth Army headquarters, Presidio of San Francisco, since 1950.

COLONEL C. B. WILSON

Prior to coming to the Presidio, Colonel Wilson served as Troop Information and Education Officer for the Far East Command in Tokyo from 1948 to 1950. Immediately before this assignment he was the Public Information Officer of the Eighth Army in Yokohama.

During World War II he served in Europe with the 15th Army and the Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force.

A native of North Carolina, Colonel Wilson was graduated from the U. S. Military Academy at West Point, N. Y., in 1917 and commissioned in the Regular Army. He served throughout World War I in San Diego and Camp Kearney, California.

From 1921 to 1924, he was Assistant Military Attache in Constantinople. During this period he visited Russia, Bulgaria, Roumania, Egypt and Palestine.

His service between 1924 and 1941 included eight years in the Hawaiian Islands, four years at Denver, Colorado, and shorter periods in other sections of the United States.

Famous Commander Passes! Career a Bright Thread in the Tapestry of America's History

Major General Lucius R. Holbrook, one of the Army's most distinguished retired generals, died at Letterman Army Hospital this week at the age of 77. He was the commander of the first American artillery regiment to enter France during World War I and launched the Army's Cooks and Bakers school.

A native of Arkansas, Wis., he was graduated from West Point in 1896 and commissioned a second lieutenant in the cavalry. He served at various western posts until 1899. He graduated from the Infantry-Cavalry School in 1905 and the Army Staff College in 1906.

He took a course at the French School of Supply in Paris and through his efforts the Cooks and Bakers School was established at Fort Riley, Kas., in 1910.

During World War I General Holbrook commanded the 1st and 54th Field Artillery Brigades, and during the second battle of the Marne led a composite Artillery Brigade of American, English and French troops in support of the 15th Scottish Division.

For outstanding service during the battle of Castigny in May, 1917, General Holbrook was decorated by the American, French and Montenegrin governments.

Following World War I he was instructor at the Command and General Staff School, and from 1921 to 1924 served as general staff officer at the Presidio. In 1925 he was promoted to the permanent rank of brigadier general. He became a major general in 1930 and assumed command of the 1st Infantry Division.

From 1935 to 1938, General Holbrook was commander of the Department of the Philippines.

General Holbrook is survived by three sons in three different branches of the service: Col. Frank C. Holbrook, U. S. Army, who is with the office of the Quartermaster General in Washington; Capt. John A. Holbrook, USN, assigned to the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Washington, and Lieut. Col. Lucius R. Holbrook, Jr., USAF, stationed in Formosa. He is also survived by his wife and four grandchildren.

General Dorn's Visit!

Deputy Chief of Information Restates DA Policies on I&E

Brigadier General Frank Dorn, Deputy Chief of Information for the Department of the Army, said in an interview with the Star-Presidian this week that a new public information policy based on aggressive and factual servicing of local and national news media has been in actual operation for sometime.

Here on a brief visit to advise and check phases of program management, he cited the Army News Feature Service in Washington, and the Hometown News Center in Kansas City, Missouri, as outstanding examples of the new program's progress.

"We work on a somewhat different theory than that of hometown news centers organized by the other Services," said General Dorn. "It is our belief that a news release even though it concerns a local boy must have a twist if it is to be well received by city, county and community editors. If John Doe makes Pfc. it is hardly noteworthy to even Doe himself. But if John Doe makes or wins a new rank under unusual conditions or circumstances, then our writers can often develop a feature story that makes interesting reading for many who never even heard of him before."

General Dorn went on to say that it is the responsibility of public information personnel to aggressively pursue and develop news leads of interest to the general public. That a well grounded news release with the facts substantiated and intact can often prevent misinterpretation and misunderstanding. "Many newswriters are laymen in military matters," the general stated. "And all too frequently a deadline and a hurried telephone conversation can have disastrous results."

Concerning service newspapers the general was emphatic in the belief that they are performing an outstanding service in the Army. "There is no better medium for commanders to express in simple and interesting terms the day to day progress and purpose of all phases of military service. The Army newspaper when properly presented is an invaluable morale factor, an excellent guide to wholesome entertainment, and without equal as a medium for the promotion of command programs."

General Dorn cautioned that over-zealousness in publicizing and selling the Army's Troop Information and Education programs could result in a feeling of resentment at troop level. "The American soldiers' reaction to inundation or anything that smacks of propagandizing is an almost immediate resistance to the product. I and E must be attractively packaged and sold interestingly and sanely."

Following visits to the Sixth Army's Public Information and the Troop Information and Education sections, General Dorn visited with the Army Commander, Lieutenant General Joseph M. Swing, and Brigadier General William T. Sexton, Sixth Army Chief of Staff. He will return to Washington this week.

New Malaria Drug Tests Encouraging

A rapid cure for malaria may be provided by a new drug, primaquine, now being tested extensively by the Army in the field. Tests conducted indicate it may be a far more effective drug for malaria than any other now in use.

It is hoped to prove by means of field tests that it will accelerate the recovery of military personnel returning from Korea who have contracted malaria.

Initial tests were made at the Joliet (Illinois) Penitentiary among prisoner volunteers.

Army Dependents to Sail on America's Sea "Queens"

New York — Army dependents traveling to EuCom will be going by way of luxury vessels of the U. S. Lines, according to recent arrangements made by the Military Sea Transportation Service.

The movement will involve about 1,000 passengers a month with 16 cruises scheduled on the superliner United States and the liner America.

Type O Blood Shortage In Korea Defense Makes Emergency Call

A new emergency appeal for Type O blood was issued this week by the Department of Defense.

Local Red Cross officials said the plea is for an unlimited supply of whole blood for immediate shipment to the warfront—the most urgent call they have had since before the start of the Panmunjom peace talks in mid-1951.

Blood banks throughout the western United States are alerted and ready to receive as many donors as can be recruited.

Travis Air Force Base has planes scheduled to depart each day throughout this emergency, as quickly as their cargoes of whole blood can be supplied.

Sixty hours later the blood will be at the Korean battlefield. Every eligible person is asked to donate as soon as possible.

In San Francisco, donor appointments may be made at Irwin Memorial Blood Bank, 2180 Washington Street, by calling PRospect 6-1500 or JOrdan 7-6400. Irwin is open daily from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m.

The blood bank will arrange free roundtrips by Yellow Cab at the donor's request. Red Cross will provide transportation for groups of four or more.

In other communities, call your Red Cross to arrange your appointment.

Korean Vets Must Qualify For Jobless Pay

Washington—Conditions which a veteran must meet to qualify for unemployment compensation have been listed by the Veterans Administration.

(The K-Vet Bill entitles eligible veterans to an unemployment allowance of $26 a week for a total of 26 weeks, or until $676 has been paid.)

1. You must file a claim and register for work at a local employment office in the state where you live.

2. You must meet the conditions of your particular state unemployment compensation law. These generally include:

(a) You must continue to report at your local employment office; (b) you must be unemployed; (c) you must be able to work; (d) you must be available for work; (e) you must not quit your job voluntarily without good cause; (f) you must not have been discharged for misconduct.

(g) You must not have refused a suitable job without good cause and (h) your unemployment must not be due to a stoppage of work caused by a labor dispute.

The VA said that 1,112,000 veterans were discharged between July, 1950, and August, 1952. These veterans as well as veterans to be discharged in the future are eligible for all benefits, if they qualify, under the K-Vet Bill.—(AFPS).

New Branch Firmed

To assure rapid replies to inquiries from important officials on matters under the control of the Commanding General, Sixth Army, a Special Actions Branch has been established in the office of the Assistant Chief of Staff, G1, Headquarters Sixth Army. The branch will receive requests for information and action from members of Congress, governors of states, and other important officials. The necessary information will be obtained from staff sections and agencies of Sixth Army by the newly created branch for preparation of necessary correspondence.

Retreat Ceremonies Will Honor Four For 140 Years of Honorable Service

COLONEL I. S. DIERKING

Three colonels and a master sergeant will take a final curtain call on the Army stage at the Presidio this afternoon. Their play, entitled Honorable and Distinguished Service, will end a 140-year run at 1630 hours in front of Sixth Army Headquarters. A colorful retreat parade with a 700-soldier cast and one of the finest military bands in the land will participate in a "final performance ceremony."

Retiring, after careers that have spanned more than 30 years each, will be Colonel Welcome P. Waltz, Infantry; Colonel C. B. Wilson, Infantry; Colonel Irwin S. Dierking, Quartermaster Corps, and Master Sergeant Charles C. Suttas, Corps of Engineers.

Entering the Army as a private in March, 1914, Col. Waltz was commissioned a second lieutenant of infantry in May, 1917. He served with a machine gun battalion of the First Infantry Division, participating in four campaigns in France as a platoon leader and company commander.

Following World War I he served as commanding officer of Headquarters Company, Military District of Washington; as assistant professor of military science and tactics at Kansas State Agricultural College and with the Hawaiian Division. From 1940 until 1942 he was chief of the Weapons Section of The Infantry School at Fort Benning, Ga. He also attended The Infantry School and the Command and General Staff College. During World War II he commanded the 413th Regimental Combat Team of the 104th Infantry Division in combat in France, Germany and Holland and later was assigned to Headquarters of the 15th Army.

After the end of the war he served as professor of military science and tactics at LaSalle Military Academy, Long Island, New York, was assigned to the staff of General James A. VanFleet in Greece where he served as chief of training for the Greek National Army which succeeded in driving the communist forces out of that country. Following three and a half years' service in Greece he was assigned to the Presidio of San Francisco where he has been chief and deputy chief of the California Military District.

Martial Twilight

There's a drumbeat,
And feet that a cadence keep
Continue to march
In your dreams at night.
There's a bugle,
And a clarion call.
That leads you ofttimes
Where brave men fall.
How the days fly.
How the years pass by
Old friends that live,
Some who must die.
There's a drumbeat
With a saddened throb.
For a mission accomplished,
The end of the job.

Mrs. Wilson have three sons, Lt. Carlisle B., Jr., assigned to the Third Armored Division, Fort Knox, Ky.; Ernest B., a cadet at West Point, and Nicholas B., a student at the Sullivan School preparing for entrance to the Military Academy.

The man who literally taught the Army of today to "cook with gas," Col. Dierking was born in Jeffersonville, Ind., and entered the Army as a second lieutenant in August, 1917. Prior to that he had attended the University of Indiana. During World War I he served in France with the Fifth and Third Infantry Divisions, participating in three campaigns.

During the interval between World Wars I and II he served in the United States and Hawaii. While stationed at the Jeffersonville, Ind., Quartermaster Depot, where he was in charge of the manufacturing and development division, he designed and developed the Army's gasoline field range which is still in use. During this period he also attended The Infantry School at Fort Benning and The Quartermaster School at Fort Lee, Va.

In World War II he served with the First Armored Division, Communications Zone in Europe and as commander of various major Quartermaster Corps Base Depots. As commander of the Lorraine Base Section, he was responsible for much of the logistical support of the Sixth Army Group, composed of the Seventh U. S. Army, then part of the 12th Army Group. He also organized the air lifts that supported General Patton's Third Army in its drive across France into Germany. He was then ordered to Paris where he served in the office of the Chief Quartermaster as officer in charge of salvage and reclamation of military materiel.

Following his return to the United States he served briefly as Commanding Officer, Jeffersonville Quartermaster Depot. In July, 1946, he returned to Europe as officer in charge of supply and later as officer in charge of supply and operations for more than half a million displaced persons plus about 125,000 civilian internees.

At the end of March, 1948, he was transferred to Austria and (Continued on page 8)

15,000 Enrolled In Sixth Army ROTC Program

Nearly 15,000 students are enrolled in the Reserve Officer Training Corps units of colleges and universities in the eight western states of the Sixth Army area including California, Arizona, Nevada, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Montana and Utah.

Enrollments in the first and second-year basic courses total 11,195 for the entire area. Those going on to take third and fourth-year advanced courses number 3,683.

University of California at Berkeley has the largest enrollment of any individual school with a total of 1579 of whom 1163 are basic students and 416 advanced. Second largest enrollment is at the University of Washington at Seattle with 746 basic students and 337 advanced for a total of 1,083.

Chief Cautions on Holiday Accidents

During the coming Thanksgiving, Christmas-New Year Holiday season a great many lives will be lost and many disabling injuries will be sustained as the result of accidents on the highways, on the posts, and in the homes.

Commanders should be particularly careful to bring to the attention of all personnel the risk of operating motor vehicles during periods of road congestion, unfavorable weather conditions, and physical unfitness due to exhaustion and drowsiness.

The use of inflammable Christmas decorations, frayed or otherwise defective extension cords, and open fires (fireplaces) have and will continue to contribute to the home accident toll. Fire prevention officials should be ordered to check all such decorations and appliances before use.

It is the desire of the Commanding General that commanders intensify their efforts concerning accident prevention, especially in the field of motor vehicle operation and driver control. The current excessive accident rate can be reduced only through adequate training and thorough supervision.

W. T. SEXTON,
Brigadier General, USA,
Chief of Staff.

Firepower Upgraded

The strength of an Army division has been reduced by approximately 700 men since the outbreak of the Korean conflict. During this same period the firepower of a division was increased some six per cent.

Army Enlistments Up

Army enlistments of personnel from civilian life averaged approximately 5,000 per month between July and December, 1951.

Enlistments rose to approximately 10,000 per month during the period January to July, 1952.

Tank Tech Back

Tank instruction has returned to the curriculum of the Infantry School's Automotive Department at Ft. Benning, Ga. This instruction was discontinued at the outbreak of trouble in Korea.

Ordnance Experts Keep Pace With Latest Methods of War

(This is the first of two articles on major developments in ordnance equipment since World War II.)

With the methods of warfare constantly changing, American ordnance experts have worked steadily since WWII developing more effective equipment for the modern serviceman.

The old brass artillery cartridge cases, for example, have been almost completely replaced by a new steel case. The shortage of brass in WWII forced Army Ordnance to develop the steel case. In the small arms ammunition field, the gilding jacket of the bullet was replaced with a steel-copper material to reduce the demand for copper.

The biggest step in the artillery field was the development of the new atomic artillery gun. Using either atomic or conventional projectiles, this gun can function in any kind of weather, day or night.

A new base plate for mortars was developed to reduce the bouncing and movement of the weapon during firing. Lightweight mortars have been made by using titanium and aluminum, and by redesigning the weapon with simpler parts.

Performance of artillery cannon has been improved by increasing the muzzle energy and rate of fire. Higher quality steel and, in some cases, lengthening the gun tube, have also helped performance.

A new 75mm antiaircraft gun was developed. Called the "Sky-sweeper," it is now in production.

The 57, 75, and 105mm recoilless rifles have been battle tested in Korea. These small arms, called "hip pocket" artillery, give the infantryman much of the power of conventional artillery, while weighing little more than other small arms.

The 2.36-inch bazooka of WWII now has a big brother in Korea—the 3.5-inch super bazooka which packs a wallop deadly to enemy tanks and armor.

A new fully automatic .30-caliber rifle has been tested by the Army. Called the T47, it carries all the stopping and penetration power of the M1 rifle and is about a pound lighter.

For survival in uninhabited regions, ordnance experts have developed the "over and under" survival gun. A combination .410 caliber gauge shotgun and .22 caliber rifle, the gun folds to less than 15 inches, and is included in the Airman's Survival Kit!—(AFPS)

Army T.I.C. Topic

Phrases about the idea of democracy are read and heard so often that many think of them more as slogans than as words to ponder and even live by, so during the Troop Information Conferences of Presidio units next week a careful study will be made of the real meaning of democracy.

"The ABC's of Democracy," the Armed Forces TALK on which the conference discussions will be based, defines the basic principle of democracy as "the belief that all men have certain rights which they are born with and which no one can justly try to take away—that all men must be 'treated right'."

Development of the ideals of democracy will be traced at the conferences from almost the beginning of man's history to the present day. The contributions made in ancient Greece and Rome were kept alive during Middle Ages by Christian philosophers who had faith in the idea of the dignity of man.

The idea of the importance of the ordinary man moved forward in England with the Magna Carta and other charters that made small dents in the idea that kings had a divine right to do as they wished with the people. Out of the English revolution came the English Bill of Rights in 1689 which made it clear that the Parliament had higher authority than the king because it represented the people, and that a government must be founded on the consent of those who are governed.

United States has been the "proving ground" of democracy for 176 years and its belief in human dignity has grown with the nation. This growth and the responsibilities now facing this nation will conclude consideration of the conference topic.

Just as steel needs scrap iron, so does the world need its lowliest workers.

High School Diplomas Needed For Modern Day Job Hunters

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the third of a series of four articles about the opportunities offered by the United States Armed Forces Institute as prepared for the Armed Forces by Bureau of Naval Personnel. Illustrations are by R. Osborn, famous for his character, "Dilbert," during World War II. "Dilbert" was used by the Navy Department to point up safety in naval aviation.)

PART III

Here's just one indication of what a high school education means to enlisted personnel:

Pay Grades	High School Diploma
2	68%
3	56%
4	44%
5	34%
6	30%

Notice that the higher the pay grade the greater the PROPORTION OF educated guys!

There will always be a Long-shot Louie, of course, who will point out that 26% of the top boys did make it without the old high school sticker, and so will he. Most people would feel happier about Long-shot Louie's chances, however, if he wasn't forever contributing to the old-age-and-retirement funds of such characters as Clocker Dawson, "The Horse-Player's Friend," and "Hot-tip Hennessey, the Handicapper with a Heart."

technician who recently went out on thirty.

The chief had always been very definite about diplomas. Against them. He was wont to say that "a diploma ain't worth a patch on a good electrician's pants. If you gotta frame something on the bulkhead send away some box-tops for a Junior G-Man card. But put your time in where it counts: learning your trade. That's what people buy."

Furthermore, the chief proved he was right.

The very day he went down the gang plank for the last time a San Francisco electrical company hurriedly signed him up at $6,000 a year.

And there was no gum-beating about diplomas.

Not then, that is.

It wasn't till the next day that the company gave the application papers a second look and noticed

The high school ticket in your Service record will not automatically get you a rating, of course, or a chance at one. But if a C.O., conning a list of rating candidates, spots a high school ticket and a handful of USAFI certificates in background courses for that rating, it is not hard to picture his reaction, and we don't mean heart-failure.

There are also a number of hold-outs as to the value of a high school diploma in civilian life. Oddly enough they don't seem much impressed by the fact that high school graduates have become so common that one of the largest oil companies will hire only high school grads as service station men, while the Nation's largest utility will have only high school grads to drive its trucks and rig its lines, and the biggest N. Y. department store insists on staffing its elevators with high school alumni.

The hold-outs want to argue about this. "You mean if you can spout Shakespeare you're gonna be a better elevator jockey?"

This type of question may be able to put the country's leading personnel managers on the ropes; on hearing it they may suddenly feel that they have been unfair and—with tears streaming down their faces—leap to phone, typewriter and bull-horn to recall that high school diploma requirement. They may.

But it's not likely.

In fact, things are getting tougher.

There's the experience, for example, of the chief electronics that the Chief had no high school diploma, and the Chief suddenly found himself—as he put it—"The fastest hired and fired $6,000 man in the United States."

Fortunately, the Chief's saga had a happy life-can-be-beautiful ending. He had several months of terminal leave, and hence was still eligible to take the USAFI courses and G. E. D. test. With terrific cramming, under forced draft, the Chief did beat out the bunt to get his diploma and the job.

But these Hollywood endings are all too rare. Too many men put off deciding what they want out of life—and the education they'll need—until a few months before they are to be discharged—when it's too late. In the words of an old cavalry sergeant on education detail: "These poor guys come in here looking like they've been ridden hard and put up wet, but what can we do for 'em by then?"

It's worth noting that some people in the Armed Services had to quit school when they didn't want to.

This can do things to a man.

Sometimes, for example, it causes him to belittle the "book-learning" he couldn't get, and the book-learning offered him now by the Armed Forces Education Program.

"A man can pick up a lot of education outside of these-here-now books," our boy snaps.

Every so often he happens to meet an education officer—(he gets trapped with one in a stalled elevator, say)—and receives quite a shock when he finds out that the education officer agrees with him, and so do the heads of the Armed Services, and so do outstanding civilian educators.

And this is not just a lot of happy breeze-batting. The American Council on Education and USAFI (The United States Armed Forces Institute) have worked out a set of General Educational Development tests (hereafter called G. E. D. tests) which will show just about everything that you have picked up since leaving school, except athlete's foot.

If the education a man has acquired for reading and experience enable him to make a satisfactory G. E. D. score, most states and the District of Columbia will award him a high school diploma. (There is a sergeant somewhere in the Services who holds that if Recruit Eustis Eggleston Pratt ever makes it there will be Victory parades in all 48 states and Hawaii).

If a man fails certain parts of the G. E. D. test he can still probably get his high school diploma by completing certain courses mapped out by his high school principal. His education officer can give him the word on this.

All of this means a lot of hard work, of course.

But it's hard to see how any amount of work will not be worth while so long as the high school diploma continues to delight:

- (1) service schools, and C.O.'s;
- (2) employers;
- (3) colleges;
- (4) the man who owns one.

But there's a young army of guys who never visit the education office at all.

It's not that they have anything against education.

Quite the contrary.

They are all for it. You can quote them.

And some day they are going to have a counseling session with the education officer and map out a study plan.

But not just now. The time isn't ripe. For a number of reasons.

In one gent's particular activity, for example, only correspondence courses are offered. And he can't learn by that means. He knows.

It doesn't make any difference to him that thousands of people—with no more on the ball—have picked up an invaluable education from correspondence courses. Nor is he impressed by the fact that many educators feel that correspondence courses have distinct advantages—that they put a man on his own, for one thing, and so he can set his own pace.

So far as our own boy is concerned there is only one last word on correspondence courses. His. And he has said it. It is "no."

"AND THAT'S THE WAY SUPERMAN routed the entire enemy sojers single handed and without any help at all." George Fiori (left) listens critically to discussion of tactics between brother Steven and PFC

Roy Feikins, a patient at Letterman Army Hospital. The two youngsters, nephews of Nurse Jane Rutherford, were interested visitors on Ward 40 last week.

A Special Visit!

Wonder How Tom Mix Would Stack up With Mighty Mouse?

Steven and George Fiori, robust five and six year old sons of ex-Marine George Fiori of Occidental, Calif., have a pair of extra special pastimes. They love to play a rousing game of solders and marines, and they are avid comic book readers.

Being of the opinion that any red-blooded American boy knowing the same pursuits, and knowing that a great number of these were serving their country, they hatched a plan to aid the spare time enjoyment of their favorite real life hero—the American Serviceman.

Their plan—which entailed a great deal of personal sacrifice—was to donate their vast and assorted treasure of comic books to the sick soldiers at the Army Hospital where their Aunt Jane was a nurse. Not only would they part with their dog-eared and oft-read favorites, but they would solicit contributions from other neighborhood children for the cause.

Their parents, not a little awed by their youngsters' active minds, gave encouragement and consent to the plan. For weeks Steven and George were tireless collectors of not only comic books, but any magazine that might be enjoyed by a "hunderth per cent 'merican soljer."

Finally when the old hall closet was bulging with Mighty Mouse, Superman and Pogo, the boy commandos wrangled a trip to Letterman Army Hospital. There with the help of Aunt Jane Rutherford, nurse on Ward 40, they distributed the fruits of their labor.

Of course the books were well received but, surprising enough, to the youngsters at least, they were even better received. Seems "solders" just naturally like to be visited by a feller who knows a little bit about the business. Specially if he's read a lot of comic books and can talk their language."

Tag That Bag!

In anticipation of extensive travel by military personnel during the coming holiday season, personnel of the Presidio are warned to properly identify their baggage. Col. Calvin L. Whittle, Transportation Officer, advises: "As a protection against loss be sure every piece of your baggage, whether carried or checked, is properly identified with a card or tag showing your name and complete address."

Military, Civilians Given Free Time To Cast Ballots

Every opportunity to vote in the general election next Tuesday, 4 November, will be given all eligible military and civilian personnel of the Presidio.

Eligible military personnel desiring to vote will be given sufficient time to cast their ballots in accordance with provisions of paragraph 9, SR 600-725-1, as changed.

Civilian employees will be excused for voting without charge as leave for a reasonable time, not to exceed two hours, on election day and so far as may be practicable as not to interfere seriously with the operation of the section or unit involved. If a civilian employee requests leave in excess of one day for voting purposes to allow travel to his legal residence, permission will be granted whenever practicable but periods of absence in excess of one day will be charged to annual leave or leave without pay if annual leave is exhausted.

All voters, both military and civilian, who reside on the Presidio main post or Fort Scott and who are registered to vote in person in the California general election, will cast their ballots at Voting Precinct No. 117, at 3035 Baker Street. This precinct is located in the Marina district just outside the Presidio main gate.

United Crusade Drive Nets $21,403.04 In Presidio Drive

With nearly all units making final reports this week, cash contributions and pledges to the Presidio's campaign for the United Crusade amounted to $21,403.04. The campaign for support of San Francisco's social and health organization officially concluded on the post Monday. However, a few units still have reports to submit.

Leading all other units throughout the campaign, Letterman Army Hospital reported the largest percentage of personnel participating with a final figure of 92 per cent. Personnel of the hospital donated $6,408.47 in cash and $1,044 in pledges for a total of $7,452.47.

Post units of the Presidio ranked second with 86 per cent of the personnel participating, while third place was taken by Headquarters Sixth Army with 66 per cent. The 30th Engineers and the AAA units of San Francisco were tied with 55 per cent. California Military District reported 10 per cent participation.

Combined contributions of all units, excepting Letterman Army Hospital, totaled $13,950.57 of which $12,192.72 represented cash donations and $1,757.85 in pledges.

Although this week's totals and percentages are not all final, the few remaining unit reports to be submitted are not expected to make any great changes.

Two Army units located in downtown San Francisco, the District Office and the South Pacific Division of the Corps of Engineers, submitted reports to the Presidio campaign, but their contributions were sent directly to headquarters of the United Crusade and have not been included in the Presidio campaign figures. These engineer units report contributions of $1,761 with 67 per cent of the personnel participating.

While the Presidio campaign officially concluded Monday, the Crusade drive throughout San Francisco will continue until campaign goals have been achieved. This is the first year that seven major organizations have combined their fund raising drives into one single campaign for the purpose of saving time, effort and money on repeated drives, and to enable donors to "give once for all."

A Completed Ballot; A Pint of Blood; Can Mean Tomorrow!

Double proof of their faith in American ideals can be given by military and civilian personnel of the Presidio on Tuesday, 4 November.

First, and most obviously, Tuesday is election day and the time to get out and vote—at long last.

Secondly, Tuesday has been designated as Blood Donor Day for the Presidio. The blood bank will be at Building 562 from 0800 to 1200 and can be held open in the afternoon if sufficient donors are assured.

The Blood Donor Day for the post was changed from Monday to Tuesday this month for the greater convenience of the donors.

Urging as many as possible to give blood, Lt. Col. S. O. Rousseau states that all blood collected in the San Francisco area is being flown directly overseas.

Soldier-Artist Wins Coveted First at DeYoung Showing

A 24-year-old Pasadena, Calif., soldier-artist, Private First Class Paul Sarkaisian, Infantry, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Sarkaisian, 1168 North Holliston, Pasadena, has received the $250 Anna Elisabeth Klumpe Memorial Award.

His oil painting, "Sublime," was judged the best in the figure paintings and portraits category at the 13th annual exhibit of the Society of Western Artists at the M. H. DeYoung Museum in San Francisco. The presentation was made at a preview of the exhibit October 22.

Judges were Abel Warshawsky, Monterey Peninsula artist, chairman; R. H. Hogan, assistant art editor of the San Francisco Examiner; Ninfa Valvo, associate curator of the DeYoung Museum; and Marie Riddlestein and Ray Radliff, former presidents of the Society of Western Artists.

A former student at the Chicago Art Institute, Chouinard Art Institute in Los Angeles and Los Angeles County Art Institute, Sarkaisian entered the Army June 6, 1951. Following his infantry basic training he was assigned to the Food Service Sub-School at Fort Ord. He painted "Sublime" over a period of three weeks during his off-duty time.

Ideas Are Dollars In Suggestion Drive

More than 38,000 suggestions were submitted to the Army during the past year as a result of its employee suggestion program of eliciting ideas resulting in economies and more efficient operation.

Approximately 6,700 of these suggestions were adopted and have resulted in a first year savings estimated at more than $7,000,000 (M).

Nearly $193,000 was paid in rewards for these valuable ideas.

Stock Show Will Exhibit For Armed Forces Tonight

Free passes for service personnel to the Grand National Livestock Exposition, Horse Show and Rodeo, at San Francisco's Cow Palace will be available for tonight's opening performance, which will be dedicated to the Armed Forces. The passes may be obtained at any of the USO clubs and will be distributed on a first-come, first-served basis.

The Grand National is a combination livestock exposition, horse show, rodeo, cutting horse championships and Western arena specialties. Livestock premiums, reaching this year an all-time record high of $96,266, have attracted owners to exhibit 3,229 head of beef and dairy cattle, sheep and swine. Competing in the horse show will be hunters, jumpers, saddle and harness horses, show ponies, Western stock, Palomino, parade and trail horses.

Headlining this year's spectacle will be the Royal Canadian Mounted Police who will present their renowned Musical Ride. The scarlet tunics of the Mounties will mingle with the shirts of top cowboys from the mountains, plains and sagebrush states and the classic riding habits of the horse show entrants.

Free Suit Drawing

Drawing for a $125 tailor-made suit will highlight the party and dance at the National Catholic Community Service club at 70 Oak Street Saturday night. Tickets for the drawing will be given those attending when they enter the club. The party and dance will honor the winner.

Sermons as Needed

The chaplain usually is just another member of the congregation at a weekly religious service in an Army hospital in the Far East.

Soldiers serving with the hospital started their own Sunday evening vesper services, conducting them as well. The chaplain speaks only on request.

Halloween Carnival Promises Safe Haven for Little Spooks

From the opening costume parade to the big raffle at the end of the carnival tonight, Presidio's Halloween Party for the children of the post and sub-posts will have all the traditional fun which makes Halloween such an outstanding event for the youngsters.

Activities will begin with the formation of the costume parade at 1815 hours in front of Stillwell Hall. Children will be divided into five age groups to compete for a total of 30 prizes. In each group six prizes will be given for the most original, the prettiest and the funniest costumes of both boys and girls.

Following the costume parade, a forty-five minute program of typical Halloween entertainment will be given to amuse the children at Harmon Armory.

The carnival will begin at 2000 hours and will continue until 2130 hours. Games of skill for the youngsters will include bean-bag, darts, fishing games and ping pong shoots. Numerous prizes will be given the winners. Strip tickets for five cents each will be used for playing the games with none costing more than five cents.

Silver dollar cakes will be available at a nickel a slice with many slices containing silver dollars. There will also be silver dollar cakes raffled away at the roulette wheel. More silver dollars will be put in some of the balloons decorating the hall and can be claimed by the finders.

Children will be served cider, coca cola and donuts free during the evening and will also be given Halloween novelties.

For the parents, a bingo game will be played from 2000 to 2130 hours. Tickets will be ten cents and winners will be given merchandise prizes.

Drawing of the Halloween Raffle, sponsored to assist in raising funds for the party, will be a climax of the evening. Ticket sale in post units will conclude at noon today, but will resume at the party and continue until time for the drawing.

Raffle ticket holders need not be present to win. Winners will be announced at the party and published later in the Daily Bulletin.

YWCA-USO Has New Location In Downtown Area

Following a year-long search for adequate quarters, a new downtown location has been secured for the YWCA-sponsored USO on the second floor at 966 Market Street. Renovation of the premises will begin immediately with plans including installation of an office, lounge, game room, music room, closets, a small kitchen and restrooms.

Vera Newcum, the club's newly appointed director, is presently located in an office at 988 Market Street. Servicemen are welcome to use this temporary facility until completion of the new quarters. Program schedules of the YWCA-USO's social activities may be obtained by calling PRospect 6-1625.

Early this year the YWCA-USO was required by fire department edict to vacate its clubrooms at 233 Pine Street and since then has been required to operate under makeshift conditions in temporary locations.

THE BOOK CORNER

"THE GIANT," by Edna Ferber. The author has written the story of Texas today: "The staggering bigness—and the pathetic littleness—of a country within a country." Slowly the heroine came to understand that it "cried out for big things to justify its very size; that its men lived, dreamed, built, and bought in terms of superlatives."

"HEAR THE TRAIN BLOW," by Lucius Beebe and Charles Clegg. This magnificent book is a picture story, amplified with text, of the railroads as they have played their part in the history, economy, geography, legend, folklore and consciousness of America.

"CONFESSIONS OF THE NAME," by Gladys Schmitt. The author of "David, the King," writes a novel of yesterday which is too like our own tomorrow. The primitive Christian Church survives the collapse of this dying civilization and rises triumphant out of the ruin in spite of the beasts and the rack and the fire.

"COMPLETE BOOK OF ETIQUETTE," by Amy Vanderbilt. A comprehensive, completely new, and readable book for everyone on all traditional etiquette as it is practiced today, written by a foremost authority on social living.

Sunset Magazine continues to publish inexpensive paperback books—at times the only material available on the subject—on various topics which make for more attractive and comfortable homes and outdoor living rooms. Besides the revised edition of "Cabins and Beach Houses," the Presidio Main Post Library has recently added: "Patio Book," "How to Plan and Build Your Fireplace," "Building Plant Shelters and Garden Work Centers," and "The Portable Garden."

RAIDER DEFENSIVE KINGPINS—A pair of Presidio's roughest defensive linemen are Corporal Al Cooper (left), Headquarters Battery, 459th AAA Gun Battalion, from Akron, Ohio, and Corporal Ed Collins, Headquarters Battery, 728th AAA Gun Battalion, from Nashville, Tennessee. Cooper, a 220-pound starting tackle throughout the season, played three years of high school ball at De Queen, Arkansas, one year at Akron University and is now in his third season on the Army gridiron. His casual attitude leads opponents to take him lightly, but that estimation ends when the ball is snapped. Collins, a 200-pound first string line-backer, handles his grid tasks with the ease of a professional. Ed is a veteran of four years' play at Cohn High School in Nashville and one year at the University of Louisville. His first year of Army ball has been a stellar one. Of the small amount of yardage gained against Presidio on the ground, little of it has been in Collins' area. (Army Photos by Hillmer)

Every man on the Presidio football team will go along with this: "When it comes to a show of hospitality, Chico, California, tops the list." They were terrific from start to finish. When we arrived at the Hotel Oaks, Chico's best hostelry, Friday afternoon, a college representative was on hand to greet us and from there on in, everything went off with clock-work efficiency.

Two nights in the best rooms and six meals each for 42 men cost the college quite a tidy sum, considerably more than would have been our share of the gate receipts, had we received a share.

Although quartered near another football team and a hundred convention-bound bankers, the local gridders showed their appreciation by avoiding the usual "hotel ruckus." A group of ministers couldn't have been more orderly.

The usual "razz-ma-tazz" was saved for the Chico-Lassen High School game, Friday night and the after-game party, Saturday night.

Graduate Manager Mackay G. Martin handled the smooth situation for the college and our own Sfc Virgil Cook, Special Services Athletic Director, did more than enough for our interests.

Bud Hannah, KHSL sports announcer, sought "The Lip" out at the hotel, prior to the game, only to make it clear that he wanted to give us an impartial radio broadcast, a rarity in football, and to bear out his willingness, had me spotting in the booth with him. A radio interview with Bud gave "The Scribe" an opportunity to talk about athletics here at the Presidio and thank the Chico citizens for the more-than-enough cordiality, another rarity for traveling teams, extended us.

Many high school and college coaches were on hand and all remarked about how well-coached this Presidio team is. Gaspar Perricone, backfield mentor, held the reins from the bench, while Bob Ottoson, the line coach, played to fill in the gap left vacant by injuries, transfers and overseas shipments.

Off the Gridiron at Chico: "Bat-tlin'" Bob Catlett, howling back at a poodle-cut. . . Leo "The Lion" Miller, unable to sleep in such luxury and calling for a cot to put his 255 pounds to sleep on. . . Will "Ole Miss" McGee, holding forth as master of ceremonies at a club, after the game, and keeping football players and patrons in stitches for a solid hour. . . Ed "It Takes Two to Tango" Bell, the ex-quarterback (now end), keeping the boys laughing constantly at his antics. . . George "Suspenders" Nakano, making up the second party in Bell's tangle, er—rather—tango. . . Al "Pop" Cooper, showing the younger set a few points in dancing and the finer—uh, I guess you might call it—"arts." . . "Modest" Robert Bava, showering clamoring high school femmes with his autohandle. . . Dick "The Really Modest" Jackstadt, trying to get less attention than a check stub, but getting swarmed after his pic graced the daily paper. . . Charles "Eight-Yards-Per-Carry" Roberts, drawing fans all the way from Sacramento, well—anyway, a fan. . . Robert "Much Hustle" Rhoades, going two better and drawing a fan and a friend for a friend all the way from S.F. . . Jim "Red Smith" Griggs, taking notes for a sports-writer that went "Hollywood." . . Virg "Dad" Cook, telling a barber to tell only two stories so he might leave with a little hair left. . . And the entire "Red Raider" squad adding zest and color to the high school yells at the Friday night

Red Raider Coach to Be on TV Tomorrow

Corporal Gaspar Perricone, Presidio's head football coach, will be in the guest interview spot on Bob Fouts' KRON-TV show tomorrow morning.

Perricone will be on between 11 and 11:15 AM, just prior to the game-of-the-week telecast between Northwestern and Ohio State.

The interview will hinge on Gaspar's alma mater, Northwestern, and also give him an opportunity to talk about athletics here at the Presidio.

high school game, a double show for the fans.

It Sez Here: Rank distinction doesn't count on that football field! Hamilton's team is loaded with brass, mostly jet pilots, but don't let that be a metal—er, rather, mental—barrier to you boys from Raider Camp. That full Colonel (no joke, tha's true) backing up the line on defense, isn't going to spare you "Corporal Backs" and likewise, we hope. They understand that they leave their rank in the locker room, so go get 'em.

Incidentally, our team is predominantly Corporal, with only a smattering of Privates and Sergeants mixed in.

See you at Gopher Field in the Fog Bowl, tomorrow—translation—See you at Fort Scott Field for the Hamilton-Presidio game, Saturday, at 1400 hours.

Roberts Sluggers Hand SLO Boxers 6-3 Defeat

Camp Roberts boxing team scored a clean sweep in six bouts this week against Camp San Luis Obispo, in a nine-bout boxing card in the losers' Sports Arena.

One technical knockout, one split decision and four unanimous decisions were taken by Lucky Seventh leather slingers in their first major boxing match of this season under the management of Sergeant Pat Nappi.

Bob (Boom Boom) Bolden of Camp Roberts TKO'd Charles Dillworth in the second round 147-pound bout.

A new member of the Roberts team, George Yara, won by a split decision over Jimmy Abeyta in a 120-pound tussle.

One of the most thrilling fights of the night pitted former Camp Roberts boxer Jim Kinsey against Sammy LaCross, Camp Roberts' Sixth Army bantamweight champ. Kinsey's shuffling footwork and left jabs puzzled LaCross after the opening bell but the latter's aggressiveness and crowd-pleasing style came through in the end to gain him a unanimous decision.

Len Walker, in his first fight since the All-Army boxing tournament at Fort Monmouth, N. J., early this year, decisioned a game Jerry Saulsman of Camp San Luis Obispo.

In the light heavyweight bout of the night Camp Roberts' Charles Hair received a unanimous decision over Joe Turner.

Wayne Brooke at 199 pounds outpointed 185-pound Ollie Doolittle in the heavyweight bout.

Camp Roberts' Eli Thomas, National Collegiate champion in 1950, from Gonzaga University at Spokane, Wash., couldn't find an opponent.

Westward Ho!

The Midwest, for years considered as the nation's gridiron hotbed, is losing its claim to the South and West Coast. Of the country's 10 leading football teams, eight represent Dixie and the Gold Coast. In the South: Georgia, Georgia Tech, Maryland, and Duke set the pace. Leading coast teams include: California, Southern California, Stanford and UCLA.

California duck hunters have found the welcome mat out on more than 17,000 acres of State-managed public lands during the current waterfowl hunting season, the Department of Fish and Game has announced.

All except 1,275 acres of the total are open to licensed hunters without charge. Blinds are provided on portions of the Merced, Imperial and Grizzly Island waterfowl management areas at a cost of $5 per day.

An estimated 1,500 hunters may be accommodated at one time on the eight major areas. A total of 120 double blinds are available on the three improved areas.

SPORTS

Post Special Services here at the Presidio recently received a letter from the Los Angeles Rams asking for names of football players who may be of professional caliber, and who would like to try out for a spot on the Rams' roster. Interested persons should contact Sfc. Cook at Building 122.

The first intercollegiate football game was played between Rutgers and Princeton on 6 November, 1869. For 69 years after that the two teams met off and on and Rutgers never won a game.

Fabian Rolls Record Score In Hot Scott Bowling League

A bowler hopes that someday he will roll a perfect 300 game. In the Fort Scott bowling league this week, Pfc. Fabian came close to that mark as he shattered the existing league record by 47 pins.

Pfc. Fabian unleashed a torrid 264 line and just to convince the dubious of his pin-tumbling prowess, he followed it with a 183 and 214. Add them up. That's a total of 661 pins, worth a doff of the derby in any amateur circles.

His teammates, the Sure Things, had trouble matching his stellar performance and the final tally showed the quintette dropping two out of three to the MP's. The double win by the MP's moved them within easy striking distance of third place. One poor night of bowling by the Sure Things and the MP's could easily move into third.

The fight for first place in the league standings also tightened this week. Led by Sgt. Jennings with a 225 game, the T-5's squared off with the Alibis and took two out of three contests. In fifth place, the

STANDINGS
	Won	Lost
Alibis	16	5
T-5's	14	7
Sure Things	12	9
MP's	11	10
8-Balls	10	11
Bushwackers	10	11
Headquarters Company	6	15
Ball Bearings	5	16

8-Balls and Bushwackers with a 10-11 won-lost record are still in the running and at the bottom of the league, the Headquarters five won one line from the Bushwackers to move ahead of the Ball Bearings. The Ball Bearings' lost all three lines to the 8-Balls this week.

Games this week: Sure Things mix it up with the T-5's, MP's take on the B-Balls, Headquarters Company meet the league-leading Alibis, and the Bushwackers face the Ball Bearings.

All but one record fell by the wayside this week. The records as they now stand are as follows:

Those Winning Ways!

Raiders Add to Win Skein; Down Chico College, 14-6

Presidio's dwindling football ranks kept up their winning ways by defeating the Chico State College Wildcats, 14-6, at Chico, last Saturday night.

A trio of hard-hitting backs, Nick Kirby, fullback, Dallas Lamb, left halfback and George Nakano, right half, ripping off from three to 10 yards per carry behind an unusually fiery forward wall, and a brilliant 65 yard punt return by Kenneth Gordon, Raider safety man, all served to break the resistance of the tough, but outmanned varsity staters.

The "Big Red" machine dominated the first period of football, turning the opening kick-off into a 60 yard TD march that saw Lamb carry over from the two yard line. Dick Jackstadt, smooth Raider quarterback, kicked the conversion.

Chico managed to get in six offensive plays in the first stanza, but was unable to penetrate the local's airtight 224 pound defensive wall.

Throughout the second and third periods Presidio moved the ball within scoring distance several times, but the Wildcats tightened down and guarded the pay stripe like the Holy Grail.

A see-saw battle was enlivened in the third quarter when Gordon, standing on the 35, gathered in a Chico punt and aided by some beautiful down-field blocking, picked his way through to score standing up. Jackstadt again added the conversion.

Chico opened the fourth period with a passing attack that netted them 57 yards and a score, but failed to make the extra-point.

Kirby, a veteran of high school ball, aside from his three years with the Raiders, looked like a potential college great in his line plunging, and at various times rammed the staters so hard the crowd moaned and the impact was heard in the sound booth and over the radio. Nick, a 185-pounder from Newton, Mississippi and a possible future California Bear, racked up 88 yards in 10 carries and contributed 7 of Presidio's 21 first downs.

Chico racked up eight first downs and gained a creditable 194 yards (net combined) to 263 for the locals.

Some 1000 fans watched what must have been the cleanest game they had witnessed in a long time. Presidio reduced their previously high penalty margin down to three for 45 yards as compared to three 5-yarders for Chico.

Presidio entered the contest minus five starting gridman. Leonard Bates, offensive left end, Leonard Hoaglund, offensive left tackle, and Jim Griggs, defensive fullback, were sidelined due to injuries received in the previous game; Gerold Peterson, offensive right end, had departed for physical training school in the East and Francis Henry, defensive guard, was shipped overseas.

Frank Karls, offensive right tackle, played his last for the Raiders against Chico and will be heading for EUCOM soon.

Two and possibly three more starters will be shipping out shortly after the Hamilton game tomorrow.

The score:
PRESIDIO 7 0 7 0-14
CHICO 0 0 0 0-6
Touchdowns—Lamb and Gordon.
Conversions—Jackstadt (2).

Last Second Aerial From Price to Ward Cheats Army of Win

Columbia's Mitch Price passed his team into a last second 14-14 tie with Army, last weekend, in a game witnessed by General Dwight D. Eisenhower and 31,000 fans.

Army appeared to have the game clinched until the very end when John Casella recovered Pete Vann's fumble on the Army 32.

Price threw to Al Ward to put the ball on the 14 and then, on fourth down, with Columbia no closer to the goal, he again passed to Ward in the end zone for the touchdown.

The Cadets play host to Virginia Military Institute at West Point this Saturday.

WHEELCHAIR BASKETBALL is by far the hardest and most unique accomplishment a paraplegic can attain. The "Flying Wheels," National Wheelchair Champions in 1948 and '50 and Champs of the Confederate States of America in 1951, from Long Beach, California, downed San Francisco's "T & J Scooters," 42-19, at the Letterman Gym, last Friday night. The "Scooters," winners of the 1951 Oakland A-1 Recreation League, were not favored to swipe the crown from the "Wheels," but did give them a "wheel for their money." Players are: Ray Mitchell, center (13); Lee Barr, guard (11); Larry Eakes, guard (16), and Fritz Krouth, forward and player-coach (10). Others are unidentified. (Letterman Army Hospital Photo) right half, who held a starting berth with Rice Institute as a sophomore and Don Dumez, 6'2" quarterback who can see over his line and rifle bullet passes.

Presidio's backfield, although not loaded with former college

Hamilton's five win, two loss, record is riddled with last minute come-from-behind. TD passes as was the case in their 28-26 win over the Elmendorf Rockets, last Saturday, in a nationwide telecast.

Presidio lost their first two games to Alameda, 12-6, and Treasure Island, 27-19, then tied the Cal Ramblers 6-6, and since then, although the scores may not show it, have clawed their way with vengeance through Moffett Field, 12-7, Camp Stoneman, 13-0 and Chico State College, 14-6. All of this was done by a good hard-hitting ground game.

Who's favored? It's a toss-up!

In 1927, Hillyard was leading Keenash-A by a 29-10 score in the National AAU finals at Kansas City and with 16½ minutes left decided to put the ball in the frigid air. For more than a quarter of an hour the Hillyard cagers played potsy with the ball. With 10 minutes left to play the first spectators filed out of the auditorium. By the time the game was over only a handful remained in the stands—and they were asleep.

greats and All-Americans, is a hard-hitting unit, just now making their bid for laurels, not stale like many of the old hands, but spirited and eager. Nick Kirby and Dallas Lamb won't slow down for anything in their path and if the line gives as much assistance as it has in the past, the backfield will move.

Hamilton's coaching staff numbers seven, one for every three ofensive and defensive starters.

Head coach is Robert Whitlow, a mentor with four years' experience coaching the West Point line. His 1946 lines paved the way for Blanchard and Davis.

Another is Ernie Nevers, an immortal great at Stanford in 1923, '24 and '25, considered the greatest fullback in West Coast history. Ernie serves as advisory coach.

Jesse Bounds, guards and tackles; John O'Connor, a playing end coach; John Colbrunn, centers and linebackers; Fred Kalilimoku, physical conditioning expert, and Jack Hayes Jr., a full Colonel and playing backfield coach, all have enviable records both as players and coaches.

On the other hand the ground defense, molded by Gaspar Perrience and Bob Ottosen, is capable of stopping anything Hamilton has in the running department. A difference, if any, may be in the aerial department.

Pugilist Plans!

Weight Battle On As Army Gives Jockey Expensive Appetites

Camp Chaffee, Ark.—An extra pound on a horse jockey is an extra worry. Pvt. Robert L. Peabody of Galesburg, Ill., has added 13 new worries since donning an Army uniform.

Pvt. Peabody, who rode 100 winners in the 1950-1951 turf season, blames fresh air, physical training, and good food for his weight problem. The scales show his weight at 120 pounds—quite a load for any race horse.

"My appetite is much greater than before," Pvt. Peabody explains, "and there aren't any steam cabinets." Overweight has ruined many a jockey's career. This five-foot three-inch basic trainee with the Fifth Armored Division dislikes good food, too much of it, at least. (AFPS)

Cleveland Gains Three For '53 From Service

Next season, the Cleveland Indians will be carrying more players on their roster than any other American League opponent.

Although rosters are limited to 25 players, a team is allowed additional players approved by Commissioner Ford Frick as being recently discharged from the Armed Forces.

The Tribe will have three players eligible under this National Service classification: Al Aber, recently discharged from the Army and Dick Weik and Jim Lemon, who will be due for separation next spring.

"Twenty-eight men will give the Tribe more flexibility next year," states General Manager Hank Greenberg. The main advantage is in having more pinch-hitters and pinch-runners.

Taking pre-game standings and statistics into consideration, Hamilton may be favored, but should the Red Raiders from Presidioland defeat the "fly-boys," it could not rightfully be termed an upset.

The Raiders started slow, but have been improving with each game and have yet to reach their peak. This may be the climax!

Presidio tied the California Ramblers, 6-6, in their third game. Hamilton lost to that club, 18-33.

Many would like to say, "It wasn't the same Cal Rambler team." A check by The Star-Presidian sports section has revealed the lineups to be almost identical. The same backs that were held to minor gains in the Presidio game starred at Hamilton.

Both teams' offensive and defensive forward walls weigh about the same, between 205 to 220 pounds and sport equal ability.

Hamilton's backfield is star-studded, with such names as Bryon Gillory, left half, Texas University (4 years) and an All-American Honorable Mention; Maurice Schnell, a 200 pound fullback with two years as a starter for Iowa State; Sammy Burke,

Army Leases Plants To Private Firms; Saves Tax Dollars

The Army Chemical Corps is saving the taxpayer more than $2,700,000 a year by leasing stand-by munitions plants to private firms.

Chemical Corps factories used during World War II are being kept ready for full-scale production should it become necessary. Normally, this requires hiring maintenance crews whose cost runs into millions of dollars.

But the Army Chemical Corps is getting free maintenance plus a substantial profit by renting the plants to firms producing dyes, insecticides and other allied chemical products.

More than $71,300,000 worth of Chemical Corps munitions plants were leased to commercial firms during fiscal 1951 for a total rental of $1,263,000.

To "mothball" these plants would have cost the taxpayers an estimated $1,500,000.

Hospital Lose Bands; Combo's Will Amuse

Hospital bands are being eliminated from the active list of Army units by the Department of the Army in the interest of fuller utilization of Army strength. All activities having bands are requested to furnish bands to hospitals when requested, if possible, for ceremonies, concerts and parades. Hospitals will still have band instruments for personnel and patients to provide entertainment and for social functions and ward visits.

Top Legion Award To Signal Depot

Sacramento, Calif.—The Department of California American Legion recently presented its National Award for helping handicapped veterans to the U. S. Army Sacramento Signal Depot. This is the first time the Legion's highest award has ever been given to a government agency.

Legion officials said the Signal Depot's success in its continuing rehabilitation program, and the outstanding aid it has rendered in hiring the handicapped, is an example for other agencies of the government and industry.

Set Off-Post Speed Limits For Sixth Army Vehicles

Maximum off-post speed limits for military vehicles operating in the Sixth Army Area have been prescribed by Headquarters Sixth Army to assist in the reduction of off-post offenses and accidents. Limits are established for both single and convoy operations.

Maximum speeds allowed in single operations are as follows: Cargo carrying vehicles, military and civilian type, 45 mph; busses, 50 mph; commercial type passenger cars, state speed limit—not to exceed 55 mph; military type passenger car, 40 mph; combat vehicles and special purpose equipment, maximum rated speed as shown on caution plate mounted in vehicle. The lead vehicle in convoy movements, regardless of type of vehicle, will not exceed 35 mph.

Road conditions, signs indicating slower speeds, vehicle conditions, types of load, visibility, weather and traffic conditions, must also be considered by all drivers in determining safety.

US Army M-1 Rifle Selected by NATO For Standard Use

Paris—The U. S. Army's .30-caliber Garand rifle has been chosen the standard infantry weapon for North Atlantic Treaty Organization nations after 12 months of Anglo-American competition.

The British .28-caliber, championed by Prime Minister Winston S. Churchill of England, was considered the equal of the M-1 as an automatic weapon, but its "stopping power" was not as great.

NATO also announced Great Britain's 50-ton Centurion tank, France's 81-mm. mortar, and the U. S. 155-mm. howitzer have been accepted as standard weapons. Korea-tested American planes, British Venoms and Swifts, and French Mystere IV aircraft will staff the alliance's air arm.

Top production priority in 1953 will be given basic and standardized weapons with sufficient quantity being made in each category to equip all participating allies.

designated officer in charge of receipt, storage and distribution of all relief supplies sent to Austria prior to and during the early stages of Marshall plan aid to that country. Simultaneously he was in command of all Army service troops for the United States Forces in Austria. He returned to the United States in January, 1950, and was assigned to the Presidio of San Francisco as director of services and supply for the Presidio, a post he has held until now.

Born in Warsaw, Poland, Sgt. Suttas emigrated to Canada with his parents while a small child. He left Canada in March, 1920, and on his second day in the United States enlisted in the Army at Fort George Wright near Spokane, Washington.

He served with the Field Artillery at Camp Grant and Fort Sheridan, Ill.; as a guard at the U. S. Disciplinary Barracks at Fort Leavenworth, Kans.; with the 35th Infantry Regiment in Hawaii, and with the Corps of Engineers at Fort Leavenworth.

He also served briefly at Carlisle Barracks, Pa., prior to reporting for duty at the Presidio of San Francisco in the summer of 1951.

Taking part in the parade will be troops of Headquarters Company, Sixth Army; Station Complement, Presidio of San Francisco; 505th Military Police Battalion; 30th Base Topographic Engineer Battalion; the Presidio WAC Detachment, and the Sixth Army Band.

Labor Officer Named

Lt. Colonel Leo V. Merle, Jr., has been assigned as Labor Relations Officer of Headquarters Sixth Army to perform liaison duties with labor organizations. His duties will include informing the Army Commander on labor relations generally throughout the command and of situations in industry which might be of interest to the command. He will also confer with labor representatives on matters in dispute in order to effect conciliation.

Rolling Dentists Tour Combat Zone In Decay Search

The Seventh Infantry Division in Korea has a novel way of "putting the bite" on the enemy.

It has a mobile dental clinic which rolls right up to the battle-front to repair soldiers' teeth on the spot.

If a soldier needs emergency care, he is taken to a dental van where he gets quick treatment in a state-side dentist's chair.

Besides the van for treating dental patients, the division has another for making false teeth and 100 dentures a month are turned out.

When the division is in a rear area and its units are scattered, the dental vans tour the units to extract decayed teeth and do preventive work on teeth which otherwise might disable soldiers later.

The division has 15 dental officers and 20 enlisted technicians.

Quotable Quip

The Russians recently claimed that they had invented baseball, the American national sport. They probably also invented the slogan, "Kill the umpire!"

Ranking Army Nurse!

Chief of Army Nurse Corps Inspects Sixth Army Hospitals

Col. Ruby F. Bryant, Chief of the Army Nurse Corps, Washington, D. C., will be in the Sixth Army area from November 3 through November 17 on an inspection tour of Army hospitals.

Formerly Chief Nurse, Headquarters Sixth Army, Presidio of San Francisco, she recently returned from a world-wide inspection tour of nursing activities.

Colonel Bryant believes that one of the major problems confronting the Army Nurse Corps at this time is the procurement of sufficient nurses to staff the many Army hospitals opening and expanding throughout the United States and overseas.

Her Sixth Army tour will include: Ft. MacArthur, Nov. 3; Camp Irwin, Nov. 4-6; Camp Cooke, Nov. 7; Camp San Luis Obispo, Nov. 8; Presidio of San Francisco, Nov. 10-11; Camp Stoneman, Nov. 12; Ft. Ord, Nov. 13; Letterman Army Hospital, San Francisco, Nov. 14; Ft. Lawton, Wash., Nov. 16; and Madigan Army Hospital, Tacoma, Wash., Nov. 17.

Colonel Bryant entered the Army Nurse Corps in 1934 and is the only woman holding the rank of colonel in the Corps at this time. She is a graduate of the Army School of Nursing, Army Medical Center, Washington, D. C., and the Advanced Medical Department Officers' Course, Medical Field Service School, Fort Sam Houston, Tex.

She has served in the Philippine Islands and Corregidor, and was one of the seven nurses who assisted in setting up and equipping the Malinta Tunnel Hospital, which later played such an important role during the siege of Corregidor.

During World War II, Colonel Bryant was Director of Nurses for the Fourth Service Command in Atlanta, Ga. After returning to the Philippines in 1945 as Director of Nurses for the Philippines-Ryukyus Command, she went to Tokyo in January 1947 as Director of Nurses for the Far East Command. Upon her return to the United States, she was assigned to Headquarters Sixth Army until July, 1951, when she left to take over her present assignment.

Naval Officers Given 6-Day Infantry Basic; All Survive

To gain a greater understanding of the problems and capabilities of the fighting Infantry, 68 Navy officers from the Naval School at Port Hueneme, Calif., completed a six-day training course in basic infantry weapons and tactics at Camp Roberts, Calif., this week.

The officers, all from the U. S. Navy Corps of Engineers, were taught alongside basic training companies at Camp Roberts. Their instruction was handled by the 7th Armored Division Faculty, the new Army teaching system.

Among the Naval men was Ensign Soon Kun Kim of the South Korean Navy. His status was much the same as a member of the civil engineer corps.

This group of ensigns, lieutenants junior grade and lieutenants was not the first to visit the Army training camp. Sixteen took similar training at Camp Roberts last May.

New Purification Unit Proves Practical Plant

The Army's new truck-mounted water purification unit treats, filters, purifies and distributes 2,400 gallons of water an hour.

Polluted water pumped into the unit is chemically and physically treated in approximately 20 minutes.

The unit can be put into operation by three men in less than 90 minutes after arrival at a selected site. Once installed, the unit can be operated by one man.

The mobile, electrical water purification unit is equipped with its own power source and can be operated in total blackout. The only audible noise is from the engine driving the generator.

A Tree Saved or Salvaged Is Dollars In Taxpayer's Pocket

The Army is "picking money off its trees" for the American taxpayer.

Army officials saved the taxpayer more than $4,000,000 during the past four years by selling timber and pulpwood and salvaging lumber. The wood came from 867,218 acres in the southeastern part of the United States.

Enough lumber has been cut from Army reservations in the area during the past four years to build 16,000 five-room frame houses—a total of 175,572,337 board feet. In addition, 120,000 cords of pulpwood came out of the Army's forests.

Salvaged lumber was sold from areas cleared for troop-training purposes or killed by fires and insects.

Within eight years, Third Army forest products to be cut are expected to yield nearly $5,000,000 a year for the U. S. Treasury.

Savings to the taxpayers should reach $8,000,000 by 1980.

To get this return on its forests, the Army plans to spend about $400,000 a year for labor, supplies, administration of its forestry program and protection against costly fire.

Armistice Day!

Cenotaph Ceremonies Honor Fallen Warriors of Freedom

Services honoring those who gave their lives in present and past conflicts will be held at Cenotaph, the national cemetery located in the Presidio, beginning at 1000 November 11, Armistice day.

The program, sponsored by the Zane Irwin Post No. 93, American Legion, San Francisco, will include a Military Mass of Requiem to be offered at 1030. In charge of arrangements is Rev. James Quirk, San Francisco Chancery office.

Chaplain E. F. Ford, USN, Oak Knoll hospital, will be celebrant of the Mass assisted by Chaplain Charles Ross, Presidio, as deacon, and Rev. James Berry, retired Army chaplain, sub-deacon. Music for the Mass will be sung by the students from Notre Dame's Girls' High School, under the direction of Rev. Joseph Martinelli. They will be accompanied at the organ by Brother Columban, F.S.C.

The sermon will be delivered by Rev. Edward Moss, retired Army chaplain, immediately preceding the firing ceremony and playing of taps.

Units from the Presidio taking part include a 12-man firing squad, a bugler, flag honor guard and the Sixth Army band who will play a concert from 1000 until 1030.

Immediately following the services, members of the Legion will retire to the center mound in the cemetery to place a wreath on the grave of The Unknown Soldier.

The entire program, planned for out-of-doors, will be moved to the Chapel in case of rain.

Busy Bands' Itinerary

The Sixth Army band will present two invitational concerts at Portola Junior High school, San Francisco, on 18 November. Students will assemble in the auditorium in two groups, 8:15 and 10:40 a.m.

On Armistice day, 11 November, the band will participate in the annual memorial exercises to be held at the Presidio cemetery beginning at 10:15 a.m.

The Sixth Army Pipe band is currently on tour in the Southern California area and will be present with the U.S. Army exhibit at the Arizona State fair, Phoenix, November 5 through 18, before returning to the Presidio.

MSTS Sets New Rate

Service personnel who wish to ship their private automobiles to oversea stations on a "space available" basis on Military Sea Transport Service vessels will now be charged according to the weight of their car. Typical charges for shipping, computed on a "measurement ton" basis for the average vehicle, are as follows: East Coast ports to Europe, $266.25; East Coast to Japan, $465; California ports to Alaska, $210, and California to Japan, $294.50. In addition, there is a port handling charge of about $29 per auto.

Enlisted Promotions

A slight increase in the number of enlisted promotions to be given in the Sixth Army area during the month of November was announced today.

November allocations amount to 165 as compared to 158 for the month of October.

Breakdown includes Master Sergeant, nine; Sergeant First Class, 23; Sergeant, 73; Corporal, 40; Private First Class, 20.

It was noted that in October only 15 Sergeant ratings were given as compared to 73 this month, and that last month's quota of Private First Class was 103 as compared to 20 for this month.

Neither the wool shirt nor the cotton khaki, poplin or broadcloth shirt will be worn as an outer garment.

Specific authority is delegated to commanding officers to issue orders pertaining to travel of guards as required for return of absentees.

Army to Release 750,000; Ten Million to See Service

Washington—Approximately 750,000 soldiers or about one-half of the Army built up since the outbreak of Korean hostilities, will be separated from active duty this fiscal year.

In an address before the mobilization conference of the Jewish Welfare Board recently, Secretary of the Army Frank Pace Jr., also said some 10,000,000 youth may experience military duty in the foreseeable future.

"Considering their influence on their immediate families and friends," Secretary Pace said, "probably upwards of 30,000,000 Americans will be affected directly or indirectly by their military service."

"New replacements must be trained to go immediately into battle, if need be, and this is no simple process. It imposes terrific burdens on our training system, complicates the other difficult jobs the Army is doing, and is very costly in time and money."

"The record of our troops in Korea and elsewhere attests to the soundness of our training. There is a two-fold reason for giving our soldiers this tough, realistic training: first, to help them do a tough job in combat and second, to increase their chances of staying alive."

Secretary Pace said the American soldier is better cared for, in or out of battle, than any other fighting man in the world. In Korea, he said, fatalities among wounded soldiers is about one-half of the rate of WWII. About 98 of every 100 wounded men survive and 85 of them are restored to duty.

Besides improved medical facilities, Mr. Pace stated, body armor has further reduced the number of men who die of wounds. Experiments in Korea indicate the vest is more than worth the eight extra pounds of weight a soldier must carry. As one infantryman put it, "I'd rather wipe sweat than blood."

Mr. Pace spoke of the programs in the Army to help a soldier's general well-being. He mentioned the Army's extensive education program in which 180,000 men and women enroll in courses from grade school through college; the information program to provide soldiers with facts necessary to an understanding of their responsibilities, and the vast religious program which is a vital factor in building morale. PART IV

Almost every outfit also has its Free Soul who apparently feels that either education is not here to stay—or he isn't.

For the end of every day finds him bee-lining for the nearest available entertainment as though his doctor had just given him 12 hours to live.

He says he can't stick around and study in a place where he has been regimented and ordered about during the day. He must relax and restore his spirit in his off-duty hours.

Old Frederick J. Free-Soul, of course, is faced by the decision we all have to make: whether to spend our lives ordering or being ordered.

There's another character known to the trade as Weeping Willie.

As his name indicates, Willie is a sad character. He is sad because he cannot start the life studies which will have him coming down the home stretch with Einstein. He cannot start his life studies because, as he explains: "I don't know where I'll be six months from now."

Gone With the Wind while he tangles with one course.

This maestro of the study hour seems to need some sort of personal gremlin to (1) do his studying for him, or (2) to hold a gun at his head until he does.

But, obviously it would be simpler if he just made up his mind to study, and did.

If this were a real book on education—and a good one—we would point out at this place that this making up of the mind is the key to all this education business, and urge you to make up your mind. For education, of course.

But we just can't bring ourselves to do this. Too proud.

We figured we did our duty when we pointed out in the be-

This goes over big before a girl and a fireplace, and even has Willie himself admiring. With everybody feeling sad about Willie's loss, and the world's, a lot of time can be made. The only flaw, of course, is that there is no truth in it.

Because with the exception of the Northwest Mounted no outfit does a better job of following a man than the Armed Forces Education Program—IF THAT'S WHAT HE WANTS. Maybe he begins with a class and finished up with a correspondence course. Or vice versa. But the point is that the education—and a good one—is there if he wants it.

Another well-known character is the guy who never completes a course because he can't find the right place to study.

Or, at any rate, there's his story. Other people in his outfit manage to get through three courses, a room-mate's address book and ginning that

(1) Nobody but a joe with a very real education can hope to hold down the top officer and enlisted jobs in today's streamlined Armed Services; and

(2) You can say that again for top civilian spots.

And we figured that you did your duty when you read it.

And if you're the type who has to have a horse kick him in the chin to get a hint, then no book is going to help much, anyway.

In conclusion we want to point out that according to "highest authority"—if you can take education courses you won't have to take annual examinations for the hollow head, as the letter below advises.

Topic

Many of the countries on the side of the free world in the global cold war and in the Korean conflict will be listed and discussed at the Troop Information Conferences of the Presidio next week. Some of the countries to be discussed have not taken a firm stand on either side of the struggle, but all are non-Soviet.

Prior to discussing these countries, the conferences will consider the ties that bind the peoples of the free world as they face the threat of Communist aggression. The most undeniable element working for unity is the desire for survival, built on a danger obvious to all, but plainer and closer to some nations than to others.

Nations to be briefly discussed will include those of the British Commonwealth, European Continent, Latin America and the East. Many of them already are firmly allied under the North Atlantic Treaty, the Rio Pact, the Pacific Pacts, and other collective defense arrangements. Others are linked to the United States through economic aid under the Mutual Security Program, Point Four and other assistance.

The importance of learning as much as possible about these nations and the men who will fight to defend them is summarized in "The Free World's Allies," the Armed Forces TALK on which the discussions will be based, as follows: "It is plain that in a union the mutual trust that arises from a full understanding of each of the partners is its greatest strength."

New Contract Info

The Department of Defense has reported that contracts have been placed totaling $9,500,000,000 in July and August for major equipment and supplies, and the construction and expansion of military production. Contracts included $8,300,000,000 for "hard goods" such as tanks, airplanes, ships, ammunition, and electronic equipment. Clothing, food, and petroleum products totaled $800,000,000 and construction, $400,000,000.

Fast Service Packet

Air parcel post packages mailed rush may be sent by fast surface overseas during the Christmas vessels instead of air transports to avoid holding them in backlog. Under present plans, all air letter mail will be air transported. Air parcel post will be forwarded by air to the maximum extent practicable depending upon military requirements. It is expected that all parcel post, air or regular, mailed by November 15, will be delivered on or before Christmas.

Set Airlines Plan

A plan is being worked out for speedy mobilization of the nation's airlines in a national emergency. The fleet is to be composed of 297 long-range, four-engine civil aircraft, subject to duty on 48 hours' notice. The fleet would be operated by the commercial airlines under contract to the Air Force.

age it is advisable to save wear and tear on the two-pound sounding hammers generally used in taping for the hollow head.

2. During this emergency, therefore, all personnel signed up for education courses will be deemed free from the hollow head.

3. In fact, you can officially list them as SMART COOKIES.

Got Any Old Stamps?

Stamp Clubs at military hospitals are running short of stamps with which to work.

One of the most popular of all recreational activities for patients, the clubs depend upon stamp contributions from the public in order to keep going.

Generous donations in the past have been very helpful, but that supply has been used up. More stamps are needed.

Donations of stamps should be mailed to Milton Eisner, Entertainment and Instruction Division, San Francisco Red Cross, 1625 Van Ness Avenue.

Use of Tourniquet May Soon Change In Armed Forces

Washington—The military use of the tourniquet may undergo a revolutionary change, according to a recent report prepared by the National Research Council.

Accepted by the Armed Forces Medical Policy Council, the report's recommendations represent a complete about-face from tourniquet procedures used in World War II. At that time it was the practice of the medics to release a tourniquet for five minutes ever half hour.

This method, according to the report, is "unwise as well as unnecessary." Reasoning that the patient has probably lost large amounts of blood already, it is illogical to loosen the tourniquet so that he might lose more blood.

"Experience has shown," the report states, "that a properly applied tourniquet may be allowed to remain undisturbed even for three or four hours with relatively little risk."

This new concept of the tourniquet is currently being written into Service training manuals.

Engineers Honor M-Sgt. Creakman On Retirement

A unique 20-year military career embracing service on four continents, including 15 years in the tropics, is that of Master Sergeant Fred L. Creakman who was recently honored at a retirement parade by the 30th Engineers at Fort Winfield Scott.

M/Sgt. Creakman, Scotville, Michigan, is now assigned to the first Stateside duty of his career which began in 1917. He was sent overseas soon after entering the service and fought with a Field Artillery unit in France during World War I. After the war he took a job as radio service manager in Long Island, New York.

In 1931 he reenlisted in the Army and probably served longer in the Caribbean than any other GI. As a result of his ability and skills in combat engineering, he was frequently "loaned" from one organization to another, often on secret orders from Washington.

While serving with a Combat Engineer unit in Panama, he was one of the first large group to cross the Isthmus. Other experiences included engineering in many of the South American Republics and training Infantry in jungle tactics.

When World War II broke out, M/Sgt. Creakman stopped in the States long enough for one maneuver and then headed for Europe. For the second time in his life, he fought in France, this time with the 660th Combat Engineers, 35th Division. His history includes Normandy, Bastogne, the Elbe River, a silver star for gallantry in action in Germany, the American Defense Medal, and the World War II Victory Medal.

In 1946 Sgt. Creakman was back in Central America in the Republic of Panama. Here he helped organize the Inter-American Geodetic Survey, now called the U. S. Coast & Geodetic Survey.

Following his return to the United States in 1949, he was assigned to the 30th Engineers at Fort Winfield Scott. Since then, he has travelled with the surveyors to Alaska and Southern California, charting vast land areas for Army Map Service and the U. S. Coast and Geodetic Survey.

He was given a Longine pocket watch as a retirement gift by the men of his company—the 537th Engineer Base Survey Company. He will remain with the survey company as he was placed on 24 months' active duty in his retired status.

SMALL FRY PARADE in their "out of this world" costumes during the Post Halloween Party held at Harmon Armory last week. More than 1,500 attended the gala event that featured costume prizes, carnival booths, goodies galore and a gigantic raffle. The annual party served to entertain the youngsters and keep them otherwise occupied on the night for traditional pranks. (Army Photo by Cox.)

Fun Replaces Pranks!

Post Halloween Party Hosts More Than 1500 Small Fry

More than 1,500 children and adults from the post and sub-posts participated in the gala Halloween party held at Harmon Armory 31 October. "It was even larger than we anticipated, and the most successful Halloween Party ever held on the post," said Major Ella A. Wilton, chairman of the party committee.

Prize winners in the ticket raffle event were: Saul Goldstein, civilian employed at the Central Dental Laboratory, the 21-inch Packard-Bell television set; Cpl. Elmer Flatt, 549th Engineer Base Survey company, Fort Scott, the Trans-Oceanic radio; Capt. G. W. Rice, Sixth Army Secretary General Staff, the boy's bicycle, and Ben Levy, 1026 Mission Street, the girl's bicycle. Prizes not claimed at the time of the drawing were taken to the Presidio Service club where they will be held for the winners. Approximately 1,600 tickets had been issued during the sale campaign.

The festivities began with a parade by at least 500 children in colorful costumes depicting the traditional "ghosts n' goblins." A committee of six judges headed by Mrs. Arthur Kirchoff awarded prizes to the most outstanding moppets. Other judges included Mrs. Thomas Barrick, Mrs. James F. Lawrence, Mrs. Ray W. Ballado, Mrs. Daniel R. Moss, and Mrs. Edwin L. Johnson. Major Clint H. Putnam, Assistant S-4, was the parade marshal, assisted in the parade formation by WACS from Letterman Army hospital and the 505th Military Police Battalion. Music was furnished by the Sixth Army band.

The indoor program was highlighted by Joseph McKeever, San Francisco magician, who presented mystical feats accompanied at the piano by Vera Frazier. Emcee was Capt. Duane W. Bagley, Post Special Services.

Bingo and other-varied games wound up the evening's activities, with Warrant Officer James H. Richards, assisted by WACS from Letterman in charge of the Bingo, and WACS from Headquarters Company, the Presidio and enlisted men Sixth Army in charge of the game booths. The ticket booths were manned by WACS from the Letterman detachment.

Mrs. Webster Mills was in charge of the refreshment stand, assisted by Mrs. Robert L. McCrea, Mrs. Gerald W. Simmons and Mrs. M. C. Christine. In charge of publicity for the event was Major Frank L. Mann, Post I&E Officer. The affair was sponsored by the Youth Activities Council.

"No reports of damage or the usual Halloween pranks were received by us," said Major Wilton. "In view of this we believe the party more than served its purpose."

Holiday Travel Will Call for Early Planning

Military personnel who plan to travel to distant points over the coming holiday season have been urged to make their reservations immediately.

Officials at the Post Transportation office have indicated that already space is becoming scarce on some modes of transport.

It was explained that cancellations may always be made in case the space is not needed, and air, rail and bus companies will hold the reservations to within five days of departure. Round-trip reservations should be made where needed since returning travel will be as heavy as that going.

The Post Transportation office, located in Building 86 on the main post is open daily from 0745 until 1630 and on Saturdays from 0745 until 1200.

Atomic Basics Taught

A course in atomic warfare is now being taught students at Fort Benning's Infantry School. The School's combat development section compiles new developments, tactics and techniques while the course of study is prepared from plans outlined by the Army Field Forces and the Department of the Army.

Blood Donors Give Bank 119-Pint Landslide

A total of 119 pints of blood were received on the post 4 November during Blood Donor day, which is now held the first Tuesday of each month. Hours are from 0800 until noon in Building 562, and both military and civilian personnel have been encouraged to participate.

"It was gratifying to see so many turn out," Lt. Col. Samuel O. Rousseau said today, "we noted a higher percentage of civilians who donated this month than ever before."

Since the program was inaugurated in October 1951, more than 7,000 pints of blood have been received here to be dispersed by direct flight to the fighting front in Korea.

Plans are being made for a mobile unit to cover the "on-sight positions" early in December and those in charge anticipate a 100 per cent turnout for this project.

Typing Tests Tags Private With Future

The on-post typing class had proof this week that a little instruction and application can go a long way.

Pvt. Bryant A. Gurney of Headquarters company, Ninth AAA battalion, Fort Scott, after only 26 hours in typing class, passed a test of 25 words a minute with no errors! And Pvt. Gurney has never typed before! He had attended just 13 of the two-hour sessions in order to accomplish this feat.

Classes, sponsored by the Post TI&E program, are held Monday and Wednesday evenings from 1800 to 2000 in Building 1220, Fort Scott. They are open to all interested military personnel without charge.

Teen-Age Activities

Friday, 7 November—Roller skating party, Skateland at the Beach, 50 cents charge for members with Student Body cards and 65 cents for others. Skate rental is 15 cents. Bus will leave the TAC at 1930 and will return at 2230. The Club will remain open for members not going skating.

Saturday, 8 November—TV Hit Parade, 1930 to 2000. Foolish Fishin' with prizes, 2000. Bingo from 2100 to 2200 with an $8.00 jackpot for nine numbers. Record player dance from 2200 to 2245.

Sunday, 9 November—Lounge, pool, table and lawn tennis, darts and dancing, 1400 to 1700.

What a Soldier Wants at Christmas

Home made cookies, candy, and paper-bound books are the Christmas gift preferences of U. S. fighting men in Korea as shown by a poll of Eighth Army troops conducted by corps, division and subordinate unit public information offices.

Next in choice are canned foods—fruits, meats and seafoods, writing materials, photos of loved ones, toilet articles, flashlights, hot plates, cameras and film. Mail from home was also included on many lists.

Mailing deadline for packages being sent to Korea from United States is 15 November, the Army post office at Eighth Army headquarters announces. Maximum weight for parcel post packages is 70 pounds. Combined length and girth must not exceed 100 inches. Air mail is restricted to packages of two pounds or less with a length and girth of 30 inches.

Postmasters recommend that newspapers and magazines be excluded and that any glassware be particularly well packed.

Slate Four Medical Lab Courses Here

Four refresher courses in medical laboratory technique for enlisted and civilian personnel of the Sixth Army area will begin next week and continue through next June at the Sixth Army Medical Laboratory at Fort Baker. The courses will be in Bacteriology, Chemistry, Parasitology, and Serology with nine classes for each course. Requests may be submitted for one individual to attend one or more of the courses, which are to be given to meet the continuing need for improving existing laboratory techniques and for training in new procedures.

Report from WASHINGTON

(By Armed Forces Press Service)

More than $10 billion in lapsed government term life insurance will be lost forever under present laws unless the 1,200,000 veterans who have permitted their policies to lapse, reinstate them before terms expire during the next 14 months.

The Veterans Administration said the policies involved are lapsed term NSLI that were issued to two groups of WWII and post-WWII veterans: (1) the 1,100,000 WWII veterans who took out NSLI policies while they were in Service during the last two months of 1944 and all of 1945, and (2) the 100,000 WWII and post-WWII veterans who took out NSLI policies while they were in Service during the last two months of 1947 and all of 1948. If veterans in either group do not wish to lose this coverage altogether, they must reinstate their policies before the terms expire. Otherwise, they will not be eligible for further government life insurance coverage.

Three Group Study Classes For Presidians Next Week

Three group study classes for military personnel of the Presidio will begin next week with all classes meeting twice a week in the Food Service School building. Courses of eight weeks each will be offered in Modern American Novel, The Physical World and Crime and Delinquency.

All these on-post courses are being given without charge and no pre-requisites for enrollment are required. Arrangements may be made to receive college credits for the classes by contacting San Francisco State College directly. Other information may be secured by contacting the Education Center, extension 3189.

Emphasis of the course on the Modern American Novel will be on reading for enjoyment and all texts selected are novels which are reprinted in pocket editions. The six modern novels to be studied will be "The Great Gatsby" by F. Scott Fitzgerald, "Look Homeward Angel" by Thomas Wolfe, "Intruder in the Dust" by William Faulkner, "For Whom the Bell Tolls" by Ernest Hemingway, "Grapes of Wrath" by John Steinbeck and "Arrowsmith" by Sinclair Lewis.

Initial class in the novel will be held Tuesday, 13 November, and will meet every Tuesday and Thursday from that date. This course satisfies, in part, the necessary units in the Humanities, and may be used as an upper division elective for other major fields.

Class in the Physical World

Quotable Quip
Behind the Iron Curtain people have no rights. The State is above the law, and people live only to serve the State. If they don't, they just don't live.

will meet on Mondays and Wednesdays, beginning next Monday, 12 November. Lectures and discussions will cover the basic concepts of the physical world and their social significance illustrated by the nature and scope of the universe, the history and structure of the earth, and the control and use of energy, including atomic energy. The course partially satisfies the requirements in Natural Science.

Meetings of the class in Crime and Delinquency will be held on Tuesdays and Thursdays with the first session next Tuesday, 13 November. Study will include an analysis of the problem of adult crime and juvenile delinquency from the standpoint of nature and extent, causes, effects, associated factors, processes in administration of criminal justice and the juvenile court. The course partially satisfies requirements for a major in Social Science.

Preventive Dentistry Saves Army Teeth

Washington—A research program designed to save one million teeth a year is now being conducted by the Army Medical Service.

The Army program of preventive dentistry and causes of tooth decay and diseases is in co-operation with the National Research Council and many other civilian professional groups. This research already has resulted in better teeth for Service personnel.

Maj. Gen. George E. Armstrong, Army Surgeon General, reports that the cost of remedial dental care currently furnished by the Army exceeds $80 million a year at the most conservative civilian rates. (AFPS) from Mrs. Gordon Oosting, who arranged for the studio and conducts three weekly ceramic and pottery classes at the studio from 1300 to 1600 on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.

We are best to ourselves when we are good to others.

Ceramic Studio Is New Feature Of Presidio YMCA

A ceramic studio for personnel at Letterman Army hospital and those stationed on the post is the latest addition to the activities at the Presidio YMCA.

Credit for the new project goes to Mrs. Gordon Oosting, who formerly operated her own studio in Virginia. Complete facilities are available for modeling, pouring from molds, firing, glazing and decorating.

In the three weeks that the project has been in operation, beginning and advanced students have turned out an array of cigaret boxes, mugs, bowls, plates, lamp bases, statues, jewelry, ashtrays, wall masks, figurines and mantel pieces.

Those in charge have pointed out the fact that such items made now would present novel and personalized Christmas gifts.

Classes are in session on Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 1300 to 1600.

Army Top Kick Veteran of Three Oriental Wars

Korea—M/Sgt. John P. (Pop) Moller of Seattle, Wash., feels quite at home in Korea. This is the third Oriental war in which he's been on the scene.

His first taste of Asiatic warfare came in 1900 when the Boxers staged their rebellion. He witnessed the action in Shanghai, China. The Boxers hoped to drive all foreigners out of China with their revolt, but failed. Four years later Pop was a spectator of the Russo-Japanese War, most of which took place in northern China.

He's served 19 years in both the Army and the Navy with enlisted and commissioned service. The 62-year-old career man holds the rank of lieutenant colonel in the Army's inactive reserve. In the Navy Pop rose from seaman to lieutenant junior grade. His present assignment is as administrative NCO for the 2nd Logistical Command's transportation section.

Betty Takes a Bath!

The people who make movies have known that one good way to produce a box-office success is to load a picture with cheesecake. Pretty girls—few clothes—sure hit. This formula in historical movies presents real problems, especially if the costumes of the period are floor-long and Adam's-apple high. The crisis, however, can often be solved by having the actress take a bath. Such was the case when Betty Grable was making "The Farmer Takes a Wife." Sheathed in a flesh-colored, strapless bathing suit to simulate nudity, the lovely blonde climbed into an 1850-style bathtub.

She spent several waterless hours there, timing her scrubbing strokes and lip movement to a song which she previously had recorded. When she was scrub-perfect, technicians moved in. Pre-heated water was put in the tub, along with a bubble-producing chemical. To create the illusion of steam, dry ice was added to a tank of water concealed behind the tub. Lighting crews then took over. By the time everything was ready, about 80 persons had gathered to watch Betty bathe.

Twelve times she got into her jug-sized tub, scrubbed herself, and pretended to sing. Twelve times she stepped out and was handed a burlap gunny sack to dry herself. (The Erie Canal boat where the scene takes place was just out of towels.) After a few thousand feet of film, and several watery hours, the scene was accepted as perfect. "Movies," said one producer, after viewing the proceedings, "are apparently not only better than ever; they're wetter than ever."

MAN WANTED! This is the message sent out by the Military Sea Transport Service at 33 Berry street, San Francisco.

An area-wide search is under way for an enlisted man who was in service and a passenger aboard the USS President Jackson at sea on 25 December 1951. The MSTs-PAC wants this man to assist in publicizing the campaign for local support of the Christmas celebration planned for enlisted men who may be at sea on Christmas 1952.

If the wanted man is found he will be interviewed over the radio to tell how it feels to be at sea, away from home and family, on Christmas Day and to unexpectedly receive a gift from Santa Claus.

Any enlisted man who was aboard the USS President Jackson last Christmas is requested to immediately write or call Lt. Miller, U.S.N., PIO, MSTs-PAC.

THE DEVILS OF LOUDON by Aldous Leonard Huxley. An instance of mass hysteria which occurred in France in the 17th Century is described and analyzed lucidly: a depraved society—lechery—sorcery—complete with the use of mass hypnosis.

THEODORA AND THE EMPEROR, by Harold Lamb. The author champions the maligned Theodora (an Eva Peron, Byzantine model), who shared a throne with the bookish shepherd boy from Macedonia. The armchair strategist will enjoy the many battle campaigns offered in pinpoint detail.

THE GREAT ENTERPRISE, by Harry Allen Overstreet. Continuing the theme of maturity presented in "The Mature Mind," the author recapitulates the ways in which the individual can attain psychological maturity and examines the meaning of maturity in social developments.

YOU, THE JURY, by Mary Borden. Lady Barbara tells the story of Martin Merriedew, the doctor's son, her brother's closest friend, whose relentless pursuit of the Christian virtues ends in his trial for high treason. The judge is Lady Barbara's husband; the reader is the jury.

Knuckle Practice!

Preciado Saves Presidio From Shut-out by Hamilton Gridders

Presidio's "Red Raiders" saw their winning ways come to an end as they emerged on the short end of a rough, bruising, 23-7 scrap with the Hamilton Air Force Base "Defenders" here on the home field, last Saturday.

A dearth of experienced ex-collegian linemen were all knees, elbows and fists as they repeatedly broke through the "Raider" forward wall and stopped the hard-running Presidio backs.

The locals took the opening kick-off, but after two plays fumbled the ball away on their own 10-yard line, from where Hamilton cracked into the scoring column in two plays. John Hurtz, fleet left halfback, carried over from the eight and Sammy Burke, former Rice griddier, kicked the conversion.

A see-saw battle, that at times looked as though the "Raiders" might bounce back, lasted through most of the second period, but a 45-yard sustained drive sent Hamilton's Byron Gillory, former Texas University star, over from the three and Burke's conversion ended the half at 14-0.

Presidio kicked off to open the second half and the big defensive unit dug in to stop the "Defenders."

Dallas Lamb, "Raider" right half, carried Hamilton's fourth down punt from his own one-yard line to the 25, only to have the Hamiltonians break through on the next three plays and set the locals back on their own 10. Presidio's ace fullback Nick Kirby, trying to punt, got a bad pass from center and it bobbled into the end zone with a Hamilton lineman after it for a safety.

Early in the fourth quarter, Chick Preciado, "Raider" defensive sparkplug, playing at offensive right half, snagged a pass that had bounded off the fingertips of teammate Ed Bell, and raced 65 yards to save the locals from a shutout. Quarterback Dick Jackstadt, who had done the pitching on the pass play, kicked the extra-point.

With four minutes of play left, a Kirby punt was taken by Ed Hardesty, Hamilton safety man, on his own 20 and he scampered 80 yards for the final tally. Burke again added the conversion.

Hamilton's rough tactics cost them 105 yards in penalties to 45 for Presidio.

A total net yardage of 143 yards and 11 first downs for Hamilton to 124 and seven first downs for Presidio set the game off as a hard-fought defensive battle.

Although both of Presidio's forward walls played brilliantly, the loss of several key players, via the transfer and overseas shipment route, was telling and the line weights dropped considerably.

Preciado and Al Cooper, 230-pound defensive tackle, played their last game for the "Raiders" as a result of a transfer to Camp Cooke, this week.

Mantle Declared Unfit For the Military; Will Continue to Play Ball

Mickey Mantle, skyrocketing young New York Yankee switch-hitter, was again declared unfit for military service, this week.

That means the 21-year-old Commerce, Oklahoma, outfielder can continue his thus far brilliant career. Mantle, in his second year with the Yanks, tied for third in the American League batting race and was a big factor in the team's victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers in the series last month.

Maj. Gen. George E. Armstrong, Army surgeon general, said Mantle was ruled unfit for service because of a chronic knee defect. It was an injury sustained in the 1951 World Series, most of which Mantle was forced to sit out.

Play Tightens as Intramural Basketball Enters Final Stage

With only two weeks left in the Post Intramural Basketball League, several slow-starting teams are showing signs of stress and desperation in an effort to get into the final contention. Some of the lagging teams knocked off leading quints and leased a higher rung on the ladder, last week.

Biggest jump was made by a re-grouped five from 30th AAA Group, who won two for two and went from a three-way tie for fourth into a solid third place, in the American Division.

Headquarters Company, Sixth Army maintained their one game lead over Company A, 505th MP Battalion, for the top spot in that division. A cooling 551st Engineer quift dropped two games and slid from fourth to sixth, only one step away from the cellar.

A loose race is indicated by the seven places established instead of having two or three teams tied for each place. Company A and 30th Group loom as the only teams capable of overtaking Headquarters Company, if they are overtaken at all.

In the National Division, Detachment A, 6002 ASU, was given a fast shuffle from first to third by 518th AAA Operations and Company B, 505th MPs. Each moved up one notch to the top positions. Both scored two wins apiece to one win and a loss by Detachment A and are the only unbeaten teams in that division.

Headquarters Company, 505th MPs won two for two to get back into the race and 99th Engineers and 115th CIC are struggling for basement contention.

4. Between 1915-1921 Ted "Kid" Lewis fought Jack Britton 20 times. Is that a record in professional boxing?

1. False. The first was Edward Temme, an Englishman, who swam from France to Britain in 1927, and reversed his route in 1934.
2. In the "Fen" district of England. Prasants used poles to leap over dikes.
3. No, according to fishing consultant Hal Sharp, of San Francisco, Calif.
4. Yes.
5. The National League. It was established in 1876, and is the older by 25 years.

(By Armed Forces Press Service)

Caught between World Series headlines and crammed football schedules was the opening of the National Hockey League season recently. Although no team has ever won five straight titles, the 1952-'53 Detroit Red Wings have an excellent chance to achieve that goal.

Last year's Stanley Cup winners line up with another banner team in Gorde, Howe, Ted Lindsay, Al Devecchio, John Wilson, Terry Sawchuck and Metro Prystai. It is doubtful that the trade, sending defenseman Leo Reise to the Rangers for Reggie Sinclair, has weakened the champs.

Biggest deal of the summer months was engineered by the improved Chicago Black Hawks and Toronto Maple Leafs. Toronto's Al Rollins, Cal Gardner, and Gus Mortson parted to Chicago for talented puck defender Harry Lumley. If Lumley can watch his weight the Leafs should be tough to beat.

Elsewhere around the league the Boston Bruins are putting their hopes on veterans Bill Quackenbush, Jack McIntyre, and Milt Schmidt. The New York Rangers have improved defensively over last season, but are still slated for cellar occupancy.

Up Montreal way a group of second-year men, "Boom Boom" Geoffrion, Dickey Moore, Dick Gamble, Paul Meger, and Dollard St. Laurent, will team with vets Maurice Richard and Elmer Lach to give the Canucks plenty of speed and scoring punch.

Four homers in one game. In the fracas between the Dodgers and the Braves on 31 August, 1950, Gil Hodges set a modern National League home run record by hitting four of Spalding's finest over the fence.

On 2 May, 1917, the Cincinnati Reds played a nine-inning game without either pitcher yielding a hit. In the top of the tenth the Cub hurler, Jimmy Vaughan, gave up two hits, but the Red's ace right-hander, Fred Toney, continued his performance through the tenth inning and racked up one of the greatest pitching victories of all time.

More Fighters Needed!

Presidio Leather Slinger Out To Repeat Golden Gloves Feat

Corporal Louis Gage of Post Special Services, at this writing, is the only entry from Presidio in the 22nd Annual Golden Gloves Tournament, to be held here in San Francisco, in December.

Cpl Gage, a welterweight (147 pounds), with a long string of victories and titles in his young career, started training this week, in hopes of repeating his feats of two previous years by winning the San Francisco Examiner sponsored event. In 1949, he copped the Golden welter title and in 1950, the light middleweight title was his.

The 24-year-old San Francisco boy won the welterweight championship in Okinawa this year and the light middleweight crown at Japan's all-Far East bouts.

In the past, he has won berths to the Pan-American Games, AAU Finals, All-Army bouts, Midwestern Regionals and the 1952 Olympic Games, his most recent event. Gage won his first fight in the Games this year, but was decided in the second by the 1948 Olympic defending champ.

San Francisco's '52 Gloves Tourney will be held on Monday, 1 December; Thursday, 4 December; Monday, 8 December and Thursday, 11 December.

Championships will be decided in three divisions—Senior, Junior and Novice—at the championship novices approved and used by the National AAU and Olympic Games.

Classification of weights are: Flyweight, 112; Bantamweight, 119; Featherweight, 125; Lightweight, 132; Light Welterweight, 139; Welterweight, 147; Light Middleweight, 156; Middleweight, 165; Light Heavyweight, 178 and Heavyweight, over 178.

More fighters are urged to take part and should contact Sfc Cook, Post Special Services, Building 122, here at the Presidio, immediately.

Cpl Gage will be the trainer.

Alibis Still Dominate the Alley In Fort Scott Bowling League

For the fourth straight week, the 21st Alibis are setting the pace in the Fort Scott Bowling League as they eked out a 2-1 victory Thursday night over a stubborn Headquarters five.

However, the T-5's also won two lines to remain just two games out of first place. The third-place MP's dropped to fifth when they could not floor a team for their three lines with the 8-Balls. The MP's forfeited the three lines putting the 8-Balls on a par with the Sure Things—both have a 13-11 record.

A rundown of the score sheets shows the Alibis dropping their first line to Headquarters Company, 831-696. Just one pin was the difference in the second line. The 68-pin handicap gave Headquarters 782, but the Alibis toppled one more pin for a 783. The Alibis went on to win the third 884 to 775.

Pfc. Fabian did it again in the Sure Things-T5 fracas. Last week he flattened the pins to the tune of a 264 game and a 661 series, both league records. This week his pin staccato netted a 183-189-206 for a 578 series. His average for the season, another record, now stands at 180.

Bases Loaded!

Army Sergeant Joe Myth, home on leave, was unexpectedly left in charge of his three-month-old niece for an afternoon.

All went well at first; then a crisis arose and the sergeant put in a frantic telephone call to his uncle, who took care of the problem in man to man fashion.

"First," he said, "place the diaper in position of a baseball diamond, with you at bat. Fold second base over home plate. Place baby on pitcher's mound. Then pin first base and third base to home plate."

It worked.—(AFPS)

Raiders Tangle with Edwards Speedsters in Season's Finale

Presidio's "Red Raiders" will be out to turn a good season into a better one percentagewise, when they journey to Southern California to take on Edwards AFB tomorrow night.

It will be the eighth and last tilt for the locals and although they will find it hard to muster 30 men from a former field of 45, they will be gunning to make it a better than 50% season win average.

Two more top Raider grid-ders are presented in the football profile series. Both have been key players in all previous games and can be counted on to double their efforts for this last game.

Corporal Ed Bell, Headquarters Company, Sixth Army, from Los Angeles, has been an end, converted to quarterback and back to end again.

Cpl. Bell came to Presidio fresh from one year of grid duty at Los Angeles City College, one year at San Antonio, Texas JC and three years with Marshall High in Los Angeles. Two of his years at Marshall were marked with All-City honors.

Bell quarterbacked in the Raiders' first four games, but a shortage of ends necessitated his return to the flanker spot.

In that position, the 180-pound Bell added considerably to the teams' aerial effectiveness.

Private First Class Leonard Brooks, 516th Ordnance, from

Berea, Ohio, holds down the team's hot spot, defensive line-backer and doubles as an offensive left guard.

Pfc Brooks roamed the Berea High School turf for four years and for three of those seasons was placed on the All-County roster, in a tough Ohio circuit.

One year of semi-pro ball with the Cleveland Muni Association rounds out his previous experience and this is his first year of Army ball.

Brooks has been a defensive standout throughout this season.

Over a million people paid a total of $2,650,000 to witness Jack Dempsey's return match with Heavyweight Champion Gene Tunney on 22 September, 1927. Tunney won the fight in 30 minutes. He got $990,000 for the effort, a tidy $33,000 per minute—more money per minute than any athlete ever earned before or since.

In 1906, the Chicago Cubs clawed their way through the National League with a vengeance. At season's end they had won 116 games and lost only 36, for a win-percentage of .763, the loftiest mark ever racked up by a club in either league.

New Award Program!

Sixth Army's Safe Drivers Will Win Special Recognition

Recognition will be given Sixth Army installations with outstanding accident prevention records under a safety award program announced by Headquarters Sixth Army. The program will insure acknowledgement of departmental or unit safety records, as well as individual safe driving and safe equipment operation achievements.

Awards of certificates and pocket cards will be based on accident records of installations for the period from 1 January to 31 December of each calendar year.

To be eligible for an award, an installation or activity must have improved or equaled the average rates developed during the preceding two years for at least two of three categories, motor vehicle rate, military personnel rate and civilian personnel rate.

To receive an award, reports must show that not more than one rate in the three categories has increased and the unweighted averages of three rates developed during the award period reflect a new percentage reduction.

Fatality rates during the award period must equal or better those developed during the preceding two years, except that one fatality will not necessarily eliminate an installation from consideration. The decision regarding a fatality will be determined by the general excellence of the safety program and circumstances surrounding the accident.

In addition to an improvement in the record, evidence must be shown that a sound safety program is in effect on the basis of directives and regulations of the Department of the Army and Sixth Army.

Certificates for a Department Award will be given where a department or unit of an installation has operated for a minimum of one year without a reportable lost time military or civilian personnel injury.

All licensed military or civilian drivers of Sixth Army motor vehicles who have operated a vehicle for one year or more without a reportable accident will be entitled to a Safe Operator's Certificate certifying the number of years of accident-free operation. Should an employee be involved in an accident after issuance of a card, he will return the card to the safety director and start the development of a new record.

Licensed operators of fork lifts, mobile cranes, tractors, engineer road equipment or such other equipment requiring special skill or qualification for operation will be eligible for the pocket-size Safe Operator's Certificate if they have operated a full calendar year or more without an accident. They also will have to return the card to the safety director and start a new accident-free record if they experience an accident after issuance of the card.

Decision for granting awards for recognition of installation or activity safety records will be made at Sixth Army level. Decision on awards for departments, units or individuals will be made at the installation level.

Approximately 44,850 tons of mail were transported by land, sea and air from the United States to Army and Air Force post offices in other parts of the world during the past year.

During this same period an estimated 31,975 tons of mail were brought back to the United States from these far-flung outposts.

Sixth Army PIO Releases Data on "Phib Test"

Amphibious training for approximately 4,000 troops of the Sixth Army will be given during the maneuver, Exercise "Phib Test," near Oceanside, California, this month.

Designed primarily to familiarize participating units with amphibious operational techniques and cooperation with Naval forces, the exercise will also serve to test specialized units providing support for the assault forces.

Climax of the exercise will be the landing at Aliso Canyon of an infantry battalion combat team supported by an amphibious tank battalion in an attempt to advance almost three miles inland against opposition of specially trained "aggressor" troops who will defend positions on the mainland.

Among the Sixth Army units participating will be the 369th Engineer Amphibious Support Regiment from Fort Worden, Washington.

Troops from Camp Cooke will include: 747th Amphibious Tank and Tractor Bn.; an infantry battalion combat team; the 44th Recon Company; a detachment of military police of the 44th Infantry Div., and a detachment of the 3623d Ordnance Company.

The 70th Explosive Ordnance Disposal Squad and a detachment of Headquarters III Corps from Fort MacArthur will participate. From Camp San Luis Obispo a detachment of the 16th Signal Bn. will be sent to the exercise.

Naval support of the landing maneuvers will be furnished by the Commander, Amphibious Force, U. S. Pacific Fleet.

Waterborne units were to begin embarking at Fort Worden and Camp Cooke this week for the maneuver area.

Takes PFC 25 Days To Reach Home

Camp Atterbury, Ind (AFPS)—Pfc Mariano Galope, of the 114th Engineer Construction Battalion, left here recently on an ordinary 30-day leave that was out of the ordinary.

Private Galope will travel about 10,000 miles to reach his home in Cabanatuan, P. I. It will take Galope 25 days to travel to his home but his actual leave will not start until he reaches the Philippines.

Airborne Shows How

A demonstration team from the Infantry School's Airborne Department at Ft. Benning, Ga., staged an aerial delivery show recently at Maxwell AFB, Ala., for students of the Air Command and Staff School. The 45-man team demonstrated methods of loading apparatus in aircraft and dropping heavy equipment.

AG Major Scores Clean Sweep In Inter-Service Photography Contest

Top winners of the Presidio's Photographic contest for post level participation in the Fourth Inter-Service Photography contest were Major Donald F. Raabe, Adjutant General Section, Sixth Army, and Lt. Col. Harvey Bower, Sixth Army Ordnance.

Major Raabe made a clean sweep of the honors in the black and white division of the contest winning all of the first five awards. His first place photograph entitled, "San Carlos," was a picture of the San Carlos mission. His other prize winners were: "Shadows," second place; "Gateway," third place; "Sunset," fourth place, and "Gong," fifth place.

First and third prizes in the color transparencies division of the contest were awarded to Lt. Col. Bower, who also placed sixth in the black and white section. His picture of the Golden Gate Bridge and the San Francisco skyline at night, "Light and Water," was judged first and "Reflection," a view of Crater Lake, was third.

Although both Major Raabe and Lt. Col. Bower received more than one of the honors, contest rules allow only one prize to an individual at any one level. Both received $15 for the top award in each division.

In the black and white division, seventh place was won by Lt. Stanley W. Kowalewski, 8921 TSU AGC Security Courier Transfer Station. His picture, "Mission at Carmel," won him a $2 award.

M/Sgt. Olive Hinschliffe, 6002d ASU, WAC Detachment, placed second in the color transparencies division with her picture of the Golden Gate Bridge from the National cemetery. She was awarded $10.

Judges of the contest were Mr. Harry A. Sickels, San Francisco photographer; Major K. B. White, G-3, and M/Sgt. Harry Cox, Sixth Army Signal Section, Pictorial Division. The photographs were judged at the Presidio Service club where they were on display for two days last week.

The winning entries of the Presidio contest will be sent to Sixth Army Headquarters next week to compete with winners of similar contests held at other installations throughout the Sixth Army area. For the top honors in the Army area contest, winners will be awarded cash prizes of from $35 for first place to $10 for sixth and seventh places.

Judging of the Sixth Army area contest will be between 15 November and 15 December. The winning entries of this contest will be forwarded for further competition at the highest level.

Final selections of all Services will compete against each other in this Fourth Inter-Service contest 15 April, 1953. Individual winners will be awarded trophies and the Service with the greatest number of prize-winning entries will hold the perpetual trophy for one year.

Announcement of additional prizes to the winners of the Inter-Service contest have been made by the magazine, Modern Photography. To each of the first prize winners in both the black and white and color classes of the final contest, the magazine offers a choice of one of several world-famous cameras. Second and third prize winner in both classes will get their pick of one of four excellent cameras. The other four winners in the black and white division will have their choice of helpful accessories or $25 worth of film to fit their cameras. Although the magazine is offering the prizes, it will have no part in the judging or administration of the contest.

Shopping Service Will Aid With Overseas Gifts

Western servicemen overseas in any part of the world may have their Christmas shopping worries ended by placing them in the capable hands of the American Women's Volunteer Overseas Shopping Service.

This group operates out of San Francisco to service any home west of the Mississippi, while the eastern half of the country is handled by a similar group in Washington, D.C.

A letter addressed to American Women's Volunteer Service, Fairmont hotel, San Francisco, California, should include suggestions for what the serviceman wishes for each member of the family, their complete address or addresses, and a money order to cover the cost of the item plus any parcel post and insurance costs. If it is desired, the Volunteer Service will send a note with the package with whatever greeting the serviceman may care to send, or they will select a Christmas card to go with the package.

Deadline for postmarking letters is 1 December. Servicemen requesting this service should include their own name, rank, serial number, unit to which assigned and APO number. A complete report of the Volunteer Services' purchases for them will be forwarded when completed.

Troops Move Next Month!

Camp Cooke to Be Inactivated Following Discoveries of Oil

The Department of the Army announced this week that because of recent discoveries of oil at Camp Cooke, Calif., the camp will be placed on an inactive status for possible future use. Training now being conducted at the camp will be transferred to Fort Lewis, Wash., and other Army installations.

The 44th Infantry Division, now training recruits at Camp Cooke, will move to Fort Lewis in December by which time completion of the current training cycle and consequent levies for overseas duty will have materially reduced the present division strength of more than 10,000. The Disciplinary Barracks, also in the Camp Cooke area, will be retained, however. Patients and staff of the Army Hospital at Camp Cooke will be transferred to Letterman Army Hospital in San Francisco and Fitzsimons Army Hospital in Denver.

Camp Cooke presently consists of some 84,000 acres of land, the majority of which is government-owned, subject to sub-surface mineral rights which were retained by the owners when the property was acquired during the national emergency. Exploration and exploitation of these sub-surface rights were suspended during World War II but have since been renewed, resulting in successful drilling by the Union Oil Company of California.

In addition to the economy expected from consolidation of activities at Fort Lewis, the government is spared the prohibitive costs of extinguishing existing sub-surface mineral rights estimated at considerably more than the government's present investment in Camp Cooke.

The camp was named after General Phillip St. George Cooke, who led a battalion of Mormon volunteers on a 2000-mile march from St. Louis to San Diego during the Mexican War, a feat, considering the times, unequalled elsewhere in the annals of American military history.

In March, 1941, the War Department selected Cooke as a desirable training area, particularly for armored units. The first organization to train in the area was the Fifth Armored Division.

Other major combat units which were trained at Cooke in World War II included the Sixth, Eleventh, Thirteenth and Twentieth Armored Divisions, and the 86th and 97th Infantry Divisions.

German and Italian prisoner of war camps were also established at Cooke during the war.

Early in 1952 the 44th Infantry Division, Illinois National Guard, was called into active Federal service and ordered to Camp Cooke.

This division, commanded by Major General Harry L. Bolen, during World War II saw combat in Europe from October, 1944, until the German surrender, May 8, 1945. After a short period of occupation duty the division returned to the United States for retraining prior to redeployment to the Far East. With the end of the war against Japan, however, it was deactivated November 30, 1945.

In November, 1946, it was again activated as a new organization for the "downstate" units of the Illinois National Guard. Training for these units was continuous until the division was ordered to Camp Cooke.

AF Transport Plane Can Carry 400 Men

Washington—The Air Force has disclosed that its newest transport plane, the XC-99, is capable of carrying 400 fully equipped troops. It can also carry more than 100,000 pounds of cargo in one flight.

Termed the "world's largest land-based airplane," the transport has been making experimental flights during the past three years. On one occasion, the total take-off weight of the huge six-engine plane was 320,173 pounds.

The plane has a wingspan of 230 feet and is 180½ feet long. The tail is almost 60 feet high.

Camp Roberts Tops List Of Blood Donors

Camp Roberts led the list of Sixth Army installations in blood donations during the year which ended 30 September 1952, with 13,558 pints, while Camp Stoneman was a close second with 13,260.

Other installations topping the list include: Fort Lewis (including Madigan Army hospital), 12,378; Fort Ord (including the Army Language school), 11,693; Presidio of San Francisco, 4,945; Fort Lawton, 4,467; Fort Huachuca, 4,113; Fort Worden, 3,720; San Francisco Port of Embarkation (including Fort Mason and Oakland Army Base), 3,136, and Sharpe General Depot, 2,862.

For the single month of September, Camp Stoneman led with 1,015 pints; Camp Roberts, 471; Fort Lewis (including MAH), 459; Fort Ord (including ALS), 387; Sierra Ordnance Depot, 315; Fort Lawton, 301, and the Presidio of San Francisco, 300.

Blood collections in the Sixth Army area during the first year of the Army Blood Donor program which began in October 1951, amounted to 104,470 pints, or approximately 87 percent of the goal of one pint a year from each individual, both military and civilian, employed by Sixth Army installations and activities.

Officials pointed out that during the past four months, collections have fallen short of the record established during the first eight months of the program and that the September collection of 4,687 was less than one half of the amount needed monthly to attain the Sixth Army goal.

The program will continue as set up and the quotas now established will remain in effect. Donations are accepted at the Presidio in Building 562, main post, on the first Tuesday of each month from 0800 until noon.

It's Later Than You Think

Tomorrow—15 November—is the deadline for servicemen's overseas Christmas mailing. The Yuletide mail for overseas has been going out in a steady flow for several weeks and was expected to reach its peak this week.

Air Parcel Post intended for personnel of the Armed Forces serving overseas or in naval vessels should be mailed in the San Francisco area not later than 25 November, 1952. Air Parcel Post mailed after that date cannot be assured airlift overseas and will be dependent on the military requirements at the time for transportation.

Senders are cautioned that Air Parcel Post is limited in weight to two pounds and cannot exceed 30 inches in length and girth combined. Rate of postage for Air Parcel Post is 80 cents a pound.

Sixth Army ROTC Officials Attend Pentagon Conference

Sixth Army representatives returned last week from the semi-annual Army ROTC Affairs conference held in the Pentagon, Washington, D. C. Those attending included Colonel J. V. Collier, PMS&T at Stanford University; Lt. Col. J. H. Short, Chief, ROTC branch, Headquarters, Sixth Army;

Sixth Army Plans Driver Education Instructor Course

Driver Education instructor courses will be given at two Sixth Army installations during the month of December.

The one-week courses are slated to begin at Fort Lewis, Wash., 8 December and at Camp Roberts, Calif., 15 December, with participants reporting on the day preceding the opening of classes.

Capacity for each class has been set at 40 persons and the quota for the Presidio, though not mandatory, is one military and one civilian, who will attend the Camp Roberts sessions.

The course is designed for officers, NCO's and civilian supervisors of replacement or training of vehicle drivers, and all training materials will be furnished.

TC Now Supporting All Army Aircraft

All functions pertaining to logistical support of Army aircraft has recently been transferred to the Transportation corps. Formerly the responsibility of the Ordnance corps, the transfer includes all functions relative to supply, inspection and maintenance at the field maintenance level. Later, depot supply and maintenance will be added.

Airplane repair teams have been re-designated as Transportation units, and civilian and military spaces utilized for this function have been transferred to the Post Transportation section.

Lt. Col. W. G. Whall, PMS&T, San Francisco High School; Lt. Col. James M. Cochran, PMS&T, California State Polytechnic college, San Luis Obispo, Calif., and Mr. U. H. Reynolds, G-3 ROTC Branch, Headquarters Sixth Army.

For two days the conferees from all the major commands were briefed on the policies which will govern ROTC affairs during the coming year. These included discussion of the new Branch General Course which was started in 59 colleges and universities this academic year, the ROTC bill which will extend unification of the three services to the ROTC program, the new medical ROTC program, the joint Army-Air Force ROTC Student Enrollment agreement which guarantees a minimum of 40 per cent of the combined enrollment to other services, funds and budget matters, the difficulties of providing adequate instructor personnel support for the program, and a number of other subjects covering ROTC affairs.

The conference members were told that Department of the Army considers the procurement of Army officers through the ROTC program as one of its most important projects.

Sixth Army will disseminate information received at the conference to the Military districts and PMS&T's in the near future, those in charge stated.

January Draft Call Will Tap 48,000 Men

Washington—The Department of Defense has asked the Selective Service System to call 48,000 men in January for assignment to the Army.

The Navy, Marine Corps and Air Force do not intend to place calls with Selective Service for January.

The number of men requested for January is based on maintaining approved strength after allowances have been made for enlistments and re-enlistments.

 (AFPS Staff Writer)

Getting out of Service raises some big questions. There are questions of where to find a new job, how to return to an old one, how to start or finish school, and many others. You have some hard thinking ahead before you come up with the right answers. You will be taking a step into your future and it is important that your first step is your right step. This series is intended to help and guide you—to give you the "lowdown" on the benefits you, as a veteran, are entitled to receive.

Many of us leaving military service will want a start in new jobs, new fields, with new opportunities. The K-Vet Bill extends job-finding assistance to veterans with service since June 27, 1950, on the same basis as veterans of WWII.

After your separation, go to your nearest state employment agency. Go as soon as you can, and register for the kind of work you want.

These agencies are part of the U. S. Employment Service and include a department to handle employment problems facing veterans. The Veterans Employment Service will offer all possible assistance in finding you a new job. There is no fee for this service.

At your disposal will be such benefits as a free counseling service, including aptitude tests, to assist you in choosing work at which you probably will succeed. These tests deal with general and specific fields of employment.

You will also be given the "dope" on various industries, so that you can pick one offering you the best future.

Your veterans employment representative will make certain that you get the priority service you are entitled to under law. Bring along your separation papers when you meet him. It will probably save time.

Perhaps you would like to live and work in some other part of the U. S.? Don't just take off and try to find a job on your own. Your state employment service may be able to help you.

All state agencies cooperate with one another under a clearance system. Each agency informs the others of the job opportunities existing in its particular location. They report on what jobs are hard to fill in their area.

In other words, a New York veteran, who has a specialty which is scarce in California, will be informed of this need by his local employment agency.

This clearance system also works for veterans and their dependents who must move to a different location for reasons of health.

Report from WASHINGTON

(By Armed Forces Press Service)

At this time it appears that approximately 78,000 men—or 30 per cent of the soldiers in Korea—voted in the recent presidential election. Voting cards were handed out to all soldiers fighting on the peninsula and about 40 per cent used them to ask for absentee ballots. It is impossible to determine exactly how many soldiers received ballots, then mailed them out again. Officers put the figure at approximately 30 per cent—a substantial figure considering the papers that had to be filled out, the distance separating the soldier from his local election board, and the hazards of transit.

Lt. Gen. Lewis A. Pick, who has directed $5,000,000,000 of military construction during three and a half years as Chief of the Army Engineers, will retire Nov. 30, after 35 years of service. Gen. Pick saw overseas duty in both world wars and supervised construction of "Pick's Pike," the famous road from India to China across Burma.

The Navy will select WAVE officers for promotion to the rank of commander for the first time since 1949. Eligible for promotion are eight WAVE lieutenant commanders who will have had four or more years service in grade July 1, 1953.

An additional ban has been placed on all non-official use of government-owned vehicles in the metropolitan Washington area. A special Defense Department directive sets forth just what sort of business the vehicles can be used for. Emphasis will be placed on using the vehicles on an "on call" basis rather than on specific assignments to individuals.

Army Speeds Huge Building Plan in Alaska

Anchorage, Alaska—The greatest military construction program in the history of Alaska is underway.

Defense construction in the territory, the Army disclosed, exceeds $240,000,000, and every effort is being made to have it all under contract by April, 1953. This is more than the total spent in the last three years.

There are 112 projects planned, many of them classified top secret. They will occupy an important place in the complex of advanced bases from which U. S. planes could launch retaliatory attacks with jet bombers and guided missiles in any direction—toward Europe, toward the Middle East or toward North America.

Other areas in the complex include Okinawa, Greenland, the United Kingdom, North Africa and other portions of the eastern Mediterranean area.

Year-round construction schedules have been instituted to eliminate the former complete work stoppage during the bitterly cold winter months. Careful planning allows structures to be completed sufficiently during the summer months for inside work to begin when the thermometer drops below zero.

Last winter, interior work kept 60 per cent of the projects running all through the cold winter months. This winter the percentage is expected to be higher.

Relatives Request Information on Missing Soldier

Assistance in obtaining information regarding Pfc. Harvey G. Engelman, reported missing in Korean action, is being requested by his relatives from anyone who might have known or served with him or his unit in Korea.

PFC. HARVEY ENGELMAN

Engelman was reported missing in action in the Hangye area on 18 May, 1951, while assigned to Co. 1, 23rd Infantry Regiment, 2nd Division. His last letter to his family was written 14 May, 1951.

He was sent to the Far East Command in the fall of 1950, arriving in Japan on Thanksgiving Day. He then went to Korea, where his toes were frosted and he was returned to Japan to a station hospital for convalescence. He was back in combat in Korea in February or March.

Those having any information regarding Pfc. Engelman are requested to contact Mr. M. Berman, 2634 South Redondo Blvd., Los Angeles 16, Calif.

Set Rules on Schools For Reserve Officers

Reserve component officers on extended active duty, if qualified, are authorized to attend courses of less than five months' duration at Army Service schools if they have:

a. At least 10 months' service remaining in current category commitment upon completion of course, if they are scheduled for overseas assignment and require the course to become POR (primary overseas requirements) qualified, or

b. At least one year service remaining in current category commitment upon completion of course if not scheduled for overseas assignment.

Within the above described limitations, battlefield commissioned personnel, and those receiving direct commissions in company grades, except Medical, Dental, Army Nurse, Women's Medical Specialist and Veterinary Corps, will attend Associate Company Officer courses at their respective branch schools, as rapidly as quotas permit, the announcement stated.

Army T.I.C. Topic

Headquarters Sixth Army Troop Information and Education Section has prepared the discussion topic for next week's T.I.&E. conferences for Presidio units. The topic will be "America's Strategic Role in the Defense Against Communism."

Holdings of the United States by land, sea and air throughout the world form a chain of encirclement around Red Russia. The discussion will examine our strategy of defense and containment, geographically and militarily.

While selecting some points or areas of defense as being more important than others is difficult, the major installations will come under consideration during the conferences. The importance of Thule, Westover, Alaska, the Philippines, the Panama Canal, our South Atlantic friends and the Western Wall in Europe will all be discussed.

Following a rundown of our strategic strong points, the conference will examine the causes and reasons why this ring of strategy was set up so far away, as far as the United States is concerned. The briefest answer would be to contain Russia within her boundaries.

In conclusion the Discussion Topic summarizes: "Our physical defenses stand firm, alert, vigilant, and ready to contain Russian imperialism. It is our mental defenses that need closer attention—so that we will not be deluded by phoney peace appeals abroad and at home; so that we will not be weakened in our determination by domestic wrangling about the financial costs of protecting our liberty and freedom; and so that we shall not expect victory too easily and too quickly in the history-long struggle for the freedom-loving man against the enslaving tyrant."

Safety Check of Non-Military Cars Is Made at Yuma

Yuma Test Station—Safety of all autos and trucks owned by civilian and military personnel at the Yuma Test Station is now in the process of being inspected to assure safe vehicles from the Station on Arizona highways.

The vehicle safety inspections are being supervised by the YTS Provost Marshal and the Post Ordnance Officer. Although the current safety drive includes only non-military vehicles, military vehicles are maintained according to the same safety regulations, according to Captain Oscar L. Davis, Provost Marshal.

"Owners of vehicles not meeting the safety standards will be given a reasonable time to have the defects remedied," said Capt. Davis. "If not corrected within this time, identification plates will be removed and the vehicle prohibited from operation within the Post."

Some 515 vehicles will be inspected in the safety drive. The requirements include: two headlamps, at least one red tail light, adjustable rear view mirror, working windshield wiper, standard auto horn, efficient brakes, muffler and exhaust pipe, shatter-proof windows, working speedometer, fenders and bumpers, front end and steering mechanism in good working condition, and no bald tires.

Green-cross safety stickers are being issued to all vehicles meeting these standards.

Election Facts Summarized

(By Armed Forces Press Service)
 Dwight D. Eisenhower received more votes than any presidential candidate in history—millions more than any other. The total vote was the greatest ever recorded.

His electoral vote was the second highest ever piled up by a Republican—just a shade under the total accumulated by Herbert Hoover in 1928.

Eisenhower, 62, is the oldest Republican and fourth oldest President ever elected to the White House. He will be the 12th general to serve as President of the United States. (Other generals were: George Washington, Franklin Pierce, Andrew Johnson, Rutherford B. Hayes, James A. Garfield, Chester A. Arthur, Benjamin Harrison, Andrew Jackson, William Henry Harrison, Zachary Taylor, and Ulysses S. Grant.)

He is the first man to be elected who has four syllables in his last name. Newspaper headline writers know this already.

He is the 34th President, the 14th Republican President, and the first native of Texas to hold the nation's highest office.

The 83rd Congress will include at least 11 women and there is a chance that a record of 12 will serve in the new House and Senate.

"90-Day Wonder" Is Leatherneck Pilot

Korea — A flying leatherneck from Baltimore, Md., who completed 62 missions with the Marines, now is known in the Air Force as the "90-day wonder."

Maj. Alexander J. Gillis moved from his Marine wing for 90 days as an F-86 Sabre jet pilot with the Air Force—and in that time shot down three MIG's, probably destroyed a fourth and damaged three more.

Almost Half of Army!

700,000 Army Personnel Serving Overseas Commands

Almost half of the personnel in the Army—more than 700,000 men—today are serving overseas.

Six divisions are in Korea and five more in Europe. In all, there is a total of 13 divisions overseas.

Gen. J. Lawton Collins, Chief of Staff, U. S. Army, addressing a meeting of the Carnegie Institute Society, also said that seven divisions are in the U. S., to conduct training and act as a manpower pool for the rotation program.

Thousands of replacements are needed every month to support this rotation program, Gen. Collins said. Veterans are being released at such a rate that the Army will have to train almost three-quarters of a million new men this year.

The difficulty of providing sufficient numbers of men to support the rotation program is shown by the fact that 13 divisions are overseas while only seven are active in the U. S. "Thus, in effect, each unit in the U. S., while losing its own personnel through separation, must train replacement for the personnel that are lost and, at the same time, supply replacements for two units overseas.

"Today, with so many advances being made in the mechanical tools of war, there is a tendency on the part of some to overemphasize the importance of machines and to underestimate the importance of men.

"But the true value and importance of these tools to defend our freedoms depend finally upon the skill, the courage, and the conviction of the men who use them. Men will always be more important than machines, and on the battlefield men have always determined the issue and always will."

Port Drive for United Crusade Breaks Record

Giving "once for all" San Francisco Port of Embarkation military and civilian personnel contributed a record-shattering $22,370.44 to the United Crusade, final figures showed today.

Fort Mason personnel were credited with $10,448.12 and those at Oakland Army Base with $11,922.32, to earn a "thanks and well done" commendation from Major General James A. Lester, Port Commander.

The United Crusade response brought the Port's 1952 welfare contributions to $39,826 as compared to $29,158 in 1951 and represented the largest total for any campaign since the Army Port transferred its transports and almost half its personnel to the Navy in early 1950.

In the four full years of General Lester's command (he took over August 28, 1949) the Port has given $180,655 to organized welfare campaigns.

Plow Jockey!

Sergeant's "Green Thumb" Is Boon To EUCOM Troops

An Army sergeant in Austria is re-writing the words to "You're in the Army Now"—for he's "still behind the plow."

Sergeant First Class Charles W. Ramsey, of Carlsbad, Calif., is making his love of the soil pay big dividends to the taxpayer—while he grows vegetables for his "buddies" at the Linz Military Post.

Last year his garden saved the government $5,000—the estimated cost of the food if purchased on the Austrian market.

During that period soldiers at the post's consolidated mess hall ate 35,000 ears of sweet corn and 11 tons of other fresh vegetables—all "home" grown.

Sergeant Ramsey has had 31 years' experience as a gardener. He ran a nursery as a civilian and was assigned as a cook in the Army until someone discovered he preferred raising vegetables.

His garden is a 15-acre plot of land on the post, formerly used as a training area.

Money to buy seed, fertilizer and garden tools and to pay Austrian workers came as a loan from the post's welfare funds.

In order to repay the money, all vegetables the soldiers didn't need were sold to Army families living in the Linz area.

By the end of the year, the loan was repaid in full, and the garden bank account showed a balance of $2,300.

In another year, Sergeant Ramsey expects to "ring up" a handsome dividend from the garden's proceeds. If this develops, the extra money will go to the

New Assignments Made In Presidio WAC Detachment

A new executive officer and a new first sergeant have taken over duties at the Presidio WAC Detachment.

Lt. Grace Womble was assigned to the Presidio on 10 October as executive officer, TI&E and supply officer. Her last previous assignment was as executive officer at Camp Hanford, Wash.

Lt. Womble entered the WAC in June 1950 and received basic training at Fort Lee, Virginia. She was then assigned there as an instructor in basic military subjects and basic training.

She entered OSC at Fort Lee in February of this year and received her commission on July 19.

A former resident of Warthen, Georgia, where her parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. Leo Womble, reside, Lt. Womble was graduated from the Georgia State College for Women with a BS in education, and prior to entering the service was engaged in teaching.

M/Sgt. Virginia L. Brown, first sergeant of the company, is a native of Townsend, Mass., where her father, Roy P. Brown, and three brothers, two of whom have served in the armed forces, reside.

She entered the service in June 1943 and received basic training at Fort Devens, Mass.

Her service record includes two years' service with the European command, three and one-half years as first sergeant and one year as administrative NCO of the motor pool, both at Fort Lee, Virginia, and one year as first sergeant of the WAC detachment at Fort Lewis, Washington. She assumed her duties here on the post on 3 November.

Army Central Welfare fund for needy soldiers and their dependents.

Besides dollar and cents profits, Sergeant Ramsey is listing these other "dividends" on the right side of the ledger:—additional employment for Austrians, stopping the Army's drain on the Linz produce market, and hungry soldiers made happy with fresh carrots, potatoes, corn and beans—grown in their own backyard.

Harriet Warren of 49 Lincoln Avenue, Orange, Mass., was assistant executive director of the American Occupational Therapy Association. She advised many young occupational therapists to use their professional skill to care for sick and wounded soldiers.

She became so sold on her sales talk that she joined the corps herself and recently was commissioned a captain to serve at Valley Forge Army Hospital, Phoenixville, Pa.

Finance Corps Curb Service Bank Is Proving Popular

The Army's Finance Corps is claiming the most modern of modern conveniences—a bank that rolls right up to the soldier's door-step and deals out cash.

A converted bus in Leghorn, Italy—the only mobile bank in the U. S. Army—gives quick banking service to soldiers arriving at the Italian port.

Located at the docks, the bank on wheels is under direction of the 23rd Finance Disbursing Section of the Fourth Logistical Command. It has a working space of 175 square feet and is furnished with 14 field tables and folding chairs.

The mobile bank's windows are protected by luggage carrier racks converted into window guards.

Canvas cot racks which fold into the side of the bus are pulled down for sleeping accommodations, and all doors may be locked from the inside.

Soldiers arriving in Leghorn now save travel time when they want to exchange military payment certificates for lire. Previously they had to go to the finance section in downtown Leghorn to do business.

When the mobile bank no longer is needed in Leghorn, the Finance Corps expects the bus to give future service in maneuvers and field exercises.

"All Work-No Play" Of Soviet Soap Opera

The Moscow radio gave its listeners a "boy meets girl" romance between a collective farmer and a woman tractor driver working together on the night shift. Their conversation, recorded in London, follows:

(The girl broke the ice.)

"How wonderful it is," she sighed, "to work on such a beautiful night under the full moon and do one's utmost to save gasoline."

Her companion took his cue.

"The night inspires me to overfill my quota by a higher and still higher percentage," he declared fervently.

Soon he declared his love—"I fell in love with your working achievements from the very first moment."

DOD Speeds Names of Men In Accidents

Washington — A new Defense Department directive outlines a more liberal policy regarding the release of the names of servicemen involved in accidents within the U. S.

Formerly no names of dead or injured could be released until the next of kin had been notified or until four hours after a telegram had been dispatched. The new policy is as follows:

In cases of accidents within a military installation, the names "may be withheld until such time as the next of kin can reasonably be expected" to receive official notification. However, the directive goes on to point out that every effort should be made to release the names simultaneously or as soon as possible after the release of the accident news itself.

In cases of accidents outside a military installation where the accident is definitely within the civilian domain, the names should be released immediately upon identification. The names of personnel in aircraft which crash in remote places without involving any civilians would, however, still be subject to the next of kin notification rule before release.

MP In Cooler

An Army military policeman in Korea found himself in the "cooler" for having enough sense to come in out of the rain.

The M. P. thought he could keep dry one rainy night by taking refuge in 40th Infantry Division dining hall, but found his theory to be "all wet."

In the corner of the room, an improvised food cooler had been dug. The groping M. P. stumbled and found himself neck-high in the water-filled hole.

Miss Knox, who studied at the New York studio of Solon Albrecht, has sung such roles as Gilda in "Rigoletto," Lucia in "Lucia di Lammermoor," Olympia in "Tales of Hoffman," and Queen in "The Magic Flute," while a member of the Euterpeans Opera Group and the La Pluma Opera Company in New York City.

Previously she appeared with the University of Kansas City players as Minerva in "Orpheus in the Underworld," and sang the title role in Van Flowtow's "Martha" at the Kansas City Conservatory of Music.

In concert work, Miss Knox has sung for various clubs and churches in New York, Kansas City and San Francisco, and has appeared in dramatic roles in radio and television shows under the auspices of New York University. She also worked with "Originals Only" in New York.

Cpl. Carroll, who plays first desk clarinet with the Sixth Army band, is formerly from Los Angeles, where he attended the Los Angeles Conservatory of Music and Arts.

He was studying for a general secondary credential with a music major, when he entered the Army in August, 1951. After receiving basic training, he was assigned to the Presidio in September, 1951.

While a member of various rehearsal orchestras in the Los Angeles area, particularly the Los Angeles Conservatory orchestra, Cpl. Carroll participated in several of the chamber music concerts presented by the conservatory.

Pfc. Urben, also a clarinetist with the Sixth Army band, was formerly a member of the Sixth Infantry Division band at Fort Ord where he entered service in the spring of 1951. He has been at the Presidio since July of this year.

The past spring he was presented by the Monterey USO in two piano recitals, and on 9 November, Pfc. Urben returned to Monterey to open their fall music series.

Prior to entering the Army, he was graduated from the Conservatory of Music at the College of the Pacific in Stockton, and the University of Illinois, and received a graduate fellowship to Indiana University, where he received his Master of Music degree.

Following a semester on the staff of Louisiana State University, Pfc. Urben continued his studies in New York City under the tutorage of Carl Friedberg. In the past few years he has appeared in a number of recitals in central California.

Mink Man!

Hollywood's most famous furrier is a man named Al Teitelbaum. He's made coats for every big-name star; his furs are used by the studios in pictures and he even rents minks out to budding young starlets who want to look prosperous. "My place is strictly informal," said Mr. Teitelbaum. "Susan Hayward and Elizabeth Taylor, for example, like to sit on the floor when they pick out skins for their coats. Ava Gardner has come in barefoot. Katharine Hepburn blusters in wearing slacks and a baseball cap. Actresses are like most women. They come in for a nice serviceable fox ($500) and spot an ermine ($4,500) or a white mink ($10,000). Then that's what they want. The one good thing about my business is that, unlike most furriers, I don't have to worry about outraged husbands returning coats bought by their wives. These gals can afford it!"

Musical Minuetmen!
In Korea Bandsmen Toss
Cold Notes and Hot Grenades

Seventh Infantry Division Band members in Korea fire guns and toss grenades at the enemy as easily as they blow trumpets and play flutes to boost American morale.

Such versatility recently won them the Meritorious Unit Commendation—"for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services in Korea" from September 1, 1950, through June, 1951.

Within a few months after the outbreak of hostilities in Korea, Seventh Infantry Division bandsmen had learned to keep their instruments in tune for "hot music" whenever the fighting "cooled off."

During battle lulls they entertained their "buddies" with lively musical programs and variety shows. When the heat of battle pressed down upon the division, however, the musicians hurriedly wrapped their trombones and clarinets in velvet and grabbed their rifles and bayonets.

After the Inchon invasion on September 15, 1950, bandsmen took up their battle stations to defend the division command post.

Some members of the band went out on reconnaissance missions and combed the Korean hills and valleys for guerrilla hideouts. Others moved through guerrilla-infested territory as advanced party for the Seventh Infantry Division command group.

When enemy raids became a nightly occurrence in the fierce fighting after Inchon, members of the Seventh Division Band helped build roadblocks and guard precious supplies.

During the last few days before Christmas of 1950, when musicians everywhere else in the world were playing the soft music of "Silent Night" and "Oh, Little Town of Bethlehem," Seventh Division bandsmen were hard at work, loading tons of essential war material for the evacuation of Hungnam.

These and other heroic deeds add up to "outstanding services" which won the coveted meritorious commendation for the Seventh Infantry Division's "musical soldiers."

Sarge 'At Sea'
While Operating
'Hotel' in Korea

Korea—SFC. Vincent B. Licciardi has one of the most unique Army assignments in Korea—he runs a "floating hotel."

Licciardi is in charge of a converted barge which houses more than 200 officers and enlisted men assigned to the 7th Transportation Major Port.

Once a refrigerator barge, the 250-foot craft has undergone many improvements since Licciardi took charge of it.

There are 22 rooms—10 for enlisted men, 12 for officers—each complete with bunks, mattresses and bedding.

New four-ton generators provide electricity. There is even an outdoor volleyball court.

To give the barge a more "homey" atmosphere, Licciardi has placed flower boxes on the decks.

At present he's remodeling a lower hold so it can be used as an indoor theatre and for a photo darkroom and game rooms. Movies have been shown on deck in the past.

Work Starts on Newest Building
Of Yuma Project

Yuma Test Station — Ground-breaking ceremonies marking the latest step in the multi-million dollar building program at the Station recently as Colonel Walter W. Abbey, commanding officer, turned the first shovelful of dirt for the new Bachelor Officers' Quarters.

Meanwhile, construction on four new 84-man barracks buildings was reported as 90 per cent complete as building crews worked on schedule to finish the barracks by November 15.

Both the barracks and B.O.Q. will provide housing which has been sorely needed by the officers and enlisted men at the now-permanent Test Station.

Since reactivation of the Test Station, enlisted men have been living in an area known as "tent city." This temporary housing is now being torn down as more permanent structures become available.

Each of the barracks will be air-conditioned and will provide cool, comfortable quarters for the large number of men sent with test teams during the hot summer months. The four buildings will cost approximately $217,000.

The new B.O.Q., to cost an approximated $74,000, will provide housing for 24 officers.

A permanent, two-story structure, it will contain 17 bedrooms, nine living rooms, and eight bathrooms. Each pair of bedrooms will be joined by a bathroom.

The B.O.Q. will be air-conditioned throughout and oil heat will be used in the winter.

Junior Sheriffs

Fort Lawton, Wash. — Sixteen members of the Fort Lawton Teenagers club received appointments as Junior Sheriff Deputies at the club meeting this week. Objective of the Deputies is to aid in the reduction of juvenile delinquency on and off the post and to assist law enforcement officers to the extent of reporting infractions of the law by juveniles and adults.

Colonel Garnett H. Wilson, post commander, spoke to the groups and in turn introduced Judge War Roney of the Superior Court, who administered the Oath of Office. King County Sheriff Harlan Callahan presented members, both boys and girls, 13-18 years of age, with badges and identification cards.

Instrumental in planning this organization, the first in King County and the second in the state of Washington, are Lt. Col. Joseph Knizek, Provost Marshal, Lt. James J. Condon, chairman of the Youth Center, and M/Sgt. Earl W. Buckner and M/Sgt. Edward E. Malone, both of the Armed Services Police Detachment.

Officers have been appointed to head the organization and a SOP formulated by which they will conduct their operations. Captain of the Deputies is Don Potter, son of WOJG and Mrs. Leland L. Potter. "Lieutenant" Pat Connor, daughter of Colonel E. H. Connor, Jr., and "Lieutenant" Larry Malone, son of M/Sgt. Edward E. Malone, are the other officers.

Army Develops Stove

The Army saved American taxpayers $1,500,000 (M) by re-designing the one-burner stove. This new design eliminated procurement of 300,000 pounds of critical nickel-bearing stainless steel previously used.

Station Comp and Honor Guard Provide All Talent for Gloves

Three more Presidio fighters have answered the boxing call for participation in the 22nd Annual Golden Gloves Tourney to be held in December in San Francisco.

Slated to start training this week with Trainer-Fighter Corporal Louis Gage are Sergeant Gerald Evans, 6002 ASU, and Private First Class Daniel Smith and Corporal Manuel Mariani, 6002 Honor Guard Detachment.

Sgt. Evans, a 20-year-old from Edmonds, Washington, weighs 156 and has had seven previous bouts.

Pfc. Smith hails from Monroe, Michigan, is 21 years old, weighs 155 and sports six previous ring contests.

Cpl. Mariani, a 27-year-old, 130-pounder from Honolulu, Hawaii, has been in the ring four times previous.

All three will be entered in the Junior Division of which a fighter must not have competed in the finals in the Senior and Junior Class of any recognized tournament.

Evans and Smith will probably fight in the Light Middleweight class (156), or trim down to Welterweight (147).

Mariani will attempt to shave five pounds and fight in the Featherweight division (125).

Cpl. Gage, also of the 6002 ASU and winner of the San Francisco Gloves welter title in '49 and the middleweight crown in the Senior Division '51 bouts, will fight as a welterweight this year.

Bouts are scheduled for 1, 4, 8 and 11 December under auspices of the San Francisco Examiner and supervised by the Pacific Association of AAU and State Athletic Commission.

Championships will be decided in three divisions—Senior, Junior and Novice, at the Championship weights approved and used by the National AAU and the Olympic Games.

Time is drawing short for training purposes and any other interested fighters are urged to contact Sfc. Virgil Cook, Building 122, Presidio, immediately.

Pheasant Planting Policy Should Be Boon to Hunting

In the first year of operation under a new pheasant planting policy, game farms of the California Department of Fish and Game will release about 80,000 pheasants prior to the opening of the hunting season on November 22.

Carl VanOrnum, supervisor of State game farms, reported a total release of more than 50,000 pheasants by the end of October. The birds — about three-fifths male—are being released daily from 14 State game farms and 50 holding pens operated by co-operating sportsmen's clubs.

This year's total game bird release will be down from the record number of 110,000 pheasants released in 1951, VanOrnum said. The new Fish and Game Commission release policy calls for a reduced quota of birds in areas where the pheasants have been established and represent a maximum use of the habitat.

An object of the policy, VanOrnum revealed, is to improve the quality of the released birds by holding them to a more mature age.

An average of 1200 birds will be liberated on each of 15 State-operated cooperative hunting areas before the season opens, with additional releases slated throughout the 10-day hunting period.

Most of the performers played a great deal of baseball during their two-year Service stints and many should win regular jobs next spring. Major league teams are required to keep returned servicemen on their rosters for one year, although the players are not counted in the 25-man player limit.

The New York Yankees, Boston Braves, Cleveland Indians, Detroit Tigers, and Pittsburgh Pirates stand to benefit most from returning servicemen. Among those returning to the diamond wars are: Whitey Ford (Yanks); Johnny Antonelli, Del Crandall (Braves); Jim Lemon, Dick Weik (Indians); Danny O'Connell, Bill MacDonald (Pirates); and Ray Herbert (Tigers).

Wise Old Owl Betrays Fellow Bird; Sez "Get Pheasant Tags Early!"

Although the California pheasant hunting season doesn't open until November 22, the Department of Fish and Game has issued a warning to an estimated 175,000 ring-neck hunters to buy their $1 pheasant tags early to avoid the disappointment of a possible sell-out at their favorite license agency.

H. R. Dunbar, chief of the State's license sales, discloses that State law limits the number of licenses or tags issued to individual agents. An unexpected last-minute rush at one of the 3,000 agencies—especially in the pheasant hunting country—can cause a sell-out before the agent can re-order.

Dunbar also suggests that hunters buy tags in their home town, thus relieving the seasonal burden on small agents.

The tags, bearing 10 detachable paper bands, are required of any pheasant hunter, regardless of age.

Presidio "Red Raiders" End Season With Loss To Edwards AFB "Jets"

Those spirited hard-fighting Red Raiders from Presidio-land lost their season finale to the equally tough Edwards Air Force Base "Jets" by a 28-14 count at Edwards last Saturday.

Over 1000 fans viewed in dismay a first-quarter Raider attack that had every indication of a rout as the Big Red Machine scored two touchdowns and conversions to match in the first two minutes of the game.

Presidio kicked off to open the fracas and after two plays recovered a "Jet" fumble on their own 12-yard line. Two plays later Nick Kirby, Presidio's line-smashing fullback, cracked over from 10 yards out and quarterback Dick Jackstadt split the uprights with a conversion.

Edwards, unable to move the Raider kick-off out from the shadow of their own goal posts, punted out and the locals took over on their own 47.

Chick Preciado, Presidio's offensive and defensive utility star, cast an air of glum silence over the Desert Bowl as he ran right up the middle of the "Jet" line and left only a vapor trail in his 53-yard TD scamper. Jackstadt again kicked the conversion for a 14-0 lead with but two minutes gone in the first quarter.

Preciado, a defensive standout throughout the season, along with Kirby and several linemen, were called on to go both ways due to a shortage of players.

It was not until the second quarter that Edwards even looked like a ball club, but from then on played as though faced with an ultimatum of "score or hang up your togs."

Lining up in the time-consuming "I" formation and shifting to the "T" on every play, the "Jets" punched one TD across and topped it off with a 37-yard field goal to trail at half time, 14-9.

The tiring effects of playing on both offense and defense slowed the locals down and the "Jets" scored one touchdown in the third stanza and two in the fourth, with one conversion to wind up Presidio's final football tilt with a 28-14 score.

Presidio's major trouble seemed to be confusion as the result of a last minute shuffle to fill vacancies that saw guards playing in the tackle slots and centers at guard positions and unfamiliar with all of their blocking assignments were unable to afford the backfield the usual airtight security.

Edwards racked up eight first downs to six for the locals and 100½ yards net to 83 for the Raiders. The "Jets" were penalized 100 yards. Presidio lost 45 from penalties.

The game marked the eighth and final game for Presidio. Their sea-ad lipping with

Cpl. Paul Lippman

Presidio Football—1952—Finis! Some eight games and 100 rolls of tape ago 45 little chaps, ranging in weights from 175 to 265, fell out on the Fort Scott green for a game o' ball. Two months later the rompin', stompin' boys in red had been de-activated in four starts, won three and tied one.

Taking everything into consideration, the lads from Raider Camp had a good season. The small point spread of 92 for the locals to 109 for all opponents combined, is about as close as any team with a 50 per cent loss record can come.

On the other hand, the Raiders traveled 1456½ yards from scrimmage to 1141 for opposing offensives. The defensive unit, weighing as high as 229 pounds in the line, allowed only one team to gain over 200 yards from scrimmage while the 204-pound offensive line paved the way for the backs to go over the 200 mark in three contests.

Yes—it's been a good season and to Gaspar Perricone and Bob Ottoson, the coaches, and you guys who traveled from Tiburon, Oakland Army Base and Hunters Point every day, much of the time in your own autos, and you fellows here on the post who pulled your normal duties aside from practice and games—congrats—for a lot of spirit and a good season.

Off The Gridiron At Edwards: Edwards—that's short for "end of the earth." Nothing more than a piece of ground holding its share of the earth together.

After three days on the desert, the local gridders were pretty happy to get back to Presidio. A couple of guys couldn't face it until the Monday morning flight back and started hitchhiking the 500 some odd miles back right after the game.

Four or five others decided that a pound of salami and a loaf of bread on the road to Los Angeles would be more appetizing than the Edwards banquet after the game.

While in Hollywood, a couple of the guys were seen lurking around in a dismal dive on Sunset and Vine—I guess they call it the "Paladium"—where some GUY named MITCHELL was gigging a two week stint. The place is kinda like Shanty Malone's here in Fris—(easy Paul, a native is listening) er, rather—San Francisco.

"The Lip's" grid picks were, to put it lightly, rotten last week. We'll have to start calling him the "sooth-slayer." Sixty-nine per cent is far from good.

Any good soothsayer could have predicted those upsets. None did and all are hiding behind the usual excuses, but let's face it, Lip, yours were absolutely nil and there's no excuse for incom—uh—incompetency (whew! let's kick that one around awhile)—after all, you should have known that Notre Dame would unsaddle Oklahoma and Washington would skin the California Bears. And still you come out with some more picks this week. Wise up son! You show me little.

"THE LIP"

Here's a tip for Nick Kirby, Presidio fullback who has his sights set on Cal next year.

Just read in a magazine story that Cal's fullback, Johnny O (I can't spell it either) once took ballet lessons for two years to improve his footwork.

I can see it all now!
"Eight-yard Kirby doing Arabesques and grand-jetes in a tip-toe emporium?" No comment!

Throughout the football season, the western segment of the Presidio football team had a lot of fun kidding the guys from Big Ten country about the Coast victories over the Midwest and also about who should make the All-American roster from the West.

Heard most around the locker-room were the names of UCLA and their ferocious linebacker, Moooo-maaaaw. "The Lip" is still betting on Mooo (aw, le's not go thru that again).

End of column. Stop reading here!

Alibis Hold Their Bowling Lead by Narrow Margin

A wave of victory nearly swept the T-5's into first place in the Fort Scott bowling league this week but a determined Alibi five won two games out of three and held their lead by a shrinking one-game margin.

The hapless MP's were the T-5's target for Thursday night. Benefitting from a 42-pin handicap, the T-5's rocked the MP's three straight. The only encouraging sign for the losers was the 204-181-183—568 series bowled by Captain Hicks, who was rolling his first three lines in Fort Scott play. He may provide the MP's with the added pins needed to keep them in the running.

The high scoring Alibis were able to hold the league lead by dropping the Bushwackers two out of three. In other games, the third place Sure Things overcame both the 8-Balls and a 68-pin handicap to win two out of three, winning one game by only two pins. Pfc Al Mendillo of the Sure Things club, bowled a 148-137-180—515 series. The lowly Headquarters quintette mastered the Ball Bearings 3-0 and are now in seventh place, just one game out of sixth.

This week's games may be the deciding lines of the league with only four weeks of play left. The Alibis square off with the T-5's in what promises to be a whale of a series. Fresh from three straight victories, the T-5's need two wins to tie the leaders. On the other hand, a pair of wins by the Alibis would give them a substantial lead.

Other games are as follows: the Sure Things will try to hold third place by defeating the MP's; the Bushwackers will bowl an improving Headquarters team; and the 8-Balls will be gunning for third place honors when they tangle with the Ball Bearings.

One pin setter is needed at once at the Fort Scott bowling alleys to work Sunday, Monday, Wednesday and Friday nights. Pays 15c a line. If interested call Sgt. Standish at 5462 or call the bowling alleys at 5111 after six in the evening.

The National Football League's leading scorer at the halfway mark is an average-sized left tackle. By name he is Lou Groza of the Cleveland Browns—by profession he is known as "The Toe."

In six games this season, the Martin's Ferry, Ohio, native has scored 51 points to lead the league's point makers. Thirty-six of these points were tallied on field goals. Add 15 straight extra point conversions and you have one-third of Cleveland's offensive punch.

Through the years, Lou has meant a great deal to Coach Paul Brown's champion Lake Erie crews. He has kicked 87 extra points in succession in the NFL; four more than the record. Also, Groza set the record for most field goals in one season—13—later tied by Bob Waterfield of the Los Angeles Rams.

Lou credits his kicking ability to his uncle who played semi-pro football and was known as "a darn good kicker."

"My uncle taught my brother Frank," he said, "and Frank used to kick to me a lot. I got interested so I started kicking, too."

Since then NFL goal posts have conceded to Groza's remarkable toe ability.

The famed Harlem Globetrotters recently completed a world-wide basketball tour, remembering most of all their game in Naples, Italy. It was there that rangy Bill Brown vanished right off the court. The contest was played in an old opera house with the plywood floor covering an orchestra pit. During the game the floor gave way under Brown and he fell seven feet. Time out was called to retrieve one basketball player!

The 1953 Intercollegiate rowing championships will again be held at Onondaga Lake, N. Y., June 20. Last year, Navy crews swept all three rowing events and later went on to cop Olympic honors. Navy will compete again this summer along with oarsmen from Columbia, Cornell, Penn, Syracuse, California, Princeton, Stanford, Washington, and Wisconsin.
